1. The objectives and expectations: Recall the history, the true nature and glorious traditions of revolutionary struggle of our army; review the achievements in performing their duties by units, localities and individuals during the past year in order to praise and hail them and to experience lessons so as to open new campaigns in a timely manner; continue to encourage the emulation campaigns of revolutionary enthusiasm and the campaigns of cherishing the country and socialism; promote the movements of turning to the grassroots level to build the mass foundations of the party, build and consolidate all-round strong basic units, all-round leading party units and advanced units of the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth, and to carry out other main tasks.

All these are aimed at making the cadres and combatants proud of their history, achievements and glorious and heroic traditions, confident in the party's leadership and satisfied with the achievements and victories scored by the army as well as by various units or by themselves during the past year. All cadres and combatants are to continue to heighten vigilance, maintain combat readiness, build new determination, encourage revolutionary endeavor, march forward to fulfill all tasks, and defeat all enemies in the immediate future as well as for a long time to come.

For example, they must effectively fulfill the campaigns to carry on political life, consolidate their units, build and train themselves to maintain capabilities in implementing the line, policies and plans of the party and state, and political tasks in their units and localities. They must also build and train themselves to maintain new qualifications so as to be capable of vigorously building all-round strong units, all-round leading party units, advanced units of the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth, and building our army into a new type of army -- a modern and well-organized army -- of the working class.

2. Direction, contents and forms of the celebration:

A. Regarding the direction, emphasis must be put on the contents and the encouragement and stepping up of movements. Forms of celebration must be simple, uncomplicated, and the celebration must not last too long. Grand banquets are prohibited. The number of guests to be invited to attend banquets must be kept small.

B. Before the day of the celebration, arrangements must be made to review achievements and lessons scored in performing tasks during the past year. The arrangements must be simple. The purpose is to find good and weak points as well as remaining problems. In reviewing the achievements and lessons, outstanding individuals must be selected so as to be presented to a higher level for commendation. At the same time, model individuals must be selected with concrete achievements to be hailed in meetings on different occasions.

C. Arrangements must be made to join with the people, local administrations, fronts and various mass organizations in the areas where the units are stationed in making surveys to examine and accept creative criticism and to receive assistance from the people. Cooperation must be made with the local administrations in settling various problems and giving explanations to questions raised by the people. Two main questions that must be settled or the people made to understand are the question on the enemy's divisive schemes and the question about the people's criticism. It is not proper to avoid accepting criticism expressed by the people.

D. Arrangements must be made to visit those families whose members are disabled or have sacrificed their lives for the revolution, families whose members are in hospitals for medical treatment, families of national emulation combatants and heroes, families whose members work in far distant areas for a long time, and families which suffer from needy circumstances.

E. Arrangements must be made to join with the local administrations, fronts, mass organizations, and youth unions in developing the graveyards of combatants who have sacrificed their lives for the nation, and in developing war monuments.

F. Celebration ceremonies must be held on one of these days -- 19, 20 or 21 January 1982. If conditions permit, the people, in particular members of the administrative committees, the fronts and mass organizations, may be invited to attend the celebration meetings as guests of honor. In the meetings, the order of the day of the supreme command must be read, the brief history and overall achievements of the army in addition to those of various units over the past year must be reported, and outstanding individuals must be presented and hailed. Any unit which has not yet reviewed and hailed its 5-year achievements or the achievements scored in this year can take this occasion to review and hail them. Regarding this year's achievements, if they have not yet been submitted to or approved by the higher levels, commendation can be made in general in order to give encouragement to the model ones. New emulation campaigns must then be opened in order to score new achievements to welcome the forthcoming founding anniversary of the party.

As for the contents, they must be based on the task of returning to the grassroots level to build all-round strong companies and all-round leading party units. As for the brief history, achievements and traditions of the army, they must be based on the documents that have been studied and that are distributed by the army Political Department every year. However, the history, achievements and traditions should be brief for reading at the meetings. As for this year's achievements, they must be reviewed using the following questions: What has our army done and what successes has it achieved? The basic point is to point out the actual achievements scored by each unit in the past in general and in this year in particular. All these achievements must be shown clearly at the meetings.

On the days of the festival, various sports must be organized. This can be done in coordination with other units and local youths. Mass entertainment must be organized at night. Art and literature performances can be staged by amateur art troupes. Contents of the entertainment programs must be centered on encouraging the masses. Other activities should be introduced in addition to the traditional Lao dance during the entertainment programs. Disturbances are prohibited. To achieve this goal, it is necessary to mobilize everyone in the unit to help provide verses and art and literature activities of various nationalities. It is also necessary to cooperate with youths in the locality in organizing entertainment programs full of prosperous contents.

G. Active forces must be organized to maintain combat readiness and to be prepared to crush all schemes that might be pursued by the enemies to create disturbances with a view to sabotaging the festival. During the festival as well as during the time when the brothers belonging to each unit visit and help the people do their jobs, drinking of alcohol is prohibited since it might lead to bad incidents which run counter to the fine traditions of the army.

3. Things requiring attention: Upon receiving this instruction, the party committees and commanders must study and grasp firmly the purpose, expectations, direction and contents of it, and then divide the responsibilities in implementing it. Arrangements must be made to implement this instruction correctly and strictly in accordance with its actual purpose, expectations, direction and contents as mentioned above.

Duration: The festival lasts 3 days -- 19-21 January. One holiday is granted on 1 of those 3 days. The celebration ceremonies must be organized within the 3 days. The celebration must not affect daily necessary tasks or political life. In any unit which during the period is carrying out the political life campaign, the party committee of that unit should prepare for the celebration of this occasion at night or during leisure time. After completing the review of achievements, it can take a holiday and organize the celebration right away on that day.

The situation and results of the celebration must be reported to the army Political Department in a timely manner.

Signed and sealed: Lt Gen Saman Viyaket, chief of the army Political Department
Vientiane, 12 January 1982

BRIEFS

ROAD CONSTRUCTION UNIT'S SUCCESS -- Vientiane, 20 Jan (KPL) -- The Dongchong road construction unit, under the Ministry of Communication, Public Works and Transport, on January 16 held a ceremony to review its last-year work. Their past-year activities included transportation of 522,038 cubic metres of soil for road foundation, dug 439,000 metres of canals, graded 646,217 metres of roads, repaired 3,580 metres of damaged roads, asphalted roads with 48,920 cubic metres of tar and repaired 38 bridges, reported the manager of the construction unit. The best-achieved workers on this occasion received medals and congratulatory certificates. [Text] [Vientiane KPL in English 0906 GMT 20 Jan 82 BK]

POST REPORTS FIGHTING IN KAMPUCHEA SUBSIDES

BK210310 Bangkok POST in English 21 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Thai troops yesterday drove about 10,000 Kampuchean civilians -- mostly women and children -- back to their country as fighting inside Kampuchea subsided, field military sources in Aranyaprathet said. The refugees, who brought with them cattle and poultry, had since Tuesday morning sought temporary sanctuary in a deserted temple, Wat Sa Pathum, and along the Mahot canal in Ban Thapphrik, about 40 kilometres south of Aranyaprathet. They had fled fierce fighting between Vietnamese troops and Khmer Rouge guerrillas in the southern part of the Phnum Malai mountainous region, opposite Thapphrik. Meanwhile, about 3,000 more Kampuchean civilians fled across the border to seek sanctuary in a Thai village on Tuesday night, Lt Gen Som Khattaphan, spokesman for the Supreme Command, said yesterday. He said most of them were sheltering under trees in Ban Khlong Kai Thuan, south of Thapphrik.

Thai villagers in Thapphrik told the Bangkok POST they saw flashes of gunfire on Phnum Malai Le, about five kilometres from the border, which is believed to be a guerrilla stronghold. Village volunteers and Thai security forces on Tuesday night began patrolling a strategic road running parallel to the borderline and along the border to prevent a spillover of Kampuchean refugees.

Military sources said fighting continued yesterday around Sakae Yo and Highway Five around the Phnum Malai and Phnum Mak Hoeun regions, but no stray shells landed on Thai territory.

Lt Gen Som said yesterday Vietnamese troops had in the past four days shelled the stronghold of Phnum Malai, where an unknown number of guerrillas were based. He said the battle, one of the biggest reported in the current dry season, involved heavy exchanges of artillery, mortar and rocket fire. He added a company of Vietnamese troops had twice attempted to cross the border in the past few days in pursuit of Kampuchean civilians, but they were halted by warning shots from Thai soldiers.

Vietnamese gunners opened fire on a Thai L-19 reconnaissance plane on Tuesday as it was observing the fighting from Thai airspace, military sources said.

SUPREME COMMAND REPORTS BORDER INCIDENTS

BK201513 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] The Supreme Command Information office has reported on the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border during the week of 10 to 16 January. According to the report, two incidents took place during the week. The first incident resulted from a clash between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces and Khmer Serei troops inside Kampuchea. Two 82-mm mortar shells landed in Ban Sangae, Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri Province. In another incident, Thai officials clashed with an unidentified number of armed Khmer troops inside Thailand north of Ban Thap Siam, Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri Province.

NAVY CHIEF DISCUSSES EXERCISE WITH U.S., PIRACY

BK211044 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Speaking to newsmen, Navy Commander in Chief Adm Sombun Chuaphibun said the combined training between the Royal Thai Navy and the U.S. 7th Fleet 18-22 January [dates as heard] is one of the annual training exercises carried out routinely, and not because of any new developments in the region. The training was carried out in the Philippines last year, and it is being conducted in Thailand this year.

Admiral Sombun described the current training as the joint minelaying and disposal exercise which is taking place near Sattahip Bay. Two U.S. warships, the USS Sterett and USS O'Brien, are taking part in the exercise. The two ships will later visit Phatthaya 20-30 January. The navy chief said Thai sailors will learn about modern techniques and operational planning from the current exercise. Officials at all levels taking part in the exercise will benefit from the training. This helps Thailand save money by not having to send officials abroad for training.

Asked about the piracy problem and the evidence that pirates on the high seas are men of the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin regime, the navy chief said there has been proof that Thailand has been the victim of accusations all along: In fact, those accusing us are pirates themselves. Yet their propaganda did work in misleading the international community. Asked about the truth of the report that the United Nations would not assist Thailand in piracy suppression, Admiral Sombun said the Royal Thai Navy will continue with its duty, whether aid is given or not. Yet with reduction in the budget for suppression, operations might be limited to Thai territorial waters. He said: However, if we receive UN assistance, Thailand can step up air and sea suppression operations against piracy. He noted, however, that the number of pirates has been considerably reduced since the navy mounted suppression operations, and also as a result of the fact that the number of Vietnamese boat people has decreased.

ASSISTANCE IN SUPPRESSING PIRACY URGED

Prasong on Delayed Aid

BK190254 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 19 Jan 82 pp 1, 10

[Text] A senior Thai official last night charged that the UNHCR had been dilly-dallying in living up to its financial pledge to help Thailand enhance its "anti-piracy" efforts. "The UNHCR has pledged to offer assistance of U.S. $3.67 million (about 85 million baht) to reinforce Thailand's naval, marine police and other related government forces to fight piracy since October. But when I asked about it several days ago, the reply was that they were still waiting for an answer from the headquarters in Geneva," according to Secretary General of the National Security Council Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri.

Apparently spurred by the recent spate of international press reports on Thai piracy, Prasong told the NATION last night: "Let the UNHCR stop talking. Let it come up with some concrete actions." Prasong said he had earlier proposed a package of 720-million-baht proposal to enhance Thailand's efforts to fight piracy. "But the UNHCR (United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees) came back with the counter-proposal that since they couldn't raise the whole package of funds, could we make use of U.S. $3.67 million?" Prasong said.

He said: "I first told them that we Thais aren't hired gunmen who could be bought to hunt down criminals, especially in international waters which involve international laws, territorial problems and other complications. We have been taking care of our territorial waters of 12 miles from the shores."

The NSC secretary general said that he agreed to consider ways and means of cooperation when the UNHCR proposed an initial fund of U.S. $3.67 million for the purpose. "But I told them that the amount could help only for one year. So far, despite my prodding, the pledge hasn't been delivered yet," he added. Prasong said he will brief the problems involved to visiting Deputy Secretary General of the United Nations Mr Luigi Cottafavi, who is due to hold talks with him at 1:30 pm today.

The NSC secretary general said that Thailand's plea to get the UN to get all countries bordering on the Gulf of Thailand to cooperate in the anti-piracy campaign had fallen on deaf ears. "People outside seem to think that all sea areas in the Gulf of Thailand are the responsibility of Thailand. The fact is that the Gulf of Thailand doesn't belong exclusively to Thailand," he said. Prasong said that the U.S. $600,000 contribution from the U.S. towards the anti-piracy efforts for Thailand was spent up in November. "And the so-called patrol boat provided for the purpose is good only for fishing. It runs so slowly that it couldn't possibly be effective enough," he said.

The NSC secretary general said that Thailand had repeatedly stated that the "root cause" of piracy must be resolved. "And that is Vietnam must stop the flow of the boat people," he said.

Prasong charged that the recent spate of renewed articles in the international press about Thai pirates had been "unfair in that it seems to put all the blame on Thailand." He speculated that the series of stories had been spread after Thailand changed its policy towards the "boat people."

"They presumably want us to send our boats out to receive the boat people," Prasong said, adding that Thailand's Navy, marine police, customs and other related agencies would continue to patrol the Thai territorial waters against pirates and other criminals "in accordance with our budgetary capacity."

Call for International Action

BK210903 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "A Drop in the Ocean"]

[Text] Piracy in the South China Sea, including the Gulf of Thailand, has been a problem for a very long time. The scores of pirates have now again hit the headlines because Vietnamese citizens fleeing their country in large numbers have encountered pirates and have been robbed and brutalized by them. The accusation has been made that the pirates are Thais because the pirates' boats fly the Thai flags, or they look like Thai, or they speak Thai. This is the evidence cited by the Vietnamese refugees who were attacked and whose stories have been given prominence by Western reporters. Thailand has thus received the brunt of criticism ranging from encouraging piracy in order to deter the influx of refugees to having done nothing to suppress piracy at all.

Piracy anywhere is an act which violates the law. The crime becomes even worse when there is brutality and bestiality involved. It is an offense against mankind, and all countries, including Thailand, should contribute to its suppression. But the difficulties are enormous. The Gulf of Thailand covers a vast area of approximately 300,000 square kilometers of high seas, and four countries have extensive coastlines along it, namely, Kampuchea, Vietnam, Malaysia and Thailand. To the south lies the Indonesian archipelago. Given these factors and the international interests attendant, the international community should therefore make a concerted effort to suppress the pirates currently plaguing the South China Sea and the Gulf of Thailand.

Firstly, the international community should exert pressure on the Vietnamese Government to put into full effect an orderly program of departure for those Vietnamese who wish to emigrate from their country. This would lessen the number of boat people who have to risk their lives on the high seas to flee from their country. The dangers the boat people have to face are many -- not just pirates, but also the Vietnamese authorities, who have to be bribed and who themselves prey on the refugees, and the lack of food and water and the vagaries of the weather on the high seas.

Secondly, the international community should call on their own governments to instruct their ships which pass through the Gulf of Thailand and the South China Sea to be on the lookout for and to pick up those refugee boats in order to save them. This will not be an easy task, however, because the ships saving the refugees will have to be responsible for them, and their governments must in turn accept the refugees. Heavy with implications though this may be, it would be a high act of humanitarianism.

Thirdly, the international community must call on their governments to show interest in and support the Executive Committee of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees [UNHCR] to take the necessary actions to curb piracy in Southeast Asia. The UNHCR is the leading international agency given the task to contact all governments and organizations to draw up measures to minimize the incidents of piracy. The UNHCR cannot alleviate the problem of piracy if it does not receive support from the international community. All governments, international organizations and charities, if they are shocked and horrified by news reports of piracy, must themselves act to help suppress the piracy. The problem is no less worse than air piracy, and there is a concerted international campaign against that.

Thailand is deeply concerned by the problem of piracy, not only because it is being criticized, but because its own ships and fishermen have been robbed and killed for a very long time. The Royal Thai Navy, the marine police and other authorities have carried out patrols, but these have been limited by jurisdiction to Thai territorial waters. Thailand observes a 12-mile limit and the adjacent waters. This is so because of the small size of the Thai Navy and the authorities' main task of preventing smuggling and offshore crimes. Thailand, however, is willing to contribute and to do its share in the suppression of piracy, but, given the immensity of the problem and the special aspects which cause the boat people to flee Vietnam, the international community must lend its support and make its voice known. Without it, what Thailand is doing will be only a drop in the ocean.

A footnote must be added to this commentary. The accusation that the pirates were Thai because their boats flew the Thai flags, or the pirates spoke Thai, or they looked Thai, cannot be allowed to pass without comment. This was what the boat people said. But it must be asked whether such allegations hold much water. Any ship can fly the Thai flag. Can Vietnamese who have never left their country before tell with certainty whether what is being spoken is Thai or that this person locks Thai, or the name of the ship is written in Thai?

POST on Need for Aid

BK210302 Bangkok POST in English 21 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Piracy Control a Major Problem"]

[Text] When the so-called "boat people" leave Vietnam, they do so at their own risk. They bribe officials with gold and other worldly goods in order to go out and find new pastures. They know that as soon as they get to the high seas they are going to be tossed about by storms and even face drowning. They come out in the full knowledge that others who have preceded them have been robbed and raped by pirates. Yet they keep coming in the hope of finding better lives elsewhere. The places where they seek first refuge are Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines and Indonesia. Of these ASEAN countries, Thailand and Malaysia bear the heaviest burden.

These people are unwelcome on our shores. They don't want their own country, and their own country disowns them. Our people already suffer great hardships from the deteriorating economic situation. There is no way in which we can support them. We can provide them with food and allow them to repair their boats, but they must set out again to other places. If we take them in, it is on condition that a third country be willing to admit them within a specified period of time. Along the way, they have always reported, they are attacked by pirates. They have accused the pirates of being Thai, claiming that they have heard them speaking Thai, although they themselves do not know the language. It is possible that some of the pirates are Thai criminals who use fishing boats as a cover for their activities. It is also possible that pirates from other countries could be involved. The probability cannot be dismissed that some of the "boat people" could have invented some of the tales of piracy to gain international sympathy so that they could get quickly admitted to third countries. It could not be determined definitely where the acts of piracy take place -- whether in international or within Thai territorial waters. It is already well known that Thai fishermen have been caught looking for fish in the waters of other countries.

Blaming Thailand for not taking action against pirates is unfair, since we have miserably inadequate equipment. Already our navy is very small, and we cannot afford to buy more than a few patrol boats for our marine police. There are too many "boat people" for us to protect, and it is not the business of our navy or our police to protect them. Their duty is to defend our country against invaders. However, for humanitarian purposes, our authorities are doing their best with what they have. The United Nations and other governments interested in helping the "boat people" must provide our officials with the necessary boats and planes, if piracy is to be effectively combatted.

UN UNDER SECRETARY GENERAL MEETS WITH OFFICIALS

BK201419 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Thailand has urged the United Nations to accept more Indochinese refugees to third countries and to increase supplies of food and clothing aid to the displaced persons living in the holding centers. The request was made at a 2-hour meeting between the under secretary general of the United Nations, Mr Luigi Cottafavi, and the secretary general of the National Security Council. Topics of discussion during the meeting included the fighting in Kampuchea, the refugees, piracy and narcotics problems now plaguing the country. Thailand has firmly supported the Kampucheans to gain their independence without foreign interference.

The visiting under secretary general of the United Nations, Luigi Cottafavi, held separate meetings with the secretary general of the Office of the Narcotics Control Board and the secretary general of the National Security Council to gather information concerning narcotics and refugee problems in Thailand. Cottafavi is scheduled to leave Bangkok this morning for Chiang Mai Province to observe the Office of Narcotics Control Board's narcotics suppression program. On Friday he will visit the eastern border with Kampuchea.

The secretary general of the National Security Council has said after the meeting that Cottafavi has expressed interest in Kampuchea, Indochinese refugee and piracy problems. There were at present almost 200,000 Indochinese refugees in various camps in Thailand, aside from about 280,000 Khmers along the Thai-Kampuchean border. The UNHCR should continue the resettlement program and also help in their voluntary repatriation where the need arises. Concerning piracy problems, the National Security Council secretary general told Cottafavi that Thailand has been doing its best to suppress piracy in Thai waters. Cottafavi also promised to look into Thailand's request for an additional $3.5 million fund for piracy suppression as promised by the UNHCR on his return to Geneva.

POST: TRAWLER SEIZED BY VIETNAMESE BOAT PEOPLE

BK210327 Bangkok POST in English 21 Jan 82 p 5

[Text] Pattani -- Marine police yesterday evening set out to intercept a Thai fishing boat which was seized by a group of about 50 Vietnamese boat people, it was reported last night. The trawler, the report said, was due to reach the provincial coast this morning.

According to police, the skipper of the Somphon Samut, which was fishing about 70 kilometres from the shore, radioed its owner, Mr Watcharin Sithicharoenkit, that he had seen another fishing boat being seized by the boat people. A small craft carrying the Vietnamese, who included a number of women and children, drew alongside the fishing boat at about 7 a.m. Before the crew could do anything, the Vietnamese seized the boat and destroyed their own craft and forced the crew to sail toward the shore. Seeing the incident, the skipper of the Somphon Samut radioed Mr Watcharin, who told the police.

UNHCR REPORT NOTES DECLINE IN REFUGEE ARRIVALS

BK190615 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] The number of Indochinese refugees in Thailand last year dropped from 260,000 to 193,000. This was a drop for the first time since the massive influx of refugees 3 years ago.

A report from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [UNHCR] says that last year some 8,500 refugees a month from Thailand were resettled in third countries, consistently higher than the number of arrivals. The report says that since 1975 a total of 570,000 refugees from Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos have sought asylum in Thailand. Of these, more than 377,000 have been resettled in third countries. Most of them went to the United States, France, Canada and Australia. The report also says that since 1975 the UNHCR has already spent $184 million in helping refugees in Thailand.

VNA 'AUTHORIZED TO REJECT' THAI CLAIM OF ATTACK

OW202004 Hanoi VNA in English 1526 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 20 -- VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to reject recent allegations by Thai military circles and quoted by A.B.C. [Australian Broadcasting Commission] on January 1 [as received] about Vietnamese soldiers entering and firing rockets and mortars on two Thai villages.

The Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam makes it a consistent policy to entertain friendly and neighbourly relations with Thailand and to respect its sovereignty and territorial integrity.

SRV PROMULGATES LAW ON ARMY OFFICERS' SERVICE

BK191144 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Introduction and first three of five chapters of SRV law on service by VPA officers]

[Text] As we all know, our state recently promulgated the law on VPA officers, which was adopted at the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly. This law supersedes the 1958 law and comprises 5 chapters totaling 45 articles. We are going to introduce this law to you, comrades and friends.

In order to contribute to building a standardized and modernized people's army, strengthening national defense and ensuring successful implementation of the task of defending and building the Vietnamese socialist fatherland; and to determine the responsibilities of VPA officers and enhance their fighting spirit, organizational and disciplinary characters; and by virtue of Article 51 and Article 83 of the SRV Constitution, this law deals with officers of the VPA.

Chapter I

General Regulations

Article 1. Officers of the VPA are military cadres who have been given general, field and junior grade rank by the state.

Article 2. Officers of the People's Army comprise:

1. Commanding staff officers;
2. Political officers;
3. Rear service and financial officers;
4. Technical officers;
5. Military medicine and veterinary officers;
6. Military police officers; and
7. Administrative officers.

Article 3. Officers of the People's Army are classified into two groups of active-duty officers and reserve officers.

Article 4. Citizens of the SRV who fully meet the political, cultural, physical and age requirements and who are capable of engaging in activities in the military field may be trained to become officers.

Article 5. The persons listed below have been selected for reinforcement of the contingent of active-duty officers:

1. Militarymen who graduate from officers' training schools;
2. Non-commisssioned officers who have satisfactorily carried out combat duty;
3. Militarymen performing specialized and technical tasks who are college graduates;
4. Cadres of nonmilitary sectors assigned to army positions slotted for officers;
5. Reserve officers.

Article 6. Officers have the rights and obligations of citizens as provided for by the constitution and the law of the SRV.

Chapter II

Military Grades and Positions of Officers

Article 7. The system of military grades of officers of the VPA is regulated as follows:

1. The general level comprises four grades: Senior general, colonel general or admiral of the navy, lieutenant general or vice admiral of the navy, and major general or rear admiral of the navy.
2. The field level comprises three grades: colonel [dqaij dqaij tas], lieutenant colonel and major.
3. The junior level comprises four grades: Senior captain, captain, senior lieutenant and lieutenant.

Article 8. The commissioning and promotion of military grades for officers must be considered on the basis of the military grades specified for each position, revolutionary quality, operational proficiency and the time in grade. Officers in each position or grade must complete the training program specified by the minister of national defense.

Article 9. The times in grade required for promotion consideration are established as follows: 2 years from lieutenant to senior lieutenant, 2 years from senior lieutenant to captain, 3 years from captain to senior captain, 4 years from lieutenant colonel to colonel.

Time in grade is not required for consideration for promotion of general grades.

The time spent in training schools is included in the time in grade required for promotion.

In wartime, the time in grade required for promotion is shortened, as determined by the Council of Ministers.

Article 10. Officers who have recorded achievements in combat and other assignments and who have served in areas of difficulty and hardship or performed special tasks in an outstanding manner shall be considered for promotion to a higher military grade prior to their completion of the required time in grade.

Article 11. Officers who have completed the required time in grade but are found to be unqualified for promotion shall have their time in grade extended by the maximum time in grade. By that time, if they are found to remain unqualified for promotion, they shall be transferred to reserve duty.

Article 12. The system of positions in the army shall be established by the Council of Ministers on the basis of the organization of the army at that period of time, and submitted to the Council of State for ratification. Two military grades shall be designated for each position.

Article 13. The assignment of officers to the various positions must be based on organizational demand, revolutionary quality, operational capability, physical fitness and trained specialty.

Article 14. The authority to appoint positions and commission and promote military grades is regulated as follows:

The Council of State shall appoint such positions as chief of the General Staff and director of the General Political Department; and shall commission and promote such military grades as senior general, colonel general and admiral of the navy.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers shall appoint such positions as vice minister of national defense, deputy chief of the General Staff, deputy director of the General Political Department, directors and deputy directors of other general departments, inspector general and deputy inspector general of the army, and commanders and deputy commanders of military regions, armed services, army corps and armed branches and corresponding positions; and shall commission and promote such grades as lieutenant general, vice admiral of the navy, major general and rear admiral of the navy.

The minister of national defense shall appoint such positions as division commander, department director and corresponding or lower positions; and shall commission and promote grades from lieutenant to colonel. The echelon that is empowered to appoint certain positions and commission or promote certain grades shall have the authority to demote, degrade, remove from positions and strip officers or military grades.

Article 15. The echelon that is empowered to appoint certain positions shall have the authority to assign officers to such positions. The minister of national defense has the authority to nominate deputy commanders of military regions, armed services, army corps, armed branches and corresponding positions.

Article 16. In an emergency, officers holding positions above and including regiment commander are empowered to suspend the positions of subordinate officers and temporarily appoint their replacements; and he must immediately notify the competent echelon for its consideration and approval.

Article 17. Officers may be promoted or demoted by only one grade at a time. Promotion or demotion by more than one grade is permitted only in special cases.

Article 18. Officers may be assigned to higher or lower positions than their military grades warrant. Officers may be assigned to lower positions in the following cases:

1. When it is necessary to strengthen the command of essential units.
2. When the unit concerned has its table of organization reduced or its organizational structure altered.
3. When the capability or physical fitness of the officers concerned does not quality them for their current positions.

Article 19. For officers who are demoted, the times in grade for promotion shall be computed from the date of demotion. Demoted officers, if they show progress or score outstanding achievements in combat and other operations, may have their times in grade for promotion reduced from those mentioned under Article 9.

Article 20. Active-duty officers who are assigned by the Ministry of National Defense to serve in nonarmy sectors, are called detached officers. Detached officers have the same obligations and rights as unit officers. The system for detached officers shall be established by the council of ministers.

Article 21. Officers with higher military grades are superiors of officers with lower military grades. In cases where there is an officer holding a subordinate position to another officer with the same or lower military grade, the holder of the subordinate position is the junior officer.

Article 22. Superior officers must carry out the system of periodic appraisal of subordinate officers in accordance with the regulations and procedures established by the minister of national defense.

Chapter III

Reserve Officers

Article 23. Reserve Officers are classified as Category I reserve officers and Category II reserve officers in accordance with the age groups mentioned under Article 32. Officers who reach the age limit for active duty as provided for under Article 32 or who do not meet the requirements for promotion consideration as provided for under Article 11, shall be transferred to reserve duty. Officers who reach the age limit for Category II reserve duty or who are found to be physically unqualified shall be excluded from reserve duty.

Article 24. The transfer of active-duty officers to reserve duty or the mobilization of reserve officers to active duty and the exclusion of reserve duty for officers, depending on their grades, shall be decided upon by the competent echelons mentioned under Article 14.

Article 25. The following persons who have completed the training program for reserve officers shall be considered for military commissions and registered for reserve duty:

1. Discharged noncommissioned officers;
2. Graduates from colleges and higher education schools; and
3. Cadres or nonarmy sectors who possess specialized skills necessary for military operations.

Article 26: The authority to commission, promote, demote and strip military grades of reserve officers is exercised in the same way as for active duty officers, as provided for under Article 14.

Article 27. Based on the results of their military training and their achievements in national defense service, reserve officers may be considered for promotion to a higher military grade.

The time in grade required of reserve officers for promotion consideration is 2 years longer than that established for each grade of active-duty officers. Reserve officers who are mobilized for active duty shall be considered for promotion to the corresponding military grades of the army positions to which they are assigned.

Article 28. Reserve officers, upon receiving assignments or taking up residence in a certain locality, must register at the local military organ of that locality and are subjected to the control of the local military organ.

Article 29. In peacetime, reserve officers who have not yet had active service may be called up to serve in army units for a limited period of time. In wartime, reserve officers shall be mobilized for army service in accordance with a general mobilization order or a limited mobilization order.

Article 30. Reserve officers are duty-bound to attend military training courses as decided by the minister of national defense. The benefits they will receive while in training centers shall be determined by the Council of Ministers.

Final Chapters on VPA Law

OW200525 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1200 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Final two chapters of SRV law on service by VPA officers]

Chapter IV

Officers' Duties and Rights

Article 31. Officers have the following duties:

1. To be absolutely loyal to the fatherland, the people and the SRV state, to uphold revolutionary vigilance, to fulfill well all assigned functions and tasks and to stand ready to fight, make sacrifices and firmly defend the Socialist Vietnamese fatherland;
2. To exemplarily observe the party's line and policies, state laws and military rules and regulations and to uphold the soldier's sense of discipline in their units;
3. To respect the laboring people's right to socialist collective mastery, to resolutely defend socialist property and the people's lives and property, to promote democracy and firmly maintain discipline in the army and to care for the spiritual and material life of soldiers in their units;
4. To regularly train in order to enhance their knowledge in the political, military, cultural, scientific, technical and professional fields as well as their ability to organize, command and manage troops, to improve their revolutionary ethics and to train themselves physically in order to fulfill their tasks well.

Article 32. The following are the age limits set for army service of all active service officers and reserve officers:

Junior level officers:

-- Active service, 38;
-- Reserve army Category I, 45;
-- Reserve army Category II, 50.

Major:

-- Active service, 43;
-- Reserve army Category I, 50;
-- Reserve army Category II, 55.

Lieutenant colonel:

-- Active service, 48;
-- Reserve army Category I, 55;
-- Reserve army Category II, 58.

Colonel:

-- Active service, 55;
-- Reserve army Category I, 58;
-- Reserve army Category II, 60.

Major general and rear admiral:

-- Active service, 60;
-- Reserve army Category I, 63;
-- Reserve army Category II, 65.

The age limits are not set for the army service of lieutenant generals, vice admirals and officers of higher ranks. However, when any of these officers' health condition or capability makes them unfit for their job, the retirement system shall apply.

Article 33. Based on the army's needs and the revolutionary ethics, capabilities and health condition of each officer, the national defense minister has the right to extend the active service period of officers of the rank of colonel and below. Each extension may run from 1 to 3 years, but extensions shall not exceed the age limits set for Category I reserve officers and shall not exceed the age limits set for Category II reserve officers with regard to officers who do scientific and technological research work. The extension of the active service periods for major generals and rear admirals shall be decided by the Council of Ministers.

Article 34. Officers scoring achievements in combat or work performance shall have their achievements appraised for awarding of orders, medals or state honorary titles or any other form of commendation.

Article 35. Officers who fail to implement orders or fulfill tasks, or who commit other mistakes or are guilty of other shortcomings shall be subject to military disciplinary measures. Offending officers shall be prosecuted.

Article 36. Any officer whose military rank has been forfeited but who shows improvement in his conduct may be considered for bestowal of a military rank commensurate with his assigned function.

Article 37. Any reserve officer who violates military discipline or state laws and who proves himself unworthy of the rank he has acquired or proves himself to be an unbecoming officer shall be demoted or have his officer rank forfeited. The promotion of a demoted reserve officer shall be examined and carried out in accordance with the regulation stiuplated in Article 19.

Article 38. Officers' leaves are specified in the leave system. In wartime or in emergencies, the national defense minister can order the suspension of all leave, and all officers on leave must return to their units immediately.

Article 39. Officers enjoy the pay and allowance systems specified by the Council of Ministers.

Article 40. Officers are encouraged and assisted in developing their abilities in the scientific and technological fields, and academic titles and degrees shall be accorded them in accordance with the general state academic system. Valuable research in military science and art, in military science and technology or in general science and technology shall be appropriately commended and awarded.

Article 41. The local administration shall care for the material life of officers' families and shall create conditions for them to fulfill their tasks well.

Article 42. Officers who terminate their active service period but who have not yet reached the retirement age shall be accorded priority in the selection for studies at schools or shall be assigned jobs in state agencies or social organizations. If no jobs can be secured for the officers and if they have served on active duty for 20 consecutive years, they are entitled to benefits under the retirement system.

Article 43. Officers who reach retirement age or who are forced to retire because they are no longer physically fit for the job shall be notified 3 months in advance so they can make preparations for their retirement and shall be cared for in their spiritual and material life in accordance with the relevant state systems.

Chapter V

Final Stipulations

Article 44. This law rescinds the 29 April 1958 law on the VPA officers' service system.

Article 45. The Council of Ministers shall specify the details for the implementation of this law.

This law was passed on 30 December 1981 at the Second Session of the Seventh SRV National Assembly.

[Signed] Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the SRV National Assembly

NHAN DAN HAILS MILITARY SERVICE, OFFICERS LAWS

BK111420 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 10 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 11 January editorial: "Sacred Obligation"]

[Text] The laws on military obligation and VPA officers were adopted by the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly at a time when our entire party, people and armed forces are engaged in emulative activities to score achievements in honor of the Fifth National VCP Congress. This is an important event which not only responds to the situation of the revolution in our country but also conforms to our people's aspirations.

Our revolutionary cause is being promoted at a time when imperialist warmongering forces led by the U.S. imperialists and Beijing expansionists and hegemonists are colluding with each other to violently oppose and sabotage the world revolutionary movement. Backed by Washington, Beijing is feverishly carrying out multifaceted acts of sabotage against our country and the other Indochinese nations, thereby preparing conditions for launching a large-scale war of aggression to annex Vietnam and the entire region. For this reason, our people's historic strategic task is to strengthen national defense, firmly maintain political security and public order and safety, and stand ready to fight and fight victoriously in defense of the fatherland.

The new laws constitute an extremely important basis for our people to develop their collective mastery and create conditions for each citizen to fulfill his national defense obligation, thus ceaselessly increasing the fighting strength of our armed forces. The new laws also provide new conditions for our state to mobilize the great potentials of the country and bring into play the enormous strength of the system of proletarian dictatorship in building and defending the socialist fatherland.

In 1955, our National Assembly promulgated the law on the service system of VPA officers. In 1960, it issued the law on military obligation. During the 20 years and more these two laws were implemented, our party and state mobilized millions of youths for combat duties on all battlefronts and trained a contingent of capable officers for all armed branches and services who were unswervingly loyal to the party, the fatherland and the people. Thanks to this, we were able to consolidate our national defense and strengthen our military forces to liberate the south, defend the north, achieve independence and national reunification, and defeat the two wars of aggression started by the Chinese expansionists, thus firmly defending the socialist fatherland and fulfilling our international obligation.

The newly promulgated laws fully institutionalize the orientation and position of our party and state concerning the building of the People's Army and reflect the collective mastery of the working people. This is in keeping with the SRV's new Constitution and in response to the demand for building a regular and modern army in the new stage of the revolution.

Defending the fatherland is a sacred obligation and a noble right of each citizen. Every citizen is dutybound to discharge his military obligation and build the all-people national defense system. The law on military obligation ensures fairness and equality among citizens in carrying out national defense duty. This character is fully reflected in all the regulations on active military duties of noncommissioned officers and servicemen, on commendation and rewards and on dealing with offenses. The law also embodies equality between the two sexes in the discharge of military obligations, providing for adjustments to suit the characteristics of the fairer sex.

In our country, the discharge of military obligation is based on the patriotism, the love of socialism and the spirit of socialist internationalism of the people and on the voluntariness of each citizen bound by military obligation to join the standing or reserve armed forces. This is also a vast mass movement in which the administration at all levels coordinates with the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, the VFF and other mass organizations as well as schools and families to create an aggregate strength to mobilize, educate and organize the citizens and create proper conditions for them to fulfill their duty. This spirit is fully reflected in the various regulations of the law, especially those concerning the military obligation council and the duties and powers of the administration at all levels and of the social organizations.

Our country has just gone through many decades of war and for generations our people have fought and sacrificed their lives for the cause of national defense. Although our country is now in a state of peace, we still have to cope with an extremely bellicose and villainous enemy in a multifaceted war of sabotage.

Because the soldiers of our People's Army play a very important role in the revolutionary struggle, they deserve the concern and care of our party, state and society. The law on military obligation reflects that spirit under the economic conditions and situation in our country. Everyone of us and every locality and sector must implement these laws scrupulously, ensuring that all war invalids, fallen combatants, military personnel on active duty and discharged soldiers as well as their families fully enjoy the privileges accorded them.

The law on military obligation also covers many newly established regulations, including those providing for the drafting of youths for active military service; for the development of a powerful reserve force; for professional servicemen; and for the registration and management of reservists and draftees. These are the questions which have important effect on the effort to develop the People's Army.

The promulgation of the law on officers has contributed positively to the struggle to develop the VPA into a powerful people's revolutionary army with a firm determination to win and an ever higher level of standardization and modernization in order to stand ready for combat under all circumstances. This law provides adequate regulations for selecting outstanding citizens fully qualified for training to become officers with good quality, professional skills, physical fitness and educational background.

The new points in the regulations on systems and standards of military ranks and on the period set for the consideration of promotion and appointment of officers are aimed at providing our army with a contingent of young officers with revolutinary ethics, good knowledge and organizational, commanding and managerial competency in order to fulfill all the heavy duties entrusted by our party and state.

To train a contingent of qualified and capable reserve officers ready for active duty when ordered is a question of strategic importance in order to strengthen the all-people national defense and ensure that our country is always ready and strong enough to defeat the enemy under any circumstance. The regulations on the training, standards, and managment of reserve officers are all aimed at ensuring that the contingent of these officers is satisfactorily developed and mobilized for active duty when necessary.

Officers of the People's Army are military cadres vested with the heaviest and most glorious duties. The regulations on the specific benefits and obligations of the officers are aimed at creating favorable conditions for them to be at ease to carry out their work and fulfill their assignments under any circumstances. Our entire party, people and army are dutybound to implement fully and scrupulously all the regulations of these laws by specific revolutionary actions in order to fulfill their sacred duty, thus helping to make our people's armed forces ever stronger and capable of defending the socialist fatherland firmly.

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 015 22 January 1982

JAPAN

Sakurauchi: U.S. Concern Over Poland Shared C 1
Defense Officials View U.S. Technology Embargo C 1
Conditions for U.S. Weapons Introduction Noted C 1
Abe Rules Out Independent Action Against USSR C 2
Agreement on Foreign Ministers Meeting With USSR C 2
Japanese, Soviet Deputy Foreign Ministers Meet [cross-reference] C 2
Suzuki Pledges Assistance for Developing States C 3
Defense Spending Seen as Growing by 10 Percent C 3

NORTH KOREA

Kim Il-song Meets Outgoing PRC Envoy 21 Jan D 1
Kim Il-song Receives Outgoing Romanian Envoy D 1
Kim Il-song Receives Somali Envoy's Credentials D 1
NODONG SINMUN Hits Chon's Midnight Inspection [22 Jan] D 1
VRPR Criticizes Foreign Minister No's Remarks D 2
Motivating Role of Consumer Goods Discussed D 3
[NODONG SINMUN 19 Jan]
Premier Yi Chong-ok Greets Albanian Counterpart D 5

SOUTH KOREA

President Chon Renews Call for North-South Talks E 1
Further Details E 3
Envoys Discuss Steps Against North Provocations E 3
[KOREA HERALD 22 Jan]
KOREA HERALD Appraises Reagan's First Year [22 Jan] E 4

LAOS

Materials on 33d Founding Anniversary of LPLA I 1
LPLA Order of the Day I 1
Slogans for Anniversary I 2
Article on Army Achievements I 3

THAILAND

MATICHON Cites Source on Possible SRV Attack [22 Jan] J 1
SRV Attitude Toward Refugees Criticized J 1
[THAI RAT 21 Jan]
NATION Assesses Khmer Rouge Coalition Strategy [21 Jan] J 1
Sitthi Answers Questions on Visit to Burma J 2
Further Remarks J 3
AFP Report J 3
Hilltribe Insurgents Surrender to Military J 4
[POST 22 Jan]
Briefs: Sugar Export to Indonesia, Rice Contracts J 4
With Mauritius, Comoros

VIETNAM

Iraqi Vice President Ma'ruf Continues Visit K 1
Nguyen Huu Tho Banquet Speech K 1
Ma'ruf Banquet Speech K 2
Talks With Pham Van Dong K 3
INA Account of Talks K 3
INA Report on Official Talks K 4
Departure From Hanoi K 5
Ho Chi Minh City Activities K 5
Hanoi: Wishes of Chinese Residents Understood K 6
Van Tien Dung Greetings Mark LPLA Anniversary K 7
NHAN DAN Praises Vietnam-India Friendship K 8
Message to UN Supports Antiapartheid Struggle K 9
Pham Van Dong Greets Albanian Counterpart K 9
DPRK Defense Minister Marks VPA Anniversary K 9
JANA Reports Truong Chinh Note to Al-Qadhdhafi K 9

AUSTRALASIA

AUSTRALIA

Street Discusses Policy on Aid to Poland M 1

SAKURAUCHI: U.S. CONCERN OVER POLAND SHARED

OW220639 Tokyo KYODO in English 0616 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Friday Japan will "favorably" respond to a U.S. suggestion of sharing concern over the situation in Poland by naming January 30 "Solidarity Day." The suggestion was made last week by U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield. Sakurauchi said he will ask Japanese trade unions to join the government in expressing renewed concern over Poland.

The foreign minister noted Japan has pledged close ties with the United States and other countries in the Western bloc in dealing with the Polish Government.

DEFENSE OFFICIALS VIEW U.S. TECHNOLOGY EMBARGO

OW210811 Tokyo KYODO in English GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 21 (KYODO) -- Japanese defense authorities are concerned that the recently disclosed U.S. embargo on transfer of military technology may greatly affect Japan's defense equipment production in the future.

These authorities, while believing the U.S. ban to apply directly to technology on large-caliber cannon only, are nevertheless concerned that the U.S. may take further similar steps as that country goes into midterm elections. They regard the Stratton Law which forbids the transfer to other countries of military technology developed at American arsenals as aimed at controlling unemployment. Rep Samuel Stratton, who prepared the bill, hails from a constituency plagues with unemployment at arsenals there, the sources say.

Under a Japan-U.S. agreement, the Ground Self-Defense Force is buying the barrels of self-propelled 203-mm howitzers from the U.S., and producing other components under license, to make the gun its mainstay weapon. The Japanese defense authorities are trying to increase the "local content ratio" of P-3C patrol planes and F-15 fighters to around 75 percent from the present 50 percent.

CONDITIONS FOR U.S. WEAPONS INTRODUCTION NOTED

OW190353 Tokyo KYODO in English 0315 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 19 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government Tuesday said prior consultation on introduction of U.S. nuclear weapons into Japanese territory was an American "duty" under the bilateral security treaty. American policy not to mention the existence of nuclear weapons cannot take preference over this duty, it said. But the government reiterated it has no intention of asking the United States about past alleged introduction of nuclear arms by U.S. warships and aircraft into Japan. These points were made in a written reply to a question by a Komeito member of the upper house.

Akira Kuroyanagi of Komeito earlier said the Reagan administration is planning to deploy Tomahawk cruise missiles in the Far East and asked the government whether it would accept port calls by American warships carrying the nuclear warhead. The government in the written reply said the the Tomahawk could carry both nuclear and non-nuclear warheads. Deployment of the nuclear-armed cruise missiles is yet to be determined, it said.

Kuroyanagi also alleged that the prior consultation has become a dead letter, as U.S. Government officials and former U.S. Ambassador to Japan Edwin Reischauer have asserted that the United States is not restricted by any arrangement with Japan to notify the government of the transit or temporary introduction of nuclear weapons here.

The government reaffirmed its earlier view that introduction of any kind of nuclear arms is a subject of prior consultation and that the Japanese Government always rejects such introduction under its three non-nuclear principles.

The written reply said there was no difference in interpretation between the Governments of Japan and the United States on the prior consultation provisions in the security treaty.

ABE RULES OUT INDEPENDENT ACTION AGAINST USSR

OW220143 Tokyo KYODO in English 0059 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government will review residual import restrictive items along with abolishing nontariff barriers, Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said Thursday.

Abe, who has just returned from the United States after attending a trade conference of major industrial countries in Florida and holding a series of talks with top U.S. officials, made the remark at a press conference held at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry. He said: "I'd like to study and draw a conclusion as soon as possible on what items are to be liberalized for import in response to the requests made by the U.S. and Europe."

The 27 import restrictive items in the category of farm products and leather goods have been left untouched in the government's measures so far taken to ease trade friction.

Regarding economic sanctions against the Soviet Union, Abe said: "It is a major premise that West European nations agree to it," thus making it clear that Japan will not step out to impose sanctions against the Soviets independently. He was reported to have said in Washington that the Japanese Government will consider taking administrative guidance to "suspend" export of high-technology items to the Soviet Union to protest its role in Poland.

The minister also expressed anxiety over U.S. Congressional moves by stating that "pressure is building up in Congress for Japan to immediately open the door of the Japanese market for foreign products."

AGREEMENT ON FOREIGN MINISTERS MEETING WITH USSR

OW220728 Tokyo KYODO in English 0711 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Friday that Japan and the Soviet Union already agree on holding consultations on the foreign ministers level as part of dialogue between the two countries. Sakurauchi told reporters the government will consult with the Soviet Union through diplomatic channels as to the timing of the foreign ministers meeting.

Japan proposed such a meeting in the current bilateral working-level consultations in Moscow and the Soviet Union replied that the Soviet leadership would study the proposal.

JAPANESE, SOVIET DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTERS MEET

For reports on talks in Moscow between Japanese and Soviet delegations led by Deputy Foreign Ministers Kensuke Yanagiya and Nikolay Firyubin, respectively, including a meeting between Yanagiya and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko, see the Northeast Asia section of the 22 January and subsequent issues of the Soviet Union DAILY REPORT.

SUZUKI PLEDGES ASSISTANCE FOR DEVELOPING STATES

OW220213 Tokyo KYODO in English 0154 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- The secretary general of the UN Conference on Trade and Development has called for Japan's further financial cooperation in aiding developing countries, officials said Friday. The UN request for Japanese help in revitalizing the stagnant world economy was made to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday by UNCTAD chief Gamani Corea.

Officials said Suzuki pledged Japan "will strengthen financial and technological cooperation with developing countries." The prime minister also said his government has made up a new budgetary program calling for expansion of official government aid to poor countries.

Corea told Suzuki Japan has played an important role in creating an international agency aimed at stabilizing prices of rubber, tin and other raw materials on which many developing countries rely for their economic development. UNCTAD was also prepared to take up the issue of growing protectionism in industrial countries and ways to contain the move at its sixth general meeting in the African country of Gabon in May-June, 1983, the officials said Corea told Suzuki.

Earlier in the day, the UNCTAD head conferredwith Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and was assured of Japan's continuing support for development programs of Third World countries. Ministry officials said Sakurauchi also expressed interest in attending the Gabon conference next year. The foreign minister pointed out that despite Japan's big financial aid to the UN conference, none of the four Japanese on the 208-member UN conference has been in a key post. Corea said he will think about Sakurauchi's proposal to promote Japanese to key posts, according to ministry officials.

DEFENSE SPENDING SEEN AS GROWING BY 10 PERCENT

OW220047 Tokyo KYODO in English 0018 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Japan's defense expenditure is likely to grow by around 10 percent in fiscal 1983 if the nation's defense buildup program is put into force in accordance with the budget drawn up for the fiscal year starting April 1. This prospect became apparent Thursday at a meeting of officials of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party dealing with defense affairs.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's conservative government earmarked yen 2,586.1 billion (about $11.4 billion) for defense during fiscal 1982 beginning in April. This was an increase of 7.754 percent from the current fiscal year. However, the government also decided to acquire front-line equipment such as P-3C antisubmarine aircraft and F-15 fighter planes with funds for their purchase to be allocated from the budgets in fiscal 1983 and subsequent years. LDP officials said the amount for the purchase of this military hardware will be yen 860 billion in fiscal 1983; yen 540 billion in fiscal 1984; yen 320 billion in fiscal 1985; and yen 30 billion in fiscal 1986, for a total of yen 1,750 billion (about $7.7 billion). They emphasized that the figure was the sum worked out in a trial calculation and that it was not a final amount. The payment to be made in subsequent years is all outside the framework of an ordinary defense budget for each fiscal year.

The yen 860 billion extra spending for fiscal 1983 will be an increase of yen 160 billion over the similar extra spending appropriated for coming fiscal 1982. Thus, if the yen 860 billion extra outlay is approved without change, this portion alone will automatically boost the entire defense budget for fiscal 1983 by at least 6.2 percent, according to defense analysts. They said that the budget in the final analysis will be increased by around 10 percent if rises in personnel, maintenance, repair and other costs are taken into account.

KIM IL-SONG MEETS OUTGOING PRC ENVOY 21 JAN

SK212238 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2201 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 22 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on January 21 received Lu Zhixian, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the People's Republic of China to our country, who paid a farewell call on him.

Present there were Ho Tam, vice-premier and foreign minister, and officials of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-Song had a talk with the ambassador.

KIM IL-SONG RECEIVES OUTGOING ROMANIAN ENVOY

SK220440 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2205 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 22 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on January 21 received Paul Marinescu, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Romanian Socialist Republic to our country, who paid a farewell call on him.

Present there were Ho Tam, vice-premier and foreign minister, and an official of the Romanian Embassy in Pyongyang.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had a conversation with the ambassador. The ambassador presented a gift to him.

KIM IL-SONG RECEIVES SOMALI ENVOY'S CREDENTIALS

SK220437 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2203 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 22 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on January 21 received credentials from Sharif Salah Mohamed Ali, newly-appointed ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Somali Democratic Republic to our country.

Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Ho Tam and an official of the Somali Embassy in Pyongyang were present at the presentation ceremony.

After receiving credentials, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had a talk with the ambassador.

NODONG SINMUN HITS CHON'S MIDNIGHT INSPECTION

SK220508 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0400 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 22 (KCNA) -- Traitor Chon Tu-hwan on January 20 prowled about Seoul streets at midnight allegedly for "inspecting" the "order of the streets" of Seoul and the "army-police joint midnight emergency duty system" after the so-called "lifting of the curfew". This is a topic of commentaries of NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON Friday.

Under the title "Fascist Stands Naked," a signed commentary of NODONG SINMUN says: His eloquence about "order," "law-abiding spirit," and so on that day was a hokum for cracking down upon the South Korean people more harshly after binding them all the tighter to his fascist system. This row once again disclosed the fraud of the "curfew lifting" carried out by the puppets under the name of lessening the inconveniences of the population.

The commentary notes that traitor Chon Tu-hwan has massively reinforced the repressive forces and reorganised the fascist repressive system with the announcement of the "lifting" of the "curfew" in some areas of South Korea as from January 5 and is now mobilising even the puppet army forces in the round-the-clock patrol to watch the population.

It continues: Under the cloak of "lifting the curfew," he has reinforced the nocturnal repressive networks, far from withdrawing them, and is driving new repressive forces and even puppet army troops into repression. What sort of "curfew lifting" is it?

The strange row kicked up by the Chon Tu-hwan group over "curfew lifting" is a ridiculous humbuggery for allaying the discontent and resistance of the people against the fascist repressive rule without parallel and winning their favor and a smokescreen for putting fresh muscles into the fascist repressive system.

The Chon Tu-hwan group must not resort to the foolish double-dealing tactics of sword-brandishing and appeasement but act with discretion and step down from power without delay.

VRPR CRITICIZES FOREIGN MINISTER NO'S REMARKS

SK201130 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] At an 18 January meeting with the special envoy of the French Government Philippe Machefer, Foreign Minster No Sin-yong spouted shameless gibberish. At the meeting, he babbled about a military buildup by the North, defamed the North's peaceful reunification policy and harped on worn-out divisive schemes such as the 12 January and 5 June proposals and cross-recognition.

His remarks were indeed gibberish that can come only from one who has lost his reason. The gibberish of No Sin-yong is nothing more than a foolish trick aimed at concealing the war maneuvers and divisive nature of the Chon Tu-hwan ring.

Speaking without prejudice, it is not the North but the United States and its stooge the Chon Tu-hwan ring which are disturbing peace on the Korean Peninsula, obstructing the work for peace and continuing to commit crimes against peace.

On the pretext of a threat from the North, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is ceaselessly introducing offensive weapons from the United States and beefing up its armed forces. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is also continuing war exercises with the North as an imaginary enemy and bringing the situation to the brink of war by further aggravating the already tense situation.

The large-scale war exercise dubbed Team Spirit 1982, reportedly to be staged beginning in February, is also a part of the schemes against reunification sought by the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which is running amok in preparations for a war of northward invasion at the instigation of the United States. It is indeed an act of a thief crying "stop thief" that those who promote war fever on this soil babble about a military buildup by someone else.

Prattling about the so-called 12 January and 5 June proposals, No Sin-yong again harped on so-called cross-recognition. This is also shameless gibberish aimed at perpetuating the division of the nation. As the world knows, the so-called 12 January and 5 June proposals of the Chon Tu-hwan ring are worthless political tricks and false unification slogans. They are slogans against reunification, tricks aimed at maintaining and consolidating the present military ruling system and foolish remarks aimed at concealing their divisive nature. The so-called cross-recognition is also nothing more than a divisive slogan aimed at justifying the policy of two Koreas in the international community.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan ring continues to harp on such divisive slogans. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is pretending as if it is interested in reunification to deceive our masses and world public opinion, to shore up the shaky fascist dictatorial regime and to extricate itself from isolation at home and abroad. Thus, No Sin-Yong's remarks are nothing more than gibberish which has disclosed the wicked schemes running counter to peace on the Korean Peninsula, promoting the sentiment of North-South confrontation and war atmosphere and creating two Koreas.

Our masses will never tolerate the divisive war schemes of the Chon Tu-hwan ring but continue to struggle against it to the bitter end.

MOTIVATING ROLE OF CONSUMER GOODS DISCUSSED

SK200922 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2243 GMT 18 Jan 82

[19 January NODONG SINMUN editorial: "Let Us Decisively Increase Production of People's Consumer Goods by Rapidly Developing Light Industry"]

[Text] In his New Year's address the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set it as an important task this year to increase the people's living standards. We should vigorously struggle to further enhance the people's living standards by upholding and following the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and his recent programmatic instructions.

What is important here is to decisively increase the production of people's consumer goods by concentrating on light industry. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We should decisively increase the production of people's consumer goods by rapidly developing light industry and should build more houses and cultural and welfare facilities in urban and rural areas through a mass movement. By so doing we should more smoothly solve the problem of the people's daily living.

The superiority of the socialist system finds clear expression in the people's daily life. No matter how outstandingly the production capacity may be developed and science and technology may be developed, if we fail to constantly enhance the people's living standards, we cannot expect the working people -- who are the masters of production and construction -- to display their revolutionary zeal and, accordingly, we cannot vigorously carry out the revolution and construction.

Proceeding from this, our party has defined it as a supreme principle in its activities to enhance the people's living standards, and it has paid deep attention to this since the early period of building the new society. Our people today are enjoying a happy life without worries about food, clothing and housing. This is because our party has advanced correct lines and policies at every stage of the development of the revolution and has shown deep concern about the enhancement of the people's living standards. Our people have been liberated from all sorts of exploitation and oppression and are leading a happy life without knowning even the words unemployment and hunger. This is our people's current reality.

However, as the people's living standards improve, their demands for variety in cloth, clothing and knitwears, modern household goods and daily necessities further increase. Their demands for edible oil and other delicious and nutritious propcessed foods also increase. Only when light industry and local industry are constantly developed can these demands be met continuously.

This year is a very significant one greeting the 70th anniversary of the birth of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Greeting the 70th anniversary of the birth of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as a most felicitous event of the nation is the unanimous desire and will of our people. Increasing people's consumer goods by operating all light industry plants at full capacity is an important requirement for greeting this significant year with proud victory.

When people's consumer goods are produced in greater quantities and smoothly meet the people's increasing demands, society will further overflow with a revolutionary mood and the whole country will further seethe with heightened political zeal. When cloth, clothing and foodstuffs of good quality are abundantly supplied in every respect for the people's daily life and commodities overflow in every store, our working people will faithfully work to repay the great care of the party with loyalty and, at the same time, their revolutionary spirit of carrying out the tasks assigned by the party will be further enhanced.

In this way, the party's plan to make this year a most brilliant one in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle can be brilliantly carried out and the ten prospective goals of socialist economic construction can be achieved ahead of schedule by continuously accelerating revolution and construction.

All party members and working people in the light industry sector should deeply realize their mission and duties in the implementation of the farsighted plan of the party and effect a great upsurge in the production of people's consumer goods.

What is important in effecting an epochal turn in the production of people's consumer goods by rapidly developing light industry is, first of all, that functionaries and working people in this sector highly demonstrate their party spirit, working class spirit and people-mindedness. Party spirit, working class spirit and people-mindedness are most lofty traits which communists should possess. Those who devotedly struggle for the party, the leader, the working class and the people and who find their happiness and worth from this are true communists.

Party members and working people in the light industry sector, guidance functionaries in particular, should devote themselves to the struggle for implementing the tasks the party has assigned in the sector, cherishing the honor of working at an important post of the revolution and bearing in mind that they are serving the people. Though they may face difficulties in the course of performing their duties, party members and working people in the light industry sector should seek the best ways and means and be bold in doing their jobs to implement their assignments at any cost.

To make the most of the existing light industrial foundation is an important task to be stressed in the light industry sector if we are to continuously increase the production of consumer goods. We have laid an economic foundation firm enough to meet the demands arising from the everyday life of the people.

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, we have many modern light industrial factories and local industrial plants throughout the country whose levels of technology and equipment have been enhanced. The rapid development of the chemical industry, in particular, enables us to better ensure the supply of raw materials needed for the production of consumer goods.

Under these circumstances, if we ensure the full operation of the light industry factories we have erected, we can make this year shine with a proud victory by effecting an epochal upsurge in the production of consumer goods. In this year during which we will greet the greatest holiday of the nation, party members and working people should wage a vigorous struggle to grasp the best of the production potential we have provided, resolved to effect a leap in the production of consumer goods.

To this end, guidance functionaries in the light industry sector should do business with organizations concerned with the supply of materials so as to enhance their role and responsibilities and carry out organizational work so as to ensure necessary materials in terms of type, quality and size. The provincial economic guidance committees and provincial party and power organs should take measures to effectively tap local raw materials and ensure the supply to light industry factories and local industrial plants of such materials as chemical fiber, synthetic resins, lactic acid, caustic soda and coal.

Vigorously carrying out the mass movement for technical innovations is an important requirement for producing better and more goods with the existing labor facilities and materials. In the light industry sector and in other related sectors, we should vigorously struggle to make production processes automated or semi-automated in line with the demands of chuch-orientation, modernization and scientification of the national economy.

By doing so, we should continuously enhance the technical levels of the existing facilities by technically improving them and devising more, new and modern equipment and should energetically accelerate the mechanization, automation and remote control of production by actively introducing modern scientific technology.

Workers, scientists and technicians should actively struggle to oppose factors hindering technical improvement such as technological mysticism, conventionalism and empiricism. By boldly carrying out the task to increase the number of goods and improve their quality, they should continuously create new standards and records, breaking old ones.

The task of ensuring the full operation of light industry factories and vigorously waging the mass movement for technical innovations to effect an epochal upsurge in the production of consumer goods depends in large part on the role of guidance functionaries. The revolutionary zeal and battle spirit of the light industry workers, who have been assigned the militant tasks set forth by the great leader in his New Year address, are very high. If guidance functionaries responsibly carry out their duties in the manner of their being the masters of the revolution, we can expect a new upsurge in improving the living standards of the people this year. Guidance functionaries in the light industrial sector should lay out concrete plans and targets and carry out organizational work to implement them.

To this end, guidance functionaries should go down to subordinate organs, lend their ears to the opinions of the masses, map out realistic plans and keep the working people informed of them. By doing so, they should let each of the working people know what his assignment is and how to achieve it.

Functionaries, those in the provincial economic guidance committees in particular, should go down to subordinate organs -- in line with the demands of the Taean work system -- actively seek, along with the workers, ways to increase the production of consumer goods, clear up problems facing them and make themselves examples for the workers. At the same time, they should organize and supervise the working people in such a way as to have them take good care of state property and implement daily, monthly and indexed plans with existing facilities, materials and labor.

Party organizations at all levels should aggressively and energetically carry out organizational and political work to keep party members and working people well appraised of the programmatic tasks for improving the living standards of the people which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth in his New Year address or in his teachings in recent days.

Let all of us vigorously advance in the manner of the speed battle added to the Chollima, upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's New Year address, and effect an epochal upsurge in the development of light industry this year.

PREMIER YI CHONG-OK GREETS ALBANIAN COUNTERPART

SK220432 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2200 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 22 (KCNA) -- Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Administration Council, sent a message of greetings to Comrade Adil Carcani upon the latter's appointment as chairman of the Council of Ministers of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania.

The message wishes the chairman success in his work for the development and prosperity of the country.

PRESIDENT CHON RENEWS CALL FOR NORTH-SOUTH TALKS

SK220710 Seoul YONHAP in English 0629 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 22 (YONHAP) -- The following are excerpts of President Chon Tu-hwan's new year policy statement on unification: Turning now to the question of South-North Korean relations, recent history teaches us that Korea will never be united as long as the South and the North each insists on a unification formula intended to advance only its own ideology, ideals and institutions. If we are to be successful, unification must be sought from the realization that the Korean people have been a single ethnic family from time immemorial, sharing a common descent, history, culture and tradition.

Unification must not be pursued exclusively or arbitrarily by any specific class or group, nor should it be sought by force of arms or other violent means. I am firmly convinced that unification must be accomplished on the principle of national self-determination and through democratic and peaceful procedures that reflect the free will of the entire people.

It was with an open mind and a desire to seek such a democratic and peaceful path to unification that last year I proposed on January 12 and again on June 5 an exchange of visits and a face-to-face meeting between the top leaders of South and North Korea. I want to make it clear that every possible effort has been -- and will continue to be -- made by the Republic of Korea Government to realize these proposals.

At the same time, I would like to make use of this occasion to disclose a new peaceful unification formula that was originally prepared in anticipation of a South-North summit meeting. I do so with a view to providing the North Korean authorities and the rest of the world with an opportunity to comprehend our genuine intent. It is my conviction that the most reasonable way to peaceful unification is to adopt a constitution of a unified Korea testifying to the commitment of the entire people to unification -- a commitment attained through the promotion of national reconciliation -- and to then establish a unified state on the terms and conditions laid down in the constitution.

I suggest that, to have the said constitution adopted, the South and the North organize a Consultative Conference for National Reunification (CCNR) with participants from the two sides representing the views of the residents in their respective areas and authorize this body to draft a constitution presenting the terms and conditions of a unified Democratic Republic of Korea committed to the ideals of nationalism, democracy, liberty and individual well-being. I would further suggest that, when such a draft constitution is drawn up, the two sides make it into law through free, democratic referendums held throughout the whole peninsula. The unification of the country can then be accomplished by organizing a unified legislature and establishing a unified government through a general election held under the constituion of the unified Korea.

It is my understanding that such issues as the political ideology, the name of the country, the basic domestic and foreign policy directions, the form of government and the methods and dates of the general elections for a unified legislature will have to be discussed and agreed on in the CCNR in the course of drafting the constitution.

It is our intention to present our own draft of a constituion for a unified country to the CCNR. If North Korea genuinely desires an independent and peaceful unification, they will also have to present a draft constitution for a unified country before the CCNR, so that the two versions can be studied and forged into a single draft.

It is essential to promote trust between the South and the North and steadfastly eliminate from national life all impediments to unification to facilitate the historic drafting of a unified constitution.

Accordingly, the unnatural relations between the South and the North which have resulted in self-inflicted injuries must be brought to an end and replaced by normal contacts that promote the national well-being.

To achieve this end, I hope that the South and the North will first normalize relations and, within the framework of these normalized relations, take concrete steps to bring about national reconciliation. I therefore propose, as a practical arrangement leading to unification, the conclusion of a provisional agreement on basic relations between South and North Korea featuring the following provisions.

First, relations between South and North Korea shall be based on the principle of equality and reciprocity pending unification.

Second, the South and the North shall abandon all forms of military force and violence, as well as the threat thereof, as a means of settling issues between them and seek peaceful solutions to all problems through dialogue and negotiation.

Third, South and North Korea shall recognize each other's existing political order and social institutions and shall not interfere in each other's internal affairs in any way.

Fourth, the South and the North shall maintain the existing regime of armistice in force while working out measures to end the arms race and military confrontation in order to ease tension and prevent war on the Korean Peninsula.

Fifth, in order to eliminate national suffering and the inconvenience resulting from the partition of the land and to promote an atmosphere of national trust and reconciliation, the South and the North shall progressively open their societies to each other through various forms of exchange and cooperation. To substantially advance the interests of the people, the South and the North shall facilitate free travel between the two halves of the peninsula, including the reunion of separated families; and shall promote exchanges and cooperation in the fields of trade, transportation, postal service, communications, sports, academic pursuits, education, culture, news gathering and reporting, health, technology, environmental protection and so forth.

Sixth, until unification is achieved, both parties shall respect each other's bilateral and multilateral treaties and agreements concluded with third countries, irrespective of differences in ideologies, ideas and institutions, and consult with each other on issues affecting the interests of the Korean people as a whole.

Seventh, the South and the North shall each appoint a plenipotentiary envoy with the rank of Cabinet minister to head a resident liaison mission to be established in Seoul and Pyongyang. The specific functions of the liaison missions shall be determined by mutual consultation and agreement with both parties providing the liaison mission from the other party with all necessary facilities and cooperation to ensure its smooth functioning.

It is my earnest hope that North Korea will expeditiously accept the proposal for a meeting between the top leaders of the South and the North in order to conduct frank and open-minded discussions on all issues noted above.

I propose to North Korea that high-level delegations from the South and the North, headed by Cabinet-rank chief delegates, meet together at the earliest possible date in a preparatory conference to work out the necessary procedures for a South-North summit meeting. I want to make it clear that if North Korea is agreeable to the proposal for a preparatory conference, the government of the Republic of Korea has already made the necessary preparations to send a delegation.

Further Details

SK220729 Seoul YONHAP in English 0709 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 22 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan said Friday Korea's basic diplomatic objective is not to engage in useless competition with North Korea nor to isolate it from the rest of the world.

"The ultimate goal of our diplomatic policy is to ease tension and secure lasting peace on the Korean Peninsula, thus paving a broad avenue for peaceful unification of the people and country," Chon said in a new year policy statement before the National Assembly. The chief executive pledged he would do his utmost to develop Korean-American relations into an even broader and more mature partnership.

Chon said efforts must be made to look at Japan through a broader perspective and develop more amicable and cooperative relations in view of the harsh international environment anticipated this decade, which urgently needs solidarity among free nations. If Seoul and Tokyo, he went on, keep this in mind and continue to negotiate in good faith, a satisfactory solution can be found for the pending issue of economic cooperation.

The president said the Korean Government will place major emphasis on seeking dialogue with communist nations, adding if Korea and communist countries can develop a correct understanding of each other's position, it will help secure a lasting peace on the peninsula.

Turning to national defense, the chief executive said his government would continue to focus energies on reinforcing a deterrent in the conviction that "our No. 1 enemy is war." The major goals of this year's defense policy are the establishment of a defense structure geared to meet the threat of real war, the streamlining of the national mobilization system and the enhancement of morale.

On other points, Chon said:

-- The government is determined to arrest inflation, making it top priority in economic policy and with a hope to reduce it to a single digit figure.
-- Economic growth in 1982 should exceed seven percent, with the rate of unemployment dropping slightly from the 4.8 percent of 1981.
-- Political parties and the government must develop cooperative relations in formulating and implementing public policies, rather than estranging each other by jockeying for dominant position.

ENVOYS DISCUSS STEPS AGAINST NORTH PROVOCATIONS

SK220211 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 22 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Korean diplomatic mission chiefs assigned abroad yesterday discussed ways and means of effectively checking North Korean infiltrations into the countries they are assigned to and the promotion of exports. According to a Ministry of Foreign Affairs official, some ambassador proposed that selective government or parliamentarian delegations be sent to the countries where both the Republic of Korea and North Korea have embassies.

Minister of Foreign Affairs No Sin-yong was quoted as saying that the government will consider an ambassador's proposal to buy oil from South America and export Korean machinery to the area.

Saying that Australia declined to reopen diplomatic relations with Pyongyang in support for Seoul's policy of "cross recognition" by superpowers, No instructed the envoys to do their best in their diplomatic activities. No said the future emigration policy will be formulated on recommendations by Korean diplomatic mission chiefs involved.

The Foreign Minister and mission chiefs agreed on holding exhibitions of "5,000 Years of Korean Arts" in European countries in two years, the official said. Noting that Korea is not well known to Italians, No said the government will make films and books on Korea in Italian. The participants are from 36 countries in North and South America, Europe and Asia.

KOREA HERALD APPRAISES REAGAN'S FIRST YEAR

SK220222 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 22 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "One Year Under Reagan"]

[Text] President Reagan may not be as "very satisfied" with his one year in the White House as he claimed on the eve of the first anniversary of his inauguration. But it is unfair to deliver a verdict of poor performance by focusing on the inadequacy of Reaganomics. Economy is a tough nut to crack for any leader or government.

The Republican administration under Reagan has earned considerable high marks in the restoring of international credibility as well as domestic confidence in the dynamic role and responsibility of the Stars and Stripes. Disillusionment with the initial record of Reagan's presidency may result from the too high-flown expectations pinned on his leadership after an extended period of disappointment in his predecessor's failure to live up to American pride and dream.

By accident or by design Iran released American hostages at the outset of Reagan's presidency who had taken a firm stand during his election campaign. Not everything went all right with him though. An assassin's bullet wounded him last spring, a grave reminder of the danger involving the chief executive office. Severe tests of his leadership came in many domestic and foreign policy areas for dealing with the worsening global economic woes and mounting Soviet military pressure.

The promise of a balanced budget is hard to achieve; the idea of a small government machine with reduced tax, reduced spending, and reduced welfare has made much headway, dealing a blow to a diverse spectrum of American citizens; discipline was hammered into trade unionism by mass firing of air traffic controllers who defied his back-to-work order. President Reagan's honeymoon with Congress was sweeter than most other American presidents' owing to his effective legislative strategy.

Discord among his lieutenants, especially between the State Department and White House staff was a drawback to the integrity and cohesiveness of his administration. Of them all, the President's National Security Adviser Allen raised public furor by taking some unreported gifts from Japanese journalists. The budget director irked Reagan by once contradicting the latter's policy. Allen's departure from the Executive Office settled the dust for the time being.

By far the greatest accomplishment of Reagan is his explicit and rigid commitment to the defense of freedom and peace against the forces of tyranny and expansionism. The backward stance of Washington in foreign and military policies since the Vietnam fiasco took a turnaround. Positive steps have already been taken or are in the works to strengthen naval preparedness in the western Pacific and the Indian Ocean. Deployment of more sophisticated nuclear missiles in Western Europe is being readied despite the protest of some countries. Over Poland, President Reagan came up with tough economic sanctions against the Poles and the Russians and despite the divided ranks of the Atlantic alliance the United States began to assert itself with powerful initiative and leadership.

The once-strained relations with Korea have been mended across the board with President Reagan reaffirming active support for security on the Korean Peninsula. U.S.-Korean relations are better now than ever before. The remaining years of the Reagan administration are certain to witness a new height in the maturing ties of friendship and cooperation.

MATERIALS ON 33D FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY OF LPLA

LPLA Order of the Day

BK201146 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Order of the day of Gen Khamtai Siphandon, commander in chief of the LPLA, issued on the occasion of the 33d founding anniversary of the LPLA -- dated 20 January]

[Text] Beloved officers and men in the regular armed forces and the regional forces, national defense workers and cadres, militia guerrillas and self-defense forces throughout the country: This year we are marking the 33d founding anniversary of the LPLA in an atmosphere of joy and confidence in the great and firm all-round victories scored by our army and people in the struggle to defend and build our beloved socialist country, at a time when the three revolutionary currents are continuously surging forward to vigorously strengthen their offensive position and are winning great and resounding victories. The imperialists, led by the U.S. imperialists, the Beijing reactionary big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and other reactionaries, though struggling desperately, are being defeated and forced into a defensive position, thus creating fundamentally favorable conditions for our revolution.

Under the leadership of the party and to contribute to the overall achievements of our country in 1981, our armed forces have tried their best to resolutely overcome all difficulties, and have coordinated with the public security forces and people throughout the country to basically fulfill all duties in defending the country and maintaining public security. All this clearly shows that the true tradition of our army has been consistently enhanced and is being developed into a new posture and strength to ensure that our army will more gloriously fulfill its tasks in 1982 as well as for many years to come.

On this occasion, on behalf of the party Central Military Commission and in the capacity of commander in chief of the LPLA, I would like to commemorate the heroic fallen officers and men who sacrificed their lives for national liberation and to defend and build our socialist country. I would like to extend my warm affection and intimate greetings to all comrades who are hospitalized and those who are disabled, and to the families of the fallen heroes and all soldiers throughout the country. I would like to express my solidarity and profound affection, as well as my determination to score victory, to all fraternal officers and men, national defense cadres and workers throughout the armed forces, who are energetically and studiously emulating one another to fulfill difficult but noble tasks on all fighting fronts and to carry out all chores to increase production and defend and build our socialist country. At the same time, I would also like to wholeheartedly hail all officers and men, national defense cadres and workers, militia guerrillas and self-defense forces for scoring outstanding achievements during the past year.

On this occasion, our armed forces would like to express our profound loyalty and overwhelming gratitude to the majestic and honorable LPRP, which has organized, educated, trained and led our army from one victory to another throughout the past 33 years. We would like to express our profound gratitude to the Lao people of all tribes, the LPDR Government, the administration, the LFNC and revolutionary mass organizations at all levels throughout the country for wholeheartedly nurturing, fostering, supporting, feeding and assisting our armed forces, thereby enabling our army to brilliantly fulfill all its duties.

The LPLA would like to express its profound gratitude and thanks to the armies and peoples of Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries for rendering sincere and effective assistance and support for our national construction and victorious fighting. We would like to express our sincere thanks to all friendly countries and progressive people throughout the world for giving sympathy to our army and people in the past as well as at present.

Beloved officers and men, national defense workers and cadres and all compatriots in the guerrilla units and self-defense forces, our entire party, army and people are concentrating all their efforts in persevering to overcome all obstacles and difficulties and to resolutely implement the national plan for 1982, which is the 2nd year of the First 5-Year State Plan on socialist construction in our country. To fulfill the tasks entrusted by the party and country, our entire army is energetically and studiously implementing the 1982 military plan with vigor, strength and a high sense of determination. However, we must profoundly understand that even though they have suffered successive heavy defeats, the imperialists, Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and other reactionary forces still remain obdurate in opposing our revolution. We must never lower our guard or vigilance.

In the face of the aforementioned situation, on behalf of the party Central Military Commission and in my capacity as the commander in chief of the LPLA, I issue an order to all officers and men in the regular armed forces, the regional forces, the militia guerrillas and the self-defense forces to carry out the following duties:

1. To increase close internal unity around the LPRP Central Committee; to step up efforts to strengthen and enhance the fine tradition of the army and the unity between the army and the people; to strengthen our solidarity and militant alliance with the armies and peoples of Vietnam, Kampuchea and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries; and to resolutely march forward in implementing the eighth resolution adopted by the party Central Committee and the First 5-Year State Plan;

2. To maintian a high sense of combat readiness; to resolutely smash all schemes and acts of sabotage, psychological warfare tactics and all tricks of the so-called peaceful transformation [han pian doi santi] of the enemies; to maintain national security and public order; and to resolutely smash all schemes of aggression launched by the enemies in all circumstances;

3. To go to the grassroots level vigorously with a view to mobilizing the masses to build all-round foundations to respect and safeguard the rights of mastery of the people of all nationalities; and to respect the administrations and mass organizations in order to genuinely turn the district into an independent combat unit and the canton into a socialist outpost;

4. To build the army with a sense of studiousness and thrift; to rigorously carry out chores to increase production and to build technical and logistical foundations; to ensure self-sufficiency in food supply; to safeguard and improve the quality of the supplies of weapons and technical equipment and the facilities of our army; to strive to improve the material and morale life of our army; and to positively contribute to the national economic construction;

5. To step up efforts to consolidate, build and strengthen our army by concentrating on building the fundamental company strong in all aspects, such as in the political, ideological, organizational, military, technical and scientific spheres; to step up efforts in consolidating the party unit so that it will become strong and stable and be capable of leading the company in all fields; to heighten a sense of awareness of organization and discipline throughout the army; to strictly adhere to all rules, regulations and orders so as to become a model in abiding by state law; to increase efforts in education and training to raise the standards in all aspects; to resolutely advance our army forward on the path of the model revolutionary army; and to successfully lead a political life designed by the party Central Committee so as to open an era and to create a foundation for all-round changes in the building of our armed forces in 1982.

Under the majestic banner of the party, with the tradition of heroism of our army, all cadres and combatants must love and unite with one another, and have confidence to march forward!

Vientiane, 20 January 1982; [Signed] Gen Khamtai Siphandon, commander in chief of the LPLA

Slogans for Anniversary

BK191234 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Slogans for celebration of the 33d founding anniversary of the LPLA]

[Text] 1. Long live the 20 January spirit!
2. Long live the LPDR!
3. Long live the LPRP, organizer and leader of all victories of the Lao revolution!

4. Always heighten vigilance, maintain combat readiness to smash all schemes of the enemy and resolutely defend the country and firmly safeguard our people's labor for socialist construction!
5. Bring into full play revolutionary nature and traditions, and emulate to build all-round strong units, all-round party-led units and Lao People's Revolutionary Youth Union-led units!
6. Strengthen internal unity, army-people unity and unity among nationalities and resolutely defeat all the enemy's divisive psychological warfare maneuvers!
7. Strengthen the special militant alliance and solidarity among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, and maintain all-round and permanent relations and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries!
8. Resolutely turn to the grassroots level, mobilize the masses to create a guerrilla war situation and solidify the socialist fortress!

Article on Army Achievements

BK201310 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Unattributed article: "The Achievements and Victories Scored by Our Army in the Past 33 Years"]

[Summary] While the Lao people of all nationalities are concentrating their efforts on safeguarding and defending the country, the big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, the imperialists and their henchmen are stepping up collusion to destroy our people's national and socialist construction, so as to topple and swallow up our country whenever possible.

"To fulfill their obligations to the nation, several thousand young men and women throughout the country, during the past year, have volunteered to serve in the army, particularly in Houa Phan Province." In addition, commanding and leading cadres of the district-level military command have been dispatched to various localities to give military training to local guerrillas and people.

"During the past year, our army and people carried out 406 operations to track down and wipe out bandits and commandos smuggled into our country by the imperialists and reactionaries to create disturbances and carry out activities to sabotage the new life of our people. They killed 645 enemy troops, wounded 330 and captured 656 others and seized a large quantity of weapons and war materiel." One of these operations took place in Muang Sing District in July 1981, when a four-man guerrilla unit managed to wipe out the entire 12-man enemy command unit armed with modern weapons.

"In the meantime, our army and people have also maintained high vigilance to resolutely defend our beloved country, and were determined to smash all schemes of the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and the ultrarightist reactionary clique, who were carrying out provocations along the border areas in the northern region and along the Mekong River."

Our army has resolutely maintained the fine tradition of heroism by closely coordinating with and relying on the people to carry out activities to wipe out the enemies, in order to protect the people so that they can securely build the country and contribute to building agricultural cooperatives in localities throughout the country.

"The unity between the army and the people continues to be vigorously strengthened. The army and the people are united as one and are prepared to smash all notorious schemes of the enemies in all circumstances so as to march forward to fulfill all duties in building and defending their socialist country."

MATICHON CITES SOURCE ON POSSIBLE SRV ATTACK

BK220700 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 22 Jan 82 p 3

[Excerpt] A high-level army source told MATICHON on 21 January that in early January the leader of the Vietnamese military unit whose headquarters is located in Kampuchea's Koh Kong Province told a meeting of leaders of various units and the local people that Vietnam will definitely attack Thailand if it continues to support and provide supplies to the Khmer Serei and the Khmer Rouge.

SRV ATTITUDE TOWARD REFUGEES CRITICIZED

BK211522 Bangkok THAI RAT in Thai 21 Jan 82 p 3

[Editorial: "News About the Vietnamese"]

[Text] A few days ago the secretary general of the National Security Council denied the report by foreign news agencies that the Vietnamese refugees were victims of rape, murder and assault. The report was damaging to Thailand, which is the country of asylum for those Vietnamese people, particularly when it quoted the UNHCR as the course of the information.

It is well known that Vietnam resorted to propaganda tactics to obtain international support for its cause. This included its propaganda about its people being victimized. Meanwhile, Vietnam remains indifferent to the efforts to prevent a further outflow of Vietnamese refugees from their country, which poses a burden to Vietnam's neighbors, including Thailand itself. Vietnam's attitude can only be interpreted as an intention to aggravate the international situation.

Despite efforts at the United Nations to contain the flow of Vietnamese refugees fleeing their country, the exodus has never ended, but has continued systematically. The Vietnamese Government has paid no attention to the problem. This made it appear as though Vietnam was deliberately exporting its people with the aim of causing problems for others to gain political advantage. While the outflow of the Vietnamese refugees was continuing, Vietnam sent its troops to occupy Kampuchea and defied a UN resolution calling for the withdrawal of its troops from that country.

Who will be responsible for the problem, and how will the UNHCR come up with a long-term solution, since Vietnam has rejected all suggestions? It will be difficult to have negotiations among concerned nations. It will also be difficult to solve the problem through self-defense on the high seas.

We must use our good judgement in listening to the news about those Vietnamese people. As human beings, we have sympathy for those refugees. Yet that is not how the problem should be solved, since the Government of Vietnam itself refused to deal with the problem in the right manner. On the contrary, Vietnam is expelling its own problem and creating a burden for others while resorting to a propaganda campaign to win support from the international community.

NATION ASSESSES KHMER ROUGE COALITION STRATEGY

BK210600 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 21 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Khmer Issues Headed Toward a Climax"]

[Text] The 'deadline' for the Khmer Rouge (or should we say Democratic Kampuchea?) to give an answer to an ASEAN proposal is this week. The proposal was spearheaded by two Singapore Cabinet ministers who met with the three Khmer factions, intent on fighting and ousting the Vietnamese invaders and occupiers of their country, in the Erawan Hotel late last year and worked out the formula of a 'loose coalition.' This formula was accepted immediately by the Prince Norodom Sihanouk faction and by the Son Sann faction -- but the Khmer Rouge balked and said that they will give a firm answer in two months. At least at that time it was quite understandable, since the Khmer Rouge had to have the approval of the Chinese authorities, without whose help they would not have been able to keep the Vietnamese war machine at bay for all these years.

But since there is more politics involved in the Kampuchean situation than just guerrilla war, we have to take two other factors into consideration. One is that there is a large-scale confrontation between the guerrillas and the forces of Vietnam and Heng Samrin right now across the border from Thailand. The other fact is that China officially announced yesterday that two Chinese were killed and three were injured in clashes along the Sino-Vietnamese border recently. According to China the incidents happened on Sunday and last Thursday, but she has taken the leisurely attitude of releasing the news at her own convenience. The timing of the release of the news is important, since Vietnam proposed a truce from Jan 20 to 29 -- and yesterday was Jan 20.

The indications are that the Khmer Rouge will come up with some important statement, of course approved by Beijing, very soon. Sihanouk went to Beijing a couple of weeks ago to see what he could do about the Chinese making a decision which would favour the 'loose coalition' solution to the talks that had been deadlocked for three months. The problems are self-evident, but to summarize them again, the Khmer Rouge under the political name of Democratic Kampuchea is recognized by the United Nations. Even then the name of Khmer Rouge, which under Pol Pot carried out systematic genocide, is anathema in international circles.

But from China's point of view, and from that of most other countries, they are, at present, the only viable guerrilla force that is fighting the Vietnamese occupiers. And China has invested heavily in backing the Khmer Rouge, not to defeat the Vietnamese armed forces but "to bleed" that country. ASEAN's point of view is also quite clear. If a loose coalition is formed between Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Sampan, there will be more respect in international circles, so much so assistance -- not only arms but other important supplies like medicines and food -- can be channeled to the Khmer patriotic forces.

But again, China has a very important point. If international aid is given to the new 'loose coalition' to be formed it may be that the forces of Son Sann which get the bulk of it -- and Son Sann's forces have not yet passed the test of baptism in blood. [sentence as published] China will certainly go along with Sihanouk because of his international stature and his unquestioned ability to muster world opinion -- Beijing has already promised to arm 3,000 Sihanoukists with small arms.

We are confident that the Khmer Rouge will come up with an acceptance of the 'loose coalition' formula, but with a certain number of conditions that are predictable. Actually, China spelled them out in New York last July during the international conference on Kampuchea. But with the fighting that goes along across our border, with the Sino-Vietnamese border hotting up, and the expected Khmer Rouge answer, this dry season is likely to prove a nightmare for both the Vietnamese forces and their sponsors.

SITTHI ANSWERS QUESTIONS ON VISIT TO BURMA

BK170728 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Interview with Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila upon his return from his official visit to Burma on 16 January -- recorded]

[Text] [Sitthi] The Burmese seemed to be pleased with my visit. I was the first foreign minister and the first foreign guest to call on the Burmese president.

On bilateral issues, we confirmed the issues that were discussed during the last visit I paid, in the company of our prime minister. There are no serious problems between Thailand and Burma. The Burmese officials seemed to understand Thailand's actions -- they harbor no suspicion of our actions. I feel that relations between our two countries have improved steadily in comparison with my two earlier visits to Burma. I made several proposals on exchanges between our countries. I invited the Burmese foreign minister to visit Bangkok, and he accepted. I think his visit will take place soon, by April at the latest. We talked about border problems, border delineation and minority issues. I explained our policy and actions on these issues and they are pleased with it. I also told the Burmese officials that Thailand wants to trade with Burma. If Thailand takes certain actions, which I will recommend to the prime minister, I feel that our trade proposals to Burma have a good chance of being implemented.

General Saiyut had asked me to invite Burmese military leaders to visit Thailand, including the Burmese defense minister, who is concurrently deputy prime minister.

[Question] Did he accept the invitation?

[Answer] He did not decline the invitation. He simply smiled and said he would like to come.

[Question] When?

[Answer] I don't know. It is up to the Thai military to pursue the matter. On narcotics suppression, I told the Burmese officials that Thailand seriously wants to suppress narcotics. We had a meeting on that topic. The day before the meeting I told the Burmese foreign minister about Thailand's opium crop replacement program under the chairmanship of the prime minister. I also told him that Deputy Prime Minister Prachuap Suntharangkun will pay a visit to Burma at some future date. The Burmese foreign minister welcomed the visit. On regional issues, I merely gave a briefing on the situation in the region, and on ASEAN's position and actions taken in this regard. The Burmese foreign minister and I talked about regional issue again this morning until noon.

To summarize, the visit has strengthened the already good Thai-Burmese relations. Burmese television gave broad coverage of my visit.

[Question] Did the Burmese comment on the Kampuchea, Vietnamese situations?

[Answer] I did not seek comments from Burmese officials. I merely briefed them on the developments. Burma's position on the issue is already known. Burma has an independent policy. In any event, it supports the UN resolution that was proposed by ASEAN.

Further Remarks

BK170932 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said to newsmen that had he told Burmese officials that the Thai Government closely controls the movement of Burmese minority groups in Thailand. Thailand does not support political activities against the Burmese Government, and does not approve of Burmese people establishing permanent residence on Thai territory or the establishment of schools teaching the languages of Burmese minority groups.

The foreign minister said he and the Burmese officials did not discuss the issue of the communist parties in Thailand and Burma, as both regard the issue as their own domestic affair. The Burmese officials expressed the hope that the volume of trade between the two countries will increase in the future.

The foreign minister said at the end of his interview with newsmen that as the Burmese Government understands the reasons for the attitude of Thailand and the ASEAN countries, it will support the ASEAN countries more actively.

AFP Report

BK161422 Hong Kong AFP in English 1351 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 16 Jan (AFP) -- Marshal Sitthi, who was in Burma as guest of recently-named Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing, said Burmese leaders were "satisfied" with Thailand's dealings with minorities seeking independence from Rangoon from bases in the border area. Marshall Sitthi met Burmese President San Yu and Premier Maung Maung Kha, as well as his Burmese counterpart. Thailand urged stepped-up cooperation in the suppression of narcotics trafficking, and Thai Deputy Premier Prachuap Suntharangkun, who is in charge of narcotics suppression, is to follow up discussions in Rangoon soon, he said.

As a counter-smuggling measure, Thailand proposed the setting up of customs outposts at three points along the border -- Ranong, Mae Sot and Mae Sai, he said. The proposal was acknowledged, but would require further discussion, he added.

But Marshal Sitthi affirmed that regional issues, notably Cambodia, were raised. He said Burmese leaders "listened with satisfaction" to efforts to forge a coalition of Cambodian resistance forces that would link the ousted Khmer Rouge leadership with non-communist groups headed by ex-head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his one-time premier, Son Sann. The Burmese leaders, however, made no comment on the efforts encouraged by the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which groups Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines.

HILLTRIBE INSURGENTS SURRENDER TO MILITARY

BK220333 Bangkok POST in English 22 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] About 1,500 Mong communists and their families from six villages in Chiang Rai have surrendered to the Third Army Region following secret negotiations, army sources report. The rebels were from the communist-infested villages of Ban Huai Han, Ban Huai Ku, Ban Huai Mueng, Ban Seng Meng, Ban Lao U and Ban Huai Cha Yin on Doi Yao and Doi Pha Mon, the sources said.

They said three Mong civilians were killed and another wounded when communist insurgents who opposed their defection ambushed a large number of Mong on January 8 as they were fleeing Ban Huai Cha Yin towards an army post. They told Lt Col Wirot Thongmit, commander of the 473rd Infantry Battalion, that they had become disenchanted with the CPT and would now cooperate with the government in its anti-insurgency drive and development schemes.

A psychological campaign to win back the loyalty of the hilltribesmen on Doi Yao and Doi Pha Mon was begun last November by elements of the 473rd Infantry Battalion in Chiang Khong District of Chiang Rai, under the command of Lt Col Wirot.

Lt Col Wirot said he first met with leaders of the six Mong villages on December 15, after six army officers offered themselves to the hilltribes as hostages to prove there would be no tricks during the talks. Neither side carried arms, and the talks were smooth and amiable, Lt Col Wirot said.

He said the six hilltribe leaders later toured refugee holding centres in Chiang Rai and Phayao and the townships and were taken to a hospital to see the treatment of wounded insurgents. "We told them fighting would bring no good to them or us," the battalion commander said. He said he believed the tactics he employed could be applied successfully elsewhere.

BRIEFS

SUGAR EXPORT TO INDONESIA -- Thailand recently exported more than 18,000 tons of white sugar to Indonesia, the first shipment since the government lifted its export ban late last year. The amount of white sugar to be exported this year is expected to be high because the supply of sugar in the United States and Europe has been affected by unusual cold this year. [Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 15 Jan 82 BK]

RICE CONTRACTS WITH MAURITIUS, COMOROS -- Two African countries -- Mauritius and Comoros -- signed contracts for the purchase of 80,000 tons of rice worth 470 million baht. The Comoros order is for 20,000 tons, with delivery schedule set for 10,000 tons next month and the other 10,000 tons in July, according to the Thai commerce minister. [Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 15 Jan 82 BK]

IRAQI VICE PRESIDENT MA'RUF CONTINUES VISIT

Nguyen Huu Tho Banquet Speech

OW202054 Hanoi VNA in English 1502 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA Jan 20 -- Speaking at a banquet he gave here yesterday in honour of Iraqi Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'Ruf and his party, Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho of the S.R.V. Council of State said:

"Greeting you we express our admiration to a gifted nation of a time-honoured, brilliant civilization and of a traditional struggle for independence and freedom. Iraq was the first country in western Asia to do away with monarchy, dealing the first, decisive blow at the Baghdad military alliance set up by imperialism. Iraq was also among the first Arab countries to nationalize imperialist oil corporations to advance toward sovereignty over its own resources. Iraq was where an Arab summit took important decisions against the defeatist Camp David accords, giving a fillip to the struggle of Arab nations against the counter-offensive by U.S. imperialism, Israel and other reactionary forces.

"The people, the state and the Government of the SRV highly value the important achievements made by the Iraqi people in consolidating national independence and in building their country. We also warmly acclaim the active contributions made by the people and the Government of Iraq to the just struggle of the Palestinian people and other Arab countries against agressive, Zionist Israel and U.S. imperialism and to the struggle of the nonaligned countries to consolidate political independence, and for complete economic sovereignty and, eventually, for a new economic order in the world".

On the Southeast Asian situation and the struggle against the U.S. imperialist's policy of arms race and tension, Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho said emphatically: "The S.R.V., together with the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the People's Republic of Kampuchea, is working resolutely for peace and stability in Southeast Asia, because peace and stability are in the interests of all peoples in Southeast Asia and in the world as a whole. Having this in mind we welcome all dialogues between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries to settle outstanding problems in relations between the countries in this region.

"We join the Soviet Union, other socialist countries, and the nonaligned countries in firmly defending peace from all schemes and manoeuvres which U.S. imperialism and international reaction may hatch up to exacerbate world tension and step up the arms race as a threat to the nations. We warmly hail the movement for peace and against war which is developing with might and main in Western Europe and right in the United States. We fully support the struggles of their nations for independence and freedom, especially the unflinching struggles of Arab nations in the Middle East and of other countries in southern Africa and Central America".

Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho said: "As members of the Nonaligned Movement let's pledge ourselves to struggle together for the noble objectives of the movement, i.e., to resist imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism, Zionism and apartheid, and to work for national independence, democracy, peace, friendship and cooperation among nations. Your visit, in this sense, is an important contribution not only to strengthening the relations between Iraq and Vietnam, but also to the coordination of actions by the nonaligned countries for these noble objectives. The seventh nonaligned summit will be held this year in Baghdad, capital of Iraq, whose people have made big contributions to man's civilization, and who have contributed in a major way to the cause of the Nonaligned Movement. We believe that this meeting will be highly successful".

In conclusion Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho said: "Your Vietnam visit is a new, vivid expression of the fine, traditional relations between our two nations. It will strengthen the firm solidarity and mutual support and assistance between our peoples in building a new life.

"Allow me to avail myself of this opportunity to express, on behalf of the Vietnamese people and the SRV Council of State, my sincere thanks to the warm support given by the Ba'ath Party, the Revolutionary Command Council, and the people of Iraq to the Vietnamese people in their past struggle against U.S. imperialism and in their present effort to build and defend their country".

Ma'ruf Banquet Speech

OW202100 Hanoi VNA in English 1517 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 20 -- Speaking at a banquet here yesterday Iraqi Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf said: "Let me express my gratitude to your hospitality and the warm welcome you have given us. We are very glad to visit your beautiful country which has felt warmly for peace fight till victory...[sentence as received]

"Watching with great concern and admiration the struggle of the Vietnamese people, the people of Iraq sided with this just struggle right at the beginning. When imperialism was expanding its war of aggression against the Vietnamese people, the people and the leadership of Iraq adopted a clear-cut, consistent attitude: to support the Vietnamese in all fields till victory. The Republic of Iraq has been uniting with the wise leadership of the SRV in socialist construction and in building a happy, peaceful life which they have acquired at the cost of much blood. We firmly believe that the Vietnamese people, who unite around the militant leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, who have written a revolutionary epic poem full of hardships and sacrifices, and who have set an example to other nations struggling for their right to life, are entirely capable of continuing their present struggle for national construction and progress".

Concerning the conflict between Iran and Iraq, Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf said that "Iraq has been drawn into this war and is forced to defend its territory, waters, security, independence and territorial integrity", and that "other than these rights Iraq demands nothing else".

Referring to the struggle of the Palestinian people and other Arab nations he said: "Our people are suffering from an aggression by Zionism, not only because of its occupation of our territories, but also because of its intention to wipe out the Palestinian people after having ignored their rights. The aggressive action taken by Zionism against our nuclear centre, its attacks on southern Lebanon, and its annexation of the Golan Heights are concrete evidence of its aggressive, expansionist designs, with the connivance of the United States, on peace and security... It is necessary to check these moves and struggles against them".

In connection with the Nonaligned Movement, the Iraqi vice-president said: "Iraq will host the seventh nonaligned summit, which, we believe, will be a remarkable meeting in the history of the movement. The leadership and the people of Iraq will do their best to contribute to this meeting. I am convinced that you can understand Iraq in this effort because it is one of the countries loyal to the Nonaligned Movement.

"All of us must exert ourselves to struggle in every possible way for independence and freedom and for the wish of all nations to live a good life. The birth of the Nonaligned Movement reflected the aspirations of the nations struggling for liberation. The summit to be held in Baghdad will affirm the cooperation of people who are loyal to the principles of the movement".

Talks With Pham Van Dong

OW202120 Hanoi VNA in English 1528 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 20 -- Talks were held here this afternoon between Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, and Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-din Ma'ruf of the Republic of Iraq now on an official visit to Vietnam.

Present at the talks on the Vietnamese side were Do Muoi, vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Co Thach, minister for Foreign affairs; Le Khac, minister of foreign trade; Nguyen Thi Binh, minister of education; Nguyen Viet Dung, director of the Office of the National Assembly and of the Council of State; Hoang Bich Son, deputy foreign minister; Nguyen Xuan Truc, department head at the Office of the Council of Ministers, and Nguyen Chi Quang, deputy head of the Foreign Ministry's First Department for West Asian and African Affairs.

On the Iraqi side were Hasan 'Ali al'Amiri, member of the Revolutionary Command Council and minister of trade; Natiq 'Abd al-Hamid al-Wadi, ambassador to Vietnam; ambassador Nabil Najm as-Safir, chief of the protocol of the foreign ministry; Dr Mohammad Sadiq al'Mahdi, advisor in the Economic Relations Commission of the Council of Ministers; Faruq Dawud Salman, general director of the Foreign Economic Relations of the Trade Ministry; Mohammad Bahjat 'Izzat, assistant general director of the Second International Directorate of the Foreign Ministry; and Mohammad 'ali Mohammad Salih, director of the vice president's office.

The talks took place in an atmosphere of cordiality, friendship and mutual understanding.

INA Account of Talks

JN201542 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1505 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, 20 Jan (INA) -- Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf met here today with Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Vietnamese Council of Ministers. During the meeting Ma'ruf expressed Iraq's desire to promote relations of friendship and cooperation with Vietnam in all fields. Pointing out that Iraq has taken all the necessary measures to hold the nonaligned summit conference in Baghdad at its scheduled date. He explained that the ruling clique in Iran is carrying out the imperialist scheme in the Arab Gulf and referred to the arms cooperation between Iran and the Zionist enemy and to Iran's insistence on prolonging the war.

Pham Van Dong reiterated his country's support for Iraq in its efforts to render the nonaligned summit conference a success.

The two sides exhanged views in international issues particularly the issues which promote relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries and between the Ba'th Party and the Vietnamese Communist Party.

The meeting was attended on the Iraqi side by Hasan 'Ali, Revolution Command Council [RCC] member and trade minister, Nabil Najm, head of the Foreign Ministry Protocol Department; and Natiq al-Wadi, Iraqi ambassador in Hanoi. On the Vietnamese side the meeting was attended by the minister of foreign affairs, trade, edcuation and higher and vocational education and other officials.

Hasan 'Ali, RCC member and trade minister, met with Le Khac, Vietnamese minister of foreign trade. The two sides reviewed the progress achieved in bilateral trade and economic relations and exchanged viewpoints on how to expand and diversity trade exchange and strengthen economic and technical cooperation between Iraq and Vietnam. It was agreed to convene the next session of the Iraqi-Vietnamese Joint Committee on Economic Scientific and Technical Cooperation in Hanoi this year.

Hasan 'Ali also met with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, with whom he reviewed the situation in the region and the consistent Zionist threats against the Arab nation. Hasan 'Ali explained the dimensions of the Iranian aggression against Iraq, which is aimed at obstructing Iraq's development program. He also explained Iran's greed in the Arab Gulf. Hasan 'Ali stressed that Iraq is carrying out its development programs in accordance with the plans set for them, despite the war Iraq is waging against the Iranian enemy. He added that Iraq was forced to enter the war to defend itself, its land and waters.

The two sides also discussed bilateral cooperation within the framework of the Nonaligned Movement, particularly the question of coordination between them for preparing for the forthcoming nonaligned summit conference in Baghdad. The Vietnamese minister stressed the importance of the convocation of this summit in Baghdad and reiterated his country's support for Iraq for hosting this conference.

INA Report on Official Talks

JN201245 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1120 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, 20 Jan (INA) -- The official talks between Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and Nguyen Huu Tho, vice chairman of the Vietnamese State Council, began here today. The INA correspondent said that the two sides discussed relations between the two friendly countries and ways of developing them. They also stressed the importance of the policy of nonalignment as well as the importance of bolstering the Nonaligned Movement's role in international policy. The two sides also discussed several international issues of mutual interest.

Ma'ruf reviewed the dimensions of the Zionist aggression against Iraq, which is aimed against its independence and the accomplishments of the Iraqi people, under the leadership of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party. Regarding the Iranian aggression against Iraq, Ma'ruf said that the Iranian regime's aggressive intentions have been exposed through this regime's cooperation with the Zionist enemy in the field of armanent and coordination against Iraq and the rest of the Arab Gulf states. He indicated that the alleged balance between Iraq and Iran is unrealistic and unacceptable to Iraq.

The Iraqi vice president stressed that Iraq does not want war and has no ambitions in Iran, pointing out that Iraq has responded positively to all the efforts exerted by the nonaligned states, the Islamic Conference Organization and the UN secretary general's representative to solve the conflict between the two countries in a peaceful way that guarantees Iraq's legitimate rights. He also pointed out Iran's insistence on continuing the war and its interference in the Arab Gulf states' internal affairs. He said that Iran's aggressive policy against Iraq and the Arab Gulf states has given the imperialist states justification for their military presence in this region under the pretext of protecting their interests.

He also talked about the Zionist enemy's savage acts against our Palestinian Arab people and the Arab nation, indicating that by such acts the enemy aims at eliminating a people demanding their legitimate rights and the establishment of a state on their own land. He said Zionism poses a grave danger to the region's peoples and world peace.

Ma'ruf stressed that Iraq's firm belief in the Nonaligned Movement is a prominent and basic pillar of its foreign policy. He emphasized Iraq's great desire to enhance the liberation and progressive trend of this movement, which opposes all forms of aggression and racial discrimination. He pointed out the aid extended by Iraq to some of the movement's states for the sake of bolstering their independence and overcoming their difficulties, in addition to its aid to the peoples struggling for their independence and freedom.

At the beginning of the talks, Nguyen Huu Tho welcomed Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and expressed his pride in the Iraqi leadership, party and people. He reiterated his country's condemnation of the Zionist aggression against the Iraqi nuclear reactor and the enemy's policy, which opposes the world liberation movement and which is carried out with the support of U.S. imperialism. He also stressed the importance of bolstering the Nonaligned Movement's role by confronting the dangers threatening its independence and world security.

The two sides stressed their desire to strengthen bilateral relations in all fields. The talks were attended on the Iraqi side by Hasan 'Ali, Revolution Command Council member and trade minister; Nabil Najm as-Safir, chief of protocol at the Foreign Ministry; Natiq al-Wadi, Iraq's ambassador in Hanoi; and several specialists in economic and trade affairs. They were attended on the Vietnamese side by Do Muoi, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Co Thach, minister of Foreign affairs; Le Khac, minister of foreign trade; and several other officials.

Departure From Hanoi

OW210741 Hanoi VNA in English 0727 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 21 -- Iraqi Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party left Hanoi for Ho Chi Minh City this morning. Bidding farewell to the distinguished guests were Vice-President of the Council of State Nguyen Huu Tho; Vice-Chairman of the Council of Ministers Do Muoi; Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach; Education Minister Nguyen Thi Binh; Nguyen Viet Dung, director of the Office of the National Assembly and the Council of State; Nguyen Van Tien, general secretary of the Fatherland Front Central Committee; and others.

Iraqi Ambassador Natiq 'Abd al-Hamid al-Wadi and members of his staff were present. After the presentation of flowers by Hanoi Young Pioneers, Vice-President Nguyen Huu Tho and other Vietnamese state leaders warmly hugged the Iraqi guests and accompanied them to their limousines. Saying good-bye to the hosts, the Iraqi vice-president expressed his satisfaction at the splendid success of his visit and thanked the state and the people of Vietnam for their hospitality.

In their trip to Ho Chi Minh City the distinguished Iraqi guests are accompaned by Foreign Trade Minister Le Khac; Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son; and Le Trang, deputy director of the Office of the National Assembly and the Council of State.

Ho Chi Minh City Activities

OW211816 Hanoi VNA in English 1525 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan. 21 -- Iraqi Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party began their visit to Ho Chi Minh City today. They were welcomed on their arrival at Tan Son Nhat airport by Le Quang Chanh, vice-chairman of the People's Committee; Pham Van Ba, vice-president of the Fatherland Front Committee; and other officials in charge of various municipal offices and mass organizations.

This afternoon the distinguished guests visited an export goods show. Tonight they were cordially received by Mai Chi Tho, chairman of the People's Committee. Also present on this occasin were Minister of Foreign Trade Le Khac, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs Hoang Bich Son, Le Quang Chanh, and Pham Van Ba.

On behalf of the city's population, Mai Chi Tho warmly welcomed the Iraqi delegation, saying that it was encouraging the Vietnamese people, particularly the population of Ho Chi Minh City, in their efforts to heal the wounds of war and build a unified, independent, prosperous and happy country. He praised the Iraqi people's big achievements in consolidating national independence and regaining sovereignty over their resources. He also voiced support for the staunch struggle of the Palestinian and other Arab nations against the imperialists and the Israeli aggressors.

He also hailed the role of the Republic of Iraq in the world and in the Non-Aligned Movement and wished for the constant strengthening and development of the friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Iraq.

In reply Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf acclaimed the Vietnamese people's struggle for national independence and reunification and wished them new, brilliant success in building a prosperous and happy country. Mai Chi Tho gave a banquet afterwards in honour of the Iraqi guests.

HANOI: WISHES OF CHINESE RESIDENTS UNDERSTOOD

OW212230 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1200 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Newsletter: "The Vietnamese Party and People Understand the Wishes of Chinese Residents"]

[Text] This reporter recently visited (Thuong Xuan) county of Thanh Hoa Province in central Vietnam. (Thuong Xuan) county has good land and beautiful scenery. It was a base for national heroes (Nu Ly) and (Nguyen Kiên) in the resistance against the aggressive troops of the Ming Dynasty. The county has a population of about 130,000 people including (Kim), Chinese and (Mon) nationalities. The people of various nationalities have been living in harmony. They love each other and share joys and hardships in building a new life.

(Hoang Bo Lam), a longtime Chinese resident in (Thuong Xuan) township told this reporter: In 1954 my whole family moved from Thanh Hoa city to (Thuong Xuan). At that time (Thuong Xuan) was sparsely populated. The family of (Nguyen Dong), who is of (Kim) nationality, moved to (Thuong Xuan) together with his family. The two families have been living in harmony like brothers. During the years of the war against U.S. aggression and for national salvation, the two families sent five sons to join the army. The three sons of (Nguyen) heroically sacrificed themselves in the war. (Hoang Bo Lam's) eldest brother also died in the battle liberating Saigon in 1975. (Hoang Bo Lam) returned home to engage in agricultural production following demobilization. He is now the chairman of the (Machi) agricultural cooperative.

At the office of the (Machi) agricultural cooperative he gladly acquainted this reporter with the production situation of the cooperative. He said: Increasing production is a serious challenge to us. We have fought against natural disasters and pests. Sometmes we must mobilize all cadres and members of the cooperative to work in the field to fight against insects and strengthen field management for rice crops. The average per-hectare yield of rice of our cooperative has reached 2.8 tons. Although this is not a high record, it has been achieved with hard efforts.

This reporter asked him about his family situation. He excitedly said: I got married in 1977. Now I have two children. In the past several years, especially in 1978 and 1979, the Beijing reactionary authorities tried in every possible way to drive a wedge between the Vietnamese and Chinese residents. They dished up the so-called refugees incident and slandered Vietnam for discriminating against the Chinese people. They instigated a number of Chinese residents to go to China. However, the Chinese residents in (Thuong Zuan) discerned the Beijing authorities' sinister intention and not a single Chinese resident here was taken in. We are determined to stay in Vietnam to build socialism together with the Vietnamese people. We Chinese residents lived together with the Vietnamese people in the past and will continue to live together with the Vietnamese people now and in the future. We understand most clearly that the Vietnamese party and people understand our wishes.

In bidding farewell to him, this reporter realized that (Joang) looked just like his two brothers whose pictures were hung on the wall. (Hoang Bo Lam) is taking the raod taken by his brothers and the Vietnamese people in past decades. He is full of confidence in greeting a brilliant future.

VAN TIEN DUNG GREETINGS MARKS LPLA ANNIVERSARY

BK201714 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 19 Jan 82

["Text" of greetings message from Defense Minister Senior Gen Van Tien Dung to LPDR Defense Minister Khamtai Siphandon on the 33d anniversary of the Lao People's Liberation Army]

[Text] Hanoi, 18 January 1982. Comrade Khamtai Siphandon, deputy prime minister, minister of national defense and commander in chief of the Lao People's Liberation Army [LPLA], Vientiane.

Esteemed comrade minister: On the occasion of the 33d anniversary of the founding of the LPLA, in the name of the cadres and combatants of the Vietnamese people's armed forces and in my own name, may I address to you, comrade minister, and through you, to all the cadres and combatants of the fraternal LPLA, my greetings of militant solidarity and my most cordial congratulations.

The LPLA was founded and tempered in a staunch, protracted and indomitable struggle for the cause of national liberation of the heroic Lao people of various nationalities. Passing through many stages of the revolution replete with sacrifices and hardships, the LPLA, together with the entire people, defeated the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their henchmen, thus ushering in an extremely glorious new era, that of definitive reunification, independence and freedom for Laos.

In the 6 years since the historic victory of 2 December 1975, under the glorious banner of the LPRP headed by esteemed Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan, the Lao people and their liberation armed forces have courageously overcome many new difficulties and trials and repeatedly smashed all the schemes of annexation and the perfidious acts of sabotage of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and lackey reactionary forces, thus firmly defending and developing the gains of their revolution.

Today, the LPLA is a revolutionary army with an increasing fighting strength. It always upholds the spirit of socialist patriotism and proletarian internationalist solidarity and has proven itself to be a reliable buttress of the Lao people in the cause of defending the LPDR, an impregnable bastion of the world socialist community.

We greatly rejoice at and admire the great, comprehensive and steady successes of the Lao people and their liberation army in the construction and defense of the LPDR. These successes also are great contributions to the strengthening of the traditional militant alliance between the peoples and armed forces of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. The Vietnamese people and armed forces are extremely proud of having a close brother and extremely loyal comrade in arms like the Lao people and their liberation army.

On this occasion, I would like to express my sincere gratitude for the previous support and assistance permeated with proletarian internationalism which the Lao people and their liberation army have given to the Vietnamese people over the past few decades and in the cause of building and defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland in the present new stage of the revolution.

Under the leadership of the glorious VCP headed by esteemed Comrade General Secretary Le Duan, the Vietnamese people and their armed forces will always to their best to promote the great friendship, the relations of militant Solidarity and the all-round cooperation between our two countries so that they may become ever stronger and develop ever more successfully.

Now as in the past, we will, together with the Lao people and their liberation army, unite in the military alliance and closely cooperate with the fraternal Kampuchean people and their revolutionary army in the struggle against our common enemies for the victory of the construction and defense of each people's socialist homeland, and for a peaceful and stable Southeast Asia, thus contributing to the defense of world peace.

May I wish the fraternal Lao people and their liberation army many more achievements in the new stage of their revolution. May I address to you, Comrade minister, my cordial and respectful regards.

[Signed] Van Tien Dung, SRV minister of national defense.

NHAN DAN PRAISES VIETNAM-INDIA FRIENDSHIP

OW070835 Hanoi VNA in English 0733 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 7 -- "The time-honoured friendship between Vietnam and India, fostered by the late President Ho Chi Minh and the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru since the 20's of this century has become more and more profound and stable", says NHAN DAN in an article today marking the 10th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations at ambassadorial level between the two countries.

The paper says: "The struggle against imperialism and colonialism, for national independence has brought the two nations closer together. During the past three decades or so the Indian people and government have always supported the Vietnamese people's just struggle. For our part, we have persistently supported the Indian people's glorious struggle to regain and defend their independence, freedom and build a prosperous country. We have also favoured India's important initiatives in the common struggle against imperialism and colonialism, for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress in South Asia and the rest of the world.

"In the last 10 years the solidarity and friendship between Vietnam and India has made new progress. The visit to India by Chairman of the Council of Ministers, Pham Van Dong further promoted this friendship, which is based on identical views on important international problems, on the strengthening of cooperation in all domains -- political, economic, cultural, scientific and technical -- and on joint efforts for the independence and freedom of nations and for world peace and security".

"At present", NHAN DAN continues, "the U.S. imperialists, in close collusion with the Chinese expansionists, are accelerating the arms race, straining the situation in many parts of the world, including South and Southeast Asia. This had made the Indian Government and people maintain their high vigilance and determined to defend their independence and freedom.

"With its correct and consistent foreign policy and brilliant achievements in national construction, India's international prestige has grown significantly, thus contributing to the common struggle against imperialism's war policy, for peace, national independence, freedom and social progress. As an important factor of peace and stability in South Asia and of peace in the world, India is promoting its active role in the Non-Aligned Movement and in the settlement of international issues. The Indian Government, under the leadership of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, has promptly recognized the People's Republic of Kampuchea. This is a clearsighted and courageous action, and a precious support for the Kampuchean people, and the Indochinese peoples in general. The deep concern and wholehearted support given by the Indian Government and people to the Vietnamese, Lao and Kampuchean peoples' present struggle for national construction and defence, as well as to the common struggle of the Southeast Asian peoples for regional peace and stability constitute a great encouragement to us".

NHAN DAN thanks the Indian Government and people for their warm sentiments and support, and stresses in conclusion: "We affirm once again our resolute support for India's foreign policy of peace and non-alignment. We wish the friendship and cooperation between the peoples and governments of Vietnam and India further development".

MESSAGE TO UN SUPPORTS ANTIAPARTHEID STRUGGLE

OW101628 Hanoi VNA in English 1535 GMT 10 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 10 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today sent a message to the U.N. secretary general and the president of the ad hoc Committee Against Apartheid on the 70th anniversary of the African National Congress.

The message reads: "Over the past 70 years, the South African people under the leadership of the A.N.C. have valiantly and persistently struggled against apartheid, for national independence and freedom. Apartheid is the worst crime against mankind. It can exist only with the support and connivance of imperialism and international reaction. The U.S. administration has declared its opposition to international terrorism while encouraging the South African apartheid authorities to brutally suppress A.N.C. fighters, to continue their occupation of Namibia, to continuously increase their armed provocations and attacks against Angola and other frontline countries, thus creating an extremely tense situation in southern Africa.

"The people and the government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam vehemently condemn the criminal apartheid of the South African authorities, and support the U.N. resolutions on condemning and taking sanctions against South Africa. We demand that the United States and international reaction stop backing that apartheid regime.

"We firmly believe that the South African people's struggle under the leadership of the A.N.C. will win complete victory".

PHAM VAN DONG GREETS ALBANIAN COUNTERPART

OW211818 Hanoi VNA in English 1523 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 21 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today sent his warmest greetings to Adil Carcani on his election as chairman of the Council of Ministers of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania.

He wishes the friendship and cooperation between the two countries further consolidation and development.

DPRK DEFENSE MINISTER MARKS VPA ANNIVERSARY

OW011225 Hanoi Domestic Services in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 31 Dec 81

[Text] A message from Senior Gen O Chin-u, minister of the DPRK People's Armed Forces, to Senior Gen Van Tien Dung on the occasion of the VPA founding anniversary, reads:

On the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the founding of the Vietnam People's Army, I wish to convey my greetings to you and to all VPA cadres and combatants. On the same occasion I wish you, comrade, many achievements in discharging your task.

JANA REPORTS TRUONG CHINH NOTE TO AL-QADHDHAFI

LD242026 Tripoli JANA in English 1749 GMT 24 Dec 81

[Text] Tripoli, 24 Dec (JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY) -- The revolution's leader has received a letter from President Truong Chinh of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam condemning the imperialist conspiracies against people of Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jimahiriyah.

He said, "We are greatly proud of the Libyan Arab people's stands and are following with concern the terrorist campaigns being launched against it. These campaigns are a direct threat to its freedom and security. He added, "The Socialist Republic of Vietnam affirms its solidarity with and unreserved stand by the struggle of the Libyan Arab people and leader of the revolution. We also denounce the unbridled pressure being applied by the American administration against Jamahiriyah." President Truong Chinh stressed the determination of his country to consolidate and develop relations of cooperation between Jamahiriyah and Vietnam and the necessity of joint work to realize mutual benefits for the two friendly peoples.

AUSTRALIA

STREET DISCUSSES POLICY ON AID TO POLAND

BK211227 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 1110 GMT 20 Jan 82

["Australian Insight" program]

[Excerpt] This is "Australian Insight," and I am (Judith Hinckey). The Australian Government has announced that it will continue to defer making a decision on the recent request from the Government of Poland for further economic assistance. This announcement comes at a time when the Reagan administration in the United States is declaring that American economic sanctions against Poland over the introduction of martial law are having some effects. From Canberra, (Bill Nicholl) reports:

[Begin recording] The present Australian Government has long been a strong supporter of the general thrust of United States foreign policy and a particularly strong supporter of the foreign policy followed by the administration of America's President Reagan, who has just completed his first year as the American leader.

In March last year, Australia's Minister for Foreign Affairs Mr Street told the Australian Parliament that he was impressed by the extent to which the philosophical perspectives and the international analyses of the Reagan administration coincided with the view of Australia's Government. No where has this been more apparent than in the way the Australian Government acted in support of American sanctions imposed against the Soviet Union when Soviet troops were sent into Afghanistan. Australia introduced its own sanctions against Moscow. These included the suspension of scientific, academic and cultural exchanges, and support for the American grain embargo on the Soviet Union whereby existing grain contracts would be honored but no new ones would be written by Australia to take up the (?slack) caused by the American embargo.

When the Polish leader Gen Jaruzelski imposed martial law in his country and the Reagan administration called for economic sanctions to be imposed by the West, this time against Poland itself, the Australian Government supported the move. It had already publicly endorsed moves in Poland by the trade union organization, Solidarity, to go on strike in demand of improved conditions in the country. We backed this rhetoric by guaranteeing borrowings to Poland through Australian banks worth up to A$40 million to help prop up the Polish economy at a time when it was being placed under considerable strain. In November last year, Mr Street made an official visit to Poland and he was asked if Australia would extend its trade credits to Poland by a further A$110 million. Since the imposition of martial law in Poland, however, Australia has deferred any decision on this request, and Mr Street has just confirmed that Australia intends to continue deferring the matter while martial law remains in force. He informed both the Soviet and Polish ambassadors to Australia of this after a meeting of the Australian Government to decide its future position on the question. The Soviet Embassy in Canberra has declined to comment on the meeting, and Radio Australia has so far been unable to speak to the Polish ambassador here to gain his reaction. After his meeting with the ambassadors, Mr Street issued a statement calling for the lifting of martial law in Poland, the release of detainees there and an early return to the circumstances in which he said the people of Poland could be left free to find their own solution to their internal economic and political difficulties on the basis of consensus and conciliation. Mr Street is speaking to Canberra journalist (Simon Nash). [end recording]

[Begin recording] [(Nash)] Mr Street, sir, with regard to the Polish situation, I wonder what your feelings are about (?things) as they stand now?

[Street] The government decided that it must be made clear to both Poland and the Soviet Union that if they continue with martial law -- with this repression -- that will involve costs both to Poland and the Soviet Union. So we've called for the lifting of martial law and the release of detainees, and the return to the process of reform in Poland.

In the present circumstances, we've deferred any consideration of further Polish requests for economic support -- and those requests have been made, as you know; and, in relation to pre-existing credits for the purchase of wool and hides, we've warned the Polish regime that any extension of that would depend on prompt payment of outstanding debts as they (?became) due. Now, in relations to the Soviet Union, because of its complicity and pressure in the Polish situation, that has reinforced the government's view that measures we have had against the Soviet Union ever since the invasion of Afghanistan should be maintained.

[Nash] There has been considerable disquiet expressd, particularly by the West European nations, that the withholding of financial assistance from the Polish Government at this time isn't really going to go much further toward solving the conflict there, as it seems to be putting the Polish people themselves at greater risk, they argue.

[Street] The Polish people have been under repression; of course, under repression by their own military regime. And it must be made clear to that regime that they and their country will suffer if they continue with it. If they lift that martial law, if their actions (?match) their rhetoric, then of course we'll be prepared to look at it again.

[Nash] But surely the dilemma here is that it's the Polish people who will suffer inevitably from this sort of decision by the Australian Government.

[Street] Well, the Polish people are suffering as a direct decision of their government to stifle the process of reform which the Polish people engaged in and to put them under martial law, and we must make it clear to this regime that will involve unacceptable costs.

[Nash] But we're doing it even at the cost of increasing the short-term suffering of the Polish people?

[Street] Well, you got to take that into account with the government's decision also that it will impede in any way the transfer of humanitarian aid to the Polish people as distinct from the Polish regime. [sentence as heard]

[Nash] You've called in both the Russian and the Polish ambassadors? I think this is the third time you've seen the Polish ambassador now. Are you confident that the advice he's giving you is the reflection of the true situation in Poland?

[Street] I think the important message to get across is that unless martial law is lifted, that will impose costs on the regime; I've said that before. Now, the Polish ambassador said to me previously that the present regime hoped to lift martial law as soon as possible and that the process of reform which had [words indistict] of martial law being imposed, would not be stopped. What I'm saying is that we want some positive proof from the regime that what we've been told is correct. In other words, their actions (?should match) their words.

[Nash] But he also told you just before Christmas, for instance, there were no political detainees in Poland. That obviously isn't the case, is it?

[Street] No, he didn't say that. He said that there were some; he wasn't much specific about numbers -- some thousands -- of political detainees.

[Nash] Do you think Australia can really make an impression in this regard?

[Street] I think the West as a whole could exert a very considerable influence, and we have a responsibility to add our voice to that. [end recording]

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 016 25 January 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Abe, Sakurauchi Comment on Poland, USSR Talks C 1
Suzuki Agrees to Ombudsman Group on Trade Issues C 1
Sakurauchi Urges Flexibility in Talks With U.S. C 2
Sakurauchi Welcomes ROK Unification Proposal C 2

NORTH KOREA

Protest Lodged at MAC Meeting on U.S. Buildup D 1
VRPR: Chon's 22 Jan Assembly Speech 'Gibberish' D 3
NODONG SINMUN Flays Chon's 21 Jan Remarks [24 Jan] D 6
NODONG SINMUN Scores U.S.-Japan Security Meeting [25 Jan] D 7
Democratic Youth Urged To Join South Korean Army D 8
Commodity Trade Protocol With Albania Signed D 9
Delegation Departs D 9
Yi Chong-ok Meets Outgoing PRC Ambassador 23 Jan D 9
Romanian Ambassador Pays Farewell Visits D 9
Meets Yi Chong-ok D 9
Meets O Chin-u D 9
Maltese Foreign Minister Arrives in Pyongyang D 9

SOUTH KOREA

Minister Says South-North Unification Possible [KOREA HERALD 24 Jan] E 1
Envoys To Seek Support Abroad for Chon Offer [KOREA TIMES 24 Jan] E 2
UNC Invites North To Observe 'Team Spirit 1982' E 2
YONHAP Reports North Defector's News Conference E 3

KAMPUCHEA

PRC 'Hostile Activities' Against SRV Condemned [KAMPUCHEA] H 1
Vietnamese Lunar New Year Celebration Marked H 2
Chan Si Greeting H 2
Chan Ven Message H 3
Tang Saroem Visit to Soldiers H 3
Keo Chanda Meets Ho Chi Minh City Delegation H 4
Strengthening of Front's Activities Urged [KAMPUCHEA] H 4
Information on Vegetable Pests Presented H 6
Agricultural Reportage for 11-17 Jan Period H 6
AFP: Thailand Reports Khmer Coalition Rejection H 7
Ieng Sary Meets Visiting Japanese Dietman H 8
Coalition Rejection Discussed [Bangkok POST 23 Jan] H 8
Further Remarks [Bangkok POST 24 Jan] H 8
VODK: Bangladesh Editor Visits DK Areas H 8
VODK Reports Lao Guerrilla Battle Activities H 9
Further Report H 9

THAILAND

Border Incident of 18 Jan To Be Reported to UN	J 1
Navy Official Reports on Border Situation	J 1
SRV Scored on Issue of Foreign Military Bases	J 2
Prasong Comments on SRV Forces in Kampuchea [POST 25 Jan]	J 3
Prem Visits Border Units in Prachin Buri	J 3
Sitthi Discusses Direction of Foreign Policy [NATION REVIEW 13 Jan]	J 4
POST: Insurgents Attack Ranger Camp 20 Jan [22 Jan]	J 5
Further Report on Attack [POST 24 Jan]	J 6
Supreme Command Reports Attack on 'Terrorists'	J 6

VIETNAM

SRV Said To Agree to U.S. Delegation on MIA's [AFP]	K 1
Order of Lenin Conferred on Top Leaders	K 1
Award to Le Duan	K 1
Award to Truong Chinh	K 1
Beijing Seen Trying To Annex Lao Territory	K 2
Iraqi Vice President Ma'ruf Concludes Visit	K 3
Leaves Ho Chi Minh City	K 3
Text of Communique	K 4
Communique on 22 Jan Council of State Session	K 6
Bribes Taken To Falsify Data on New Recruits [QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 20 Dec]	K 7
NHAN DAN Examines 1982 Grain Production Tasks [5 Jan]	K 7
Pham Van Dong Visits Youth Newspaper Office	K 9
Do Muoi Receives Mongolian Banking Delegation	K 9
Indian Ambassador Calls on Pham Van Dong	K 9
Kampuchean Propaganda Delegation Ends Visit	K 9
Nguyen Lam Report at National Assembly Session [NHAN DAN 23 Dec]	K 10

ABE, SAKURAUCHI COMMENT ON POLAND, USSR TALKS

OW221252 Tokyo KYODO in English 1224 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Japan should not take any actions that would weaken U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union over the Polish situation, Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, told a Cabinet meeting on comprehensive security Friday. Abe, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and other Cabinet members reported on the international situation during the meeting at the prime minister's residence.

Abe said it was important for Japan to understand U.S. attitudes concerning Poland, and not to take any actions that would weaken U.S. sanctions. However, he backed off from the strong statements he made during his visit to the United States earlier this month, saying that Japan would consult closely with Western European nations before taking any measures of its own regarding Poland. Abe reiterated his stand that any Japanese actions should only affect future contracts with the Soviet Union.

Sakurauchi, however, stressed that Japan shared the U.S. belief that martial law was imposed in Poland under Soviet pressure. The foreign minister said Japanese negotiators at the working-level talks in Moscow begun Wednesday had asked the Soviet Union to exercise self-restraint in Poland.

Sakurauchi said Japan has also used the Moscow talks, the first of their kind in about three years, to press for the resolution of the northern territories dispute and the early reopening of regular ministerial level discussions between the two countries. He also called for quick and appropriate responses in connection with the economic friction between Japan, the United States and the European Community. He called for the preservation and strengthening of free trade and the maintenance of friendly and cooperative relations.

Abe said that while the U.S. Government had shown some understanding of Japan's efforts to alleviate trade frictions, the attitude of the U.S. Congress was still severe. He called for increased exchanges between congressmen and dietmen.

Sakurauchi also spoke on Japan-South Korea relations, saying he hoped to work out detailed proposals on the nature and scope of Japanese economic aid through continued negotiations. Finance Minister Michio Watanabe also reported on his recent three-nation swing through North Africa.

SUZUKI AGREES TO OMBUDSMAN GROUP ON TRADE ISSUES

OW220539 Tokyo KYODO in English 0528 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Japan's trade minister Friday proposed creation of an ombudsman group and dispatch of a trade delegation to the United States and Europe to ease trade frictions. International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe made those proposals during a meeting with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

In briefing Suzuki on the recent multilateral trade talks in Key Biscayne, Florida, Abe suggested the government establish an ombudsman group or committee to handle foreign complaints about Japan's alleged closed market to imports. In addition, a government spokesman said, the MITI proposed that the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party send a delegation to the U.S. and Western Europe to explain Japan's efforts at promoting imports from them. The spokesman said Suzuki agreed with Abe's proposal. Abe also explained the U.S. Government's unusual interest in the Polish situation to the prime minister and Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, who was also present at the meeting, the spokesman added.

The ombudsman plan was also strongly supported by the prime minister's private advisory body, which includes Sony Corp Chairman Akio Morita. Morita and other businessmen said the decline of the yen's exchange value caused by high interest rates in the U.S. was partly responsible for Japan's large trade surplus with the United States. They also told Suzuki the trade issue should be handled within the context of Japan's overall trade balance rather than bilateral trade imbalance. The prime minister asked the advisory body to explore ways through which all countries could reduce military spending in order to revitalize the world economy, Suzuki's spokesman later told reporters.

SAKURAUCHI URGES FLEXIBILITY IN TALKS WITH U.S.

OW220517 Tokyo KYODO in English 0511 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Friday Japan should take a more "flexible" approach in order to break the deadlock in current negotiations on the revision of the bilateral civil aviation agreement with the United States.

"There are indications that Secretary of State Alexander Haig and other U.S. Government leaders view the issue as part of the economic friction (stemming from Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States)," Sakurauchi said at a Cabinet meeting. He was referring to Haig's call for a settlement of the negotiations by March 20 in a meeting with Japan's International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe in Washington earlier this week.

The latest round of working-level talks, held in Tokyo last week, failed to iron out differences over landing points and transit rights for Japanese and U.S. airlines. Japan has been seeking the revision of the agreement, calling it unfair and heavily in favor of the United States.

Meanwhile, Transport Minister Tokusaburo Kosaka said the aviation talks and the trade dispute should be discussed separately. "We will continue the negotiations with determination and sincerity as we did in the past," Kosaka said when he met newsmen after the Cabinet meeting.

SAKURAUCHI WELCOMES ROK UNIFICATION PROPOSAL

OW221235 Tokyo KYODO in English 1144 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 22 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Friday Japan welcomed South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan's new proposal for the unification of North and South Korea.

Sakurauchi said in a statement that Chon's proposal indicated a more concrete and realistic procedure for peaceful unification. He said the future of the Korean Peninsula should basically be solved by the two parties concerned. Japan earnestly hopes for a substantial dialogue between the North and South at an early date and that constructive efforts would be made for peaceful unification, he added.

Earlier in the day, Chon proposed that North and South Korea form a joint consultative body to adopt a common constitution and that the both parties establish a representative office in each other's capital.

PROTEST LODGED AT MAC MEETING ON U.S. BUILDUP

SK241007 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2300 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Requested by our side, the 410th meeting of the Military Armistice Commission [MAC] was held at Panmunjom on 23 January. As has been reported, our side proposed to the enemy side on 10 January to hold this meeting on 16 January. Due to the enemy's delaying maneuvers, however, the meeting was postponed for 10 days.

At the meeting, our side lodged a strong protest that, while formulating and implementing on a full scale since the beginning of the new year a new plan to increase military capabilities, the U.S. imperialists have zealously maneuvering to provoke a new war. Our side then urged the enemy side to immediately stop this criminal act. According to the statement at the meeting of Maj Gen Han Chu-kyong, senior member of our side, the U.S. imperialists plan to activate an army electronic intelligence battalion with 500 to 600 personnel by September and to deploy one squadron of A-10 close support aircraft with more than 900 personnel in South Korea in accordance with the new plan for increasing military capabilities and with the purpose of increasing the intelligence and ground attack capabilities against the northern half of the republic. In addition, the U.S. imperialists plan to increase antitank helicopters equipped with missiles, ship in M-60 tanks and further increase the firepower of the field artillery.

To further increase the military capabilities of U.S. Air Force units occupying South Korea, the U.S. imperialists plan to complete within this year deployment of 46 sophisticated fighter bombers, the shipment of which has already begun. To renew and augment their air force facilities, they plan to appropriate $141.8 million in military funds.

Such maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists for a military buildup constitute an outrageous violation of the armistice agreement and criminal acts heightening tension in the extreme and increasing the danger of war. Saying that the maneuvers which the enemy has carried out to increase military capabilities are part of its premeditated schemes to start a new aggressive war in Korea, the senior member of our side disclosed and cited in detail instances in which the U.S. imperialists have systematically violated the armistice agreement and continuously deployed aggressive troops in South Korea on a large scale in accordance with their aggressive plan.

He then emphatically said that every fact clearly shows that the U.S. imperialists, who have accelerated maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea, are the ringleaders who have outrageously violated the armistice agreement, heightened tension in Korea and hindered peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea. Resolutely protesting and denouncing the U.S. imperialists for having actively accelerated their maneuvers to provoke a new war and heightening tension since the beginning of the new year, he strongly urged the enemy side to immediately stop the implementation of the plan for a military buildup.

Instead of responding to our demand, the enemy, making irrelevant excuses, tried to justify its criminal acts.

Strongly charging the enemy with this unfair attitude, the senior member of our side said: It is crystal clear that the aim of the U.S. imperialists' new plan for a military buildup is to supplement the existing plan for increasing military capabilities and to accelerate on a full scale preparations for a new war against the northern half of the republic. This has been proven by all the military acts which the U.S. imperialists have committed, coinciding with their maneuvers to increase their military capabilities.

The U.S. imperialists plan to stage a war exercise called Team Spirit 1982 against us from 13 February to 26 April 1982.

This war exercise is an experimental and preliminary war designed to attack the northern half of the republic from aid, sea and land by deploying in South Korea U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force troops from the U.S. mainland, Asia and the Pacific region. This war exercise is, no doubt, a military act to comprehensively review and complete preparations for starting a new aggressive war in Korea. This war exercise is a dangerous military operation which might be transformed into a substantial act of aggression.

In addition, the U.S. imperialists have more frequently committed aerial espionage and military provocations against the northern half of the republic since the outset of the new year. Since the beginning of the new year, the enemy has committed military espionage on 15 occasions, including the successive infiltration of a high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane into the airspace over the Kangyong Peninsula, southwestern region of South Hwanghae Province of our country at 1103 on 20 January and into the airspace over the area east of Kosong at 1244 on the same day. They have continuously committed military provocations in the Demilitarized Zone against our side. There have been more than 1,390 such cases from 24 December 1981 to 18 January this year.

Saying that the U.S. imperialists have more eagerly instigated the South Korean military fascist elements to provoke a new war, the senior member of our side cited concrete facts to prove this. After declaring the nullification of the plan for the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have transfered a large amount of military equipment to the South Korean military fascist elements, to whom they have recently decided to transfer 28 sophisticated Hawk missiles.

Designating the 1980's as a period of fierce battle against us, the South Korean war maniacs, instigated by the U.S. imperialists, have further fanned the sentiment of confrontation between the North and South, mobilized all manpower and material resources to make preparations for a new war and massed combat forces in the Demilitarized Zone.

As part of the new measures for converting Japan into a forward logistic base for a Korean war and to drag the Japanese reactionaries into this war, the U.S. imperialists have convened a U.S.-Japan consultative meeting in Tokyo and discussed joint U.S.-Japan measures for coping with a contingency in the Far East. In addition, the U.S. imperialists have urged the Japanese reactionaries to give a large sum of aid of a military nature to the South Korean military fascist elements. It is not accidental that world public opinion views the study of these joint measures which the U.S. imperialists are now undertaking with the Japanese reactionaries as a repeat of the three-pronged operational plan simulating a Korean war.

These unusual military moves of the U.S. imperialists since the outset of the new year shows that the enemy's criminal maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea have entered a very grave stage.

The senior member of our side said that, judging from all the facts, the aim of the U.S. imperialists' new plan for increasing their military capabilities is, without a doubt, to achieve their wild desire to deploy U.S. forces in South Korea forever, to hold on to South Korea as a colonial, military base and to invade the northern half of the republic. Nevertheless, the U.S. imperialists have portrayed their new plan as one designed to counter a military buildup by the North. However, this is a fabrication by the rascals, something which has not occurred; it fits their needs and is a trick to conceal their criminal aggressive acts, the senior member of our side disclosed.

He said: Unilaterally violating the principles of Article 13 of the armistice agreement, which bans the introduction of military equipment from the outside, the U.S. imperialists have shipped a large number of sophisticated weapons, including nuclear weapons, and military equipment to South Korea, thus converting the South into an atomic missile base.

As an excuse for this, they have brought up the relative balance [of forces]. Talking about the North's military supremacy and the threat from the North, they have continuously increased aggressive troops in South Korea.

The senior member of our side said that Americans as well as the world's people have been disappointed with the maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists. He said that Americans have openly stated that there is no evidence that the North's military capabilities are so superior as to break through the South's barrier and defeat the South Korean Armed Forces and that the continuous use of an early warning plane against us has revealed no sign of military moves and threats.

Due to the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for aggression and war, tension has been heightened more and more since the beginning of the new year. The development of the situation in Korea today clearly shows that the ringleaders who have created the danger of a new war are none other than the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascist elements and that the danger of war comes from the South. To ease tension and eliminate the danger of war in our country, we should take substantial measures to eliminate the source of this danger.

For peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea, the U.S. imperialists should abandon their anachronistic, absurd desire to sit astride the whole of the Korean Peninsula, take off the cap of the UN forces in accordance with the UN resolution and withdraw from South Korea at the earliest possible date, taking along all their aggressive troops. Today, the world's people unanimously demand that the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces take off the illegal cap of the UN forces and immediately withdraw from South Korea. It has been more than 6 years since the UN resolution on the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces from South Korea was adopted. How impudent and anachronistic they are!

The senior member of our side then demanded that the U.S. imperialists accept our just demand and stop the aggressive military buildup in South Korea, large-scale war exercises, and all espionage acts and military provocations against us. In conclusion, we emphatically said that, if the enemy continues to resort to dangerous maneuvers to provoke war despite our repeated warnings, it will bear total responsibility for all the consequences of these maneuvers.

VRPR: CHON'S 22 JAN ASSEMBLY SPEECH 'GIBBERISH'

SK242305 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] On 22 January, Chon Tu-hwan made a New Year's policy speech at the plenary session of the 109th special National Assembly session. In his hour-long talk, he publicized last year's achievements and revealed the national policy goals for 1982. The speech by Chon Tu-hwan is, in a word, an enlarged version of his recent New Year's address. It is gibberish by a hoodlum which contains no words worth heeding nor any new proposals.

First of all, it is ridiculous for Chon Tu-hwan to talk about his achievements last year. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is the man who has manipulated the two government-fabricated elections by means of rifles and swords, irregularities and fraud on the heels of the brutal massacre in Kwangju and has made this a dark land by establishing an unprecedented fascist rule. This notwithstanding, he was detestable enough to blow his own trumpet, claiming that the foundation for political modernization has been laid. It is even more deplorable that he embellished his numerous irregularities and babbled about clean government, even though he has committed numerous irregularities such as the U.S. rice deal scandal, the Baden-Baden bribery scandal, the low-quality coal briquettes scandal, and the three oil refinery companies scandal amounting to 300 million won by the illegal oil price increase and foreign exchange rate hike, all for his private wealth and prosperity and his long-term power.

Furthermore, Chon Tu-hwan, who is regarded in the international community as the fabricator of the two Koreas plot and a warlover, repeated the 12 January and 5 June proposals, clamoring as if those proposals had been supported by other countries. We are puzzled. In addition, embellishing the economic difficulties embroidered with bankruptcy and depression, he lied about his so-called achievements in the face of a global economic depression last year. We were astonished when he shamelessly bragged that the rising rate of commodity prices was stopped at the 10 percent level.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan's state policies for 1982 are gibberish which have exposed their fascist nature and antireunification attitude and their shameless and deceitful nature. This fact was vividly revealed when he touched on the political issue, babbling about political modernization.

As the world knows, political modernization means standardization under fascism. This fact is clearly substantiated by Chon Tu-hwan's cloak of Koreanization of democracy. In the name of Koreanization of democracy and political modernization, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist group has arrested, imprisoned and massacred students and patriotic people of all walks of life who aspired for freedom, democracy and reunification. It has imposed heavy penalties or capital punishment on democratic figures including Kim Tae-chung who opposed the fascist dictatorship and called for social justice. The Chon group was crying out for the Koreanization of democracy while indiscriminately arresting and imprisoning workers, trade union leaders and students, who called for the three labor rights and rights to survival, on charges of the national democratic workers union and democratic students union cases. The Chon group was crying out for political modernization, while purging or expelling, by thousands or tens of thousands, government officials, journalists and professors.

The fact that the so-called political modernization advocated by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan means standardization under fascism was clearly revealed in the beginning of his speech when he declared he would end disorder. Saying some people made the antifascist and antidictatorship struggle because they are immoral, he used violent language that he would not allow politics to be taken to the streets. By saying this, he revealed his intention to intensify the suppression of people and fascist dictatorship.

Chon Tu-hwan said politics should be entrusted to politicians. This means that the students and people should not participate. This means that regardless of what fascist measures are enacted, the students and people should not resist but unconditionally obey.

Such an intention was disclosed when Chon Tu-hwan discussed educational issues. Describing the campuses as a base of disturbances, Chon Tu-hwan asked for the students to be prudent. This is aimed at thwarting the antigovernment struggle of students and turning them into slaves.

Touching on economic issues, Chon Tu-hwan offered no effective measures to stem current economic difficulties. He made excuses, passed the buck to others and committed himself to false promises. What cannot pass unnoticed is that in urging an end to the price hike psychology or inflation psychology, Chon Tu-hwan attributed price hikes to the psychological attitude of workers and consumers and tried to blame the people for economic hardships.

As you know, today's economic woes are the inevitable result of the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique's economic policy, which is dependent on foreign forces. Nevertheless, Chon Tu-hwan mentioned the workers' demand for higher wages, attributing current economic difficulties to the people at large. This is a criminal ruse to shirk his responsibility for the deepening economic dependence on the United States and Japan, making the economy a thoroughly comprador economy and driving the people deeper in debt. That Chon Tu-hwan mentioned price stability, running through a list of empty promises, mocks the people.

Chon Tu-hwan, an ugly pro-American, said that efforts would be made so that the relationship with the United States would change from that of an ally to that of a partner and to develop cooperative relations with Japan. This is tantamount to making South Korea, subservient to the United States and Japan, a tributary to the two countries.

What we also cannot overlook is Chon Tu-hwan's discussion of North-South relations. He used such words as a unification constitution, a national unification consultative council and a provisional agreement. Chon's babbling reconfirms that he is not interested in unifying the country. This cannot but be seen as meaning that in the name of unification, he is interested in perpetuating national division to maintain the fascist military regime.

Chon Tu-hwan is not entitled to discuss reunification, the nation's common cause. He is a fascist murderer who ruthlessly massacred those patriotic people who called for reunification, a vicious splittist who is trying to make the nation's division permanent and a war fanatic who is trying to drive this land into the flames of war. This was borne out in his speech. Chon Tu-hwan mentioned reunification, using such words as a unification constitution and a national unification consultative council as if he were interested in unifying the country. However, he has been turning away from the three principles for national reunification: independence, peaceful reunification and national unity.

He did not mention anything about the withdrawal of U.S. troops, whose presence in South Korea is cancerous to national reunification. In disregard of the three principles, the great reunification charter, Chon Tu-hwan lifted the signboards of national unification concultative council and unification constitution while having the U.S. troops, who intensify tension in this land and obstruct national reunification, remain in South Korea. This reveals that his intentions are directed toward national division, not reunification.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan called for reunification while pursuing an anticommunist policy, conducting joint South Korea-U.S. military exercises with the North as a target and instructing overseas mission chiefs, in a meeting with them, to work for the cross-recognition of North and South Korea and the simultaneous UN entry of both North and South Korea, both schemes to create two Koreas, reminding them that these two ideas are basic principles. This behavior evinces his deceitfulness.

Shamelessly, traitor Chon Tu-hwan mentioned a democratic process which reflects the will of compatriots while talking about reunification. However, he did not say he would stop persecuting democratic forces, including our RPR, which urges independence and reunification; rather, he said he would tighten the reins.

The reunification question is not one that concerns a certain political faction, class or social stratum. It is a common cause on which the nation's survival is at stake, and it is a pannational undertaking which should be pushed ahead with the wisdom and energy of every person. Accordingly, a democratic atmosphere, in which everyone in the country takes part in the reunification question, should be provided and the free activities of the RPR and other progressive political parties and organizations should be guaranteed.

Mentioning reunification by means of a democratic process while banning workers' organizations and our RPR, which fights for national reunification, and bestially persecuting and imprisoning the patriotic people who are struggling for democracy and reunification reveals an intent not to seek reunification.

As a matter of fact, in his administrative policy message Chon Tu-hwan sought the fixation of national division under the signboard of reunification. This becomes obvious in the fact that Chon Tu-hwan proposed a provisional agreement. In the provisional agreement he proposed concluding between the North and South, he suggested the establishment of liaison offices -- something like embassies -- while saying that the aggressive and nation-selling treaties concluded with the United States, including the military pact, and the current fascist military system will continue in force.

This is a splittist idea to turn North-South relations into a state-to-state relationship and make national division permanent under the slogan of reunification. It is merely a replica of their idea of reunification in the 2000's.

Why did traitor Chon Tu-hwan, a splittist, come up with a reunification slogan, something most unsuitable for him to discuss? This has to do with the crisis facing the Chon Tu-hwan military regime. Faced with our people's voices raised in the call for death through establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], and with denunciations of the Chon Tu-hwan clique growing stronger with each day in international society, the current fascist military regime is now uneasy.

Under these circumstances, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique is cunningly seeking a way out by misleading public opinion at home and abroad with tricks and sweet talks, deceiving the people at home and abroad desirous of democracy and reunification with talk of reunification while trying to fix national division.

Chon Tu-hwan's administrative policy speech served to reveal his intention to justify and maintain the fascist military dictatorship, shirk his responsibility for driving the people into wretched living conditions, fool the people with empty promises and reconfirm the theory of reunification in the 2000's. In a nutshell, it was an absurdity babbled by a traitor.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is attempting to conceal his crimes and to stay in office for a long time. However, this is a foolish daydream. Our people will not be deceived by his tricks. Our people will continue to fight to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is taking the road to national division, fascism and nation-selling, and to achieve social democracy and the nation's independent and peaceful reunification.

NODONG SINMUN FLAYS CHON'S 21 JAN REMARKS

SK241006 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0929 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 24 (KCNA) -- The traitor Chon Tu-hwan called a "meeting for taking steps against spies" on January 21, at which he twaddled about "unification through communisation by force of arms," speaking ill of us with allegations about "the North's military provocations" and "attempt at internal disturbance" and crying for the establishment of a "defence posture" and the strengthening of "maintenance of public peace." Commenting on this, NODONG SINMUN today says:

The "unification through communisation by force of arms" clamoured about by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan for more than two years is a fabrication and a variety of the balderdash that day was a most vicious challenge.

The signed commentary, headlined "Vicious Agitation for Confrontation" says: This is reckless and dangerous utterances designed to disturb peace and heighten tension in Korea. It is all the more so because his jargon is timed to coincide with the rapid reinforcement of the U.S. Armed Forces and the puppet army these days and with their plan to stage the provocative war exercise codenamed "Team Spirit 1982."

It is an intolerable treacherous act to talk about the fictitious "southward invasion by force of arms," incite North-South confrontation and create tension at a time when it has been raised as an urgent demand of the times and the nation to preserve and consolidate peace in Korea and achieve national reunification at an early date and we are making sincere efforts to this end.

It is not because of someone's "threats" but for propping up the fascist dictatorship faced with a crisis, isolated internally and externally that the Chon Tu-hwan group is clamoring about the establishment of a "defence posture" and the "maintenance of public peace" under the pretext of "southward invasion," keying up tension and reinforcing the military repressive system. It also pursues the aim of justifying the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their manoeuvres to provoke another war.

Lashing at the groundless allegation of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan that we are "creating social disorder" in South Korea for "unification through communisation," the commentary notes that the disorder created in South Korea is a product of the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists and the tyranny and misrule of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique.

It goes on: An attempt to shift the responsibility on to us with a groundless assertion is a foolish trick to justify the barbarous military terror rule and divert elsewhere the attention of the indignant people. The balderdash of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan that day proceeded entirely from his black-hearted intention to foster hostility against us among the South Korean people, incite North-South confrontation, freeze the division and realize his long-term office. This is well proved by the fact that though the traitor waxed eloquent speaking ill of us, he did not utter even a word about reunification.

The military terror rule will give no way out to the Chon Tu-hwan group. The traitor Chon Tu-hwan must give up the reckless confrontation racket and step down from "power" without delay, as demanded by the people, stresses the commentary.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY MEETING

SK250402 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2325 GMT 24 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 25 January commentary: "Dangerous War Manuevers"]

[Text] On 21 January, a consultative meeting on studying an emergency in the Far East was held in Tokyo between U.S. and Japanese authorities. According to reports, the U.S. side made extensive requests at the meeting for the use of the bases of Japan's Self-Defense Forces, Japanese ports and civil aviation by U.S. troops; procurement, transport and storage of military supplies including ammunition, weapons and foods; and radio monitoring [chonpa tongje], simulating a war on the Korean Peninsula. On the other hand, the Japanese side revealed its intention to have Japan's Self-Defense Forces accept the storage, transport and maritime supply of strategic materials.

It is noted that the meeting was held in accordance with the agreement made in the U.S.-Japan Security Consultative Committee meeting on 8 January. As is known, the study of an emergency in the Far East, waged between the U.S. ruling circles and the Japanese reactionaries, is aimed at devising measures to use Japanese bases and mobilize the Self-Defense Forces when the U.S. imperialists provoke an aggressive war in Korea.

Consultation on such questions as the use of Japanese bases, procurement of military supplies and mobilization of the Self-Defense Forces shows that military collusion between the U.S. ruling circles and Japanese reactionaries against our people has reached a more reckless stage.

The study of an emergency in the Far East is a product of the U.S. imperialists' aggressive policy on Korea and their policy of war. The U.S. imperialists are accelerating war preparations by reinforcing the aggressive forces and introducing new operational equipment, turning South Korea into a military base, a nuclear base and a grave hotbed of war against the northern half of the republic. They are attempting to drag Japan into implementing their war plan.

The U.S. imperialists' maneuver to use Japan as an operational and logistics base for U.S. troops and to mobilize the Self-Defense Forces on the pretext of studying an emergency in the Far East are naked new war provocation plots and ominous developments which would lead the situation on the Korean Peninsula to the brink of war. The Japanese reactionaries also revealed their intention to expand overseas and to realize the ambition for aggression in Korea by following the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression on Korea. They did not attempt to deny that they were ready to review their laws and regulations to comply with demands of the U.S. side, that they had the capability to cope with such demands and that they were working out laws to allow the deployment of the Self-Defense Forces in an emergency while ambiguously raving that they would not review such demands without taking measures for legislation, budget and administration.

The remarks that Japan would offer its bases, supply material and send Self-Defense Forces overseas in accord with the U.S. imperialists' demands evince total military collusion. Japanese publications noted that the study of an emergency in the Far East would consolidate the military cooperative system among Japan, the United States and Korea. The study of an emergency in the Far East, occurring when military collusion among the U.S. imperialists, Japanese reactionaries and the South Korean puppets is nakedly consolidated, will clearly strengthen the tripartite military alliance. The study of an emergency in the Far East is a dangerous scheme hindering our nation's reunification, tightening tension and disturbing peace in Korea and Asia.

We are watching with due vigilance a provocation plan worked out by the U.S. imperialists and Japanese reactionaries. War maneuvers, perpetrated for any reason, cannot be consistent with the ideal of peace, and they run counter to the demand of the times. If the U.S. and Japanese reactionaries and the South Korean puppets do not further exacerbate the situation, tension in Korea will not be aggravated and peace will be maintained and consolidated. The U.S. and Japanese people hope for this. The U.S. and Japanese ruling circles should heed the people's desire and act cautiously. They should stop reckless rackets for war such as the study of an emergency in the Far East.

DEMOCRATIC YOUTH URGED TO JOIN SOUTH KOREAN ARMY

SK221021 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1006 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 22, (KCNA) -- A recent issue of SINHAN MINBO, a newspaper of Koreans published in the United States, printed an editorial headlined "Democratic Forces Should Be an Army for the People."

Noting that the army has special duty to defend social justice and truth for the people, the editorial says: now, what are the features of the South Korean army men? Empty-headed commanding officers know nothing but "corporal punishment," seeking only illicit money-hoarding and luxury. Deception and fabrication for flattering to the higher-up are regarded as a discipline.

It cannot be expected to become the genuine army of an independent nation defending the country and the nation under the present military command system subjugated to the United States. Pak Chong-hui and Chon Tu-hwan were typical military rogues who betrayed the people and the nation, leaving an indelible disgrace in the modern history of South Korea, and represented a disgraceful army leading the country to ruin.

The editorial stresses: If there had been only ten soldiers for the people, the country and the nation among the armed forces which cracked down on the Kwangju uprising, so appalling a massacre of people would not have taken place. Democratic students and youths should enter the army to form forces of democratic soldiers for a decisive moment. This will be precisely one of the concrete ways leading the national movement and the country in the right direction.

COMMODITY TRADE PROTOCOL WITH ALBANIA SIGNED

SK230420 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2204 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 23 (KCNA) -- A 1982 protocol on commodity delivery and payments between the governments of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the People's Socialist Republic of Albania was signed in Pyongyang on January 22.

The signing ceremony was attended on our side by Pang Tae-yul and other personages concerned and on the opposite side by the members of the Albanian Government trade delegation headed by Marko Xega, deputy minister of foreign trade, and Albanian Ambassador to Korea Miltiadh Bode. The protocol was signed by Pang Tae-yul and Marko Xega.

Delegation Departs

SK240902 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0844 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 24 (KCNA) -- The government trade delegation of the People's Socialist Republic of Albania headed by Marko Xega, deputy minister of foreign trade, left here for home on January 23 by train. It was seen off at Pyongyang railway station by Pang Tae-yul and other personages concerned and Albanian Ambassador to Korea Miltiadh Bode.

YI CHONG-OK MEETS OUTGOING PRC AMBASSADOR 23 JAN

SK240905 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0845 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 24 (KCNA) -- Premier Yi Chong-ok on January 23 met and had a conversation with Lu Zhixian, Chinese ambassador to the DPRK, who paid a farewell call on him. Present on the occasion were Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Yi Song-hui and an official of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang.

ROMANIAN AMBASSADOR PAYS FAREWELL VISITS

Meets Yi Chong-ok

SK240856 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0843 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 24 (KCNA) -- Premier Yi Chong-ok on January 23 met and had a talk with Paul Marinescu, Romanian ambassador to the DPRK, who paid a farewell call on him. Present there were Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Yi Chong-mok and an official of the Romanian Embassy in Pyongyang.

Meets O Chin-u

SK230338 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0330 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 23 (KCNA) -- Comrade O Chin-u, minister of People's Armed Forces, on January 22 met and had a conversation with Paul Marinescu, Romanian ambassador to the DPRK, who paid a farewell call on him. Present on the occasion were personages concerned and Constantin Anghel, military attache of the Romanian Embassy in Pyongyang.

MALTESE FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES IN PYONGYANG

SK250846 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0825 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 25 (KCNA) -- A government delegation of the Republic of Malta headed by Foreign Minister Alex Sceberres Trigona arrived in Pyongyang on January 25.

MINISTER SAYS SOUTH-NORTH UNIFICATION POSSIBLE

SK240338 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 24 Jan 82 p 2

[By Choe Chang-sok]

[Text] Minister of National Unification Son Chae-sik said yesterday territorial unification is a herculean task, but this does not necessarily mean that unification is an impossible job. He cited the intransigent and stubborn regime in the northern half of the peninsula as the main stumbling block to genuine negotiations to unite the long-divided country.

"However distant and rugged the road to the unification may be, we are doomed to tread it. But, unification is not an unrealistic task in view of several favorable factors," he said. Explaining the "favorable factors," the nation's top unification policy administrator said the international environment and domestic problems in North Korea, in the first place, demand the Pyongyang regime to be flexible. The second factor, he pointed out, is the widened gap of national strength between South and North Korea and the third is the conglomerated zeal among the South Koreans and their government for unification. He predicted cautiously that a change in North Korea may come in the latter half of the 1980's.

In an interview with the KOREA HERALD, Son, who played a major role in the production of the new unification package announced Friday, said that Korean communists, if they really wish for unification, can hardly turn down what he called the "blueprine for unification." "The proposal for an inter-Korean consultative conference, the establishment of liaison offices, signing a provisional agreement on basic relations are all realistic ones which North Korea cannot ignore," he said.

Son does not believe North Korea would easily give up its basic unification policy of communizing South Korea by force. "But," he said, "we have to be patient until they (North Koreans) come to realize that triggering another war would mean digging their own grave." At this point, the unification minister explained about the "stumbling block" he mentioned earlier in this interview. "The foremost of them all is their policy of unifying the peninsula through a communist revolt in the South. They talk about peace, but they refuse to discuss with us how to ease tension on the peninsula and restore mutual trust," Son said. He added, "they talk big about the so-called confederal system. Our position is that this system can be discussed at the Consultative Conference for National Reunification which we have proposed. You cannot jumpt to a conclusion at once. Things should be handled step by step. In the unification issue, the first step should be dialogue."

The unification minister explained that the Republic of Korea has proposed the opening of the two societies in a bid to infuse the "wave of liberty" to the tightly closed northern half of the peninsula. Once this should become a reality, there will be a change in North Korea which, in turn, would promote the possibility for unification talks.

When asked about his view on a possible mediation by the Soviet Union or mainland China, Son said he did not believe the two patrons of North Korea would do so. "The reason is clear. Kim Il-song is so adamant in his policy of unifying the peninsula by means of force that the two communist giants do not seem to be willing to persuade Kim. They just do not want to displease Kim lest he should lean toward any one of the two. Thus, we cannot expect anything from Peking and Moscow."

He pointed out the absurdity of North Korea's confederal plan. "As preconditions, North Korea demands the withdrawal of American troops and the toppling of the incumbent government in Seoul for a regime sympathetic to communism, among others. It is obvious that they intend to establish a communist government in the South."

Son emphasized that future education should be directed toward teaching students about the superiority of liberal democracy and contradictions of communism. In this regard, Minister Son said, the government will produce more effective unification-related teaching materials for students and other young people. He concluded the interview by saying that what is important is not being discouraged at the negative response from the North. "Instead," he said, "let's knock until the door is open."

ENVOYS TO SEEK SUPPORT ABROAD FOR CHON OFFER

SK240334 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 24 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Foreign Minister No Sin-yong directed the heads of Korean diplomatic missions abroad yesterday to double their efforts to create an international climate conducive to the early realization of a meeting between the top leaders of Seoul and Pyongyang, proposed by President Chon Tu-hwan. He also instructed them to seek international support for the Jan. 22 peace formula, which calls, among other things, for the drafting of a joint constitution for the peaceful unification of South and North Korea.

Minister No also told the envoys to provide all available administrative support for the improvement of the interests of Korean residents abroad. He handed down his instruction to a meeting of envoys assigned to Asia, Europe, and South and North America, which was held in the capitol conference room. The envoys were told to do their best to help the countries to which they are accredited understand fully the basic effect of the latest formula, compared with the North Korean scheme for unification under a federation system. In particular, Minister No instructed them to brief leaders of foreign states on the rationality of Seoul's peace formula in detail and the absurdity of North Korea's federation idea.

The envoys finished their four-day session yesterday afternoon, during which they discussed a wide range of schemes for increased cooperation in diplomatic and trade fields with the pertinent countries. Prior to the close of the session, they adopted a four-point resolution manifesting their determination to make all-out efforts to expand international support for President Chon's formula for "democratic unification through national reconciliation." They stated in the resolution that the Jan. 22 formula, along with the previous twin proposals made on Jan. 12 and June 5, was the best scheme for peaceful unification of the divided country, and the ardent hope of the nation's people.

UNC INVITES NORTH TO OBSERVE 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

SK231226 Seoul YONHAP in English 0820 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Panmunjom, Korea, Jan. 23 (YONHAP) -- The U.S.-led United Nations Command (UNC) Saturday invited the North Korean and Communist Chinese members of the Military Armistice Commission (MAC) to observe U.S.-South Korean joint military exercises, "Team Spirit 1982," to be staged throughout South Korea starting in mid-February.

The unprecedented invitation was extended by Rear Admiral James Storms III, the UNC senior member to the MAC, at the commission's 410th meeting. Also invited to observe the annual exercises were the four principal neutral nations supervisory commission members from Switzerland, Sweden, Poland, and Czechoslovakia.

Storms said he has been directed by commander-in-chief of the UNC, U.S. Gen. John Wickham, Jr. to extend the invitation to the five Chinese and North Korean members of the MAC.

The U.S. admiral said that the North Koreans and Chinese were being invited to "see for yourselves the defensive, non-provocative nature of that (Team Spirit) exercise," and added that the UNC was prepared to accept a reciprocal invitation, "anywhere, anytime."

No response to the invitation was made at Saturday's meeting.

YONHAP REPORTS NORTH DEFECTOR'S NEWS CONFERENCE

SK250226 Seoul YONHAP in English 0216 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 25 (YONHAP) -- North Korea has designated 1982, the year when its leader, Kim Il-song, celebrates his 70th birthday, as the "decisive year" for invading South Korea, a defector from North Korea said Monday.

Speaking at a news conference here, Kim Yong-chun, 31, a former mechanic at an agricultural machinery workshop in North Hamkyong Province, said that North Korea was mobilizing all its residents for war preparations under the catchphrase: "Let us unify the Korean Peninsula under communism, as a birthday present for President Kim Il-song."

As part of the preparations, a week-long joint exercise of its armed forces was staged in late December, Kim said, and artillery parks were constructed last year at industrial plants located along the coastal areas. Kim defected to the South Jan. 7 by crossing the military demarcation line, which separates the Korean Peninsula.

According to Kim, North Korea classifies its citizens into 10 different categories, in accordance with their perceived devotion to revolutionary ideology, and those who belong to the top three categories -- ardent revolutionaries, and dependents of those killed during the (Korean) war, and exemplary soldiers -- are given preferential treatment where medicare, provisions, education, and travel are concerned.

On the other hand, those classified as "anti-(labor) party bureaucrats" are confined to a separate isolation camp ringed with electric barbed wire to prevent escape. Family members of the so-called impure elements are referred to as "dogs from the South," and cannot even find spouses.

Kim said that since Kim Il-song's son, Chong-il, emerged as a strongman in 1980, factories and other organizations have been subjected to stricter supervision, and all young people have been mobilized for forced labor.

Kim also revealed that the North Koreans learned of the International Olympic Committee's awarding of the 1988 Olympics to Seoul through an editorial in the NODONG SINMUN, the organ of the North Korean Communist Party, which accompanied the news with the usual innuendoes against South Korea.

Kim said he made the decision to escape to the South when he was told by former Korean expatriates in Japan that one can find peace and freedom in South Korea. He added that there have been frequent defections to mainland China of residents of his native province, which is located northeast and bordering Manchuria, and this has led to reinforced vigilance by North Korean guards along the border between North Korean territory and Manchuria.

Starting in 1958, Kim said, North Korean authorities forced disloyal residents residing in provinces adjacent to the South-North border to move farther north to prevent possible defection.

PRC 'HOSTILE ACTIVITIES' AGAINST SRV CONDEMNED

BK221706 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 22 Jan 82

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "New Proof of the Chinese Expansionists' Warmongering Acts"]

[Text] It should be recalled that last December, after the French Government announced its decision to give $40 million in aid to the Vietnamese Government, the Beijing authorities immediately reacted by flagrantly interfering in the internal affairs of Vietnam and France through various activities, instigating the ASEAN ruling circles to oppose this aid, but their efforts were futile.

In the Vietnam-China border areas, the Chinese hegemonist-expansionists have increased tension to a point where war might break out over any circumstance. After suffering a shameful defeat in their war of aggression against Vietnam in February 1979, the Beijing power-holders have arrogantly increased their threats by openly announcing that they would give a so-called second lesson to Vietnam. Although the Vietnamese side has persistently put forth many proposals for the renewal of negotiations aimed at solving the dispute and normalizing relations between the two sides, the Chinese side has obstinately continued to pursue all kinds of dark maneuvers as pretexts for delaying the negotiations. At the same time, Chinese forces -- ground, naval and air -- have continued their armed provocations and aggressive acts against Vietnam.

With the Vietnamese-Chinese Lunar New Year -- which falls on 25 January 1982 -- drawing near, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry once again made a proposal to the Chinese side on 28 December 1981 for a 10-day cease-fire, from 20 to 29 January, so as to provide facilities for the peoples of both sides to meet their families and joyfully and comfortably hold New Year celebrations. The Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, however, were disappointed when, on 30 December, the Chinese side rejected Vietnam's good will for peaceful coexistence.

This clearly shows that the Chinese authorities are senseless. They have trampled upon a tradition thathas been upheld since time immemorial by their population of a billion people and by the Vietnamese people. This is irrefutable proof clearly attesting to the warmongering design of the Chinese big-nation hegemonists and expanionists who are continually seeking to realize their long-dreamed-of strategy of expansion against and annexation of neighboring countries. In particular, this includes Vietnam, which is their primary target, as shown by their seizure of Vietnam's Hoang Sa Archipelago in January 1974, their use of the genocidal Pol Pot clique as a springboard for launching aggression against the southwestern border of Vietnam at the end of 1978 and their dispatch of 600,000 troops to openly launch attacks on the northern border of Vietnam in February 1979.

Despite such a hostile attitude on the part of the Chinese authorities, the Vietnamese side has further displayed its modest desire to live in peace by announcing a unilateral cease-fire. This has engendered more admiration and acclaim from public opinion. The Vietnamese army always remains on alert, however, and is ready to defend the territorial integrity and sovereignty of the SRV. If the Chinese expansionists misunderstand Vietnam's good will as weakness and stubbornly continue their aggression against Vietnamese territory, the heroic Vietnamese army will give a due lesson to them, just as they suffered in their previous acts of aggression.

As for our Kampuchean people and army, who used to share the same trench with the fraternal Vietnamese people and army in the struggles against the old and new colonialists the genocidal Pol Pot clique and the Chinese hegemonists and expanionists, we declare our resolute support for the good-will measures taken by the SRV and demand that the Chinese authorities immediately end all their hostile activities against the SRV, which is an independent and sovereign state.

VIETNAMESE LUNAR NEW YEAR CELEBRATION MARKED

Chan Si Greeting

BK241018 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Greetings message from Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, to Gen Van Tien Dung on the occasion of the Lunar New Year -- dated 22 January]

[Text] To Comrade Gen Van Tien Dung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and minister of defense of the SRV, Hanoi: On the occasion of the traditional national New Year of the fraternal Vietnamese people -- 25 January 1982 -- on behalf of the party, government, people and army of the PRK, and in my own name, I would like to extend best wishes to you and your family. May you enjoy the best of health and more and greater successes in the cause of defending and building socialism in your beloved fatherland during the new year. Through you, I would like to convey my New Year greetings to all VPA cadres, combatants and their families. In particular, I ask you to transmit my cordial and warm greetings to the families of those cadres and combatants who are carrying out their internationalist duty in our beautiful land of Angkor. May they have good health, prosperity and happiness.

Dear comrade minister, the bonds of solidarity between the peoples and armies of our two countries have been tested on many occasions. Whenever our Kampuchean people have experienced hardship suffered from aggression by external enemies, the Vietnamese people and army have always been present to help solve and share our difficulties, and to help liberate Kampuchean territory from the enemy aggressors, at the request of the Kampuchean people, in a most timely and effective manner.

During the past decades, the peoples and armies of our two countries -- with a tradition of great courage -- fought shoulder to shoulder in the same trench, sharing our food and joining hands in smashing the common enemy. As evidence of this, [words indistinct] the peoples and armies of our two countries joined forces and, like a torrential current, cooperated in the battle to liberate our Kampuchean nation and people from the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime and to enable the Kampuchean people to live once again with rights and freedom to defend and build their country and advance toward socialism according to Marxism-Leninism. To date, the bonds of solidarity of our two peoples and armies have become stronger than ever. No reactionary force can destroy them. We strengthened mutual cooperation in the struggle against the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary remnants and other reactionaries such as Sihanouk and Son Sann -- who are the subservient lackeys of U.S. imperialism and Beijing hegemonism along the Kampuchea-Thai border -- in order to ensure the security for our Kampuchean people and allow them to engage peacefully in production and in the restoration of the national economy and other fields devastated by the traitorous Pol Pot gang and to contribute to the defense of peace and revolutionary gains in the world.

For these reasons, the Kampuchean people will never forget the good service rendered by the Vietnamese people and army and will remain deeply grateful to them for sacrificing their flesh and blood in the revolutionary cause of our Kampuchean people and nation. We have inscribed this precious service in gold letters on the pages of the history of our Kampuchean nation and people. We will indelibly inscribe it in the hearts of all Khmer children and all future generations so that they can learn from and emulate the model of proletarian internationalist heroism and traditional courage of the fraternal Vietnamese people and army.

Once again, I take this opportunity to express my wish that the bonds of solidarity and militant alliance between the Kampuchean people and army and the fraternal Vietnamese people and army will grow stronger and more powerful with every passing day. In conclusion, comrade minister, please accept my highest and most sincere fraternal revolutionary regards.

22 January 1982

Chan Ven Message

BK240819 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0402 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 24 Jan (SPK) -- On 24 January Chan Ven, chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association, sent his warm congratulations to Phan Trang Tue, chairman of the Vietnam-Kampuchea Friendship Association, on the occasion of the Lunar New Year -- a traditional Vietnamese festival.

The message said, notably: Our two countries' annals record the traditions of militant Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity in the bitter struggle against the colonialists, the imperialists, the expansionists and other reactionaries. Actually, the relations of special solidarity and close cooperation between the Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples are strengthened unceasingly, and no force can dislodge them.

The Kampuchean people, continued the message, are elated with the fraternal Vietnamese people's successes and consider that they greatly encourage our people in their cause of socialist construction and defense of their fatherland. The Kampuchean people were pleased at the signing of the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation, which unites the two peoples in all fields, thus consolidating the special relations of cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam and among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, which are determining factors for the defense of the independence and building of socialism and contribute to the defense of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

On behalf of the Kampuchean people and the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association, we express our deep gratitude to the Vietnamese party, government and people for their precious assistance to the just Kampuchean revolutionary cause in the past and since the 7 January liberation, the message said.

Tang Saroem Visit to Soldiers

BK241501 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 24 January a delegation of the Ministry of Trade led by Comrade Tang Saroem, minister of trade, called on and distributed gifts to wounded and sick Vietnamese soldiers at the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Hospital to congratulate and greet them on the occasion of the traditional New Year of the fraternal Vietnamese people. On this occasion, Comrade Tang Saroem highly appreciated the spirit of proletarian internationalism and courageous struggle displayed by the VPA in helping the Kampuchean people to defend the land of Angkor. The comrade stressed that the Kampuchean people of all strata would never forget the immense service rendered by the VPA, through sacrifice of their blood, flesh and lives, for the cause of the Kampuchean people's independence and freedom. At the same time, the Kampuchean people express deep thanks to and great admiration for the Vietnamese people for allowing their loved ones to fulfill their noble duty on the land of the Kampuchean fatherland to help defend the revolutionary gains of the Kampuchean people and oppose the threats from the Chinese expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other international reactionaries, he said.

In conclusion, he said: These insignificant gifts cannot compare with the great sacrifices of the VPA. They represent, however, the deep gratitude of the cadres and employees of the Ministry of Trade, as well as that of the Kampuchean people throughout the country, to the fraternal VPA. They also constitute a token of the efforts to strengthen the close solidarity between the two peoples and armies of Kampuchea and Vietnam. The Kampuchean people as well as the cadres and employees of the ministry pledge to protect the special militant solidarity as they would protect their own lives and to make every effort to develop and strengthen it further in conformity with the words of Comrade Heng Samrin: As long as there are palm trees in Kampuchea and as long as the waters of the Mekong River continue to flow, the Kampuchea-Vietnam militant solidarity will remain strong and firm, like the peak of Mount Aoral!

In his reply, the comrade representative of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Hospital expressed heart-felt joy at the visit of the delegation. He stressed: The presence of the delegation at this time has greatly encouraged all the doctors at the hospital in treating and caring for the combatants. It is also an encouragement for all Vietnamese soldiers undergoing treatment, as well as those soldiers who are carrying out their duty in Kampuchea entrusted by the VCP in helping to destroy the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan bandits and protect the revolutionary gains of the Kampuchean people. In conclusion, on behalf of all doctors and soldiers under treatment, the comrade expressed determination to work hard to bring about a quick recovery for the patients so that they would be able to return to their units and resume their tasks at the request of the Kampuchean people. He also pledged to preserve and defend Kampuchean-Vietnamese solidarity forever.

After distributing gifts -- condensed milk, cigarettes and foodstuffs -- the delegation called on wounded and sick soldiers in various wards and rooms of the hospitals in a most cordial and intimate atmosphere.

KEO CHANDA MEETS HO CHI MINH CITY DELEGATION

BK230815 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1426 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Jan (SPK) -- A delegation of the party, army and mass organizations of Ho Chi Minh City led by Gen Tran Hai Phung, permanent member of the municipal party committee and commander of the Ho Chi Minh City armed forces, paid a 3-day visit to Phnom Penh.

Last Thursday [21 January] Keo Chanda, secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal KPRP Committee and chairman of the Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Committee, received the delegation in an audience. Keo Chanda emphasized the successes won in Phnom Penh city thanks to the close cooperation between the powers and populations of the two cities and expressed deep gratitude to the Vietnamese experts and combatants on assignment in Phnom Penh for their spirit of proletarian internationalism. Gen Tran Hai Phung highly appreciated the progress of Phnom Penh and expressed his thanks to the party, army and people of Kampuchea for their assistance to the Vietnamese experts and combatants in Phnom Penh. He was convinced that the bonds of fraternal friendship and close cooperation between the two cities would further deepen.

During its stay in Kampuchea, the delegation visited the former royal palace and the mass graves at Cheung Ek. The delegation left Phnom Penh on Thursday, 21 January.

STRENGTHENING OF FRONT'S ACTIVITIES URGED

BK241142 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 23 Jan 82

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Strengthen and Broaden the Work of the Front in Contribution to the Construction and Defense of the Kampuchean Fatherland" -- date not given]

[Text] United as one body in the ranks of the front under the glorious banner of the KPRP, from a nation seriously victimized by the worst genocidal danger in history and from a country completely devastated, our people have braved and overcome the serious consequences left behind by the reactionary regime, fighting valiantly to defend and build the country and scoring unexpectedly brilliant achievements in all fields.

The immense revolutionary gains realized during the past 3 years are powerful factors for our people in entering the 4th year of the beautiful revolutionary regime with enthusiasm and confidence in a glorious future. We must not, however, become complacent because of these successes. The faster the revolution progresses, the greater the need for all of us to pool all our moral and physical efforts to carry out the tasks in the new stage.

We are well aware that our lofty goal is still far away and the road toward this goal is strewn with tests, trials and dangers created by the enemy of the revolution.

For this reason, it is necessary for our people as a whole to display a resolute determination to fight and to win in every vigorous revolutionary movement and to pool our resources in order to fulfill all our historic missions for the fatherland. Solidarity is our vital strength; therefore, we must increase and tighten the bonds of solidarity of the people as a whole and transform the resolutions and statement of the Third Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Congress into concrete action in our beloved land of Angkor. Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee, gave us these precious words in a solemn appeal from the podium of honor at a meeting marking the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day.

The Kampuchean people of all nationalities, the armed forces and security forces, peasants and workers, young men and women, intellectuals and Buddhist monks, and Kampuchean patriots living abroad, must develop the glorious revolutionary tradition of the Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation and pool their moral and physical forces. They should actively contribute to the strengthening and broadening of the work of the front in order to expand solidarity among the people and mobilize the immense possibilities of the masses to advance the cause of national defense and construction by leaps and bounds.

In this sense, we must, first of all, establish a broad, active and effective front network throughout the country by establishing a system of front organizations from the central to the local, commune and village levels. Front cadres at all levels must have direct contact with the actual movement in order to help the people understand and implement all the policies and laws of the PRK and, at the same time, to listen to the opinions and aspirations of the people so as to seek appropriate and timely solutions for them. This is an effort to forge permanent relations between the state and the people, who are increasing their faith in and support for the revolutionary power.

Cadres must heighten the people's spirit of revolutionary vigilance and encourage them to contribute massively and actively to the major and sacred cause of the present stage of our revolution: To firmly defend national independence by being determined to fight, being constantly ready to smash the enemy's psychological warfare and all kinds of perfidious maneuvers and clearly distinguishing friend from foe.

Cadres must stimulate the patriotic conscience and spirit of mastery and awakening of the people in the vigorous labor to build socialism according to the slogan: To live and work in line with the Constitution and the laws. They should heartily encourage all types of creative activities, initiate emulative activites in production and praise and award prizes to those who are outstanding in their work and to any family that has rendered good service to the fatherland. Cadres must foster mutual affection and mutual assistance among the masses and centralize the force of great solidarity by using the worker-peasant alliance as a firm foundation and a union between the physical and intellectual laborers as an incentive in every field of struggle on the military, economic, political and ideological fronts. They must encourage the people to develop the spirit of exercising their rights as masters of the country and our national destiny, with each actively contributing to and conscientiously fulfilling his obligations as a good citizen of the fatherland.

Cadres must constantly encourage and actively implement the five goods and must absolutely avoid the five bads. In this regard, all of us must clearly understand that the front is the focal point of all our people's forces and the concentration of all activities of the society. We must also clearly distinguish, however, between progressive activities useful to the entire national society -- which we must vigorously promote -- and illegal, reactionary activities harmful to the common interests -- which we must categorically denounce.

In our great family, we must be affectionate, loyal and sincere to our kith and kin, but we must also be resolute toward the enemy who opposes our revolution. This is a major factor enabling our revolutionary movement to advance firmly, rapidly and steadily. Cadres must foster the spirit of proletarian internationalism in the people and impress upon them the importance of solidarity and the need to remain united with socialist countries, particularly the close bonds of friendship and cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam, by not only maintaining this militant solidarity, but resolutely defending the strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos revolutionary alliance -- the factor ensuring the victory of the revolution in the three Indochinese states.

No difficulty or any perfidious maneuver of any enemy can block our advance. Each of us must militantly and tirelessly struggle to stimulate the vigorous revolutionary movement of the masses. This is the consensus of millions of people who have risen up together and who are determined to overcome all hardships, to perform all of our tasks well and to crush all the maneuvers of the enemy. In this way we will advance by leaps and bounds the cause of defending and building the beloved land of Angkor for more and greater successes.

INFORMATION ON VEGETABLE PESTS PRESENTED

BK130953 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Unattributed article on methods to eliminate insects harmful to vegetables]

[Summary] To achieve good results in growing vegetable crops, measures should be taken to eliminate insects. We would like to inform you about the following insects, which are harmful to vegetables, and discuss a number of preventive measures:

"There are four groups of insects that usually plague vegetables such as turnips, curly leaf cabbages, radishes, beets, lettuce and so on:

"1. Cabbageworm -- tiny and green. Control: A) Four spoonfuls of (malachon) solution 25 percent mixed with 20 liters of water; and B) two spoonfuls of (sosbrine) 25 percent mixed with 20 liters of water.

"2. Leafworm. Control: Two spoonfuls of (phedrin) 25 percent mixed with 20 liters of water.

"3. Caterpillar. Control: Two spoonfuls of (phedrin) solution 25 percent mixed with 20 liters of water.

"4. White-striped worm. Control: Four spoonfuls of (malachon) solution 25 percent mixed with 20 liters of water." [passage indistinct]

Insects and worms damaging cucumbers, watermelons, gourds, tomatoes and beans include: sawflies, potato beetles, squash vine borers, tomato fruitworms, pickleworms, weevils and maggots. Their control includes (phedrin), (nicotin), (clatane) dust, (malachon) solution and (seven) dust 85 percent. Caution: A period of 7 days following the use of insecticides before harvesting vegetable crops for consumption is necessary to ensure safety from intoxication.

AGRICULTURAL REPORTAGE FOR 11-17 JAN PERIOD

BK181027 [Editorial Report] Kampuchean media have reported the following agricultural developments in the reporting period 11-17 January:

Kandal: Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 0400 GMT on 11 January reported that fishermen in S'ang District, Kandal Province, caught 125 tons of fish in December.

Kampot: Phnom Penh SPK in French at 1433 GMT on 12 January noted that production solidarity groups in Banteay Meas District, Kampot Province, following their harvest of 2,840 hectares of early rice, have started cultivating 300 hectares of dry-season rice. They have just grown 1,500 hectares of corn, beans and potatoes.

During the rainy season, Banteay Meas District planted 24,100 hectares of rice, or 2,000 hectares more than the same season of 1980. The district has restored three barrages which will be capable of irrigating hundreds of hectares of ricefields.

Kompong Chhnang: Phonom Penh radio at 1230 GMT on 13 January said that peasants in Kompong Chhnang Province transplanted 600 hectares of dry-season rice and sowed 55 hectares of flood-receding rice. They harvested and stored 11,000 tons of early rice, more than 10,000 tons of ordinary rice and 4,000 tons of late rice. In addition, they planted more than 1,100 hectares of subsidiary crops and many tons of industrial crops such as peanuts, sesame, sugarcane and tobacco. SPK at 1433 GMT on 15 January added that by mid-January, the peasants had harvested 70 percent of the 43,340 hectares of rice planted, and that they had sold more than 1,300 tons of paddy to the state, or 66 percent of the plan norm.

Kompong Thom: According to SPK at 0404 GMT on 13 January, peasants in Baray District, Kompong Thom Province, have harvested 17,000 hectares of rice, or 70 percent of the rainy-season rice area. They have also completed planting 380 hectares of dry-season rice. During the past rainy season, despite natural calamities, they planted 25,000 hectares of rice and 3,000 hectares of other crops.

AFP: THAILAND REPORTS KHMER COALITION REJECTION

BK250606 Hong Kong AFP in English 0549 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 25 Jan (AFP) -- The ousted Khmer Rouge leadership has formally rejected a proposal that they form a loose-knit coalition with two non-communist resistance groups to end Vietnam's occupation of Kampuchea, the Thai Foreign Ministry announced today.

According to spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun, the leadership still recognised by the United Nations said it was "not possible to accept" the proposal put forward by Singapore and endorsed by the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). But the ousted leaders proposed a summit with the other two groups, headed by former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and hisone-time premier, Son Sann, Mr Chet said. Prince Sihanouk and Son Sann had agreed to the proposal spelled out by Singapore on November 24.

The Khmer Rouge reply was addressed to the chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, Singapore Foreign Minister S. Dhanabalan.

Mr Chet declined comment on the Khmer Rouge reply, saying a "collective opinion" would be forthcoming from ASEAN -- linking Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- after consulations. Another Thai Foreign Ministry official, however, appeared to see the reply as a signal for the non-communist ASEAN states to step down from their role. "We feel it is not a matter for us any more, but for the three sides," the official said.

Western diplomats said they were a "little surprised" by the Khmer Rouge response, which they saw as an outright rejection, rather than an expected compromise. "It doesn't give ASEAN much to work with," said one. The ousted leadership's call for a summit was, however, seen as the expected "counter proposal." It appeared to be a clear call on ASEAN to adopt a lower profile, the diplomats said. The Khmer Rouge rejection came after Thai Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, during a visit to Beijing, sought China's influence to effect a positive response.

IENG SARY MEETS VISITING JAPANESE DIETMAN

Coalition Rejection Discussed

BK230030 Bangkok POST in English 23 Jan 82 pp 1, 20

[Excerpts] The Khmer Rouge cannot accept the Singapore proposal for a loose coalition of Kampuchean resistance groups, Democratic Kampuchea Foreign Minister Ieng Sary told a visiting Japanese member of parliament yesterday.

During a 90-minute meeting with Hideo Den of Japan's United Social Democratic Party in jungled Kampuchean territory near the Thai border yesterday afternoon, Ieng Sary said that while the coalition proposals "do not harm us," the people and army of Democratic Kampuchea do not accept the idea. However, Ieng Sary said, he did not want to close the door on a coalition, and it might be possible to hold another summit meeting among the Khmer resistance groups.

Ieng Sary reportedly told the Japanese visitor that the Khmer Rouge had "tried very hard to make a reply which would not hurt the feelings of (Singapore Deputy Premier) Rajaratnam, but accepting this proposal is not possible." He said Democratic Kampuchea's answer would not be made public, but would be made known to Mr Rajaratnam.

Further Remarks

BK240230 Bangkok POST in English 24 Jan 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Khmer Rouge forces foiled an attempt by Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin troops to cross the Thai-Kampuchean frontier to attack a guerrilla base near the border last Saturday, Democratic Kampuchea Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary told a Japanese member of parliament.

During a meeting with Hideo Den of Japan's United Social Democratic Party in a jungle base inside Kampuchea, Ieng Sary reportedly said the Khmer Rouge were engaged last week in a fierce battle with a large number of Vietnamese forces at a point about 12 kilometers from Tapprik, a small Thai village about 40 kilometres south of Aranyaprathet. He said while the fighting was in progress, about 300 Vietnamese troops tried to cross the border into Thai territory to launch flanking attacks on the guerrillas, but the bid was foiled and crushed.

Ieng Sary, who is also Democratic Kampuchean foreign minister, claimed that the Khmer Rouge had inflicted heavy casualties on the Vietnamese forces in a three-hour clash inside Kampuchea on January 19. He told the Japanese MP that Democratic Kampuchea President Khieu Samphan is still supervising combat efforts somewhere on the southwestern border, opposite the southern part of Aranyaprathet, and said the Khmer Rouge had seized control of more land and could move more freely from place to place on the eastern part of the country bordering Vietnam.

VOKD: BANGLADESH EDITOR VISITS DK AREAS

BK100918 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 9 Jan 82

[Text] On 4 January 1982 Fazalulla, deputy editor in chief of the national weekly magazine (PRITI) of Bangladesh, visited Democratic Kampuchean areas. When the guest arrived, he was welcomed by cadres of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. In the afternoon and evening of 4 January, Minister Thiounn Mumm, chairman of the State Scientific and Technical Commission, held talks and organized a party in honor of the guest in a friendly, cordial and warm atmosphere. In addition to briefing the guest on the actual situation inside the country, particularly the military situation, Thiounn Mumm, on behalf of the Democratic Kampuchean Government and people, expressed his deep gratitude, through the guest, to the friendly government and people of Bangladesh for their firm stand in support of the just struggle of the Kampuchean people against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, swallowers of territory and race exterminators.

During his stay in the Democratic Kampchea-controlled region, the friendly guest visited a number of villages, hospitals and schools. Speaking of his impressions, he said: Through this visit, we have clearly seen the concrete implementation of the new strategic policy of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. Concerning the spirit of struggle of the Democratic Kampuchean Army and our people, the guest said that although they face very difficult conditions, they are always brave. This shows their will to struggle against the Vietnamese enemy.

The guest left Democratic Kampuchea on 6 January 1982. He said: When we return to Bangladesh, we will make efforts to inform the people of Bangladesh of the actual situation that we have seen in Democratic Kampuchea and to gather more support for the struggle of the Kampuchean people.

VODK REPORTS LAO GUERRILLA BATTLE ACTIVITIES

BK130350 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 12 Jan 82

[Text] Here is a report on the battle activities of the Lao National Liberation Front [LNLF] guerrillas:

On 6 January 1982, a Vietnamese truck exploded a landmine planted by the LNLF guerrillas between (Khlem) and (Priel) villages. This vehicle was completely destroyed and five of the Vietnamese enemy were killed. On the same day, the LNLF guerrillas cut 800 meters of telephone wire between (Priel) and (Khlem) villages. Next morning, 7 January, the Vietnamese enemy came to inspect the telephone line, and stepped on landmines. Two of the enemy were killed and three other were wounded.

In sum, during these 2 days the LNLF guerrillas inflicted 10 casualties on the Vietnamese enemy and destroyed a truck.

Further Report

BK141220 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Here is a combat report from Laos:

On 10 and 17 November 1981, guerrillas of the Lao National Liberation Front (LNLF] attacked the Vietnamese enemy at a position in (Hieng) village, Soukhouma District, Champassak Province, killing three enemy troops and wounding six others. On 21 and 29 November they ambushed the Vietnamese enemy on Route 14 between Soukhouma and (That Kong) village, killing one enemy soldier and wounding five others. On 10 December a truck of the Vietnamese enemy ran over landmines planted by the LNLF guerrillas on the road leading from (Moung Mun) to (Hieng) village. The truck exploded and burned. Two enemy troops were killed and five others were wounded. On 11 December LNLF guerrillas attacked the Vietnamese enemy at a position in (Nong Tae) village, Dontalat District, Champassak Province, killing three enemy troops, wounding five others, destroying two military barracks and seizing a quantity of materiel. On 19 December the LNLF attacked the Vietnamese enemy at (Nong Choam) village in Champassak Province, killing five enemy troops and wounding two others. On 26 December the LNLF attacked the Vietnamese enemy at (Katim Rok) village, Soukhouma District, Champassak Province, killing an enemy soldier and wounding another. On 6 January 1982, a truck of the Vietnamese enemy hit landmines of the LNLF guerrillas in an area between (Phlam) and (Preal). The truck exploded and burned. Three enemy troops were killed, two others were wounded and all the materiel on the truck was destroyed.

In summary, the LNLF put 44 Vietnamese enemy troops out of action, destroyed 2 trucks, 2 military barracks and a quantity of war materiel and seized a quantity of materiel.

BORDER INCIDENT OF 18 JAN TO BE REPORTED TO UN

BK231143 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] In connection with the 18 January fighting in Kampuchea near the Thai border between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin soldiers and the Khmer Rouge, which resulted in about 110 shells landing in Thai territory, damaging a tractor and injuring a number of Thai citizens and cattle, Foreign Ministry Information Department Director General Chet Sutcharitkun and his deputy, Saowanit Khongsiri, told newsmen this morning that the Foreign Ministry will instruct Thailand's permanent representative at the United Nations to report the incident to the UN secretary general. The UN secretary general will be asked to inform the UN member countries about the incident.

According to Chet, during the past few days Vietnam has repeatedly launched slanderous propaganda against Thailand. It charged that Thailand permitted the United States to use Utaphao Airbase and that Thailand violated Kampuchea's territorial waters and airspace. These allegations are totally false. These allegations promote the suspicion that Vietnam may have unhealthy, ulterior motives against Thailand. Therefore, Thailand must be cautious in the near future, as the current situation along the Kampuchean border is relatively tense.

As for Thai-Lao relations, Chet said relations between the two countries have improved steadily following the visit to Thailand of Lao Deputy Prime Minister Phoun Sipaseut. Thai-Lao trade relations have also expanded. The Thai-Lao border committee met several times during the past 2 months and a national-level committee will meet in Vientiane in February, to help further strengthen Thai-Lao relations.

Chet said the recent visit to Burma of Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila was successful in further strengthening Thai-Burmese relations. Several issues were discussed during the visit, including: the Thai-Burmese border at the Sai River; economic issues; trade; industry; narcotics; and the Burmese ethnic minorities. The prime minister has already briefed the Thai agencies concerned regarding the narcotics and Burmese ethnic minority matters. Chet said the Burmese side understands Thailand's position and policy toward Burma.

NAVY OFFICIAL REPORTS ON BORDER SITUATION

BK221312 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Statement by Capt Prasan Chuchinda of the Royal Thai Navy on the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border in Chanthaburi and Trat Provinces -- date not given; recorded]

[Text] On 16 January at about 1500, a patrol unit of the 510th Marine-Rangers Company clashed for about 35 minutes with foreign troops in the Khlong Makham area, Khlong Yai District, Trat Province. The enemy finally pulled back into Kampuchea. Enemy casualties were believed to be high, whereas the Thai side had one soldier wounded.

On 7 January at 2330, the enemy opened fire on the Thai Marine Task Force Unit 182 in Ben Hat Lak, Khlong Yai District, Trat Province. Thai border patrol boats provided support fire at 2350, forcing the enemy to stop its harassment. The firing lasted for about 20 minutes and caused no casualties on the Thai side.

Shells fired from across the border landed in Thailand on two occasions. On 8 January at 0945, troops stationed at a Vietnamese-Heng Samrin post inside Kampuchea, opposite Khao Chang, fired 82-mm mortar shells into Thailand. Two bombs hit Ban Phu Lamchiak in Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province. There were no casualties. On 11 January at 1900, fighting erupted inside Kampuchea close to the Thai border, and as a result 10 mortar shells landed inside Thailand, in Ban Klong Muang, Muang District, Trat Province. No injuries were reported.

A group of 154 illegal immigrants arrived in Thailand recently. Of these, 117 were pushed back, whereas 37 were kept under detention. On 25 December 1981, a group of 117 Vietnamese boat people -- comprising 48 men, 29 women and 40 children -- arrived on a 10-meter-long boat in Laem Ngop District, Trat Province. They were expelled from Thailand by Thai patrol boats. On 26 December 1981 at 0530 hours, another group of boat people arrived in Ban Khlong Muang, Muang District, Trat Province. They were held under detention pending interrogation.

SRV SCORED ON ISSUE OF FOREIGN MILITARY BASES

BK240759 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Foreign Military Bases in Vietnam"]

[Text] It is well-known that for several years now Soviet military aircraft and naval ships, including submarines, have been using bases in Vietnam as fueling stops, for refitting, to take on provisions and as an intermediate facility on journeys between the Soviet Far East and going on station in the Indian Ocean. Previously, the Soviet Union could only patrol the Pacific from its Far Eastern ports and could only patrol the Indian Ocean by sending its navy via the Mediterranean.

The military alliance between Vietnam and the Soviet Union, which is tremendously dependent on military and economic aid given to the former by the latter, has opened the way for the Soviet Union to obtain the use of such bases in Vietnam. This must, of course, be of great benefit to the Soviet Union, as the bases provide a convenient half-way point between the Soviet Far East and the Indian Ocean, allowing increased and continuous Soviet presence in those two areas as well as in the South China Sea and Southeast Asia.

Given this, why, then is Vietnam making such a hue and cry over the news that American reconnaissance planes have, from time to time, stopped and refueled in Thailand? That the planes refuel in Thailand is not a regular practice, but when they meet with strong headwinds, for instance, and fuel becomes low on their trips between the Philippines and Diego Garcia, they are given permission to land in Thailand to refuel. The planes are not armed, and there is very little that is military about it. But the VIETNAMESE NEWS AGENCY and other mass media preferred to ignore this and chose to cry wolf, alleging that the United States is opening bases in Thailand and making the ridiculous claim that the whole Vietnam war was starting all over again.

The reasoning, if any, behind this Vietnamese vitriolic outburst can only be guessed at, but it is fairly obvious that the Vietnamese leadership, if not the whole bureaucracy, is still thinking as if today was still the 1950's and 1960's. They are describing scenarios and using terms which may have been of relevance or raised fears 15 to 20 years ago, but are completely out of context today. Also, [word indistinct] small countries have learned how costly it is to have too close a relationship or over-reliance on outside powers and are trying to avoid it by promoting cooperation among themselves or trying to establish zones of peace free from major-power rivalries. The Vietnamese Government chooses to align itself with an outside power, giving it bases in its territory. The fact that the outside power has an ongoing dispute with another major power in the area further raises tensions in the region. As a result, there are armed conflicts, armies mass on borders and shrill accusations, all very reminiscent of times long past, namely, the cold war.

Before pointing an accusing finger at others, Vietnam should first take a close look at herself. Unlike in Vietnam, there are no foreign bases in Thailand.

PRASONG COMMENTS ON SRV FORCES IN KAMPUCHEA

BK250200 Bangkok POST in English 25 Jan 82 p 5

[By Editor in Chief The Chongkhadikit]

[Text] The Vietnamese invasion forces, in the third month of their third dry-season offensive in Kampuchea, are suffering from a 30-percent desertion rate, Squadron Leader Prasong Sunsiri, secretary general of the National Security Council, reported yesterday. The invaders are also plagued by serious food shortages, and Vietnamese as well as Heng Samrin troops are being forced to catch fish in the Tonle Sap and plant rice, Sqd Ldr Prasong said. "It's a no-win situation in Kampuchea for the adversaries in the Kampuchean conflict," he commented.

Both communist and non-communist patriotic Khmer forces are pursuing active resistance, making it increasingly difficult for the Vietnamese to make any headway in the current offensive. "It is important to note that the resistance is continuing, despite the fact that no coalition government has yet been formed," Sqd Ldr Prasong said. He claimed that reports that the Khmer Rouge were not ready to accept the Singapore proposal of a coalition government "should not be considered a serious matter for us."

The formation of a coalition "is an internal affair of the Kampuchean factions themselves," he noted. The other two factions, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front of former Premier Son Sann and the Moulinaka of former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk, had agreed in principle to the coalition proposal. Thailand "should not involve itself in this business," the security chief said.

"We should be most concerned with the basics of the Kampuchean situation. We want the Vietnamese forces to withdraw from Kampuchea. We want the ad hoc committee set up by the international conference on Kampuchea (ICK) to get to work urgently to bring this about," he said. "We should work closely with our allies in ASEAN to expedite implementation of the United Nations General Assembly resolution on Kampuchea (which calls for Vietnamese withdrawal and UN-supervised general elections. We don't wish to have the Soviets strengthen their hold on Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. What we should be especially concerned about is the possibility of the spilling over of the fighting in Kampuchea into our territory," Sqd Ldr Prasong added.

The NSC secretary general claimed that the Vietnamese and Heng Samrin forces had been unable to pin down the Khmer Rouge and other resistance forces. The 30-percent desertion "has occurred mainly in forces comprising south Vietnamese, who do not know why they are fighting in Kampuchea and who are worried over the situation of their families in Vietnam," he explained.

Thailand and its ASEAN partners "have to make those countries which continue to aid Vietnam economically understand that they are actually making it possible for them to prolong their aggression against Kampuchea," Sqd Ldr Prasong declared.

PREM VISITS BORDER UNITS IN PRACHIN BURI

BK221512 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon and Assistant Army Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlangek, who is also acting commander of the 1st Army Region, today inspected border operational units in Prachin Buri Province. The two, accompained by a number of officials, visited the Task Force Unit, 2d Cavalry Division, at Ban Sala Lamduan, Sa Kaeo District, Prachin Buri Province, the 9th Infantry Regiment and the 19th Infantry Regiment of the 9th Army Division. The party was welcomed by Maj Gen Somkhit Chongphayuha, commander of the 9th Army Division.

The prime minister addressed the soldiers, saying that their duty at the eastern border is very important for national security. He said the current visit by himself and the assistant army commander in chief is to boost their morale. He said there are currently several problems that require the government's attention, including the problem of the people's poverty. The government needs cooperation from all sectors -- including that of the soldiers themselves -- in order to solve these problems. He said that the soldiers, through their service on the border, are contributing to the improvement of the people's living conditions. Because of the soldiers, the people can have peace and can pursue their livelihood and earn their living normally. The people can thus improve their living conditions. At the same time, soldiers provide help and advice to the people.

Concerning the border situation, he said: Everyone is aware that fighting continues in our neighboring countries, and this can have repercussions in our own country. The prime minister said he believed all unit commanders are aware of this fact and are prepared for any eventuality. He appealed to all soldiers to perform their duty attentively, strengthen unity within their ranks and ignore instigators, slanders and all types of rumors. The prime minister is confident that all soldiers have good judgment and can distinguish right from wrong and withstand all types of attacks.

After visiting the troops in Prachin Buri Province, the prime minister and his party left for border units operating in Chanthaburi Province.

SITTHI DISCUSSES DIRECTION OF FOREIGN POLICY

BK130211 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 13 Jan 82 p 4

[By the NATION Political Desk]

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon may be making a trip to Western Europe, while Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila is planning a tour of the Middle East in the new year. "Our indulgence and concentration on the Kampuchean problem might have reached a saturation point," Sitthi told the NATION in an exclusive interview on Monday [11 January] -- three days before he is due to visit Burma, the first after the change of top leadership there.

Kampuchea, of course, will continue to be the dominant issue of Thailand's foreign policy this year. But the foreign minister believes that there should be less public discussions on the issue, at least for the time being. "I have told my people in the ministry to lay off the Kampuchean issue for a while to give us some breathing space. This year, we should concentrate in helping the country sell more agricultural products through our political contacts," Sitthi said.

The foreign minister plans to visit several major Arab countries to whip up interest in a new trading line Thailand wants to pursue: The oil-rich Middle East countries should pay more agricultural products badly needed by Third World countries in Africa. [sentence as published] "But we have also discovered that to get the oil-rich countries in the Middle East to help pay for goods for the poor countries in Africa, we need to get to know the brokers in Western Europe. That's why we would have to get our embassies abroad everywhere to get up and do their share of the work," Sitthi said.

The foreign minister is a member of the team of "economic ministers" -- and has been encouraged to join in the offensive to sell more of Thai products abroad. "Political buying could also come into play at times," Sitthi said, adding that Thailand would be selling to all countries, regardless of differences in political ideologies. "Poland, for example, has asked to buy 200,000 tons of maize from us. We have yet to make up our mind -- not because of political considerations -- but because we couldn't agree on their proposal to barter it for fertilizer," Sitthi said.

Thailand sold a large quantity of maize to the Soviet Union last year despite the American grain embargo then. In fact, the Soviet Union became the biggest maize buyer last year. It also, for the first time, bought a reasonable amount of tapioca pellets last year. "The United States may have imposed economic sanctions against the Soviet Union over the imposition of martial law in Poland. But we haven't been asked to join the sacntions. As long as there was no foreign interference in Poland and no further oppression of human rights, we wouldn't mind trading with that country," Sitthi said.

A Thai trade mission, to be led by Director General of Foreign Trade Mr Phat Itsarasena, is due to visit Laos in March. The trip, earlier set for this month, had been postponed after the Commerce Ministry issued a list of goods banned for exports for security and strategic reasons. One senior official said: "We asked the Commerce Ministry to look at the list of controlled goods for export again with a view to reducing the items. But, for some inexplicable reasons, the list, which once contained about 200 items, had swollen by 30 to 40 items. So, perhaps, some misunderstanding has taken place..." Thailand has been trying to develop closer relations with Laos on all fronts. "There are, as you can see, no untoward incidents on the Mekong River. That already is a good sign. We have been exchanging sports teams. And soon a team of senior officials will be visiting Laos," Sitthi said.

The recent visit by Lao Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut might not have represented a breakthrough. The Russian and Vietnamese presence remains strong in Laos. "But we could provide Laos another option by cultivating more friendly relations," the foreign minister said. The national border committee on the Thai side, headed by Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot, may be also heading across the Mekong River to talk to the Lao counterparts for a more active trading relationship.

Generally, [Foreign] Minister Sitthi said that the emphasis of the foreign policy in the new year would be to place Thailand in a more favourable light abroad. "Apart from the regional problems with which our foreign policy must inevitably cope, the new thrust would be to get into political channels to sell our agricultural products to shore up our economy," the minister said.

Premier Prem will be leading another business team to Western Europe later this year to give another boost to Thailand's image and to stress Thailand's launching of the eastern seaboard scheme as well as the Fifth 5-Year Development Plan. "I don't know whether you can call it a way of de-politicizing foreign policy," a senior official said the other day. "But certainly, the direction would be to get our foreign policy to supplement, to a larger extent, our economic situation. What used to be thought of as two separate things must be pulled together..."

POST: INSURGENTS ATTACK RANGER CAMP 20 JAN

BK220304 Bangkok POST in English 22 Jan 82 p 3

[Excerpt] An estimated 100 communist insurgents launched a fierce attack on a Ranger camp in Huai Yot District of Trang Province on Wednesday, hours after insurgents sabotaged a telephone relay station in the same district, Fourth Army Region spokesman Colonel Thammarak Itsarangkun Na Ayutthaya said yesterday. He said the insurgents shelled Camp 418 with rockets and grenades, but the army-trained Rangers immediately counter-attacked.

The Rangers called in helicopter gunships and OV-10 counter-insurgency aircraft to strafe the encircling insurgents below, and after about two hours the insurgents fled into the jungles with a number of casualties, he said. The Rangers suffered no casualties, he added. Before the attack on the Ranger camp, another group of insurgents seized a hilltop telephone microwave repeater station and set it ablaze, causing damage estimated at about eight million baht.

Fourth Army Region Commander Lt Gen Han Linanon yesterday flew by helicopter to inspect the damaged station.

Further Report on Attack

BK240458 Bangkok POST in English 24 Jan 82 p 2

[Text] Trang -- At least two troopers died and several more were wounded when government reinforcements Friday fought a fierce battle in a bid to rescue about 20 Rangers and soldiers trapped in an outpost by communist insurgents. Military sources said communist groundfire was so intense that an army helicipter carrying the reinforcement unit was unable to land, forcing the troopers to leap out while the aircraft was hoving in mid-air.

Head of the unit, Lt Wichor Chanhong, and a subordinate, Cpl Danai Fuksetti, were shot and seriously wounded while jumping out of the chopper. Only after another helicopter gunship arrived at the scene to strafe suspected communist positions could the chopper land and pick up the wounded. Fighting raged Friday as troops still could not break through the communist siege to reach the trapped Rangers and soldiers.

Military sources said Lt Gen Han Linanon, commander of the Fourth Army Region, has ordered more troops to the fighting scene on the Banthat Mountain.

SUPREME COMMAND REPORTS ATTACK ON 'TERRORISTS'

BK250805 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] The following is a report by the Supreme Command Information Office on clashes between officials and terrorists and southern separatists.

On 19 January at 0730, a group of 27 members of police and volunteer forces clashed with about 30 southern separatists belonging to the Dolo Talo group in Yaha District, Yala Province. The clash lasted about 20 minutes. Officials captured one camp of 20 structures. The entire camp was burned down by the officials, who suffered no losses. Several members of the separatist group were wounded, and were dragged away.

On 19 January at 1000, a police task force of the provincial police command in Chaiyaphum Province clashed with about 10 terrorists in Tambon Non Kok, Kasetsombun District, Chaiyaphum Province. The clash lasted for 20 minutes. As a result, police forces captured the terrorist base and some materiel. Several of the terrorists were wounded, since they left traces of blood. The officials suffered no losses.

SRV SAID TO AGREE TO U.S. DELEGATION ON MIA'S

BK231350 Hong Kong AFP in English 1340 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, 23 Jan (AFP) -- Vietnam has agreed to admit a delegation from the U.S. Defense Department to discuss the matter of 2,500 U.S. servicemen still missing from the war in Indochina, an authoritative source said today. The source gave no indication as to the date of the visit or the level of the U.S. delegation. It was also not known when the United States made the request to discuss the issue.

A group of three U.S. veterans went to Vietnam last month to discuss the possibility of accounting for the missing-in-action and the effects of Agent Orange, a chemical used as a defoliant by the U.S. military. Vietnam Veterans of America, a U.S. aid group for military men who served in Vietnam, has estimated that 2,500 U.S. servicemen are still unaccounted for since the United States pulled out of Vietnam in 1973, after nearly 13 years of fighting. All are feared dead.

The Vietnamese source said Vietnam's attitude towards missing military personnel is "humanitarian," but he added that Washington was "deforming that policy for its hostile plots in Vietnam." The same source said the U.S. administration had asked to send a delegation. "Faithful to its humanitarian policies, Vietnam has accepted this proposal," he said. "The success of this visit depends on the American side."

ORDER OF LENIN CONFERRED ON TOP LEADERS

Award to Le Duan

BK241503 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 24 Jan 82

["Text" of the order of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium conferring the Order of Lenin on Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee -- date not given]

[Text] The Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet hereby confers the Order of Lenin on Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee, in recognition of his great services to the communist movement and the consolidation of socialism and peace and his active contribution to developing and strengthening the fraternal friendship and all-round cooperation between the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples.

[Signed] Brezhnev, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium; Georgadze, secretary of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium

Award to Truong Chinh

BK241508 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 24 Jan 82

["Text" of the order of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium conferring the Order of Lenin on Truong Chinh, chairman of the Council of State -- date not given]

[Text] The USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium hereby confers the Order of Lenin on Comrade Truong Chinh, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the SRV Council of State, in recognition of his active participation in the revolutionary movement and his great contribution to developing and strengthening the fraternal friendship and all-round cooperation between the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples.

[Signed] Brezhnev, chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium; Georgadze, secretary of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium

BEIJING SEEN TRYING TO ANNEX LAO TERRITORY

OW221215 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1200 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Commentary by Dao Loc Binh and Nam Hai: "Expansionist China's Plot to Annex the LPDR"]

[Excerpt] The Maoist Chinese rulers have long dreamed of annexing Laos and using it as a springboard to invade other countries in Indochina and Southeast Asia. In the past few years, in collusion with the imperialists and their henchmen, the traitorous reactionary Beijing authorities have frenziedly opposed Vietnam and Kampuchea while stepping up their activities against the Lao revolution. Along with waging a war of destruction in Vietnam and a special war in Kampuchea, they have chosen to conduct a general war of sabotage against Laos in accordance with the "home-boring termite" strategy. This war against Laos is characterized by the combination of increasing military pressure and preparing for an aggressive war from the outside and intensifying infiltration operations, building bases and increasing possibilities of creating armed subversion and rebellion on the inside and the combination of military and sabotage activities in order to achieve a counterrevolutionary peace, if possible.

The Chinese rulers think that, with this war of sabotage and the close coordination of these perfidious strategies, they can easily annex Laos, detach this country from the militant alliance bloc of the three Indochinese countries and consolidate their strategic position in Indochina and Southeast Asia. They hope that their actions will be able to cover up their aggressive and expansionist schemes, deceive public opinion and avoid protests at home and abroad.

The reactionary Beijing rulers' five main measures to achieve their wicked strategy are as follows:

1. To constantly exert military pressure on the border, gradually encroach on land and cause internal rebellion;
2. To resort to every maneuver to disrupt the Lao people's party organization, administration and armed forces;
3. To undermine production, stage an economic blockade and apply economic warfare measures to disturb all social activities;
4. To feverishly gather all Lao exiles, rebels and reactionaries and turn them into lackeys;
5. To use decadent, reactionary culture in coordination with psychological and espionage warfare to incite the Laotians to flee their country.

The following are some concrete facts:

Along the 400-km Sino-Lao border in northern Laos, the Beijing reactionaries have permanently massed a fairly large army composed of 11 army corps, 3 divisions of the Yunnan military region and detachments and units called mountain border guards, not including thousands of rebels under the command of Vang Pao and Kong Le, fostered and trained on Chinese territory. Deployed close to the border to exert military pressure, these forces are prepared to attack Laos and carry out provocations and harassment in border areas. According to many of our Vietnamese comrades, only by visiting these areas can one comprehend the Beijing expansionists' wicked, cunning and brazen scheme of annexing Lao territory. This is what they have done in the northern part of our country. In fact, Chinese troops have gradually encroached on and occupied heights in Laos one after another, built fortifications after occupying these heights and opened roads leading to them in order to widen troop deployment.

In certain areas, instead of sending troops to immediately occupy land, the Beijing reactionaries have resorted to many maneuvers such as setting up teams to infiltrate villages and hamlets of Lao ethnic minority nationalities and to win the local people's sympathy by exchanging rice, salt, cloth, medicine and goods with them.

They have gradually sent Chinese nationals to these villages and hamlets to organize so-called grassroots-level organizations and have used their men to control the local people and spread counterpropaganda against the lines and policies of the Lao party and state. They have sought ways to slander and harm those who oppose them. They have forced the Lao people in certain areas to learn Chinese. In a few villages, such as the (Xi Ca Go) and (Bou Tho) villages, and in a number of hamlets in (Vo Tho) village, (Nhac U) District, Phong Saly Province, they have established household registration books, turning the entire population in these areas into Chinese residents and drawing new geographical maps, regarding these Lao villages and hamlets as part of Chinese territory. Along with sending rangers and scouts to carry out reconnaissance and sabotage activities, they have sought by all ways and means to exchange their goods for buffaloes and horses, thus depriving Lao rural areas of all draft power. They have also exchanged flintlock guns for buffaloes and have incited the gun owners to join the rebels and later stage revolts.

Along the 1,500-km Lao-Thai border in western Laos, the Beijing reactionaries have colluded with the U.S. imperialists, the Bangkok authorities and Japan to oppose and undermine the Lao revolution through various perfidious maneuvers. They have set up dozens of bases and training camps along the Thai-Lao border to foster and train rebels, exiles and reactionaries to carry out sabotage activities in Laos.

According to the U.S. press, in October 1981 the reactionary Bangkok authorities agreed to allow Beijing to use 10 military airfields in eastern Thailand for providing supplies to the rebels and its lackeys. To direct the activities of the Pol Pot remnant troops at the Kampuchean border and of the rebels in southern Laos, Beijing has built a base on Thai soil close to the Lao-Thai-Kampuchean border area where dozens of Chinese military advisers are present. The Beijing rulers have also used scores of Chinese capitalist trading corporations in Thailand to oppose and undermine the Lao revolution. They have smuggled goods into Laos with a view to sabotaging production, devaluating the kep -- Lao currency -- and distrubing social activities in this country. They have organized contraband traffic teams to buy up teakwood, gold, coffee, cinchona bark and other precious natural resources from Laos. To internally disrupt the armed forces, administration and party of Laos, they have resorted to their familiar manuever of hurling slanders, sowing division and using money, goods and beautiful girls to buy off and incite the Laotians to flee abroad. The Western press has mentioned the so-called Lao refugee camps on Thai soil. The Beijing rulers' henchmen have worked their way into Lao localities to incite the local people to flee the country at the risk of their lives and live in these camps. According to still imcomplete figures, in 1981 the Beijing rulers picked up more than 3,000 Lao people from these refugee camps and sent them to China for training and to reinforce the rebel units of Vang Pao and Kong Le.

Also in 1981 they paid special attention to conducting propaganda campaigns to sow division among the three Indochinese peoples and between Laos and the Soviet Union and other socialist states.

IRAQI VICE PRESIDENT MA'RUF CONCLUDES VISIT

Leaves Ho Chi Minh City

OW222118 Hanoi VNA in English 1541 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 22 -- Iraqi Vice-President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party left Ho Chi Minh City this morning, concluding a four-day official friendship visit to Vietnam. The Iraqi guests were seen off at Tan Son Nhut Airport by Foreign Trade Minister Le Khac; Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son; Le Quang Chanh, deputy mayor of Ho Chi Minh City; Pham Van Ba, vice-president of the city Fatherland Front Committee; and others.

Text of Communique

BK230614 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] The following is the joint communique on Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf's visit to Vietnam.

At the invitation of the SRV Council of State, Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf, vice president of the Republic of Iraq, paid an official friendship visit to the SRV from 19 to 25 January 1982. His party included Hasan 'Ali al-Amiri, member of the Revolutionary Command Council and minister of trade, and many other senior officials. Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party were given a warm, grand welcome as proof of the Vietnamese-Iraqi friendship.

During the visit Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party paid a floral tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum and visited the house and office of the late president. President of the Council of State Truong Chinh cordially received Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his party.

Council of State Vice President Nguyen Huu Tho and Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong held talks with Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf. The two sides exchanged views on promoting the friendship and cooperation between the two countries, and on international matters of common concern, especially those related to the Arab world, Southeast Asia and the Nonaligned Movement. The talks took place in an atmosphere of cordiality, friendship and mutual understanding.

Nguyen Co Thach, member of the Vietnamese Communist Party Central Committee and minister for foreign affairs, and Le Khac, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee and minister for foreign trade, discussed with Hasan 'Ali al-Amiri, member of the Iraqi Revolutionary Command Council and minister of trade, measures to promote relations between the two countries, and the Nonaligned Movement.

The Vietnamese side highly values the achievements of the Republic of Iraq under the leadership of President Saddam Husayn in line with the principles and objectives pursued by the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party to effect socialist changes in conformity with the Iraqi people's aspiration, and Iraq's active role in the struggle against imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism, Zionism and racism.

The Iraqi side highly values the Vietnamese people's historic victories in their struggle against colonialism and imperialism, to achieve national reunification and advance the whole country to socialism, thereby making a worthy contribution to all nations' struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

The Iraqi side reiterates support and assistance for the Vietnamese people in the new revolutionary stage under the leadership of the VCP, headed by General Secretary Le Duan, in successfully building socialism and defending national sovereignty.

The Vietnamese side once again sincerely thanks the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party, the government and the people of Iraq for their warm support and assistance to the Vietnamese people in the anti-U.S. resistance for national salvation and in the construction and defense of socialist Vietnam.

The two sides express satisfaction at the development of the relations between Vietnam and Iraq in the interests of the two countries. On questions of bilateral relations, the two sides affirm that they will strictly adhere to the principles of the UN Charter and the Nonaligned Movement. They also express determination and wish to continue developing and expanding their relations in all fields in the common interests of the two countries.

The two sides inform each other of economic and trade relations between the two countries and express satisfaction at their developments. The two sides exchange views on consolidating and developing cooperation between the two countries in these fields by increasing the volume of trade exchanges and by diversifying and speeding up economic relations. To this end, the two sides agree to reconvene in Hanoi this year the joint committee in the framework of the "agreement on trade exchanges and economic, scientific and technical cooperation."

The Iraqi side informed the Vietnamese side about the status of the Iran-Iraq conflict and efforts by international parties concerned to secure a ceasefire and settle the conflict through peaceful negotiation.

The Vietnamese side takes note of Iraq's cooperation with international parties concerned in achieving a fair, honorable solution to the conflict with a guarantee for the legitimate interests of the parties concerned.

On the situation of the Arab world, the two sides vehemently condemn the racial Zionist clique for its aggression against the Arab people and affirm that only by completely and unconditionally withdrawing Zionist forces from the occupied Palestinian and other Arab territories and restoring to the Palestinian people their inalienable national rights, including the right to return to their country, the right to self-determination and the right to set up an independent, sovereign Palestinian state on their homeland, can a fair, lasting peace be obtained. The two sides reiterate full support for the Palestinian people's struggle to recover their territories under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization, their sole legitimate representative.

The two sides recall the resolution of the UN General Assembly which describes Zionism as a form of racism. They hold that to oppose and eliminate racism in all forms is the responsibility of all nations. The two sides strongly condemn the decision of the illegal Zionist entity to annex the City of Jerusalem and the Golan Heights, considering this as a violation of international law and all UN resolutions. The two sides call upon countries in the world to take economic and military sanctions against the Zionist entity.

The Iraqi side attaches a high value to Vietnam's positive stand towards the Arab peoples, especially that of the Palestinian people. The two sides denounce the Zionist clique's repeated aggression against Lebanon, considering it as part of the imperialist scheme to destroy the Palestinian people's resistance, in violation of Lebanon's sovereignty, territorial integrity and unity.

The two sides vehemently denounce the imperialist forces' plots to interfere in the internal affairs of the Gulf countries, to pose a threat to their security and to seek military superiority and jeopardize peace, stability and development in the region. The two sides are opposed to all aggressive alliances and are for a guarantee to peace and security in the Gulf region. The two sides affirm that to defend the security in that region is the responsibility of all countries there, without outside intervention.

The SRV strongly condemns the terrorist Zionist attacks on the Iraqi nuclear installation, considering this as a criminal act to prevent the Arab and other developing countries from exercising their right to use nuclear technology for peaceful purposes. The Iraqi side welcomes this stand of the SRV.

On the Southeast Asian situation, the two sides strongly condemn U.S. imperialism and international reaction for mounting an anti-Vietnam campaign and affirm that the questions concerning relations among the Southeast Asian countries must be solved by the countries themselves on the basis of equality and mutual respect, without imposing one's view on another, and without outside interference. In this spirit, the Iraqi side highly values all constructive efforts at dialogues between the countries in the region in order to solve the matters regarding their relations, thus maintaining peace, stability and cooperation in the region.

The two sides reaffirm full support for the struggle of the Asian, African and Latin American peoples against imperialism, for national independence and social progress.

The two sides condemn the racist and apartheid regimes in Africa. They call on all progressive countries to join in a common action to stop the illegal South African racist administration's suppression of the peoples of South Africa and Namibia.

The two sides support the turning of the Indian Ocean and adjoining areas regions into regions of peace free of imperialist influence and without imperialist bases, in the interests of the people in the regions.

The two sides note with satisfaction that the Nonaligned Movement has made active contributions to the struggle against imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism, Zionism and racism, for political independence and economic sovereignty, thus contributing in a major way to world peace and security. They reaffirm further cooperation with other countries in the movement in preparing for the success of the seventh summit of the Nonaligned Movement to be held in Baghdad this year.

The two sides exchange views on international economic problems and stress the necessity to establish international economic relations on a just, equitable basis, for the advancement of the developing countries and against control and exploitation by imperialist monopoly and for a new world economic order a defined in the resolution of various nonaligned meetings.

The Vietnamese side highly values the Iraqi initiative to found a long-term international fund to help the developing countries cope with the consequences of inflation, which will consist of contributions by all advanced industrial countries according to the rate of inflation exported to the developing countries every year, and also of contributions by oil-exporting countries proportional to increases in the prices of oil exported to the developing countries.

Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf sincerely thanked the Council of State and the people of Vietnam for their warm welcome and hospitality to him and his entourage on their visit to Vietnam.

On behalf of the Government of the Republic of Iraq, Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf invited Vice President of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam Nguyen Huu Tho to visit Iraq. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

COMMUNIQUE ON 22 JAN COUNCIL OF STATE SESSION

BK221521 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] The Council of State issued the following communique today:

On 22 January 1982 the Council of State held a regular session under the chairmanship of Chairman Truong Chinh. Attending was Hoang Truong Minh, chairman of the National Assembly's Nationalities Committee.

1. The Council of State reviewed the results of the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly and unanimously observed that the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly had concluded with fine success, that all the National Assembly deputies had worked in an intensive, scrupulous and democratically-minded manner, and that the Nationalities Committee and various standing committees of the National Assembly had made great efforts to prepare for the session.

2. After hearing Minister of Justice Phan Hien report on the 10 December 1981 SRV-USSR agreement on judicial and legal cooperation and after hearing Tran Quang Huy, chairman of the National Assembly's Legislative Committee, express his views, the Council of State unanimously voted to ratify the agreement.

3. After hearing the views of the chairman of the National Assembly's Legislative Committee, the Council of State decided on a program for legislative activities regarding the preparation of decrees for the first half of 1982.

4. As recommended by the chairman of the Council of State, the Council of State decided to appoint Maj Gen Nguyen Huan, chief judge of the Central Military Court, to the post of deputy chief judge of the People's Supreme Court. It also named 16 people's jurors for the People's Supreme Court.

BRIBES TAKEN TO FASLIFY DATA ON NEW RECRUITS

BK121004 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 20 Dec 81 p 4

[VNA report]

[Text] The military court of the 5th Military Region recently held an open trial to try 23 persons on charges of receiving bribes, acting as intermediators and offering money to officials in order to keep themselves from being drafted into military service.

Taking advantage of their duty to check the physical fitness of newly recruited soldiers after each period of training, since August 1980 a number of doctors working with the army, namely, Dang The Nhuong, Nguyen Duc Chau, Thong My and Dr Nguyen Huy Phuong, head of the physical fitness reinvestigation team from Quang Nam-Danang Province, had examined a number of newly recruited soldiers (among them many recent draft dodgers) and claimed that these soldiers' health was below the health criteria specified by the army. These officers made this claim in order to receive bribes from the soldiers.

Using their various meticulous, dangerous and systematic tricks to receive bribes, these masterminds and their accomplices examined hundreds of newly recruited soldiers and listed them as below the health criteria. They then signed documents to release these soldiers to return to their localities.

Based on state regulations concerning punishment to be imposed on corrupt officials and considering the nature and the seriousness of crimes committed by these defendants, the military court of the 5th Military Region sentenced the masterminds as follows: Dang The Nhuong to 11 years imprisonment; Nguyen Huy Phuong, 10 years; Thong My, 8 years; Nguyen Duc Chau and Tran Huy Can, 7 years each. Their accomplices and those who acted as intermediators to contact the newly recruited soldiers or their families to receive bribes, which include Hoang Anh Can, Nguyen Quang, Le Xuan Ninh, Bui Van Chien, Lam Phu Thanh, Pham Ngoc Huy, Do Van Tinh and Nguyen Viet Hoang, were sentenced to 2 to 6 years imprisonment.

The others who were involved in the receiving or delivery of the bribe money or used money to buy and corrupt officials in order to keep themselves or their sons from being drafted into military service were all sentenced to imprisonment. All the money and properties relating to this case were confiscated.

NHAN DAN EXAMINES 1982 GRAIN PRODUCTION TASKS

BK51124 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 4 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 5 January editorial: "The Grain Production Front"]

[Text] Grain production is the primary task under the 1982 plan as well as the Third 5-Year Plan. In 1982 we must strive to achieve the production target of 16 million tons of grain converted to paddy equivalent -- that is, an increase of 1 million tons over 1981, the year with the highest grain output ever -- so as to meet domestic demands for grain.

To fulfill this large and urgent task, we must bring into play the aggregate strength of the entire country and each locality, each grassroots unit. Every sector must make an effort to support agriculture, especially grain production. Every locality must strive to meet its own demands for grain by adopting a rational crop cultivation pattern, stepping up production and applying appropriate measures to regulate grain consumption. The district is the basic economic unit best equipped to utilize optimally its workforce and land. Therefore, it must assume responsibility for and devote its resources to resolving the food problem and producing increasingly larger amounts of marketable grain.

The Mekong Delta provinces and Hai Hung, Thai Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Ha Bac, Nghia Binh and Phu Khanh Provinces must further step up grain production, increase the volume of marketable grain, collect increasing amounts of grain, and always fulfill their obligation to the rest of the country. Other agricultural provinces must make an effort to meet their own demands for grain at all costs and strive to contribute eventually to meeting the needs of the entire country. The state will only supply grain to major cities, concentrated industrial zones, the armed forces, and areas exclusively devoted to the cultivation of industrial and special crops, salt production and fishery.

The agricultural production plan of each locality and each primary installation must be formulated positively and scientifically to suit local conditions. It must contain effective measures. The plan of each primary installation must primarily reflect a balanced ratio of rice to secondary food crops. We must exert every effort to expand the rice area to the greatest extent in each locality. At the same time, we must quickly develop the secondary food crop areas, using the types of crops suitable to the conditions of each locality. Production must be coupled with processing in order to increase the percentage of secondary food crops in the crop cultivation pattern and in the diets of the people.

Our potential to increase the yield of rice and secondary food crops is still great even when industry has not exerted much influence. The average yield of rice and secondary food crops per hectare throughout the country equals only half of that of advanced units. The main guideline for quickly increasing the volume of grain production must be intensive cultivation. We must combine the managerial mechanism to stimulate the labor zeal of producers with the uniform application of technical innovations to production. By doing so, we will increase productivity and production volumes.

The state will ensure that such necessary materials as fertilizer, insecticide, fuel, oil, electricity, water, plowing implements and agricultural product processing tools are provided for agricultural production. It must also secure favorable conditions for studying and generalizing the application of scientific and technical innovations to agricultural production.

The most effective use of material facilities on hand presently is the vital motto of action. The slogan of struggle for each cooperative and each production unit now should be that with the same unit of materials as before, the largest amount of products must be turned out.

The correct implementation of technical regulations and labor organization and the linking of the producers' responsibility to the finished products are the measures to secure success. The struggle on the grain production front should be organized well at the grassroots level throughout the country in order to create a seething revolutionary mass movement to bring about increasingly greater results.

PHAM VAN DONG VISITS YOUTH NEWSPAPER OFFICE

BK111011 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 10 Jan 82

[From the 10 January press review]

[Text] Today's papers front-page a photo of and a report on Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong's visit to the office of the weekly THIEU NIEN TIEN PHONG [VANGUARD TEENAGERS], where he talked with the teenagers who are Uncle Ho's good nephews and nieces and whose good deeds were publicized by the paper in 1981. Le Tran, editor in chief of the weekly, briefed Chairman Pham Van Dong on the achievements which its editorial staff scored in 1981.

After Comrade Le Tran's briefing, Chairman Pham Van Dong praised the paper's achievements, and said: As we are still experiencing difficulties concerning newsprint, the paper must exert greater efforts to progress. Specifically, it must improve the quality of its contents by publishing articles that are suited to the teenagers' level of knowledge and which meet their demands. The paper is a sharp tool to help educate the younger generation.

Dealing with the task of educating teenagers outside schools, the chairman stressed the need to organize a network of teenagers' houses from the central level down to villages and wards. Along with school and family education, teenagers' houses must operate satisfactorily, creating conditions for teenagers to have places of study and training so that they will become comprehensively developed citizens. Because the state is still encountering many difficulties, the building of these teenagers' houses is mainly contingent on the people's contributions. Even teenagers can make their own contributions by, for example, collecting scrap paper and paper-making materials and raising livestock. But these things must be organized into movements in which teenagers will participate voluntarily and enthusiastically. They should not be forced to join these movements.

DO MUOI RECEIVES MONGOLIAN BANKING DELEGATION

OW131614 Hanoi VNA in English 1506 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan. 13 -- Do Muoi, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee, and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, received here today the delegation of the State Bank of Mongolia headed by its president, G. Huderchuluun.

The delegation arrived here on January 7 at the invitation of Nguyen Duy Gia, general secretary of the State Bank of Vietnam.

INDIAN AMBASSADOR CALLS ON PHAM VAN DONG

OW021544 Hanoi VNA in English 1507 GMT 2 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 2 -- Kuldip Shadap, Indian ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Vietnam, on December 31 paid a courtesy call on Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong. The Vietnamese Government leader had a cordial talk with the Indian diplomat.

KAMPUCHEAN PROPAGANDA DELEGATION ENDS VISIT

OW171604 Hanoi VNA in English 1529 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 17 -- A delegation of the Propaganda and Education Committee of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party, led by its president, Nhem Rieng, left here today.

The delegation had made a speaking tour in Vietnam on the occasion of the third anniversary of the People's Republic of Kampuchea. Before its departure the delegation was received by Hoang Tung, member of Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam and head of the party's Commission for Propaganda and Education.

NGUYEN LAM REPORT AT NATIONAL ASSEMBLY SESSION

BK200900 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 23 Dec 81 pp 1-4

[Report of the Council of Ministers presented by Comrade Nguyen Lam, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and chairman of the State Planning Commission, at the second session of the Seventh National Assembly" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] COMRADE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES: The first year of the 5-year plan, 1981, is going to end. We are going to enter the second year of the Third 5-Year Plan (1981-85).

On behalf of the Council of Ministers, I present to the National Assembly a report on the "Implementation of the 1981 State Plan and the Tasks of the 1982 State Plan." The report comprises three parts:

I -- Implementation of the 1981 State Plan.
II -- Orientation, tasks and objectives of the 1982 State Plan.
III -- Organization of management and direction of the implementation of the plan.

FIRST PART

Implementation of the 1981 State Plan

COMRADE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES, implementing the resolution and the appeal of the Seventh Session of the Sixth National Assembly, the compatriots and combatants throughout the country upheld the self-reliant and self-strengthening spirit and revolutionary heroism, developed the right to collective socialist mastery, implemented the new Constitution scrupulously and carried out the slogan of action devised by the Ninth Plenum of the VCP Central Committee: "With the means and material supplies given in equal or less quantities than before by the state, to produce better and create more material wealth." They enthusiastically engaged in the labor and production movement, practiced thrift and struggled to fulfill the tasks and norms of the 1981 State Plan. At the same time, the implementation of a number of new positions and policies in which attention was paid for the first time to using various economic levers and offering material incentives to laborers -- such as the application of product contracts with labor groups and laborers in agricultural cooperatives; the stabilization of grain obligations; the adjustment of purchasing prices for agricultural products; the broadening of the independence of enterprises; the application of the piecework system; the granting of bonuses for productivity in industry; the broadening of the powers of localities in export and import business, and so forth -- has encouraged active productive labor and stimulated grassroots units to develop dynamism in production and trade, calculate economic efficiency, and exploit the potential in manpower, supplies, raw materials and capital to develop production and stabilize and improve the people's living conditions. Definite changes have been effected in the management and guidance of plan implementation. Thanks to this, we have recorded notable ACHIEVEMENTS and PROGRESS:

1. In AGRICULTURE, we have obtained important successes in many fields -- food production, industrial crops and stock breeding. Agricultural output value increased by 4 percent over 1980. In spite of still greater shortages of fertilizer, insecticide, fuel and so forth than in previous years, we have obtained good crops, thanks to the positive impact of new policies and relatively favorable weather.

A fervent emulation movement has been whipped up among the peasants, who have made full use of potential in manpower, land, intensive cultivation and multicropping, expanded the cultivated acreage and applied scientific and technological progress in winter-spring crop cultivation.... Total food production reached the target of 15 million tons -- over 600,000 tons more than in 1980 -- and constitutes the highest so far in terms of food output. If southern Vietnam had not reduced its crop area by 230,000 hectares compared with the previous year, our success would have been greater. Food requirements in the rural areas were better assured than during previous years, including the areas usually experiencing the most difficulties such as Nghe Tinh, Thanh Hoa, Binh Tri Thien...peasants everywhere, especially in the north, were very enthusiastic and confident.

Acreage of short-term industrial crops widened by 1.8 percent over 1980. Production of a number of plants increased notably; soybean output, particularly, doubled that in 1980. The number of both domestic animals and fowl has increased. In particular, the number of pigs was up by 4.5 percent, buffaloes by 2.7 percent, and cows and oxen by 6.3 percent.

2. The state HAS PURCHASED 2.5 MILLIONS TONS OF FOOD, the biggest quantity so far. THE REQUISITION PURCHASES OF AGRICULTURAL AND FOOD PRODUCTS such as soybean, pork, riverine fish and so forth... increased greatly compared with previous years. Compared with 1980, procourement of peanuts increased by 14 percent, sugarcane by 74 percent, tobacco by 15 percent, jute by 2 percent, rush by 4 percent, pork by 19 percent and freshwater fish by 26 percent.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION was up to the target and a little higher than 1980. Output of local as well as of small industries and handicrafts increased by 7 percent. The output of a number of important products increased appreciably; electricity by 4.4 percent, coal by 11.7 percent, tin by 2.7 percent, transport barges by 18.2 percent, launches and tugboats by 31.5 percent, sugar by 33 percent, canned food by 23 percent and cigarettes by 41.8 percent. The output of seafish was over the target and increased by 4,000 tons compared with 1980.... In particular, many industrial enterprises have obtained raw materials from agricultural, forestry and sea products, while making full use of waste materials to manufacture consumer goods and export commodities. Local industries made steady progress, particularly in Ho Chi Minh City, Hanoi, Dong Nai, Hau Giang, Tien Giang and Quang Nam-Danang....

4. In CAPITAL CONSTRUCTION, the building tempo has been pushed ahead at some of the key projects such as the Hoa Binh hydroelectric power plant, the Pha Lai thermoelectric power plant, the Bim Son and Hoang Thach cement plants, the Lam Thao phosphate fertilizer plant, the Vinh Phu paper mill, the Hanoi and Nha Trang spinning plants and the Vung Tau oil and gas service installation....

5. EDUCATION, CULTURE, HEALTH WORK, MOTHER AND CHILD CARE, AND PHYSICAL CULTURE AND SPORTS continued to develop. War invalids and families of fallen combatants have received more attention. The educational reform is being widened. The scientific and technical service has also made commendable efforts to meet the needs of the economy and national defense.

The Council of Ministers solemnly proposes that the National Assembly warmly commend the people throughout the country, workers, peasants, intellectuals, other strata of laborers, combatants in the people's armed forces and cadres of all sectors and echelons who have overcome difficulties and obstacles and have striven to fulfill the task of building and defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

The Council of Ministers also solemnly proposes that the National Assembly warmly commend the people of various nationalities, combatants in the people's armed and security forces, especially the people and combatants in the border areas and offshore islands who constantly have upheld revolutionary vigilance and smashed all schemes and acts of provocation and the people's life and peaceful labor.

Our people's victories are inseparable from the assistance of and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and other fraternal countries of the socialist community, and from the sympathy and support of the peoples and governments of other countries and various international organizations for the defense and building of our country.

COMRADE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES, aside from these achievements and this progress, our gains in many fields in 1981 have been below plan norms and the economic situation and the people's livelihood are still beset by many difficulties. Noteworthy was the fact that 230,000 hectares of land in the south not cultivated and the output of subsidiary crops was decreased by 220,000 tons. The output of many essential consumer goods such as cloth, fabric, paper, rush mats, bicycle accessories and medicine decreased. The output of state-owned industry, particularly central state-owned industry, decreased compared with 1980.

Exports reached only 88 percent of the plan and made no appreciable progress compared with previous years. There was still a great imbalance between exports and imports.

Although some 90 percent of the investment plan in capital construction was reached, our investments were still scattered, our construction time was too long and the effectiveness of our investments was low.

The volume of goods transported in the country reached only 83 percent of the planned tonnage and 78 percent of the planned ton kilometers. Such main tasks as receiving and transporting import goods and transporting coal, food and wood were not carried out satisfactorily. The transportation sector's weakness affected production and construction sectors and the people's livelihood.

The aforementioned weaknesses were due to the shortcomings committed by various echelons and sectors in economic management and guidance and in the organization of plan execution. If guidance and organizational work were focused on the main points of plans; if production was reorganized promptly in some aspects; if there was harmonious coordination between power supply on the one hand and production and construction on the other; if communications and transportation, material supply, product consumption and so forth were ensured, a number of important objectives and essential commodities would not have been far below plan norms.

Complex developments have taken place on the distribution and circulation front. There has been definite progress in the concentration of food, foodstuffs and agricultural products in the state's hands. However, when the production of many types of important consumer goods did not reach the target, the accumulation of industrial goods and a number of agricultural products and raw materials was low. A number of enterprises did not meet requirements in delivering products to the state correctly. The management of material supplies and goods was still lax. Many loopholes have resulted in considerable loss. The management of the market was not satisfactory. This situation led to shortages in the goods fund, thus resulting in a more serious imbalance between supply and demand and in further complication of distribution and circulation, which were already irregular, and adversely affecting the balance of goods and money, prices and the livelihood of the people, particularly workers and government employees.

While workers and government employees were experiencing many difficulties in their livelihood, the illegal traders, hoarders and those engaged in illegal activities, conversely, netted large profits, due to our failure to perform satisfactorily the task of reforming market management....

The adjustment of the state's price system, including requisition purchase, wholesale and retail prices is necessary. However, the fact that we have not done well in organization and implementation, have not made adequate preparations, have not made accurate forecasts in economic, political and social developments, have not resolved adequately the unexpected changes that took place and have not attained uniform and coordinated guidance in implementation has affected production and livelihood adversely. There were signs of laxity in observing price regulations. The management of the market was carried out in earnest for only a few months and then relaxed. There has been no firm control of money and goods. All this has forced us to react passively to the changes in prices and the market.

In a word, in 1981, the first year of the 5-year plan, the economic situation has shown some initial but very significant progress: Economic management began gradually to eliminate the system of subsidized administrative management and embark on a new management system based on business accounting. Although a number of newly adopted management policies and procedures still contain aspects that need further study and improvement, they have succeeded in shaking the stagnation that has existed for a long time, creating new stimulus for developing production and encouraging the masses in working enthusiastically -- the new contract system in agriculture being an outstanding example. An understanding of the realities of the country -- difficulties as well as favourable conditions; a deeper and more unanimous awareness of the party's and state's lines and policies and the experiences in success and failure over the past years certainly will help us find a more correct path to follow and carry out our work more efficiently in the time to come.

Our agriculture has begun to advance and is capable of developing satisfactorily. This year food production in northern Vietnam alone increased by more than 900,000 tons, while many other crops throughout the country attained a considerable increase, showing promising signs for our agricultural development. If we carry out more correct and accurate organization and guidance and if we solve, in good time, the urgent requirements in fertilizers, insecticides, exchange goods and price policy.... we will certainly be able to fulfill the planned objectives.

However, we have not reached many plan targets, including those for many important industrial products, export goods, transportation and capital construction. The distribution and circulation work is developing in a complex manner. For this reason, the present economy situation is still experiencing a great imbalance, the livelihood of the people, particularly workers and government employees, is encountering many difficulties, energy, raw materials and spare parts are seriously lacking, our transportation capacity is too weak, our exports increase only slowly, while our imports have to be restricted, thus failing to assure normal economic activity. Our capital construction is still very scattered and our finance, monetary system, market and prices are not yet stable.

This situation arises from many objective and subjective causes.

OBJECTIVELY, our economy develops from a small, backward production which has sustained heavy consequences of 30 years of war and colonialism and neocolonialism and, therefore, its tempo of development is slow and enormously dependent on outside influences. Then many large disturbances took place, as a result of sabotage activities and the war of aggression by the Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. Then followed successive natural calamities in 1977, 1979 and 1980 and the soaring import prices on the international market.

SUBJECTIVELY, however, our awareness as well as our deeds in many respects have not met the requirements of the situation and our tasks.

In the 1981 plan, although we had boldly made arrangements in line with our actual capabilities, we did not correctly assess the situation. A number of aspects called for by the plan were beyond our economic capability. Yet, on the other hand, we had no measures to exploit our economy's potential satisfactorily. Although we had called for the readjustment of production, capital construction, distribution and consumption, in practice we had not satisfactorily performed our task from plan formulation to guidance in implementation.

The task of management and guidance of various echelons and sectors still experienced many shortcomings. Particularly, it has not been firmly concentrated on the most important objects of the economy.

The tendency to rely on others has not been overcome among the various echelons and sectors. The lack of a clearcut delineation of the relations between the sectors and the echelons and between the central government and the regions is an obstacle in management and causes many difficulties in the performance of our tasks.

Discipline in various aspects has not been upheld, the socialist legal system is still weak, working methods have not improved and concrete problems have not been resolved.

The present economic situation requires that we promptly adopt realistic and resolute measures to stabilize production and livelihood gradually and, step by step, advance the economy. The new experiences and factors in production, business, and economic management in 1981 affirm that we have great capabilities to overcome difficulties and achieve new victories.

Firmly grasping and realizing the party's economic development policy, concentrating our efforts on the most important front, namely, agriculture, while stepping up production of consumer and export goods, developing the spirit of self-reliance, raising the working people's notion of collective mastery, resolutely eliminating the system of subsidized administrative management and changing to that of business management with economic accounting, and whipping up an enthusiastic revolutionary mass movement in all sectors, regions and gassrooots areas, we will certainly create new developments in the national economy in 1982 in subsequent years.

SECOND PART

Orientation, Tasks and Objectives of the 1982 State Plan

COMRADE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES, We are entering the year 1982 in a situation in which our economy is experiencing difficulties and major imbalances and the enemy is conducting a war of sabotage in many fields and plotting an invasion against our country, forcing us constantly to uphold vigilance and further to strengthen national defense and security to as to defend the socialist fatherland firmly. Besides this, however, we have considerable latent capabilities, some of which can but have not yet been exploited satisfactorily. We also enjoy advantages and important new factors in our efforts to overcome difficulties and gradually advance the economy.

-- Our party has formulated a correct and creative line for the whole period of transition to socialism. The political and moral unanimity of the entire party and people concerning the assessment of the situation, the orientation, the tasks and the steps will be consolidated and enhanced further through the fifth national party congress and congresses of party organizations at various levels. After 5 years of building socialism nationwide, our party and state have gained new experience in economic guidance and management.

-- Our potentials in manpower and land and other unexploited productive capacities are considerable. Newly-built and soon-to-be-commissioned projects will increase appreciably the productive capacities of society.

-- We have an aggregate strength derived from the satisfactory implementation of the system of the working people's collective mastery; the promotion of the three revolutions; the changing of the management system; the application of scientific and technological achievements; and the rising self-reliance, initiative and creativity of all echelons and sectors in exploiting our existing material potential.

-- The all-round alliance andcooperation with the Soviet Union, the special alliance with the LPDR and the PRK and the broadening cooperation with other fraternal socialist countries will yield practical results for us.

THE YEAR 1982 WILL OCCUPY A PARTICULARLY IMPORTANT POSITION IN OUR PEOPLE'S POLITICAL AND SOCIAL LIFE. The forthcoming fifth party congress will decide on the orientation, tasks and the advance of the country in the first stage of the period of transition and the 1981-1982 period of the 5-year plan. Nineteen eighty-two will be the first year of comprehensive implementation of the resolutions of the party congress to advance the country a step further.

On the basis of thoroughly understanding the orientations, tasks and targets soon to be adopted by the fifth national party congress, in 1982 our entire party and people must develop experiences and the newly created positive factors vigorously and overcome shortcomings resolutely IN ORDER REALLY TO CHANGE THE ECONOMIC-SOCIAL SITUATION, CHECK RECESSION IN CERTAIN FIELDS AND CONCENTRATE EFFORTS ON DEVELOPING PRODUCTION WHILE CARRYING OUT DISTRIBUTION AND CIRCULATION MORE SATISFACTORILY WITH A VIEW TO STABILIZING AND PARTIALLY IMPROVING THE PEOPLE'S LIFE AND CREATING A STRONGER MOMENTUM FOR DEVELOPMENT IN THE LATER YEARS OF THE 1981-85 5-YEAR PLAN.

It is necessary to prepare programs intensively for the 1981-85 State Plan with quality and on a scientific basis. IN THE VERY YEAR 1982 THE STATE PLAN MUST REFLECT FULLY OUR GREAT EFFORTS TO ATTAIN THE FOUR ECONOMIC-SOCIAL OBJECTIVES OF THE 1980'S:

1. Stabilize, improve by a step and advance toward basically ensuring the people's material and cultural life, first of all by firmly resolving the problem of grain and food and meeting the demands for clothing and other consumer goods, housing, movement, schooling, medical services and child care.
2. Continue to build the material-technical bases of socialism.
3. Complete the process of socialist transformation in the southern provinces, perfect the socialist production relations in the northern provinces and consolidate the socialist production relations throughout the country.
4. Meet the demand for national defense and consolidate national defense and security.

Proceeding from our country's present economic situation, with the aforesaid advantages and difficulties and in order to achieve these economic-social objectives gradually, the fundamental tasks of the 1982 state plan are: FOCUS EFFORTS ON DEVELOPING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION AND BOOSTING THE PRODUCTION OF CONSUMER GOODS TO MEET THE FOOD DEMANDS OF THE WHOLE OF SOCIETY; TRY TO MEET THE ESSENTIAL REQUIREMENTS OF THE PEOPLE IN CLOTHING EDUCATION, MEDICAL TREATMENT AND MOVEMENT; INCREASE THE SOURCE OF EXPORT GOODS; REORGANIZE PRODUCTION, CAPITAL CONSTRUCTION, COMMUNICATIONS AND TRANSPORTATION; CARRY ON SOCIALIST TRANSFORMATION IN THE SOUTH; CONSOLIDATE AND PERFECT THE SOCIALIST PRODUCTION RELATIONS IN THE NORTH; CONSOLIDATE AND STRENGTHEN THE SOCIALIST FRONT IN THE WHOLE COUNTRY; REINFORCE NATIONAL DEFENSE; MAINTAIN POLITICAL SECURITY, SOCIAL ORDER AND SAFETY AND FULFILL INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS.

TO CARRY OUT THE AFOREMENTIONED FUNDAMENTAL TASKS IT IS NECESSARY TO IMPLEMENT SATISFACTORILY THE MAJOR TASKS AND MEASURES below:

1. STRENGTHEN THE SPIRIT OF SELF-RELIANCE AND SELF-SUPPORT AND OF ACTIVELY ADVANCING TO SATISFY THE ESSENTIAL DEMANDS OF SOCIETY.

It must be understood clearly that we can only overcome all difficulties to build our life by using our very own efforts and spending only the resources that we have or can create. Therefore, it is urgently necessary that all sectors, localities and establishment EXPLOIT SATISFACTORILY ALL CAPABILITIES; SURGE FORWARD TO MEET THE DEMAND FOR CONSUMPTION; CREATE SOURCES OF RESERVES AND ACCUMULATION GRADUALLY FOR THE WHOLE ECONOMY AS WELL AS FOR EACH SECTOR, LOCALITY AND ESTABLISHMENT; OVERCOME DEPENDENT AND PASSIVE TENDENCIES; AND DO AWAY WITH THE PRACTICE OF DOING BUSINESS WITHOUT CALCULATING ECONOMIC RESULTS.

At a time when our national economy s faced with many difficulties and imbalances, we must focus our efforts on carrying out the most important and urgent tasks. First of all, we must:

— Concentrate efforts to a high degree on CARRYING OUT THE PRIMARY TASK OF BOOSTING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION, ESPECIALLY THE PRODUCTION OF GRAIN AND FOOD, AND THE PROCUREMENT OF GRAIN for the state, so as to meet the entire country's grain demand. It is also necessary to develop satisfactorily the production of RICE AND SUBSIDIARY FOOD CROPS as well as of vegetables and beans.

— Exploit all potentials, particularly the potentials concerning labor, land, domestic raw material and the existing production capabilities of light, small and handicraft industries, to step up THE PRODUCTION OF CONSUMER GOODS, especially those essential to the people's life, and GOODS FOR EXPORT.

— Every district and every province (except for areas specializing in the cultivation of agricultural crops) must by all means achieve a grain balance for itself and partially meet by itself the demand for cloth of the local people.

— The HEAVY INDUSTRY, POWER, COAL, ENGINEERING, CHEMICAL, FERTILIZER AND OTHER sectors must develop their capabilities to the maximum in order to serve efficiently agriculture, the industries producing consumer goods and goods for export, communications and transportation, and so forth.

— Increase COMMUNICATIONS AND TRANSPORTATION capabilities and overcome the current weaknesses in order to better meet the demands of production, construction and the people's life.

2. REORGANIZE PRODUCTION, CONSTRUCTION AND LIFE TO SUIT THE COUNTRY'S ECONOMIC POTENTIALS.

In 1982 we must TAKE A MAJOR STEP FORWARD IN REORGANIZING THE ECONOMY (namely, reorganizing the capital construction structure, the production structure, the distribution and consumption structure, and the structure of economic segments) and advance the economy gradually on the new basis. The economy must be reorganized in a priority sequence, with the first priority given to channelling materials, raw material, energy, transportation and capital for the production of grain and food and essential consumer goods in service of life and for export. It is necessary to inspect state farms, state forests and agricultural stations and farms so that plans will be formulated to consolidate them and ensure their effective operations.

We must reorganize capital construction in accordance with the relationship between accumulation and consumption, and with the availability of supplies and capital. As an immediate step, in 1982 we must create on a priority basis the necessary material conditions for ensuring the scheduled progress of construction work on major state projects as well as important projects of the various sectors and localities.

The communications and transportation, material supply, trade, cultural, public health, education and other sectors must also readjust their organization and operations to suit the potentials and requirements of the economy with a view serving production, construction and the people's life efficiently.

3. CONCENTRATE EFFORTS ON TAKING A STEP FORWARD IN RESOLVING THE RATIONAL EMPLOYMENT OF SOCIAL LABOR AND THE REDISTRIBUTION OF LABOR IN EACH LOCALITY AND ON A NATIONAL SCALE.

In the years ahead, we must strive to generate employment and organize more rational utilization of social labor. The redistribution of labor and the population in each locality and on a national scale constitutes a strategic task of great significance. This task must be carried out under varied forms -- in a concentrated or scattered manner. Resettlements may be organized either by the state or by the people at their own initiative and with the state's support in accordance with the motto "the state and the people join hands and work together."

4. STEP UP EXPORTS AND IMPORTS AND EXPAND ECONOMIC RELATIONS WITH FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Exerting all-out efforts to step up exports is a strategic task for both the short and long terms of our country. We must exploit satisfactorily all potentials concerning labor, land and mineral resources, vigorously develop production and practice thrift in consumption at home in order to step up exports.

It is necessary to observe fully the principle calling for unified management of export and import activities by the state; and at the same time, to encourage the various sectors and localities to step up exports in order to balance their own demands for imports partially.

5. CONTINUE TO CARRY OUT SOCIALIST TRANSFORMATION IN THE SOUTH, CONSOLIDATE AND PERFECT THE RELATIONS OF SOCIALIST PRODUCTION IN THE NORTH AND CONSOLIDATE AND STRENGTHEN THE SOCIALIST FRONT IN THE ENTIRE COUNTRY.

In 1982 we must resolutely implement and complete land reform in Nam Bo in order to ensure that every peasant has land to till. On this basis, we will accelerate the bringing of peasants onto the path of collective production in the forms of production solidarity teams and production collectives. Cooperatives and production collectives must be consolidated, and management of agricultural cooperatives must be improved and strengthened. The system of product contracts with groups of workers and individual workers must be applied broadly and perfected.

In urban areas, we must continue to carry out the transformation of industrialists and traders. This must be done in coordination with the reorganization of production and in conjunction with strengthening market management and with the struggle against speculation and smuggling goods and enemy activities aimed at sabotaging the economy and disrupting the market.

State-run establishments (industrial enterprises, state farms, forestry sites, construction sites, stores....) must be consolidated and improved qualitatively. These establishments must improve their organization and management along the line of exercising extensively the right to take the initiative in production and business. They must carry out profit-and-loss accounting intensively and seek ways to increase economic efficiency in order to uphold the role of the state-run economy in the fields of output, quality and efficiency. Negativism and illegal dealings must be eliminated.

6. STRICTLY PRACTICE THRIFT.

We must practice thrift strictly in production, building and consumption, especially the consumption of electricity, coal, gasoline and oil, supplies, raw materials, food.... We must urgently adjust the norms for the consumption of manpower, supplies and capital in conjunction with building a new management system and applying strict control measures to compel everyone to comply with these norms.

Each sector and locality must adopt concrete plans, norms and measures to practice thrift strictly in the production of each product; in designing and building each project; in transporting and storing supplies, goods.... Each year the state will establish norms for the consumption of energy, raw materials, supplies... and assign them as obligatory norms to all sectors, localities and grassroots units.

We must cut nonurgent expenditures sharply so as to concentrate capital on immediate demands. We must, as a key measure, curtail investments in capital construction so as to save supplies for production and the people's livelihood; reduce the number of administrative personnel; and slash administrative spending.

In addition to ideological indoctrination, we must apply proper administrative and economic measures and judiciously grant bonuses or impose penalties to prompt units and individuals to implement the policy of thrift satisfactorily.

We must devise plans to build and increase gradually state reserves and stocks of key supplies and commodities.

7. WE MUST WIDELY APPLY TECHNOLOGICAL PROGRESS to increase productivity, quality and efficiency in production and building, thereby contributing actively to overcoming the difficulties of the economy, especially those regarding supplies, raw materials, spare parts and equipment. We must pay special attention to the achievements of the biological revolution in crop planting and livestock raising.

A proper managerial policy and system must be adopted to stimulate producers to apply technological progress; to encourage scientific research, inventions and discoveries; and to prod scientific and technical organs to apply technological progress in production and life.

8. WE MUST COORDINATE ECONOMY WITH NATIONAL DEFENSE to meet the demands of protecting the country and to consolidate national defense and security. Plans must be adopted to prepare for mobilizing the economy, making it ever ready to cope with hostilities and help defeat the enemy under any circumstances. Along with the task of standing ready to fight and fight well, the armed forces should, depending on their conditions, participate in economic building, especially grain and foodstuff production, road building, water conservancy work...; coordinate defense industry with civil industry; and develop the capacities of defense industry to turn out more products for society.

9. WE MUST ESTABLISH A NEW ORDER IN THE FIELD OF DISTRIBUTION AND CIRCULATION according to the principles of socialist trade to support production and the people's livelihood satisfactorily. Our present urgent tasks are to concentrate all sources of goods under the state control; tightly manage the distribution and rational use of food, equipment, capital, supplies, goods... in keeping with the principle of distribution according to labor; correctly settle the relationship among the three interests; continue to carry out the adjustment of prices steadily; strengthen market management; readjust unreasonable incomes; strengthen the socialist market; and stabilize finance, the monetary system, the market, prices and the living conditions of the people, especially workers, civil servants and soldiers in the cities and concentrated industrial zones.

10. WE MUST CONTINUE TO SHIFT STRONGLY FROM THE SYSTEM OF MANAGEMENT BASED ON SUBSIDIZATION TO THE MANAGEMENT AND PLANNING SYSTEM BASED ON ECONOMIC ACCOUNTING AND SOCIALIST TRADE so as to create a strong moving force for production; develop the creative powers of all sectors, localities, collectives and individual laborers; stimulate all potential of the economy; and overcome the present stagnation, passivity and irresponsibility in production and business management.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES, proceeding from these general orientations and on the basis of the actual balanced potential in 1982, the specific tasks of the economic and cultural sectors will be as follows:

I. -- AGRICULTURE

1. Efforts in the whole country, of all branches, all echelons and all organizations concerned will be focused on fulfilling the PRIMARY TASK OF DEVELOPING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION to score more comprehensive and steadier achievements than in 1981. This aims at solving the most pressing and important problems, namely food, clothing, exports and the supply of raw materials for the consumer goods industries. Special attention will be paid to the production of rice, subsidiary crops, vegetables, a wide variety of beans (especially soybeans), groundnuts, sugarcane, fish, meat and eggs.

We must strive to attain 16 MILLION TONS OF GRAIN converted to paddy equivalent (including 13 million tons of paddy and 3 million tons of subsidiary crops converted to paddy equivalent) -- 1 million tons more than in 1981, a year with a high total output.

From 1982, we shall boost production to meet our people's food demands. So, each locality, especially each district, must ADOPT A PATTERN OF PRODUCTION AND GOODS CONSUMPTION CONSISTENT WITH ITS OWN CHARACTERISTICS to meet its food demands. There must be balanced food production in each district and each province.

The Mekong Delta provinces, Hai Hung, Thai Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Ha Bac, Nghia Binh, Phu Khanh, and other provinces must strive vigorously to raise production, the grain-goods ratio, and mobilize an increasingly large volume of grain in order to fulfill the grain obligation to the state and support national industrialization. This primary requirement in the 1982 State Plan must be necessarily met in one way or another.

Other agricultural provinces must strive to meet their own food demands and advance to contribute to the common need. The state supplies grain only to major cities, concentrated industrial centers, troops and the areas specializing in industrial crop cultivation, salt production, fishery.... Therefore, the troops, workers and civil servants in areas where conditions are favorable must increase production to meet part of their own needs for grain and foodstuffs.

In order to realize these objectives, we must carry out the following measures: We must use manpower and land in the direction of intensive and specialized cultivation to develop cultivation, stock breeding, food processing and various secondary branches and occupations in the countryside. In this direction, we must organize labor distribution properly in each installation and locality, while reorganizing labor in the entire country in order to increase the cultivated acreage. We must make full use of all land potential and area still left uncultivated or fallow, increase the number of crops, put wasteland into cultivation rapidly and strive to achieve a 7 percent increase in food crop acreage over 1981.

Guidance must be concentrated on stabilized production areas and in the districts and cooperatives in the Mekong and Red River deltas, former zones 4 and 5 and provinces in the mountain region endowed with favorable conditions for achieving a high volume of production. Great attention must be paid to the winter-spring cop, because its production will be more stable. The state will concentrate all efforts on ensuring necessary material conditions for agricultural production: fertilizers, insecticides, insecticide sprayers, gasoline, oil, electricity....

We must organize properly the protection of vegetation, prevent and control harmful insects and crop diseases, study the changes in rice varieties and take effective measures against harmful insects in the provinces recently plagued by insect.

We must pool efforts in building water conservancy projects, which will be used in 1982, in order to bring the irrigated area up to 3.8 million hectares, an increase of 44,000 hectares; the drainage area up to 104,000 hectares, an increase of 14,000 hectares; and the brine-free area up to 7,200 hectares.

We must make full use of land potential to develop vigorously the production of SUBSIDIARY CROPS in all areas where conditions permit. Meanwhile, we must attach importance to growing vegetables. In particular, we must properly organize the production and supply of vegetables to meet the needs of the cities and concentrated industrial centers.

2. INDUSTRIAL CROPS: EFFORTS WILL BE MADE TO DEVELOP SHORT-GROWTH INDUSTRIAL CROPS suitable for each area and reorganize production in areas reserved for these crops. Regarding PERENNIAL INDUSTRIAL CROPS, EFFORTS SHOULD BE FOCUSED ON INTENSIVE CULTIVATION AND ON THE FULL USE OF AVAILABLE LAND.

In particular, there must be a policy of vigorously developing soybean production. Compared with 1981, the production of soybeans is expected to double, that of peanuts to increase by 25 percent, sugarcane by 32 percent, tobacco by 21 percent, jute by 50 percent, rush by 8 percent, coffee by 26 percent, tea by 14 percent, rubber by 5 percent....

The growing of mulberry trees for silkworm raising and of other fibrous plants such as cotton, flax and agave will be encouraged in order to meet the demand for clothing gradually. Attention must be paid to developing the growing of medicinal plants.

3. ANIMAL HUSBANDRY: Private stockbreeding will be encouraged. Attention must be paid to developing cattle breeding to solve the problem of draft power. Compared with 1981, herds of pigs will be increased by 6 percent, the weight of pigs will be increased by 6 percent, herds of buffaloes by 4 percent and herds of cattle by 4 percent. There must be balanced feed to maintain and develop herds of pigs and chickens raised according to scientific methods on a concentrated basis around major cities.

II -- FORESTRY AND FISHERY

In forestry, forest protection must be intensified; combined agroforestry measures must be applied vigorously to make bare hills green with vegetation rapidly and there must be resolute measures to prevent and control forest fires and destruction. Compared with 1981, timber exploitation will be increased by 5 percent. Priority will be given to the exploitation of timber for mining, wood for paper and furniture making and for packaging and timber for transportation needs. Products from wood will be sold to farmers in exchange for the collection and purchase of their farm products for export....

The forestry fund will be used to achieve concentrated afforestation rapidly. Attention must be paid to delineating and afforestating key areas possessing timber for mining and wood for papermaking and fiber. Afforestation will be carried out in border areas. A wide movement to grow trees for timber and firewood must be launched among the people in various localities.

We must step up afforestation and the exploitation of precious forest products, including pine resin, kamala and cinnamon and other trees such as bamboo, maple, rattan, corypha lecomtei, oleaginous trees and medicinal plants. The provinces with nomads must work out a settled farming plan to complete their settlement promptly.

In fishery, the marine products sector must reorganize its production consistent with the availability of material means and production conditions in each area. Handmade tools must be used in fishery development to save gasoline and oil for the places and professions which need to use machines to achieve high economic efficiency.

Compared with 1981, salt-water fish output will be increased by 5 percent, the amount of fish to be delivered to the state by 12 percent, fish sauce production by 20 percent and the value of exported sea products by 20 percent.

All water surfaces must be used fully to rear freshwater fish, especially in the food belt areas. Fish-breeding centers must be consolidated and developed. We must organize the proper management and exploitation of fish in rivers and ponds. We will strive to increase the output of fish rearing by 6 percent over the previous year.

III -- INDUSTRY

The production of consumer goods must be boosted to increase the source of goods to be exchanged with farmers. We must step up agricultural development, expand local markets and contribute to increasing rapidly the volume of export goods, especially prime necessities of life such as textiles, paper and medicines. Priority will be given to key industrial branches such as the production of electricity, coal and fertilizers to serve efficiently agriculture, the production of consumer goods and export commodities and the transport service.

With a limited source of materials and energy, we must, on the one hand, strive to ensure the implementation of the most important tasks and produce staple goods such as fabrics, paper, medicines.... On the other hand, the localities and installations should make the greatest effort to exploit the sources of energy, raw and local materials in order to turn out local products and exchange with other units. We must check all available branches and occupations and restore those which have been neglected or have fallen into oblivion. Small industries and the handicraft industry must be vigorously encouraged to develop workmanship. Local available raw materials, discards and rejects must be used fully in stepping up production. State-operated trade sector and marketing cooperatives must organize control of the source of goods in these industries to increase the volume of goods delivered to the state and must control the markets. We must make full use of all appropriate forms of production organization, ranging from cooperatives and production solidarity teams to individual handicraftsmen and side-line occupations in the countryside. We must take advantage of the strengths of the cities (especially Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City) to develop small industries and handicrafts and produce consumer goods for local and export use.

Compared with 1981, textile output will be increased by 62 percent, paper by 31 percent, bicycle tires by 40 percent and bicycle parts by 18 percent. Priority will be given to creating the proper material conditions for the production of these kinds of goods, especially fiber and fabric.

-- Electricity output will increase by 6 percent over 1981, if all power generated by the available power plants and the gas turbines in Thai Binh and Haiphong are mobilized.

Night workshifts must be planned to rationally use electricity. We must conserve electricity, readjust management of the electricity sector and promulgate a policy of energy conservation. This sector must take measures to minimize the amount of electricity lost through its own use and in the circuit.

-- Coal output will be increased by 6 percent over 1981. The earth and rock removal plan must be promptly implemented in preparation for coal exploitation in subsequent years.

There must be measures to perfect the coal-selection and -washing system in order to increase coal quality. The exploitation of anthracite, brown coal and peat in various localities will be stepped up.

Regarding coal distribution, we must meet the coal export needs and those of the thermoelectric plants, the transportation sector, textile and spinning mills, export glassware factories, paper mills, fertilizer plants and other food products enterprises.

-- IN OIL AND GAS exploration, the first well will be sunk on the continental shelf of southern Vietnam, in accordance with the program of cooperation with the Soviet Union. Support facilities in the Vung Tau oil and gas sector will be completed. Efforts to survey and measure the reserves of oil and gas in Dong Quan and Tien Hai (Thai Binh) will be continued.

-- In the engineering industry, as the supply of materials and energy is limited, emphasis will be placed on the production of tools and spare parts for various sectors and products in agriculture and transport. The production of goods for export and for home consumption will be increased. Compared with 1981, the production of spare parts will be increased by 12 percent; the rate of major and minor repairs of barges, boats, tugboats, train coaches and locomotives and automobiles will be raised from 12 to 25 percent. Some 20 million labor tools will be produced, an increase of 24 percent. The production of boats made of ferroconcrete will be increased by 22 percent and that of insecticide sprayers by 70 percent. The production of consumer goods including bicycles, bicycle parts, sewing machines and electric fans will also be increased.

-- IN METALLURGY, the exploitation of bituminous coal at the Phan Me coalmine will be stepped up and more will be imported to keep the Thai Nguyen iron and steel complex in operation. The output of tin and chromite for export will be increased.

-- IN THE PRODUCTION OF CHEMICALS, nitrogenous fertilizer output will be increased by 67 percent, insecticide output by 35 percent, chemical paint by 32 percent and calcium carbide by 43 percent. The production of soap and detergent powder will be boosted.

We will embark on producing low-output soda production equipment on a trial basis.

-- IN THE PRODUCTION OF BUILDING MATERIALS, the construction of the Bim Son and Hoang Thach cement plants will be stepped up to ensure that cement output is increased by 77 percent, brick output by 34 percent, tile output by 19 percent and stone exploitation by 8.5 percent over 1981.

IV -- TRANSPORT AND POSTAL SERVICES

-- The transport sector must quickly strive to overcome weaknesses. While consolidating its material and technical bases, resolutely improve organizational and managerial work and strengthen its guidance in a railroads, sea lanes, waterways, wharves and harbors. First of all, it is necessary to reduce the turnaround and loading and unloading time for all transport means... in order to achieve the main objectives: Reception and transport of imported and export goods, coal, wood and grain; transport services for northern border provinces; transport of people to the new economic zones.... We must raise economic and technical norms and transport efficiency.

We must coordinate scientific and technical measures in organization and management with the reorganization of the transport network; vigorously develop local transport services and make broad use of rudimentary means of transport to save gas and oil.

It is planned that the volume of freight transported by rail will be increased by 22 percent, by sea by 15 percent and by other waterways by 11 percent over 1981.

-- We shall develop all available capabilities to ensure thorough and good communications and transport operations from the central to the local levels, especially in the key economic and national defense zones. We must ensure normal international communications operations and increase the postal services provided by 12 percent over 1981.

V -- CAPITAL CONSTRUCTION

Investments will be concentrated in accordance with our country's actual capabilities on key sectors such as agriculture, industry, electricity, coal, weaving, paper, oil and gas, fertilizer, metallurgy (tin), building materials, foodstuffs and communications and transportation in order to attain, at all cost, the most important objectives.

Priority will be given to ensuring capital and building materials for key state projects such as the Pha Lai hydroelectric plant, the Hoa Binh thermoelectric plant, coal mines, coal car repair shops, the Go Dam diesel motor factory, spinning mills, state farms specializing in growing industrial crops in accordance with the program of cooperation with other countries, and state lumber camps producing wood and raw materials for industry and export wood; for important communications and transportation links such as the Maiphong and Cua Loa harbors; and for the railroad network serving coal and apatite exploitation such as the Thong Nhat railway. We must ensure the speed of building projects which will soon be put into operation. Proper investment will be concentrated on the building of homes in Hanoi and for enterprises which have been, or will be, put into operations and of storehouses for grain and farm products.

We will restrict the construction of new projects and will slow down the building of a number of projects because we find ourselves incapable of ensuring construction and mobilization conditions as a result of the shortage of raw materials and energy. We will not build projects which are not needed urgently and which may not be economically efficient. Investment by various localities will also be concentrated on agriculture. We must avoid all manifestations of dispersion and wasteful and ostentatious investment in capital construction. We must practice thrift strictly in planning and building protective covers [vor bao che].

With the above orientation for investments in capital construction, we will put into operation the following major projects in 1982 and 1983: The Pha Lai hydroelectric plant (machine team No 1), the Bim Son and Hoang Thach cement plants, the Nha Trang and Hanoi textile mills, the La Nga sugar refinery and three plywood plants in Buon Ma Thuot, Gia Lai-Kongtum and Song Be. We will build granaries with a 100,000-ton capacity and some 180,000 square meters of homes in Hanoi and in the industrial centers.

VI -- EXPORT, IMPORT AND ECONOMIC COOPERATION WITH FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Exports to and economic cooperation with foreign countries are pressing and long-term strategic tasks of our country. We must strive to boost production and cut down on local consumption so as to increase exports rapidly and adjust imbalances between exports and imports while expanding business and services, providing supplies for sea vessels and tourism; implementing appropriate measures and policies to attract remittances of foreign currencies by overseas Vietnamese nationals [thu huts cacs nguoonf kieeuf hoois] and running stores to secure foreign currencies.

We must strive to expand all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries within CEMA, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the People's Republic of Kampuchea, while broadening foreign trade and economic cooperation with other countries.

Exporting is an obligation of all sectors, localities and installations, and they must tap their potential capabilities to increase exports. In general, every sector and locality must devise ways and develop capabilities to increase exports substantially in order to meet import requirements.

We have sufficient land and favorable conditions for increasing the industrial crop area. We must strive to add annually hundreds of thousands of laborers to the agricultural front. By multicropping and opening up new lands for cultivation of short-term industrial crops, we will have great capabilities for boosting exports. That is the path our agriculture must follow in its effort to equip itself with technical equipment and contribute to the socialist industrialization undertaking. The Council of Ministers Standing Committee and the State Planning Commission will seek by all means possible ways to carry out that task while creating conditions to help the provinces and districts accelerate exports.

Priority must be given to investments that will increase exports. We must strive to produce major types of export goods and pay attention to the sources of export goods, including agricultural, forestry, mineral and sea products, consumer goods and mechanical products.

All sectors, localities and production installations must correctly implement the plans for delivery of export goods to the central government. Any locality that produces any of these types of goods or other commodities which are in excess of the plan norms and not placed under state management can export the surplus in order to buy necessary materials and goods. Compared with 1981, the 1982 export value is expected to increase by 45 percent, with agricultural products and processed agricultural products increasing by 62 percent; forestry products by 60 percent; sea products by 20 percent; mineral products by 67 percent; and light industry and handicraft products by 28 percent. Export of some products will substantially increase: Soybeans will be exported for the first time; peanut exports will increase by 15 percent; canned vegetables and fruits by 30 percent; frozen fruits by 60 percent; coffee by 38 percent; wine by 20 percent; tea by 10 percent; cigarette exports will increase substantially; and cinnamon exports will double.

VII -- TECHNOLOGY

We must step up the application of scientific achievements and technological advances in production, for it is an important part of state plans. In 1982 and in subsequent years, we must concentrate efforts on achieving the following major objectives: Contribute to rapidly increasing grain and food output; develop and perfect the system of production and the supply of rice strains from the central to the grassroots level and to the cooperatives; grow on tens of thousands of hectares new high-yield rice strains that are pest resistant and can grow in brackish soil and low-lying areas; apply scientific irrigation with a perfected agricultural irrigation system on more than 500,000 hectares of cropland; widely disseminate the techniques for applying granulated nitrogenous fertilizer, processing manure and boosting the production of azolla, sesbania and tephrosia candida; enlarge models for transforming depleted, sloping and alkaline soil; rapidly perfect and develop the cooperatives' plant protection system; apply various measures to control rice pests; rapidly increase the acreage of new potato strains; expand the growing of short-term corn and soybeans and the cultivation of winter crops on spring cropland in the north.

Rapidly develop all new breeds of hogs; survey and select sows; increase the herds of crossbred hogs; apply general measures to prevent diseases in pigs; and use measures on the provincial scale to eradicate chicken plague.

Disseminate all technical innovations in fish raising to increase production and artificially inseminate fish; popularize the use of new species of highly productive fish to ensure sufficient quantities of good fingerlings for the food belts of major cities and concentrated industrial complexes, using up all the fish raising potentials of these areas; and apply technical innovations to catch, produce and preserve more shrimp and fish for export.

Contribute to resolving problems and saving raw materials, fuel and energy; apply the techniques of building and repairing ships and ferroconcrete boats; broadly disseminate the techniques of blacksmithing and electric welding; and implement the regulations for casting iron to reduce the proportion of discarded items to less than 15 percent.

Broadly apply modelling designs and expand the production of adobe bricks, low-grade cement as a glue substitute, fireproof bricks and such other materials such as phosphoric acid, antirust paint and detergent powder.

We must apply the system of utilizing idle power to the electricity network in the north to save from 30 to 50 million kilowatts and we must manufacture various pieces of equipment to use such new types of energy as biogas and wind energy in running water pump motors.

Attention must be paid to applying scientific and technological advances in the mechanical and metallurgical fields so as to help relieve the shortages of equipment and spare parts:

-- Broadly apply the techniques of producing injection assemblies and spray jets of high pressure pumps in diesel engines; produce steel-laminating rollers, rubber washers of yarn-threading machines and wooden shuttles for weaving machines; and turn out improved D-12M engines with a useful life double that of the previous ones, and converging gear-chiseling knives.

-- Contribute to increasing the communications and transportation capacity by expanding the use of new transport facilities (mother ships carrying other small ships) improving the loading and unloading techniques (use of containers); applying the scientific organization in standardizing and reorganizing the use of storage areas, especially the terminal areas in the domains of the railway and truck transportation; and accelerating the turnaround time of transport facilities and the frequency of service on the transportation routes.

We must promote scientific and technical management along with economic management so as to make the scientific and technical plan a truly organic part of the social economic plan. We must standardize measures and maintain a uniform system of appraising the quality of products so as to guarantee the quality of products and goods, improve production efficiency and help improve the people's living conditions. We must conduct inspections develop and apply standardized measures and provide sufficient facilities and instruments to production and distribution installations, especially with regard to major products important to the national economy. We must strive to maintain and stabilize the quality of major products of the national economy.

We must ensure efficient dissemination of scientific and technical information in support of the state's key projects for scientific and technological advances, provide more material and technical bases for communications purposes to a number of ministries that need them badly, and perfect the national communications system step by step.

The projects for technological advances already examined and approved by the ministries' Scientific and Technological Council and the State Science and Technology Commission must be carried out within the framework of the national economy projects for 1982 and subsequent years.

We must continue to develop the state's key projects for scientific and technological advances in order to contribute to achieving the objectives of developing the national economy for the 1981-85 period and to correctly implement the Political Bureau resolutions relating to scientific and technological policies and other specific policies in this domain.

VIII-- LABOR AND TRAINING

In order to properly provide jobs to the laborers and to more efficiently utilize the social work force, all localities and districts must devise plans to match the work force with the amount of work.

Attention must be paid to providing jobs for youths in the municipalities, primarily in Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City and Haiphong. In addition to assigning the local work force to intensive cultivation and multicropping work for better yields and better stockbreeding, we must vigorously develop small industry and handicrafts that use locally available raw materials and supplies so as to simultaneously increase the work force for production and to produce more goods for local consumption and for export.

We must launch a large-scale and intensive revolutionary movement among the people and mass organizations, especially among the youth, to urge them to uphold patriotism and the love of socialism by setting out to open up new lands in order to resolve our country's economic and social problems. This task must be carried out in many forms and in a concentrated and diversified manner. Resettlements will be carried out within districts, provinces, regions or any part of the country in accordance with the motto, "The state and the people share care and work."

In the state sector, on the basis of reorganizing agricultural production and capital construction, we must readjust the organization or production, business management and the state management machinery; resolutely and heavily reduce staff, especially the state administrative staff; and renovate the labor structure of the state sector step by step by admitting people who have been trained at technical worker schools, vocational education schools and colleges. We must replace old and weak cadres and workers who have limited knowledge and capabilities with young, strong people whose standards of knowledge and capabilities are suitable for the tasks assigned.

We must enforce policies and launch a movement to urge cadres and workers to participate in agricultural production in the rural areas, primarily among newly recruited cadres and personnel who have not undergone training. We must dismiss violators of labor disciplines, expand the application of benefit fund contracts in accordance with the volume of production and business, adjust payment work, and insure adherence to the principle of distributing goods according to the labor provided and changing prices.

Regarding the training of specialist cadres and technical cadres on the basis of redefining the training scope, we must reorganize the training school system to make it more compatible with the economic and financial means and the requirements to develop the social economy for the immediate and long-range future. In the meantime, we must improve training quality, vigorously carry out special training courses and in-service training and pay further attention to the contingent of economic management cadres and foremen.

We must shift existing students from those branches where their services are not yet required to the branches where we still lack students. Recruitment of new students must be limited and well calculated.

We must coordinate the recruitment of students for training by localities and territorial areas with local requirements and expand the training of managerial cadres and technical workers for the collective economic sector.

We must study and enforce the systems and policies regarding college and vocational education cadres assigned to work at agricultural production cooperatives and at small industry and handicraft cooperatives who go on missions to mountain areas.

IX -- TRADE AND LIVELIHOOD

We must strive to put under state control all sources of goods, especially raw materials for the industry and exports and essential goods workers, civil servants and armed forces, and to place under its complete control all the products of state-run enterprises and the majority of small industries and handicraft cooperatives.

Each locality and region must step up production and purchase and secure goods for local consumption so as to relieve transportation problems.

Socialist trading must be boosted rapidly so as to dominate the market. Meanwhile, we must strengthen the management of the free market and struggle against market disruption activities. It is estimated that grain deliveries to the state in 1982 will increase by 32 percent over 1981; pork by 22 percent; soybeans by 300.3 percent; peanuts by 40 percent; jute by 20 percent; rush by 22 percent; salt by 48 percent; sauces by 23 percent; and sugar and honey by 30 percent.

The distribution of goods to the localities must be consistent with the local buying power and must be based on each locality's level of contribution to the country's requirements.

On the basis of accelerating the production of consumer goods, we must strive to put under state control all sources of goods so as to insure sufficient supplies of essential consumer goods such as cloth, writing materials, medicines, bicycle tires and tubes, soap, rush mats and porcelain items. We must strive to provide supplies of goods in accordance with the specified standards and quantities so as to stabilize the lives of workers, civil servants and armymen, paying special attention to big municipalities and concentrated industrial areas.

Despite difficulties, socialist trading must always prove itself to be the good housewife for all families and positively contribute to boosting production.

X -- FINANCE, CURRENCY AND PRICES

We must soon study financial and economic policies in order to develop an economy based on using one's potential and shifting from the subsidy system to business without state financial aid and from reliance on other people to mastery and self-reliance. We must develop the role of finance and money and accelerate the renovation of economic management and production development in order to stabilize and gradually improve the people's living conditions. We must standardize distribution according to the principle of distributing and consuming goods within the bounds of national income, secure additional reserves and gradually increase accumulations. We must strive to increase receipts, cut down on expenditures, harmonize and unify the management of monetary circulation and strengthen financial and monetary discipline.

Regarding prices and wages, we must satisfactorily resolve the consequences and problems resulting from price adjustments. On that basis, we must strive by all means possible to stabilize the new pricing system, including the purchase price, the wholesale price and the retail price, and strengthen pricing discipline. We must, through all measures, strive to maintain the actual salaries of workers and civil servants in order to ensure that they live decent, wealthy lives.

XI -- CULTURE, EDUCATION, PUBLIC HEALTH AND SOCIAL WELFARE

-- AS FOR THE RESEARCH TO BE CONDUCTED BY VARIOUS SOCIOSCIENCE BRANCHES: All socioscience branches must strive harder to develop their positive role on the ideological struggle front. They must step up the cultural and ideological revolution; closely combine activities concerning the propaganda and dissemination of Marxism-Leninism with efforts to propagandize the resolution of the fifth party congress; and step up research into various subjects on economic and social management, as well as into various specific subjects concerning the three revolutions. They must undertake studies on social science subjects concerning socialist collective ownership, the current socialist revolution and construction in our country, theories on the socialist state and socialist legislation and so forth.

-- REGARDING CULTURE AND INFORMATION: We must direct all cultural, information and artistic activities toward serving the political task of the party and the state and promoting the emulation movement to engage in productive labor and practice thrift in order to satisfactorily implement the 1982 State Plan. Meanwhile, we must struggle vigorously to counter the enemy's psychological warfare, oppose pessimism, negativism, and a lack of a sense of organization and discipline; and to do away with an enslaving and decadent culture and with superstition. Along with implementing various political tasks, we must vigorously develop all cultural and artistic activities which are aimed at promoting increased contributions to the state's coffers.

It is estimated that the total number of textbook pages to be printed will increase by 4 percent. We must reorganize publishing activities in order to improve the quality of books, newspapers and magazines; and must reduce the number of those books, newspapers and magazines which are not in great demand.

We must improve the quality of our radio and television broadcasts so that they can quickly disseminate the party and state's policies, and generate revolutionary enthusiasm and optimism among the people.

We must closely combine the production and publishing of films with the political tasks and must ensure that in business, income will cover expenditures and will provide some profits.

-- WITH REGARD TO EDUCATION: We must improve academic qualities comprehensively and continue to carry out step-by-step educational reform. We must encourage and properly guide the movement to engage in productive labor in order to turn out more products for society which are now being developed by various schools. We must pay attention to providing technical training and vocational orientation for high school graduates. We must step up on-the-job supplementary education activities and devise plans against the recurrence of illiteracy, especially in the mountainous provinces. We must increase in-school supplementary educational activities in the northern mountainous provinces and in the southern provinces. We must consolidate existing kindergarten classes in order to ensure that kindergarten education is given to 30 percent of the kindergarten-age children.

It is estimated that during the 1982-83 academic year, there will be about 1.5 million kindergarten students. Early in the academic year, there will be 12.3 million general education students (of these, 8.2 million are level-I elementary general education; 3.4 million level-II general education; and 75,000 level-III [senior] high school education.) The number of enrolled supplementary education students will be about 50,000 -- an increase of 15 percent.

-- WITH REGARD TO PUBLIC HEALTH, SOCIAL WELFARE, PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND SPORTS: We must step up the movement to practice sanitation against diseases and must increase the production of vaccines in order to prevent epidemics and other diseases. We must develop the grassroots-level health network, especially the village-level health network, in order to provide more care to the people. We must improve the quality of existing treatment and convalescence facilities and must quickly step up the construction of those projects financed by foreign countries.

An essential requirement to be met by us is that we must promote the planting and widespread use of medicinal herbs in every village and family and must increase the use of locally available medicinal raw materials in the pharmaceutical industry.

We must improve the management and distribution of medicine, with priority given to people under hospitalization, ensuring that medicine reaches the hands of patients. We must severely punish those who produce fake medicine.

It is estimated that we will have 11,430 treatment and convalescence facilities (including 2,100 village first-aid stations) with nearly 200,000 beds, an increase of 3.7 percent over 1981.

We must consolidate and perfect all facilities where disabled and sick soldiers are cared for, and must satisfactorily combine medical treatment with physical rehabilitation. We must study ways to revise the policy toward disabled soldiers and families of fallen heroes, and must satisfactorily implement military logistics policies.

We must improve the quality of day-care centers so that they can provide accommodations for 1.3 million children or so, an increase of 2 percent over 1981. Stepping up the movement to promote family planning must be regarded as the duty of every sector in order to reduce the population growth rate to 1.7 percent by 1985. Meanwhile, we must increase our care for women and children.

We must continue to expand the movement to maintain physical fitness among the people and must strive to do so in such a way that by 1982, we will have 2.6 million people who meet physical fitness standards, an increase of 4 percent; and will be able to increase the number of athletes by 2 percent over 1981.

THIRD PART

Organization of Management and Direction of Implementation

COMRADE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES, we are entering 1982 with a high degree of unanimity in assessing the situation and mapping out the path of the first part of the current transitional stage. We realize more fully the existing capabilities, as well as the latent potential, of our country, particularly in labor, land and industry, which are the first valuable resources we may use.

The 1982 State Plan has been formulated on the basis of a readjustment of a number of aspects in production, building and livelihood to make them suitable to actual economic conditions in order to concentrate necessary resources on the most important objectives and the most urgent needs, with a view to initially overcoming current difficulties and imbalances and, at the same time, creating a firm impetus for the economy in the coming years.

Since we still have to overcome the difficulties and imbalances left over from previous years, in order to partially stabilize the economy and livelihood, we must step up production, practice strict economy, reduce losses in energy and material supplies, correctly utilize our equipment, increase labor productivity and economic efficiency, resolutely increase income, and economize on spending in order to insure the balance of the state budget. In order to do so, we must adopt a host of appropriate measures, systems and policies. At the same time, developments in the situation will also depend greatly on decisive factors in organization and management and in the guidance of the various echelons, sectors and grassroots units.

The tasks which the plans for 1982 and subsequent years call for are extremely difficult:

-- From partial dependence on the outside in our social life, we must advance to meet all needs ourselves;
-- From a somewhat irrational economic structure, we must change to an economic structure suitable for our initial steps;
-- From a system of subsidized administrative management, we must change to a system of business management with profit-and-loss accounting which meets objective economic laws.

We are fully capable of exploiting these potentials if we firmly grasp and correctly apply the questions that take on the force of law in the correct path outlined by the fourth party congress. First of all, we must rapidly change from the system of subsidized administrative management to that of socialist business enterprise with profit-and-loss accounting; correctly implement the collective mastery system in various echelons; achieve correct unification and coordination of the three interests -- society's, the community's and the worker's individual interests -- and develop to a high degree the dynamism and creativity of grassroots units and the zeal of each person in productive labor as well as the sense of responsibility of various sectors and regions in directing the implementation of tasks.

For this reason, we must raise the spirit of self-reliance; develop the creativity of various sectors and regions, particularly of grassroots units; and develop the people's right to collective mastery to rapidly assure all essential requirements of production, livelihood, national defense and security. The situation urgently demands that we achieve, in 1982, a deep change in all economic and social domains, gradually overcome imbalances, and ensure the creation of a new balance and a new order to advance the economy. To this end, in all echelons and sectors and among the people, there must be a basic change in ideological awareness and formulation of plans and a change of the management system and organization of implementation of tasks. In particular, we must make every citizen, worker, peasant and combatant in the armed forces and every manual and intellectual worker see their role and responsibility as masters at their own installation, cooperative, factory, construction site and state farm, to whip up a revolutionary movement with a view to successfully fulfilling the aims and tasks of the state plan. We must adopt new managerial procedures and apply the motto: "The central government, localities, establishments, the state and the people all join forces in doing things," to rapidly ensure our requirements in consumption while gradually creating accumulations in the economy in general as well as in each region, sector and establishment in particular.

Proceeding from these ways of laying down tasks, we must:

1. STRENGTHEN AND IMPROVE ECONOMIC MANAGEMENT. We must rapidly eliminate the system of subsidized administrative management and set up the system of socialist business management with profit-and-loss accounting, in line with the gradual advance to large-scale socialist production. We must continue to study, so as to perfect the plan on changing the economic management task. While the question is not yet fundamentally resolved, we must concretely solve a number of urgent issues concerning the relations between the central and local economies and concerning the development of the right of grassroots units, localities and sectors to actively engage in production and business under the unified and centralized management of the state. We must strengthen the socialist economic legal system, consolidate the state's right of centralized management, set up the socialist state's order and discipline, overcome the situation of dispersion and separation in organization of management and production and the cumbersome and slow state and the lack of efficiency and rules and regulations in the managerial apparatus and methods.

2. CONTINUE TO CHANGE PLANNING WORK LINKED TO PROFIT-AND-LOSS ACCOUNTING AND SOCIALIST BUSINESS ENTERPRISE.

A) In order to develop existing capabilities and latent potential in the country, we must change planning work and bring about the formulation of plans at the three fundamental levels, linking planning to profit-and-loss accounting and socialist business enterprise. We must formulate plans at the level of agricultural and industrial installations and pay special attention to the plans of localities, particularly to formulating plans at the district level. This is a question which takes on the force of law and ensures the development of local economy and a rapid increase in goods production, expands the domestic market and achieves labor distribution and division throughout the country.

WE MUST ACTIVELY BUILD 400 DISTRICTS, considering them as important sites for materializing economic collective mastery, linked to collective mastery in other fields. We must regard the districts as economic structures (in which cooperatives, production groups, small enterprises and other economic units are grassroots units). We must use districts as sites for the division of labor, reorganization of production, good utilization of labor and land, pushing ahead scientific and technical revolution, carrying out intensive and specialized farming, and developing trades producing goods for export.

In order to achieve this vigorous development, the growth of economic sectors at the central level alone is insufficient, even though this is a very important direction. Every sector and echelon must have its power and responsibility clearly defined to know clearly how much labor and land is under its control, how many trades and material bases there are and what volume of material supplies and goods are annually received from the state and, consequently, how much should be turned out through production and expanded reproduction to ensure livelihood within the scope of its responsibility. At the same time, they must know the quantity of products they deliver to the state and the amount they contribute to national construction and defense. In this manner, we must improve the control number system and the system of plan targets assigned to the sectors, localities and grassroots units.

B) PLANS MUST BE IMBUED WITH THE PARTY LINE, correctly apply economic laws and translate the party's economic line and strategy into economic structure, steps and scope and into a rational tempo of development of various sectors and localities, in line with the characteristics of the situation at each stage in order to stabilize and develop the economy and society, build a material and technical base of socialism and consolidate national defense.

C) Plans must ensure POSITIVE AND FIRM balance, fully exploit all CAPABILITIES, with a view to meeting the reasonable needs of society at each stage. First of all, they must ensure a CONCENTRATED AND UNIFORM balance among key targets, important projects and essential products of the national economy. We must overcome the tendency to treat all targets and projects without discrimination, which does not ensure conditions for implementation.

D) Plans must be formulated in the spirit of profit-and-loss accounting and SOCIALIST BUSINESS ENTERPRISE, in order to exploit all latent potential and ensure that labor productivity, product quality and economic efficiency are increased. We must unify material with value plans. Financial plans must be formulated and adopted at the same time as production and business plans.

In order to satisfactorily meet this requirement, we must strengthen accounting work and economic communications and consolidate the system of inventory and bookkeeping, particularly at grassroots levels, while strengthening control and inspection work, fully implementing the system of responsibility and discipline in making honest, timely and accurate reports and effectively supporting the party's and the state's leadership and economic management.

E) Plans must be coordinated with market practice. They must take into consideration the requirements of the organized market and lead the free market into the orbit of the state plan. We must utilize economic leverage, price, monetary and financial policies and policies encouraging production, such as wages and bonuses.

F) We must link economic plans to scientific and technical plans which are aimed at insuring that the plan norms reflect a positive character while being scientifically based. We must carry out basic surveys, zoning, planning, economic forecasts and analyses, set up and gradually perfect the single price system, the system of standards and progressive economic and technical norms, perfect the method of balanced calculations, map out and choose economic and technical projects with firm bases.

G) We must strengthen the organization and cadres under the system of plans from the central level to the sectors and localities, particularly districts and grassroots areas in order that the party's and the state's economic staff function may be satisfactorily fulfilled. We must resolutely and gradually change the contingent of leading, managerial and technical, and professional cadres in all echelons, sectors and grassroots units. We must correctly arrange, utilize well and constantly foster the existing cadres. We must train new cadres of increasingly high quality.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY DEPUTIES, entering 1982, the tasks of building and developing the economy and society are very great and urgent. With the strength of unity and cohesion of the whole party, people and the armed forces; with the valuable lessons of experience in economic management and guidance of the various echelons and sectors and of the large number of cadres over the past years, with the resolutions which will be passed by the forthcoming Fifth VCP Congress and which will constitute illuminating torches and a great source of encouragement for the people throughout the country. For the sake of the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness, let the workers, peasants, revolutionary intellectuals, other laboring strata, the combatants in the armed forces and the compatriots of all nationalities throughout the country uphold revolutionary heroism; develop the spirit of self-reliance, the tradition of valiant struggle and diligent and creative labor; whip up a labor, production and economy emulation drive; realistically greet the fifth party congress; strive to bring about new economic and social developments and successfully implement the 1982 State Plan, thus creating conditions for advancing more vigorously in the subsequent years of the 1981-85 5-Year Plan.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 017

26 January 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Suzuki Reveals Correspondence With Jaruzelski C 1
MITI's Abe Views Urgency of Trade Issue C 1

NORTH KOREA

25 Jan SR-71 Infiltration Termed 'Aggressive' D 1
Text of 26 Jan Kim Il Talk on Reunification D 1
NODONG SINMUN Scores U.S. 'Policy of Strength' [23 Jan] D 5
NODONG SINMUN Criticizes U.S. Support for Israel [25 Jan] D 5
NODONG SINMUN Urges Release of Kim Tae-chung [23 Jan] D 6
NODONG SINMUN Stresses Trait of Independence [24 Jan] D 7
Kim Il-song Sends Greetings to Indian President D 8

SOUTH KOREA

Text of Chon Tu-hwan Address on Unification [KOREA HERALD 23 Jan] E 1
PRC, USSR Got Advance Word of 22 Jan Proposal [KYONGHYANG SINMUN 25 Jan] E 11
KOREA HERALD Hails Red Cross Overture on Talks [24 Jan] E 11
Korean Resident in PRC Returns, Meets Family E 12

KAMPUCHEA

Further Materials on Commemoration of New Year
Heng Samrin Reception Speech H 1
Chan Ven Remarks at Reception H 1
Chan Si Visit to SRV Experts H 1
Pen Navouth Greeting H 2
Chan Si Message Hails LPLA Founding Anniversary H 2
Heng Samrin Thanks French Medical Aid Committee H 3
Bou Thang Thanks Syria for Aid Donation H 4
PLO Delegation Departs After Visit, Talks H 4
World Food Program Delegation's Visit Reported H 4
VODK: Protest Against French Film Lodged in UN H 5

LAOS

Kaysone Report to People's Council Plenum I 1
SIANG PASASON Hails LPLA Founding Anniversary [20 Jan] I 14

VIETNAM

Le Thanh Nghi Attends Hai Hung Party Congress	K 1
Ho Chi Minh City Holds Party Congress 11-18 Jan	K 2
Ha Nam Ninh Province Holds Party Congress	K 3
All-Army Party Organization Congress Concludes	K 4
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial [21 Jan]	K 5
Letter to All Personnel	K 7
Hau Giang Province Holds Party Congress	K 8
NHAN DAN Editorial Praises Party Congresses [23 Jan]	K 9
Le Duc Tho Speaks on VCP Draft Documents	K 9
Pham Van Dong Speech to National Assembly [NHAN DAN 31 Dec]	K 9
Variations of Truong Chinh Assembly Speech [cross-reference] [NHAN DAN 31 Dec]	K 15
NHAN DAN Urges State-People Cooperation [12 Jan]	K 16
Vo Chi Cong Speech Ends Contractual Work Meeting	K 17
Tran Quoc Han Addresses Meeting of Ethnic Women	K 19
Hanoi Committee Solicits Retired Cadres' Views	K 19
Pham Hung Sends Tet Message to Security Forces	K 20
Vo Nguyen Giap Attends Cuban Envoy's Party	K 20

SUZUKI REVEALS CORRESPONDENCE WITH JARUZELSKI

OW260349 Tokyo KYODO in English 0311 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki revealed Tuesday he sent a letter to Polish military leader Gen Wojciech Jaruzelski on January 16 in which he expressed the hope that Poland will solve its present problems through its own hands. He also told reporters that he welcomed moves in Poland for lifting martial law, imposed more than six weeks ago.

He noted that Jaruzelski told the Polish parliament on Monday that the martial law restrictions could be partially or entirely lifted by the end of February, if there were no attempts at organizing strikes or other illegal protests. Despite the conditions, Suzuki said he regards Jaruzelski's statement as a step toward a peaceful solution of the present situation.

Suzuki said his letter, in reply to one received from the Polish leader on January 5, expressed deep apprehension over the present situation in Poland and hoped the country would achieve a solution through its own hands. He also declared that Japan will maintain economic relations already promised to Poland.

As to future economic measures to be taken in respect to Poland, Suzuki told reporters Japan will closely watch whether conditions for easing sanctions materialize by the end of February. As conditions for easing economic sanctions, Foreign Ministry sources have cited three points -- lifting of martial law, release of persons arrested for political reasons and national reconciliation through talks with the church and the Solidarity union.

MITI'S ABE VIEWS URGENCY OF TRADE ISSUE

OW260835 Tokyo KYODO in English 0815 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, international trade and industry minister, said Tuesday Japan's trade disputes with the United States and European Community (EC) must be settled by an economic summit of seven industrialized democracies scheduled for June in Paris.

He told a Japan Press Club working luncheon: "The next two or three months will be crucial" for the trade issue, adding that, "We don't have much time." Abe said the government will announce decisions on Saturday to erase or remove 67 of 99 testing and inspection rules, which the U.S. and EC have labeled as "nontariff barriers" impeding imports. He also said that a government "ombudsman" will be named to handle the remaining grievances.

Abe indicated that Japan will lift curbs on some of 27 items, mainly farm products, which are subject to import quotas. "It's not good (for Japan) to put off our reponse to the U.S. and EC requests regarding not only nontariff barriers, but the items under import restrictions," he said. Abe added: "We need to sit on at a table by the end of March" to negotiate trade in leather goods, one of the items specifically mentioned by the Americans.

Asked about Japanese car exports, Abe, who returned from a visit to the U.S. earlier this month, said he understoood the American automakers were "really in great difficulties."

But he stopped short of saying exactly at what level Japan will hold its car shipments to the U.S. in fiscal 1982 (beginning in April) -- the second year of "self-restraint" under the bilateral agreement of May last year. Abe said that the number of cars for shipment in fiscal 1982 will be determined under provisions of the agreement, while paying consideration to the prospects for car demand in the U.S. market.

25 JAN SR-71 INFILTRATION TERMED 'AGGRESSIVE'

SK251543 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1504 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] U.S. imperialist aggression forces have committed an act of espionage by infiltrating an SR-71 spy plane deep into our territorial airspace.

The U.S. aggressors are running amok to commit reconnaissance acts against the northern half of the republic, while massively building up their aggressive military power in South Korea in recent days. At around 0923 on the morning of 25 January, the U.S. aggressors committed an act of espionage by again infiltrating an SR-71, high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance aircraft deep into the airspace over Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country, flying it from the airspace over the seas off Wonsan, Hamhung, and Chongjin to the airspace over the sea off Sosura, North Hamgyong Province.

Their reckless aggressive act of infiltrating without reservation a high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance aircraft deep into our country is a very dangerous military provocation which may result in an irrevocable situation. Although the U.S. aggressors continuously infiltrate spy planes deep into our airspace [chongsim], they try to cover up their reconnaissance acts by an absurd sophistry, saying that they are within the so-called international airspace.

However they may try to employ any sophistry, they cannot cover up their aggressive nature and cannot shirk their responsibilities as violators of peace. All facts clearly show that the U.S. aggressors are shameless aggressors who do not abide by basic international rules. All the Korean people are now watching with surging indignation their reckless military provocation. The U.S. aggressors should face up to reality and should immediately stop all hostile acts against our country.

TEXT OF 26 JAN KIM IL TALK ON REUNIFICATION

SK260423 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2220 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 26 (KCNA) -- Comrade Kim Il, vice-president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and chairman of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland, published the following talk on January 26: 37 years have already passed since our nation was divided by the outside forces. As the years go by, the misfortunes of national division pile up more heavily in the hearts of our people and their desire for reunification becomes more ardent. Great obstacles still lie in the way of the reunification despite the unanimous desire of the entire fellow countrymen.

Originally the North and South of Korea had been one indivisible territorial land. To reunify the divided country is an inevitable demand of the history of the nation and an unshakeable will of the nation.

Today when the division of the country remains to prolong indefinitely, we should take into deep consideration this important national question decisive of the destinies of the 50 million fellow countrymen and the country and seek the way for reunification with sincerity.

The Workers Party of Korea and the Government of the DPRK have always defined the national reunification as the supreme national task and put forward all the possible proposals to carry out this task and made every effort to promote the unity of the nation and accelerate the national reunification. As is well known, we have advanced earlier the proposal for establishing a unified central government through general elections in the North and the South on a democratic basis after the withdrawal of the foreign troops, and a series of transitional steps for coming closer to the complete reunification through intermediary process, taking into consideration the conditions where the immediate holding of general elections in the North and the South was difficult due to the wide differences between the North and the South.

In particular, respected President Kim Il-song, having penetrated into the changed reality where the division was further deepening and the surrounding situation getting complicated, put forward at the historic sixth congress of the Workers Party of Korea held in 1980 an epochal national salvation proposal for reunification on founding a confederal republic through the establishment of a unified national government on condition that the North and the South leave the two social systems as they are, a government in which the two sides are represented on an equal footing and under which they exercise regional autonomy respectively with equal rights and duties.

This fair and reasonable proposal acceptable to anyone has called forth a great echo at home and abroad for its realistic and reasonable nature and enjoys the unanimous support of all the peoples aspiring after the country's reunification. This is quite natural.

At present, both in view of the reality of our country in which the two diametrically different social systems exist in the North and the South and in the light of the surrounding situation, the only way of solving at the earliest date our reunification question in conformity with the common interests of the nation is to found a unified state, independent, neutral and peaceful, by realizing the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo. We are convinced that the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is the only feasible and realistic one for reunification acceptable to the whole nation in the North and the South. It goes without saying that if anyone puts forward any other good proposal, we are ready to approach it affirmatively.

If the so-called "unification proposal" brought forward by the South Korean rulers recently stems from a sincere desire for reunification, we would not have turned away from it but attached due importance to it. But, to our regret, it cannot be considered a "proposal" worthy of any positive significance.

They have put forward what they call "proposal for general elections," whose aim is said to accomplish unification through the procedures of forming a "Consultative Council for National Unification" with representatives from the North and the South speaking for the will of people, which would draw up a constitution, of holding a national referendum on the constitution, forming the "National Assembly" through "general elections" and instituting a unified government. This is nothing but a formality of politics ignoring the actual reality of our country.

In the light of the actual complicated North-South relations, it is clear to everyone that a possible time for general elections is far off and, moreover, it is not logical to hold "general elections" according to "principles of national self-determination" and "democratic-procedure" while leaving foreign troops and maintaining military fascist system in South Korea as they are.

As for the formation of a "Consultative Council for National Unification" with those who "represent the will of people," it cannot but be regarded merely as empty talk under the present state of harsh repression where the conscientious people who speak for the demands of the popular masses are all cast into prison and their political activities banned by law in South Korea.

It is quite doubtful whether they who have come out, while turning their faces away from the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, the shortest way to the country's reunification, with the "proposal for general elections" to which we have to go a long way are desirous of bringing earlier reunification or not.

What increases such suspicion is the question of concluding an "agreement on basic relations between North and South" that has been presented by them as a "practical step" till reunification. When we say a transitional phasal step for complete reunification, it should, on all accounts, be a measure to remove the barrier between the North and the South and accelerate unity and collaboration to promote the fusion as one and the same nation.

This "agreement on basic relations between North and South," however, is aimed to build higher the barrier between North and South and freeze by law the status quo of the North-South division so as to live separated into "two countries" and "two nations" forever. This method, of course, is not their invention but a mere copy of the German method that legalized the existence as two separate states. It is designed to fix the division of our country through the agreement between the two sides of the North and the South and is a replica and continuation of the splittist June 23rd statement proclaiming "two Koreas" a policy, which was made public by their predecessor under the manipulation of the United States.

When we consider the so-called "unification proposal" of theirs against the background of the "argument for unification in the 2000's" brought forward of late by the South Korean ruling circles, it is clear to everyone whether it is truly a proposal for reunification or a splittist proposal veiled with reunification.

No one must flout the sacred reunification question of the nation. If they truly want to correctly solve the problem of reunification, they must neither quote the elementary schema of politics nor follow others' example, but proceed from the reality of our country, that is, start with removing the main obstacles to reunification existing in our country.

To this end, as a step of the first stage of reunification, the U.S. troops must be withdrawn from South Korea, democratization be carried out there and the anti-communist confrontation policy be brought to an end. This is the most fundamental question arising in achieving reunification on the basis of the publicly-approved three principles for national reunification -- independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity -- and the primary question which must be solved first without fail, whatever proposal the problem of our country's reunification may be based on.

First of all, the U.S. military occupation of South Korea, the main obstacle to the country's reunification, must be ended. As long as the U.S. troops stay in South Korea and the U.S. policy of interference continues, the country's reunification question cannot be solved according to the independent will and demand of the Korean people and our nation's desire for reunification will always be trampled underfoot by the U.S. policy of aggression.

The approach to the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. troops is the approach to the reunification question and a touchstone distinguishing the stand for reunification from the stand for division. If anyone truly takes the stand for reunification, he must demand the withdrawal of the U.S. troops and if one wants to put forward a correct proposal for reunification, he must, of course, advance a proposal for the withdrawal of the U.S. troops.

If the national reunification is to be achieved, the fascist rule in South Korea must be destroyed and democracy be enforced as well.

To ensure democratic rights to the popular masses, the subject of reunification is a basic guarantee for solving the reunification question in conformity with the will and interests of the people.

The people are neither able to freely discuss the reunification question nor able to widely participate in the reunification movement under the present fascist rule over South Korea. If the South Korean rulers really have the intention to solve the reunification question in accordance with the will of the people, they must give up the fascist rule and take practical measures for democratization before talking about the reunification question.

As such steps, they must repeal all the fascist laws and destroy fascist machines repressing the democratic rights in South Korea and thoroughly guarantee without any reservation the freedom of speech, the press, assembly, association and demonstration and all other democratic rights including the freedom of formation and activities of democratic political parties and organizations advocating national reunification.

For the reunification of the country, the anti-communist confrontation policy must be renounced in South Korea and great national unity be promoted as well. If any side of the North and the South oppose and try to destroy the other side, national unity cannot be achieved nor the country's reunification be realized any time. This would lead to a permanent division and to a fratricidal war. If one truly wants reunification, he should not pursue anti-communist confrontation but seek national reconciliation and unity and remove factors obstructing North-South unity.

The anti-communist laws inciting confrontation between the North and the South must be repealed, organizations opposing our republic be dissolved and the anti-communist agitation encouraging confrontation and enmity be stopped.

All these primary and essential points for national reunification must be solved by none other than the South Korean authorities. We consider that the South Korean authorities must show their sincerity to the nation insolving these unavoidable problems. We will always trust anyone who shows such attitude and, on this basis, gladly join hands with him on the road of settling the question of national reunification.

As for the present rulers of South Korea, they are under obligation to atone for the crimes they have committed against the nation, apart from the above-mentioned questions of principle. They must give up their "two Koreas" policy and apologize to the nation for their crimes in massacring fellow countrymen, release the political prisoners and give full political freedom to all people whose political activities are banned.

We are ready to meet the present South Korean rulers even tomorrow, if they show their new start by their deed by removing these obstacles blocking the way of national reunification.

In that case, the reunification consultative body to be organized may take any form -- be it a conference for promotion of national reunification or a "Consultative Council for National Unification." We will not be nervous about its name. We only hold that the authorities of the North and the South and representatives of different parties and groupings and of all strata at home and abroad should participate in it and there all reunification proposals to be raised including the proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and immediate questions for developing the North-South relations in the interests of the national reunification should be discussed.

Our stand is clear. The question wholly depends on how the present rulers of South Korea, who create basic obstacles to reunification, should act.

Together with all the compatriots who aspire after the independent and peaceful reunification of the country so earnestly, we will continue to watch the attitude of the present rulers of South Korea and patiently wait for an affirmative measure to be taken in South Korea for removing the obstacles to reunification.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES U.S. 'POLICY OF STRENGTH'

SK251039 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1024 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 25 (KCNA) -- The U.S. Defence Department recently proposed to increase the military appropriations by billions of dollars in fiscal 1983 and, earlier, the U.S. Congress carried a bill on a record defence expenditure for the new fiscal year. This comes under fire in an article of NODONG SINMUN January 23 titled "Anachronistic Policy of Strength."

The U.S. authorities, it says, are these days kicking up quite a din over the "policy of strength," crying for the "rebirth of the United States of strong military capacity" and "restoration of world leadership by strength."

The U.S. "policy of strength" is a policy of aggression and war for gratifying its dominationist desire by bringing other countries to their knees with strength, bringing the superiority in military strentgh" in the foreground.

The article points out that the U.S. imperialists are putting spurs to the development and production of the neutron bombs, medium-range nuclear missiles and other mass destruction weapons, expanding aggressive military bases in many regions of the world, increasing the number of the U.S. troops stationed abroad and frequently staging military exercises everywhere.

The article continues: All these show that today the United States is escalating its war manoeuvres against the world peace-loving people and its "policy of strength" in seeking world supremacy is entering a very adventurous stage. The "policy of strength" to which the United States is clinging so desperately today is a product of the serious crisis it is facing.

The anti-government struggle and anti-war peace movement are growing among the American people and the internal contradictions are becoming acute in the ruling circles. And it must be noted that the United States is undergoing an economic bankruptcy and social confusion unprecedented in history, consequent upon its reactionary economic policy. It is dealt a hard blow externally, too. It is isolated from and rejected by the people everywhere in the world.

Thus, getting into hot water internally and externally, the United States is desperately resorting to the "policy of strength," largely increasing its aggressive armed forces and military bases and intensifying war exercises theratening and blackmailing other countries, seeking a way out of the tight fix in aggression and war.

Noting that the U.S. "policy of strength" contradicts the trend of the times, the article stresses that it will not bring a good result to the United States either.

NODONG SINMUN CRITICIZES U.S. SUPPORT FOR ISRAEL

SK251045 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1031 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 25 (KCNA) -- The United States exercised a veto against a just draft resolution submitted by the Arab countries recently to the United Nations Security Council calling for taking sanctions against Israel.

In this connection, NODONG SINMUN today runs a commentary titled "Vicious Act Against Arab People." The commentary says: This reveals the hypocritic nature of U.S. imperialism and clearly shows that it is an out-and-out patron and accomplice of Zionism. Noting that when the Israeli aggressors decided to annex the Golan Heights, the United States, pretending to be "indignant," babbled about the suspension of the validity of the "agreement on strategic cooperation" concluded with Israel and the like, the commentary says: this was a mere gesture to deceive world public opinion.

The commentary goes on to say: This move of U.S. imperialism is a grave criminal one barring the just cause of the Arab people and a vicious challenge to the Arab people and the peace-loving people of the world demanding the withdrawal of Israel from the Arab lands it occupied including the Golan Heights. The Korean people bitterly denounce the criminal acts of U.S. imperialism against the Arab people.

The Syrian president recently reaffirmed the determination of his people to liberate the occupied lands and the Arab countries are taking joint steps against the vicious moves of the Israeli aggressors. The Korean people express firm support and solidarity for the Syrian and other Arab people in their just cause of taking back the lost Arab lands and defending national dignity and sovereignty. The U.S. imperialists and the Israeli expansionists must look squarely at the trend of the times and act with discretion.

NODONG SINMUN URGES RELEASE OF KIM TAE-CHUNG

SK230606 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korea 2253 GMT 22 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 23 January commentary: "Kim Tae-chung Should Be Released Immediately"]

[Text] The life of democratic figure Kim Tae-chung is being constantly threatened. He is languishing in a local prison, having endured inhumane treatment for more than 2 years after being sentenced to life imprisonment. He is imprisoned in a room with a specially-constructed wall and is isolated from others. He is suffering the aftermath of barbarous torture and chronic disease in a cold room without a ventilator. He has been denied medical treatment and cannot receive things sent to him. Meetings with his family are restricted.

This shows that the Chon Tu-hwan clique has not allowed Kim Tae-chung the basic conditions generally guaranteed for prisoners. Kim Tae-chung is suffering much more cruel punishment under the Chon Tu-hwan clique's fascist repression than is known. The Chon Tu-hwan clique's fascist repression against Kim Tae-chung is an outrageous violation against democracy, justice and human rights. The suppression of popular political rivals is a filthy tactic of dictators to maintain their system. Usurping power through dark plots, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is running amok to repress the patriotic people, students, democratic figures, journalists and religious figures to eliminate democratic forces and to revive and perpetuate the Yusin dictatorship.

The fascist clique randomly arrested and imprisoned its opponents by fabricating crimes. It is brutally torturing and punishing them. The Chon Tu-hwan clique's brutal suppression of Kim Tae-chung is part of its political acts of terrorism to eliminate patriotic democratic forces at the point of guns and bayonets and to maintain the military fascist rule. This is a premeditated plot to permanently eliminate him politically and physically.

Frightened by the influence at home and abroad of Kim Tae-chung's just activities for the democratization of South Korean society and his political activities, the Chon Tu-hwan clique has used every means to eliminate him. Staging a murderous trial, the fascist clique sentenced Kim Tae-chung to death by fabricating crimes which even former dictators did not dare dream up.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique, compelled to revoke the death sentence given Kim Tae-chung because of the people's opposition and the world's denunciation, commuted his death sentence to life imprisonment. This is not something raved about by the puppet clique. This is only another way to eliminate Kim Tae-chung. The reduction from capital punishment to life imprisonment is a cruel, wicked, bloodsucker's act to politically eliminate and slowly kill him in prison.

In order to attain such objectives, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, imprisoning Kim Tae-chung in an isolated cell, is perpetrating unimaginable cruel acts against him. The Chon Tu-hwan clique, removing Kim Tae-chung to a secluded local prison, is raving about the reduction of his punishment as an act of leniency. This is merely a trick to conceal the Kim Tae-chung incident, cover up its fascist nature and mislead public opinion. The Chon Tu-hwan clique's brutal suppression of democratic figures, including Kim Tae-chung, could be perpetrated only by political gangsters and murderers who unhesitatingly kill the people and commit any political plot to stay in power.

It was revealed that Yi Chae-mun, who was arrested in the incident of the National Liberation Front fabricated late last year and was sentenced to death, was slaughtered in prison even before the execution could take place. This evokes our concern over the life of Kim Tae-chung. The Chon Tu-hwan clique, the human butcher and the fascist hangman, can commit any atrocity against Kim Tae-chung. Such bestial acts of the Chon Tu-hwan clique are being cursed and denounced by the South Korean people and overseas compatriots. They are arousing severe protests by the world's progressive people who treasure human rights and democracy.

It is foolish for the Chon Tu-hwan clique to smash democracy and maintain its fascist dictatorship through fascist suppression of democratic figures such as Kim Tae-chung. This will only lead to the downfall of the Chon Tu-hwan clique. The Chon Tu-hwan clique should heed the world's public opinion and the trend of the time and immediately stop repressing Kim Tae-chung. Kim Tae-chung should be immediately released, and the crimes imposed on him should be unconditionally canceled. The fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique should ponder the consequences of the brutal suppression of Kim Tae-chung and immediately step down from power.

NODONG SINMUN STRESSES TRAIT OF INDEPENDENCE

SK251025 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1004 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 25 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Sunday carries an article headlined "To Foster Independence Is an Important Requirement for Making Popular Masses Master of Revolution," which reads in part: With the elucidation by the chuche idea of the truth that independence is what keeps man alive, a most correct view of nature of man has been established and a true road has been illumined for the popular masses to fight on staunchly as the master of the revolution.

As our party clarified, independence is an attribute of man who wants to live an independent life as the master of the world and his destiny. Man is the master of everything and a most powerful being deciding everything, as he is possessed of independence. Only when the popular masses give full scope to independence can they shape their destiny by themselves, oppose all manner of exploitation and subjugation and successfully build socialism and communism. To foster independence is a fundamental guarantee for making people the master of their destiny and the master of revolution. This is why our party regards it as the key point deciding success in the revolutionary struggle and constructive work to foster independence of the popular masses and directs great efforts to it.

Independence is not a natural attribute of man, but an attribute which is formed and developed socio-historically. It is an attribute which society grants to man.

As our party expounded, independence is a demand and reflection of social practice. The social practice is an active and purposeful action of the popular masses for transforming nature and society and shaping their destiny. What is important in the social practice for fostering the independence of the working masses is labour and revolutionary struggle. Labour helps the people not only possess the consciousness of independence but also cultivate the ability to act independently. It helps promote the development of thinking and language and enrich knowledge of nature to form and develop the mental faculties of people, a guarantee for their independent activity. Therefore, if the working masses are to foster independence, they should take an active part in labour and this course is an important factor for them to be a powerful being transforming nature.

The revolutionary struggle is, in essence, a struggle for the working masses to oppose all forms of fetters and subordination and defend their independence. In the practice of the revolutionary struggle the people become conscious of their social and class position and possess the consciousness of independence, the revolutionary spirit to fight against all forms of exploitation and oppression, subjugation and fetters. It is a law-governed phenomenon that independence increases as the social system changes and develops through the historic struggle of the popular masses. When the old social system is removed in a revolutionary way to give place to the advanced socialist system, a radical turn takes place in the position and role of the working masses and independence is increased. Therefore, if a party of the working class is to realize the independence of the popular masses, it must establish an advanced socialist system and constantly consolidate and develop it.

In order to fully realize the independence of the working masses, it is necessary to finally liquidate the leftovers of the old society in all fields of social life including politics and economy, ideology and culture, while transforming the old social system. A party of the working class must carry forward the revolution to finally eliminate the leftovers of the old society and completely free the working masses from all forms of domination, subordination and social inequality. These tasks are fulfilled through the three revolutions: ideological, technical and cultural. On the basis of the original exposition that independence is a social offspring, our party is wisely leading the work of fostering the independence of the working masses.

KIM IL-SONG SENDS GREETINGS TO INDIAN PRESIDENT

SK252344 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2259 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 26 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, sent a message of greetings on January 25 to Neelam Sanjiva Reddy, president of the Republic of India, on the occasion of the 32nd anniversary of the founding of the Republic of India.

The message reads: On the 32nd anniversary of the founding of the Republic of India I warmly congratulate your excellency, your government and people on behalf of the government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Korean people and on my own.

The Korean people are pleased with the great successes made by the Indian people in their endeavours to build a rich and powerful India in the spirit of self-reliance and their active efforts in the international arena for peace and expansion and development of the Nonaligned Movement.

Convinced that the friendly and cooperative relations between our two countries will strengthen and develop with each passing day in conformity with the ideas of independence and nonalignment I take this opportunity to sincerely wish you great successes in your work.

TEXT OF CHON TU-HWAN ADDRESS ON UNIFICATION

SK222358 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 23 Jan 82 pp 4, 5

["Text" of 22 January new year policy statement by South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan at National Assembly in Seoul]

[Text] Mr speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the National Assembly: I wish to pay the highest tribute to you for your endeavors since the launching of the Fifth Republic to lay the groundwork for a new constitutional government and promote a political atmosphere befitting the new era. It is a great pleasure to expound upon basic policies for this new year before such a distinguished group, with whom I will be discussing affairs of state often throughout the year.

1981 was a year in which we extricated ourselves from political and social chaos and restored stability, thus creating a new horizon for the nation. We have toiled hard, pooled our wisdom and risen with courage to cultivate and build a democracy ensuring economic well-being, social justice and innovation in education and culture. As a result, substantive progress was achieved, including a seven-percent economic growth -- a reversal of the negative growth of 1980.

Last year, we began to prepare a solid foundation for political modernization, a major goal of the new era. Fatuous political behavior characterized by strife and confrontation, and opposition for the sake of opposition, is gradually fading away and being replaced by a judicious nurturing of the national strength through dialogue and compromise. In keeping with this new political climate, we have made major efforts to ensure clean government dedicated to providing maximum public service with minimum pomp and waste.

The past year was particularly significant in terms of foreign relations. Our self-confidence and the position of Korea in the international community was further reinforced through official visits to the United States of America and the five ASEAN countries. At the same time, the existing ties with other free nations were cemented and cooperation with the nonaligned nations expanded. Korean diplomacy has thus become very effective in diversifying, as well as improving, relations with the rest of the world. Furthermore, the Jan 12 and June 5 proposals of last year, designed to ease tensions on the Korean Peninsula and press forward with peaceful unification, are receiving ever-increasing and broadening support from the international community.

The international image of Korea is also embodied in the decision to award Seoul the 1988 Olympics, the greatest festival of mankind. Together with the awarding of the 1986 Asian Games to Seoul, this is a triumph of Korean diplomacy, made possible by national unity.

Economically, 1981 was a year of trials and adversities, which we overcame with tenacious inner strength, achieving even better results than originally projected. Although the exports of industrial nations declined by one percent, Korea's exports rose by 20 percent, owing chiefly to spectacular growth in sales to Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Latin America and Africa. Initially, prices were expected to increase more than 20 percent, but actual inflation remained at a level slightly above 10 percent. This should enable us to decrease the chronic inflation considerably and place the Korean economy on a stable foundation. Determined efforts have been made to promote economic progress and maturity by reinforcing business resilience, allowing greater autonomy in the banking industry, promoting a privately-led economic system and opening wider the doors of the domestic market. These are very significant developments, even though they may not produce quick tangible results.

Last year the government endeavored vigorously to eliminate the root cause of injustice and impropriety and to cultivate justice and order throughout society. It pushed energetically ahead with various social reforms and the Saemaul undong (new community movement) to create an environment conducive to attaining our desired goals and to increase the maturity of Korean society.

These energetic efforts last year produced no small results, for which credit is due to all people who have worked so hard, including the members of the National Assembly. But I must add that I have mentioned only [the] bright side of the past year. There were also many unwelcome developments. We must frankly admit that though many things were achieved, many were left unaccomplished; though we made many proper decisions, we failed to correct many wrongs.

Our shortcomings are manifold and include several serious problems. I wish, however, to take this opportunity to mention only the three most urgent issues and appeal for a united endeavor to remedy them.

First, hidden pockets of corruption must be uprooted. Vigorous efforts have already been made, but my honest feeling is that we still have a long way to go. A rigorous crackdown can be first aid treatment but is hardly the prescription for a complete and lasting cure. I am convinced that corruption will actually be eliminated only when everybody determines to repudiate it personally, for as long as anyone is inclined that way, corruption will raise its ugly head at any opportunity. We will be able to say that Korea has become clean and incorruptible only when there is a climate prohibitive of corruption, so that even though there is temptation, there is no need for a crackdown.

Ladies and gentlemen of the National Assembly, clean politics is the key to an incorruptible country. Political corruption is at the root of and fosters corruption in the economy, in public administration and in society at large. Our history succinctly testifies to that. The ultimate cause of the persistent tendency of citizens to act unscrupulously is directly related to the state of politics. Of course, the present state of affairs cannot be blamed on the new generation of politicians. But even if you are not responsible for the genesis of corruption, you, as well as the rest of us, are responsible for its extermination.

In addition to an increased effort to achieve clean government and public administration, I renew my urgent call for all assemblymen to also exert a more strenuous effort to ensure integrity in all political activities, the political parties and the National Assembly. I urge you to exert even more vigorous efforts to establish a new image for parliamentary politics, characterized by activities which are aboveboard and require a minimum of funding.

The second point I wish to make is the need to dispel the deep-seated inflationary psychology. Probably the most urgent problem confronting the Korean economy is the inflationary expectations that have been firmly embedded in the attitudes of all citizens -- businessmen, workers and consumers -- as well as in the economic system itself.

Because of this ingrained psychology, producers tended to raise prices in anticipation of increased costs while workers insisted on continual pay raises, perpetuating a vicious circle of price-wage increases. Continuing inflation led to the printing of more paper money, thus reducing its value. Incentives to save evaporated, and all kinds of speculation, waste and luxurious consumption became rampant.

The declining value of currency may not have hurt those owning substantial amounts of real property, but dealt a decisive blow to the vast majority who depend on wages for a living. Even saving as much as possible, the prospect of owning a home remained a distant dream, for even with wage increases real income decreased. Nobody can deny that inflation has been the most dreadful enemy of wage earners, farmers and fishermen, who constitute an overwhelming majority of the population.

Long-standing inflation continued to undermine Korea's export competitiveness, making devaluation unavoidable, which, in turn, triggered yet another round of price increases. In addition, excessive investments were made in certain sectors of the economy during the 1970's, leading to an overheated boom far beyond the real means of the country to absorb.

All these developments combined to undercut overall economic efficiency, while aggravating disparities among various sectors of industry. These structural distortions in the economy caused it to be fat and lethargic. Consequently, if the economy is to get back on the track of advancement, it must be freed of those distortions that weight it down.

I am steadfast in my determination to arrest inflation, making it top priority in economic policy. Only when that goal has been successfully achieved can the standard of living of wage and salary earners, farmers and fishermen be stabilized, making it possible for them to save. Such savings can then be invested in industry, thereby revitalizing the economy and improving the balance of payments. Only when inflation is brought under firm control, will it be possible for businesses to make proper and efficient capital investments.

Lastly, I want to emphasize that we must put an end to the habitual disregard for civic responsibilities. The fulfillment of these responsibilities is a major yardstick of maturity, ethical standards and civility. And yet, the fact remains that our consciousness of civic responsibilities lags behind our material development. Disregard for these responsibilities is deep-rooted, affecting all aspects of Korean life, from traffic to politics.

The fulfillment of civic responsibilities advances the interests of all. If citizens believe that the ends justify the means and try to advance personal interests at the expense of others, it is impossible to maintain social order; everybody suffers, and society begins to disintegrate.

Respect for civic responsibilities can take firm root in Korean soil only through the conscious and determined efforts of each person to fulfill his role as a member of society. It is deplorable, however, that many people still look for any opportunity to buck the line for greater and more immediate personal gain. However, society can only prevail and prosper when everyone does his part without expecting another to establish the precedent of maintaining order. This can become an established way of life only when each and every citizen realizes his own responsiblity.

Especially in view of the 1988 Olympics and the 1986 Asian Games, it behooves all Koreans to put their best foot forward to demonstrate the Korean character and culture. As a nation hosting the Olympics and advancing onto the world stage, we must win the deserved trust and respect of the world. Central to this is a change in attitude leading to a consciousness of civic responsibilities.

It may not be possible to eliminate overnight the hidden pockets of corruption, the deep-seated inflationary psychology and the habitual disregard for civic responsibilities. But, no matter how difficult it may be, without breaking down these barriers, we can hardly expect to take great strides forward. I would thus like to take this opportunity to implore all fellow citizens to participate in the drive to banish these three major negative attitudes.

Now allow me to explain my principal aims in various areas of national administration for 1982. We must step up efforts to expedite political modernization, thereby achieving greater political maturity. That is to say, if politics is to function more effectively, it is essential that two basic preconditions be fulfilled.

First, there should be a clear understanding of the function and role of politics in a democracy. The North Korean communists frequently mouth the word "democracy," but their concept is fundamentally different from ours. In a democracy, all citizens are the masters, and politicians must never abuse their position to promote personal interests. The abuse of public trust for private gain or the enjoyment of privileges at the expense of the people runs counter to political modernization.

Second, politicians must accept due responsibility for political activities. As officials are elected to represent the people, it is the duty of politicians to perform the tasks entrusted to them with a sense of responsibility, thus evoking confidence.

In the past, however, a considerable number of politicians were oblivious to their responsibilities. One result of this was that politics got out of control, leading to social unrest. With failure to live up to their responsibilities, politicians forfeit them to the mob; a clear betrayal of the people's trust.

These two preconditions must be satisfied, for only then can politics keep pace with the changing tides of modernization. This is not only essential to the cultivation of democracy but to political stability, the nerve center for stability in all other areas.

In this regard, I, as the president of the Democratic Justice Party, want to make it clear that medium- and long-term efforts will be made to increase both the responsibility and the role of the government party. A look at our political history shows that, regardless of the form of government, political parties were always pushed to the sidelines and the executive branch alone ran the show. In light of the fact that democratic politics are equated with party politics, such practices must definitely come to an end.

Political parties and the government must develop cooperative relations in formulating and implementing public policies, rather than estranging each other by jockeying for dominant position. Only when such relationships are developed will it be possible not only to energize the National Assembly but also to rid public administration of rigid bureaucratism and expedite the development of energetic, positive, flexible and devoted civil service. This is also a shortcut to a peaceful change of government -- a goal that must be attained without fail. I do not have any doubt that if we steadfastly pursue the abovementioned political goals, Korea will develop as a new politically-advanced democracy, just as we have developed into a newly industrializing country.

As for foreign policy, the basic objective of our diplomatic endeavors is not to engage in useless competition with North Korea nor to isolate North Korea from the rest of the world. Neither is it to safeguard our interests alone at the expense of others. The ultimate goal of our diplomatic policy is to east tension and secure lasting peace on the Korean Peninsula, thus paving a broad avenue for peaceful unification of the people and country. To this end, we will further broaden existing amicable and cooperative relations with allies and friends.

This year is especially significant, as it marks the centennial of the establishment of diplomatic relations with the United States of America. Spurred by the cementing of these ties, resulting from the face-to-face meeting last year of President Reagan and myself, the relationship between our two countries has quickly ripened, not only in the area of security, but in all aspects, especially the economic and cultural. As we look ahead to the next 100 years, I will do my utmost to develop Korean-American relations into an even broader and more mature partnership.

Turning to our neighbor, efforts must be made to look at Japan through a broader perspective and develop more amicable and cooperative relations through increased mutual respect and understanding. Such relations not only essential to the peace and stability of ortheast Asia but to the common prosperity of the two nations. Solidarity among free nations is urgently needed in view of the harsh international environment anticipated for the 1980's. It is thus becoming increasingly more important to cement relations between Korea and Japan, two interdependent Asian nations with multiple cultural and economic ties. I believe that if our governments keep this in mind and continue to negotiate in good faith, a satisfactory solution can be found for the pending issue of economic cooperation. Thus it is very timely that the Japanese Government has recently begun to take a more positive attitude in the quest for an early settlement of the issue.

As I stressed during my visits to member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, this administration is laboring to promote cooperative relations with developing countries in situations similar to ours.

We are striving to broaden existing relations not only with neighboring Asian nations but also with countries in all other continents and regions, including Europe, the Middle East, Africa and South America, while at the same time establishing new relationships.

Furthermore, the government will place major emphasis on building bridges of dialogue with communist nations. As a matter of fact, if Korea and communist countries can develop, through dialogue, a correct understanding of each other's position, it will help secure a lasting peace on the peninsula.

Turning now to the question of South-North Korean relations, recent history teaches us that Korea will never be united as long as the South and the North each insists on a unification formula intended to advance only its own ideology, ideals and institutions. If we are to be successful, unification must be sought from the realization that the Korean people have been a single ethnic family from time immemorial, sharing a common descent, history, culture and tradition.

Unification must not be pursued exclusively or arbitrarily by any specific class or group, nor should it be sought by force of arms or some other violent means. I am firmly convinced that unification must be accomplished on the principle of national self-determination and through democratic and peaceful procedures that reflect the free will of the entire people.

It was with an open mind and a desire to seek such a democratic and peaceful path to unification that last year I proposed on Jan 12 and again on June 5 an exchange of visits and a face-to-face meeting between the top leaders of South and North Korea. I want to make it clear that every possible effort has been -- and will continue to be -- made by the Republic of Korea Government to realize these proposals.

At the same time, I would like to make use of this occasion to disclose a new peaceful unification formula that was originally prepared in anticipation of a South-North summit meeting. I do so with a view to providing the North Korean authorities and the rest of the world with an opportunity to comprehend our genuine intent. It is my conviction that the most reasonable way to peaceful unification is to adopt a constitution of a unified Korea testifying to the commitment of the entire people to unification -- a commitment attained through the promotion of national reconciliation -- and to then establish a unified state on the terms and conditions laid down in the constitution.

I suggest that, to have the said constitution adopted, the South and the North organize a Consultative Conference for National Reunification [CCNR] with participants from the two sides representing the views of the residents in their respective areas and authorize this body to draft a constitution presenting the terms and conditions of a unified democratic republic of Korea committed to the ideals of nationalism, democracy, liberty and individual well-being. I would further suggest that, when such a draft constitution is drawn up, the two sides make it into law through free, democratic referendums held throughout the whole peninsula. The unification of the country can then be accomplished by organizing a unified legislature and establishing a unified government through a general election held under the constitution of the unified Korea.

It is my understanding that such issues as the political ideology, the name of the country, the basic domestic and foreign policy directions, the form of government and the methods and dates of the general elections for a unified legislature will have to be discussed and agreed on in the CCNR in the course of drafting the constitution. It is our intention to present our own draft of a constitution for a unified country to the CCNR. If North Korea genuinely desires an independent and peaceful unification, they will also have to present a draft constitution for a unified country before the CCNR so that the two versions can be studied and forged into a single draft.

It is essential to promote confidence and trust between the South and the North and steadfastly eliminate from national life all impediments to unification to facilitate the historic drafting of a unified constitution. Accordingly, the unnatural relations between the South and the North which have resulted in self-inflicted injuries must be brought to an end and replaced by normal contacts that promote the national well-being.

To achieve this end, I hope that the South and the North will first normalize relations and, within the framework of these normalized relations, take concrete steps to bring about national reconciliation. I therefore propose, as a practical arrangement leading to unification, the conclusion of a provisional agreement on basic relations between South and North Korea featuring the following provisions:

First, relations between South and North Korea shall be based on the principle of equality and reciprocity pending unification.

Second, the South and the North shall abandon all forms of military force and violence, as well as the threat thereof, as a means of settling issues between them and seek peaceful solutions to all problems through dialogue and negotiation.

Third, South and North Korea shall recognize each other's existing political order and social institutions and shall not interfere in each other's internal affairs in any way.

Fourth, the South and the North shall maintain the existing regime of armistice in force while working out measures to end the arms race and military confrontation in order to ease tension and prevent war on the Korean Peninsula.

Fifth, in order to eliminate national suffering and the inconvenience resulting from the partition of the land and to promote an atmosphere of national trust and reconciliation, the South and the North shall progressively open their societies to each other through various forms of exchange and cooperation. To substantially advance the interests of the people, the South and the North shall facilitate free travel between the two halves of the peninsula, including the reunion of separated families; and shall promote exchanges and cooperation in the fields of trade, transportation, postal service, communications, sports, academic pursuits, education, culture, news gathering and reporting, health, technology, environmental protection, and so forth.

Sixth, until unification is achieved, both parties shall respect each other's bilateral and multilateral treaties and agreements concluded with third countries, irrespective of differences in ideologies, ideals and institutions, and consult with each other on issues affecting the interests of the Korean people as a whole.

Seventh, the South and the North shall each appoint a plenipotentiary envoy with the rank of Cabinet minister to head a resident liaison mission to be established in Seoul and Pyongyang. The specific functions of the liaison missions shall be determined by mutual consultation and agreement, with both parties providing the liaison mission from the other party with all necessary facilities and cooperation to ensure its smooth functioning.

It is my earnest hope that North Korea will expeditiously accept the proposal for a meeting between the top leaders of the South and the North in order to conduct frank and open-minded discussions on all issues noted above.

I propose to North Korea that high-level delegations from the South and the North, headed by Cabinet-rank chief delegates, meet together at the earliest possible date in a preparatory conference to work out the necessary procedures for a South-North summit meeting. I want to make it clear that if North Korea is agreeable to the proposal for a preparatory conference, the Government of the Republic of Korea has already made the necessary preparations to send a delegation.

Regarding national defense, the government will continue to focus energies on reinforcing deterrent in the conviction that our number one enemy is war. Needless to reiterate, social stability is possible only when the safety and peace of the nation is secured, making industrial and economic growth possible and leading to stable living conditions. The major goals of this year's defense policy are the establishment of a defense structure geared to meet the threat of real war, the streamlining of the national mobilization system, the enhancement of morale and a more productive use of the defense budget. In this way, the government aims to maintain iron-clad security in both frontline and rear areas to safeguard the peace and safety of the country and the lives and property of the people.

Plans have been set to train our troops in new combat tactics and techniques to hone our defense capabilities, to conduct joint exercises of land, sea and air forces to enhance their combat readiness, and to promote research and development of high-technology weapons and the mass production of arms and munitions to foster further growth of the defense industry.

Turning to economic policy, 1982, the beginning of the Fifth Five-Year Economic and Social Development Plan, is the year to prepare for a second takeoff. Through increased employment and improved business resilence, it must be made a year of real growth in per capita national income.

Fortunately, the international prices of raw materials, especially oil, are expected to remain stable this year, while the growth rates of developed economies are projected to go up appreciably. Moreover, world trade is forecast to expand by about three percent compared with last year. If this projection proves true, there will be greater opportunities to increase Korean exports, leading to the higher utilization of domestic industrial facilities, and consequently to lower production costs. This should improve business profitability, thereby contributing to improvements in the financial structures of Korean industries. Let me remind you, however, that since inflation in industrial countries is expected to further slow down this year, it will be necessary to stabilize domestic prices even more if we are to boost exports.

Close examination of the domestic picture shows that although the gross national product grew seven percent in real terms last year, this was merely a return to the level of 1979, hardly sufficient to absorb the more than 400,000 persons added to the labor force each year. Furthermore, many plants, especially in the heavy and chemical industries, remain underutilized due to excessive capital investments during the 1970's. The lingering effects of the past policy of concentrating financial support only on certain branches of industry still threaten to cause excessive money supply and credit expansion. Moreover, the exclusive emphasis on high growth during the past decade has impeded the improvement of national welfare, with serious inadequacies evident, especially in housing and medical fields.

In view of these domestic and international developments, the government has adopted the following economic goals for the new year: price stability; expansion of employment opportunities; technical innovation to improve the international competitiveness of Korean industry; advanced training of manpower and enhancement of product quality; continued institutional reform to promote a market economy; vigorous conservation of food and energy resources; and expansion of social welfare programs.

First, to ensure price stability, the annual rate of increase in money supply will be held down to a 20-22 percent level, while deficit financing of the government will be reduced to half the 1981 figure. At the same time, multifaceted measures will be worked out to encourage savings.

Second, efforts will be made to create more jobs by boosting domestic demand for goods and services through an increase in the real income of consumers. To further improve employment opportunities, credit and money supply will be flexibly managed within the framewrok of overall stabilization goals with the aim of increasing the utilization of existing industrial capacity. At the same time, as announced earlier, public investment projects will be launched and implemented as early as possible.

Third, to boost exports, the government will take measures to encourage all industries to invest in technical innovation and the advanced training of personnel. Such measures will include greater tax incentives and credit facilities. Steps will be taken to revitalize the factory Saemaul undong (new industrial community movement), to encourage nationwide quality control and improved productivity and to foster the growth of small and medium industries with sounder finances and management.

Fourth, to promote a market economy, studies will continue to be made this year on ways to denationalize commercial banks. Government-influenced preferential bank loans will be cut back, while money supply and credit control will be progressively shifted to indirect regulation by the central bank. Furthermore, in order to place the entire economy on a more competitive basis, efforts will be made to ensure fair trade, while opening the domestic economy even more boldly.

Fifth, to encourage food conservation and the efficient use of energy, the government will take vigorous measures in conjunction with other pannational efforts. To this end, the administration will encourage all citizens to forego luxurious foods and live frugally. While the need for everyone to conserve energy in the home cannot be overemphasized, even more important is the need to eliminate waste and increase the efficient use of energy in industrial facilities which account for more than two-thirds of total energy consumption. Accordingly, the government will institutionalize incentives for industries to invest in energy-saving devices.

Sixth, to improve welfare, major emphasis will be placed on education, housing and medical care. Public investment in housing will be expanded to increase the supply of housing, espcially for low-income families, while housing cooperatives at places of employment will be vigorously encouraged.

In the traditional sectors of agriculture and fisheries, intensive efforts will be made to increase production, especially to ensure self-sufficiency in principal food grains and to increase the income of farmers and fishermen. In a world of diminishing resources, food is directly linked to security, and thus high priority must be given to increased domestic production of food grains. At the same time, efforts will be continued to diversify rural sources of income.

In the fishing industry, the government will endeavor to foster coastal and offshore fishing by cultivating marine resources and modernizing the fishing fleets with the aim of raising the income standards of fishing families and promoting the well-being of the fishing community. Furthermore, increased international cooperation will be actively pursued in order to ensure stable deep-sea fishing operations enabling Korea to maintain its position as a leading fishing nation.

Welfare efforts will be steadfastly continued to assure the well-being of wage earners and others with no stable source of income, and to promote public health. It is my belief that eliminating pockets of misery is basic to social justice and economic prosperity. To this end, the government will intensify measures to protect senior citizens, unfortunate children, disabled persons and others who find it difficult to find an adequate means of support. Efforts will be focused especially on job training and work programs to provide increased employment opportunities.

Recently, there has been a rash of industrial accidents resulting in the temporary or permanent loss of workers. This is most unfortunate for the individual involved and the country as a whole. Accordingly, the government will intensify efforts to improve working conditions and occupational safety.

Primarily due to the cost of modern medicine, we still have a long say to go before reaching the goal of adequate and well-operated medical facilities. Though its financial resources are limited, the government will do everything possible to improve the administration of national and public hospitals and steadily improve the quality and scope of medical assistance to the poor, while progressively expanding the medical insurance system.

More specifically, medical insurance coverage will be increased this year to include 40 percent of the population. Enlarged primary health projects will be provided to remote farming and fishing communities and other areas with no access to regular medical facilities. Piped water will be expanded so that 40 percent of the farming and fishing population will be supplied with safe water.

If these policies are properly carried out, economic growth in 1982 should exceed seven percent, with the rate of unemployment dropping slightly from the 4.8 percent of last year. Depending on our efforts, it should be possible to reduce inflation to a single digit figure. Furthermore, expanded exports and domestic saving should improve the balance of payments, leading to a rise in real per capita income and consumption, which have stagnated for the past two years.

The economic policies for the new year are designed to improve the health of the economy and prepare a springboard for a second-takeoff. I believe success depends on the active participation and cooperation of the entire Korean public, as well as on the dedicated and proper economic activities of the government, businesses and workers.

Only when every citizen strives for economic betterment with an accurate grasp of the economic picture will the joint effort be truly fruitful. The economy can be placed on a firmer footing only when an accurate knowledge of the economy guides government economic policies, business enterprises, factory operations, export sales, savings and consumption.

This is why I have been emphasizing and reemphasizing the importance of economic education. I take this opportunity to appeal to all fellow countrymen to become "economic persons" fully equipped with the necessary knowledge to support without fail a second takeoff.

Lastly, I wish to touch on educational and cultural policies. It is superfluous to reiterate the importance of education to long-term development. But please allow me to stress that today we are confronted with a crisis of adaptation resulting from rapid industrialization. In other words, our way of thought and abilities have yet to be effectively adjusted to the diverse and complex requirements of modern society, characterized in part by material growth. To overcome this severe crisis, there is a need for various prescriptions, principal among these being educational innovation.

Having adopted educational innovation as one of the major national goals, this administration has labored to ensure the education of the total person by accentuating the development of the spirit, the promotion of science education and the expansion of lifelong educational opportunities. With a renewed commitment to these endeavors, I would like to discuss several urgent educational tasks.

Having declared 1982 a year to enhance the authority of the nation's educators, the government will vigorously proceed with efforts to improve the professional environment of the teaching profession. However, teachers should strive to develop character and scholarship worthy of respect and, at the same time, society should re-evaluate its attitude toward the teaching profession. Only then will it be possible to restore the authority of educators.

To that end, the government will, first of all, reform teacher education, while providing expanded refresher courses for those already on the job. At the same time, efforts will be made to raise the socioeconomic status of educators. A study should be completed this year on a new system of recruiting potential teachers, giving major consideration to recommendations on character and aptitude.

Studies will also be made of a proposal to separate teachers colleges from universities. The curriculum for teacher candidates will be revised, and scholarships will be increased to attract a greater number of bright students to the teaching profession. Educational programs for working teachers will be initiated to increase their understanding of national ideals and interests and to instill a sense of mission and professional ethics.

Studies will be made for reforming personnel management with the aim of enhancing the professional pride and economic well-being of teachers, promoting a willingness to devote a lifetime to the classroom regardless of whether or not they are promoted up the administrative ladder. Since the quality of education is directly dependent on teachers, I believe that by all means the above tasks must be accomplished if we are to secure a sufficient number of qualified teachers.

We must also recognize that universities face certain difficult questions as well. The fundamental problem is not that universities have become the epicenter of social unrest, but that a climate for serious study has not yet taken hold. A university is the highest institution of learning and the place where students spend the most important period of their lives, developing intellectual abilities and preparing for a future career. It is reported that students in countries economically more advanced than Korea are so busy attending lectures, reading books and doing assignments that they have little time to socialize.

We should seriously question whether the time and energy Korean students spend on studying is as great as that in other countries. In spite of recent rapid development, Korea still has a long way to go before it can catch up with the industrial nations. If only for the purpose of closing this gap, we must study even harder than others.

Since the purpose of college and university education is to cultivate professionals who will play important roles in shaping the future of the nation and promoting social development, the climate on campuses must be genuinely conducive to serious study. The academic community, especially professors and students, must awaken to the challenge. At the same time, the general public, especially parents, must cooperate with understanding and empathy.

In cultural policy, emphasis will be on cultivating an awareness that each and every citizen is the master of the country and the author of national destiny. Such a realization is a prerequisite to pannational participation in the new era. For this purpose active support will be provided for Korean studies with a view to promoting an accurate understanding of Korean history and cultural heritage, thus enhancing national pride and revitalizing the national ethos. At the same time, greater efforts will be made to rediscover and preserve cultural properties. Furthermore, the government will pay special attention to ensuring the right of the people to enjoy the benefits of culture. For this purpose, it will endeavor to eliminate cultural disparities among different regions and social strata.

This brings us to the Saemaul Undong [New Village Movement], which has contributed greatly to rural modernization, the improvement of rural modernization, the improvement of rural income and community development. Last year the movement reached a very significant turning point with the establishment of the new Saemaul Undong headquarters under private leadership, making the movement even more attractive to the public. This year, within this renovated framework, the government will assist the urban and the industrial Saemaul Undong to become firmly rooted.

In sum, the new era that we aspire to should assure the emergence of a just society free of illegalities, corruption and irregularities. Owing to the reforms carried out thus far, Korean society has become much more honest than in the past, but undesirable practices still persist. Eliminating these is comparable to eliminating weeds: Perseverance is the key to success.

The government is carrying out long- and short-term reforms with an unwavering determination to create an enduring atmosphere of integrity to permeate the entire society. This year, the scope of the government effort to instill official and social discipline will be broadened to attack relentlessly various corrupt and dishonest practices immediately affecting the daily lives of all citizens.

Mr Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the National Assembly, national and social development must not be entrusted solely to the government, the National Assembly or a specific political party.

A bouquet cannot be made of one or two flowers, nor a building of one or two bricks. This is illustrative of the crucial need to pool the wisdom and energies of all, the fundamental rationale behind the existence of our society and nation.

Opportunity does not present itself frequently, but when it knocks, we must open the gate with a united effort. In this modern world, the gate to success does not open freely; it must be opened by man's determined endeavors. Renewing our pledge to open the gate by our own efforts and achieve without fail a great democracy ensuring the well-being of all and the long-cherished national goal of a unified homeland, I would like to appeal for the wholehearted participation of each of you and all other citizens. Thank you.

PRC, USSR GOT ADVANCE WORD OF 22 JAN PROPOSAL

SK251417 Seoul KYONGHYANG SINMUN in Korean 25 Jan 82 p 1

[Excerpt] In an effort to realize President Chon Tu-hwan's 22 January proposal for peaceful unification, the government will make various diplomatic endeavors to win international support for the proposal through various international forums of the United Nations and the nonaligned nations, not to mention the friendly nations who have maintained traditional friendly relations with us.

It has been learned that, through third countries, the government informed in advance communist nations, including the Soviet Union and Communist China, about our unification policy, including the 22 January proposal for peaceful unification. Additionally, the government reportedly explained to them our position and efforts to unify the motherland peacefully.

Diplomatic sources said on 25 January: At this stage, it is important to expand the foundations for winning international support by making the United Nations and other international institutions, as well as each nation, understand our proposal for peaceful unification. They added: To this end, we have met those personages concerned who work for various specialized agencies of the United Nations scattered in Paris, Geneva, Rome, and Vienna, not to mention individual nations, and made efforts to make them understand our unification plan.

KOREA HERALD HAILS RED CROSS OVERTURE ON TALKS

SK240448 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 24 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Family Reunion as Icebreaker"]

[Text] While President Chon Tu-hwan's call for a unified constitution for all Korea was reverberating, the Korean National Red Cross urged North Korea yesterday to resume the long-suspended talks between the Red Cross societies of the two sides to reunite millions of displaced relatives in the divided halves. This request is both timely and consequential because the Red Cross endeavor for those hapless families is a good beginning to break the ice in the present frozen South-North relations.

Reunification of the partitioned peninsula by peaceful and democratic means as elaborated by President Chon in his new year policy address to the National Assembly remains the ultimate and imperative goal of all Koreans. But then, laying groundwork for attaining the goal is an immediate need to be met through mutual show of good will by the South and North. In this undertaking, the proposed reunion of separated kin is to play a key role.

As we recall, the humanitarian organizations of the two sides held seven plenary sessions in Seoul and Pyongyang alternately in the span of 12 months from 1972 to 1973. These meetings made little headway for reasons known to all and well: Pyongyang came up with preposterous preconditions of an ideological nature. Finally, the North Korean Red Cross called off the eighth session which had been scheduled to take place in Seoul and has since left it in the cold.

Promotion of trust between the South and North is the first step toward the elimination of the existing impediments to unification, which are many and deep-rooted. The provisional agreement on basic relations between the two sides included in President Chon's package proposal for unification aims at none other than national reconciliation to supplant the present distrusts and hostility between them. In a similar vein, the Red Cross-proposed reunion of separated families would pave the way for the icy relations between the South and North to melt, though slowly.

It is all but a foregone conclusion that nothing may be agreed on between the South and North if either of them tries to impose its ideology or political system on the other. And yet, North Korea insisted on repeal of anti-communist laws in the South as a prerequisite to discussing the draft agenda proposed by the Seoul side. If North Korea believes in the possibility of having its preconditions transformed into reality, it will be only wasting time. If, on the other hand, North Korea believes in the possibility that its tight sealing-off policy will pay off in the long term, it is making a fatal blunder. Time and things are increasingly on the side of the proposed reconciliation for eventual unity of the divided halves.

What should be noted, at this juncture, is the remarks made by Kim Il-song when he met U.S. Congressman Stephen J. Solarz during his visit to North Korea in July 1980. Kim said he was prepared to drop his previous demand that Seoul repeal its anti-communist law as a condition for agreement on family reunions and exchange of correspondence between the South and North.

If Kim's word given to the U.S. legislator has a grain of honesty at all, he will willingly and positively respond to the Seoul Red Cross call as well as President Chon's proposal for a summit to open the way toward unification. Kim's further intransigence would only aggravate the continuing tension on the Korean Peninsula.

KOREAN RESIDENT IN PRC RETURNS, MEETS FAMILY

SK260134 Seoul YONHAP in English 0121 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Kwangju, Korea, Jan. 26 (YONHAP) -- An elderly Korean woman recently returned home from mainland China to be reunited with her son, an apparent complex janitor, in this southern provincial city, after a separation of nearly 40 years. The reunion was realized as a result of the effort of the Korean Red Cross, on Jan. 14.

Cho Pok-sun, 67, has been living in Liaoning Province in mainland China since 1940, when she and her husband emigrated from Korea with their eldest son, Yi Chong-mo, then a six-year-old boy. They managed to open an automobile repair shop in Liaoning Province. In the spring of 1945, Yi returned home with his uncle, and the liberation of Korea from Japan a few months later prevented him from seeing his family again.

Some five years ago, Cho happened to hear about the "search campaigns for separated families" in Korea. She wrote to several of her relatives, and received a reply from her son. The communication between them continued for some years. Finally, as the result of the continuous efforts of the Korean Red Cross, the mother and son were reunited after 38 years.

Unfortunately the widowed mother had to leave her six other children in China to return home. Her heart's desire is "to live in my homeland with all of my children."

FURTHER MATERIALS ON COMMEMORATION OF NEW YEAR

Heng Samrin Reception Speech

BK251307 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] At 1800 on 22 January the SRV Embassy in Phnom Penh held a grand reception to mark the fraternal Vietnamese people's traditional New Year. Attending were Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the front's National Council; Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Comrade Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; and several other comrade ministers, vice ministers, directors general and deputy directors general of various central ministries and offices.

Speaking on the occasion, Comrade Heng Samrin expressed warm congratulations and sincere greetings to the fraternal Vietnamese party, government and people, who in the past, as well as at present and in the future, have assisted, are assisting and will continue to assist the Kampuchean people most effectively in smashing the genocidal regime and defending and building the beautiful land of Angkor. He stressed that Vietnam and Kampuchea have helped each other three times and have won three victories. The noble sentiment of pure and loyal internationalism forged with the flesh and blood of the best sons and daughters of the two nations constitutes a valuable example of relations for all nations under the present circumstances. He also stressed that the Kampuchean people are determined to defend and preserve the special bonds of militant solidarity between Kampuchea and Vietnam just as they would protect their own lives, and regard the strong and solid Kampuchea-Vietnam alliance as the most important factor guaranteeing peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

This ceremony proceeded in a joyous, cordial atmosphere permeated with a lofty sense of proletarian internationalism.

Chan Ven Remarks at Reception

BK261010 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] The Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association organized a reception at its office on 24 January to mark the traditional New Year of the fraternal Vietnamese people. Attending the reception were, on the Kampuchean side, Comrade Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State, vice chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association; Comrade Pen Navouth, minister of education and vice chairman of the Kampuchea-Soviet Friendship Association; and many cadres from various ministries and departments. On the Vietnamese side were Comrade Ngo Dien, SRV ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the PRK, and many Vietnamese experts.

Speaking on that occasion, Comrade Chan Ven, chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association, hailed the brilliant victories scored by the fraternal Vietnamese people under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the VCP. The comrade stressed: The Kampuchean people throughout the country are very proud to have such a sincere and valiant friend who dares even to sacrifice his precious life to liberate Kampuchea from the blood-stained hands of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan. The Kampuchean people will never forget that if they have good food to eat and proper clothes to wear and can enjoy rights and freedoms as human beings, it is because of the great and invaluable sacrifices made by the heroic soldiers of the VPA, who have shed their blood on Kampuchean soil. Therefore, in all circumstances, the Kampuchean people will strive to strengthen and broaden the special bonds of solidarity between Kampuchea and Vietnam.

In his reply, Comrade Ngo Dien, SRV ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the PRK, emphasized his elation at the sentiments of affection, esteem and cordial friendship that the Kampuchean people hold for the Vietnamese people, particularly the Vietnamese troops and experts who are carrying out their internationalist duties on Kampuchean soil. The comrade stressed: In compliance with President Ho Chi Minh's behest and in response to the urgent request of the Kampuchean people, the Vietnamese party, government and people have sacrificed everything for the independence and peace of the Kampuchean people and have always regarded the well-being and development of the Kampuchean people as their own. In conclusion, the comrade stressed: No matter how hard the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, may try to undermine the Kampuchean-Vietnamese solidarity in order to reinstall the genocidal regime, this bond of solidarity will remain firm and ever-lasting and will thwart all enemy maneuvers.

Chan Si Visit to SRV Experts

BK260950 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] On 24 January -- the last day of the Vietnamese Year of the Rooster -- Comrade Chan Si, member of the KFRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, together with the comrade vice ministers, chairmen and vice chairmen of various commissions and cadres under the National Defense Ministry, called on and extended New Year's greetings to the Vietnamese military experts in Phnom Penh. After a cordial conversation, Comrade Chan Si, on behalf of the National Defense Ministry and all Kampuchean cadres and combatants, expressed warmest sentiments of solidarity and friendship and best wishes to the comrade Vietnamese military experts and, through them, conveyed greetings and best wishes for good health and new successes to the cadres and combatants of the Vietnamese volunteer forces and their families. He expressed the wish that the militant solidarity between Vietnam and Kampuchea would grow stronger and last forever.

The Vietnamese military experts were deeply moved by the attention and care shown by the Kampuchean leaders, army and people to the Vietnamese volunteer forces, particularly during the New Year festival. The comrade representing the Vietnamese military experts said: Though we are far from our fatherland and our kith and kin, thanks to the care of our Kampuchean comrades, our celebration of the New Year in Kampuchea is much like being at home. He expressed the hope that the new year would bring success and prosperity for all. He also hoped that the bonds of solidarity and friendship would grow closer, stronger and firmer with every passing day so that all enemy maneuvers would be foiled.

The two sides clearly reaffirmed that under the banner of proletarian internationalism and in the light of pure Marxism-Leninism, the two peoples and armies, having fostered the militant solidarity between them for generations, will become immovable bastions in defending their national independence and advance rapidly toward socialism. With the passing of the cold season, our hope becomes brighter, our militant solidarity and happiness more fruitful and our advance forward as mighty as the Mekong River's current and as firm and solid as the Truong Son Mountain.

In conclusion, the delegation heartily joined their Vietnamese comrades in a New Year banquet.

Pen Navouth Greeting

BK251302 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the fraternal Vietnamese people's traditional New Year, Comrade Pen Navouth, minister of education of the PRK, sent a greetings message to Comrade Mrs Nguyen Thi Binh, minister of education of the SRV. The message reads:

The Ministry of Education of the SRV has achieved its excellent goal of serving the social development in and providing many experiences for our country. I take this opportunity to express deep gratitude to you for assisting my ministry in establishing a new national education program along a socialist line. Thanks to the relations of solidarity, friendship and cooperation, with and the wholehearted support of ths SRV Ministry of Education, my ministry has scored very encouraging results. In the new year, as well as in the future, I am confident that the cooperation between our two ministries will yield more and greater successes.

May the new year bring about greater happiness and successes for the Vietnamese people in the cause of building and defending their fatherland and of building the socialist forces -- the forces of peace in the world.

CHAN SI MESSAGE HAILS LPLA FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK211106 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the 33d founding anniversary of the fraternal Lao People's Liberation Army [LPLA] -- 20 January 1949-20 January 1982 -- Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, sent a message of greetings and best wishes to Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party [LPRP] Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister and minister of national defense of the Lao People's Democratic Republic [LPDR] and commander in chief of the LPLA. The message reads:

To Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister and minister of national defense of the LPDR and commander in chief of the LPLA, Vientiane: On behalf of the KPRAF cadres and combatants, and in my own name, please allow me to extend sincere and warm congratulations and best wishes to the comrade minister and all cadres and combatants of the LPLA on the occasion of the 33d founding anniversary of the fraternal LPLA.

Under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP and by standing firm on genuine Marxism-Leninism, during the past 33 years or more this army has matured rapidly, successively defeated the French colonialists, American imperialists and their lackeys and, at present, the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists, American imperialists and international reactionaries; effectively defended the national sovereignty and territorial integrity; and contributed to the defense and construction of the socialist LPDR on the Southeast Asian subcontinent.

All the great victories scored in all fields by the fraternal people and LPLA in the defense and construction of the LPDR are also the victories of our people and army and constitute proof of the immortal influence of the iron-like strength, militant solidarity and combat alliance of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos which, backed by the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries, (?struggle) for genuine peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Availing myself of this occasion, I once again extend best wishes to the comrade minister. May you enjoy good health and greater victories. Through the comrade minister, we send our best regards to all cadres and combatants of the fraternal LPLA and wish them greater victories in defending and building their beautiful socialist fatherland.

[Signed] Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense of the PRK; Phnom Penh, 20 January 1982

HENG SAMRIN THANKS FRENCH MEDICAL AID COMMITTEE

BK180913 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Recently Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State of the PRK, sent a message of thanks and greetings on the 1982 new year to Dr Catherine Jennin, representative of the French Committee for Medical and Sanitary Aid to the Kampuchean People. The message reads: I thank you, madam, for your message dated 29 December 1981 and the best wishes you sent me on the occasion of the new year. Please, madam, convey to the French Committee for Medical and Sanitary Aid my best wishes and greetings on the new year and my sincere thanks for the committee's medical assistance to my people. I wish you the best of health and success in your noble mission in the PRK. Please, madam, accept my highest regards.

BOU THANG THANKS SYRIA FOR AID DONATION

BK131436 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Recently Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission, sent a message of thanks to Comrade (Khalid Hemassi) of the Syrian Ba'th Party Foreign Relations Committee for his precious donation of clothes to Kampuchean orphans. The message reads:

I have just received your donation of clothes to be distributed to Kampuchean orphans. On behalf of the KPRP and the Kampuchean orphans, I would like to extend to the Ba'th Party of Syria our sincere thanks for the gesture of solidarity permeated with an inestimable moral and humanitarian spirit highly appreciated by the Kampuchean people. May the new year usher in for the Syrian Ba'th Party and people happiness, well-being and new victories in the struggle against Israeli Zionism.

PLO DELEGATION DEPARTS AFTER VISIT, TALKS

BK170901 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0402 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 17 Jan (SPK) -- The delegation of the Palestine Liberation Organization led by 'Ali Ahmad Fayad, member of the PLO Central Committee, left Phnom Penh on 14 January.

During its stay in Kampuchea, the delegation had talks with Yos Por, secretary general of the KUFNCD, and Hor Nam Hong, Kampuchea's vice minister of foreign affairs. Hor Nam Hong hailed the Palestinian people's struggle for national liberation and briefed his guest on the Kampuchean people's achievements during the past 3 years. He reaffirmed the Kampuchean people's wish to live on good terms with their neighbors. He also denounced the Sino-U.S. collusion and their support for the reactionaries in their opposition to the Kampuchean revolution. 'Ali Ahmad Fayad affirmed the Palestinian people's support for the Kampuchean people and their determination to consolidate solidarity between the peoples of Palestine and Kampuchea.

WORLD FOOD PROGRAM DELEGATION'S VISIT REPORTED

BK230825 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Jan (SPK) -- At the end of its 10-day visit to Kampuchea the World Food Program [WFP] delegation led by Sture Linner, representative of the WFP Executive Bureau, left Phnom Penh on Friday, 22 January. During its stay, the delegation was received by Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Burea, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning.

Chea Soth briefed the delegation on the economic and social situation and the development plan of Kampuchea. Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs, and Hor Nam Hong, vice minister of foreign affairs, also received the delegation. It met Yit Kim Seng and Kong Samol, ministers of health and agriculture, respectively. It visited the provinces of Takeo, Kompong Speu and Svay Rieng, the Tuol Sleng school-prison and the Cheung Ek mass graves.

VODK: PROTEST AGAINST FRENCH FILM LODGED IN UN

BK211130 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] On 8 January French television "France Soir" showed a film made by (Jerome Canapar) entitled, "Children of Angkor." The Democratic Kampuchean permanent representation to UNESCO received permission to firmly protest this documentary film, which attempts to dupe French and international opinion, with the intention of making them accept the Vietnamese aggression in and occupation of Kampuchea as a fait accompli. This documentary film does not say a single word about the fact that 250,000 Vietnamese are committing aggression in and occupying Kampuchea, nor does it mention the increased struggle of the Kampuchean people in their fight against the Vietnamese aggressors, who are becoming more bogged down with every passing day. Everyone in the world knows that, facing the brave struggle of the Kampuchean people throughout the country, the Vietnamese aggressors are heavily defeated and completely bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield of their aggression and they do not take any initiative. The Democratic Kampuchean army and guerrillas are expanding their activities throughout the country. At present, the Democratic Kampuchean Government controls half of the Kampuchean territory, including the region where a large number of ancient temples are located. Route 6, which leads to Angkor, is under the control of the Democratic Kampuchean National Armed Forces.

In order to fulfill their aim of duping world opinion, the Vietnamese organized visits to some ancient temples under heavy protection from their soldiers. Television cameraman (Jerome Canapar) had no difficulties in showing schools, folk dances and interviews with the puppets, who only praise the Vietnamese aggressors and make unfounded accusations against the patriots in order to fool everyone by showing that life is becoming normal in Kampuchea, which is the object of aggression and occupation by the Vietnamese. Although Mr (Jerome)'s film tries to present only certain aspects of Kampuchea, it cannot hide the fact that the Vietnamese are continuing to commit genocide against hundreds of Kampuchean patriots and people with their Soviet-imported weapons and toxic chemicals.

Giving aid to the puppets in Phnom Penh, Kabul or in other places under any pretext represents acceptance of foreign aggression and occupation as faits accompli and, intentionally or not, they are activities in opposition to the patriots and the peoples waging the struggle against the aggressors in Kampuchea, Afghanistan and other places. Therefore, the Democratic Kampuchean permanent representation to UNESCO appeals to everyone who opposes the Vietnamese and Soviet aggressions and occupations of Kampuchea and Afghanistan to unite with each other in order to: Denounce the propaganda of the Hanoi Vietnamese, to fight and dissipate their dark and poisonous tricks aimed at making everyone accept their aggression and occupation of Kampuchea through their maneuvers in asking for cultural and humanitarian aid; and ask for the withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and let the Kampuchean people hold a free election under UN supervision, in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies.

Paris, 11 January 1982

KAYSONE REPORT TO PEOPLE'S COUNCIL PLENUM

BK131313 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Report on the situation in 1981 and the direction of tasks for 1982 of the LPDR, presented by LPDR Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan at the 1982 Supreme People's Council [SPC] 11 January Plenum -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected President Souphanouvong; respected SPC vice chairmen; respected deputy prime ministers; respected adviser to the government; respected members of the Council of Ministers; respected members of the SPC: I feel it a great honor and am extremely happy to represent the Council of Ministers to report to the SPC on the situation in 1981 and the direction of tasks for 1982. On this occasion, I would like to extend my New Year greetings and warmest affection to President Souphanouvong, the SPC vice chairmen, the deputy prime ministers, the advisers to the government, the ministers and deputy ministers and the members of the SPC. I wish you good health and happiness in 1982. I ask you to convey my best wishes to all cadres, state employees, workers, national defense forces, public security forces and compatriots of all tribes throughout the country -- be they old, young, men or women. I wish them greater new victories in the new year. At the same time, I would like to extend my warm greetings to leaders of the parties and Governments of the SRV, the PRK, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, as well as all friends throughout the world. I wish them happiness in peace and friendship throughout the world in the new year.

Part One

The Achievements in the National Defense and Socialist Construction of Our People in 1981

Respected excellencies, in entering 1981 -- the first year of the First 5-Year State Plan, we were blessed with numerous favorable basic conditions. The firm and great victories scored in the struggle to defend our country, to rehabilitate and build the economy and to develop culture during the past 5 years have mobilized our people to persevere and advance in our revolution to fulfill the First 5-Year State Plan. The beacon of the eighth resolution adopted by the party Central Committee and the excellent lessons drawn from the actual struggle in the first 5 years of the people's republic regime have illuminated the path of our people more brightly. Our solidarity and militant alliance with Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries have been strengthened and enhanced. The great assistance rendered to us by the fraternal countries and the extensive support from the international community have further encouraged and enhanced our strength.

However, in 1981 the resistance of the forces hostile to our revolution also developed vigorously and fiercely. At the same time, the difficulties caused by the underdeveloped state of our economic foundations and the aftermath of the protracted war of aggression, as well as the unavoidable shortcomings in our economic and state management, have caused considerable adverse effects on the fulfillment of our tasks. Nevertheless, under the correct leadership of our party and state, further enhancing the fine traditions of our country, and with close unity and gallantry, our people have overcome all obstacles and difficulties, and have scored great victories in various fields in the fulfillment of the state plan in 1981.

I. On the National Defense and Public Security Front

In late 1980 and early 1981, the scheme of the enemies in opposing the revolution in our country took many significant turns. The reactionary clique in the Beijing ruling circles stepped up collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces in opposing various aspects of the revolutions in our country and the other Indochinese countries. They endeavored to gather and build the political and military forces for the exiled Lao reactionaries, and launched various movements to destroy and sabotage our revolution in various fields and through numerous notorious and cunning means, for example, by coordinating armed activities with psychological warfare tactics and espionage, setting up an economic blockade, sabotaging our culture and creating international hostility against our country.

In particular, they tried to infiltrate and destroy our political foundations from within, cause confusion and division among our people of various tribes, carry out propaganda to distort the line and policies of our party and state and create underground movements to serve their scheme of peaceful transformation and to stage a rebellion to topple our new regime.

To smash these acts of the enemies and to create favorable conditions for the fulfillment of the state plan in 1981, we vigorously guided and encouraged the implementation of the resolution adopted by the Political Bureau regarding our closeness with the grassroots level by coordinating various measures simultaneously, mobilizing the masses to attack the enemies, building and consolidating the political foundations and promoting production and improving their living conditions. We regarded this duty as a central task in 1981.

The success of the effort to propagate and disseminate the eighth resolution of the party Central Committee and the resolution on opposing the enemy's psychological warfare, and the success in turning into practice the resolution on the task of national defense and public security and regional military work, as well as the resolutions adopted at a conference of various nationalities, constitute a very important contribution to the implementation of the policies and plans aimed at consolidating political foundations, national defense and public security in the past year.

The people of various nationalities have more clearly understood the reactionary nature and heinous schemes of the imperialists and the expansionists and their henchmen. They are bringing into full play the spirit of mastery in maintaining public security and social order, stepping up production and building a new life. The people of various ethnic minorities sent more of their beloved sons and nephews to the armed forces in the past year than in previous years. The administrative apparatuses and the guerrilla and public security forces at the grassroots level have been further improved. The regional forces have increased in both quantity and quality, while the regular forces have been consolidated in the organizational and training fields in accordance with the requirements for combat coordination. Coordinated activities among political, economic and military forces and among the regular, regional and guerrilla units have become further solidified. The combat efficiency of many units has clearly increased. Many underground forces of the enemy have been dismantled, and most of the command units, agents and spies and the enemy's provocative infiltration and sabotage activities carried out from the Chinese and Thai territories have been suppressed. The public security and guerrilla forces have made important contributions to these achievements. Guerrillas in many localities, making use of their wisdom and heroism in attacking the enemy, have captured enemy commandos and spies and their stubborn ringleaders.

From general observation, the overall results of the above-mentioned activities show that the situation of national defense and public security throughout the country, from the countryside to urban areas and along the country's borders and in various strategic areas, has been secured, tranquilized and further normalized. Political foundations in many areas have been effectively consolidated. The situation in the past year shows that if we heighten our vigilance, firmly grasp the all-people national defense and public security line of the party and state, know how to mobilize the entire army and people, know how to apply the three-pronged direction line -- political, economic and military -- and vigorously go to the grassroots level, we will be able to smash all enemy schemes and build all-sided forces at the grassroots level.

II. On the Economic Construction and Development Front

We recorded many satisfactory achievements last year.

A. The most outstanding achievement is the great success in agricultural production, including rice, other plants, industrial crops and animal husbandry. The cultivated area in 1981 was 22,500 hectares greater than in 1980, including 14,000 hectares of reclaimed wasteland, 15,400 hectares for rice cultivation, 3,400 hectares for the cultivation of other plants, 500 hectares for coffee cultivation and 500 hectares of tobacco cultivation [figures as heard]. Rice output in 1981 increased by 13 percent as compared with that of 1980 -- a year in which rice output exceeded the output of previous years. As compared with 1980, the output of crops in 1981 increased by 25 percent. Coffee output in 1981 also increased by 12 percent, as compared with 1980. The efficiency of grain production exceeded that of 1980. On the average, early rice output and late rice output per hectare were, respectively, 350 kg and 500 kg greater than in 1980. Animal husbandry has also effectively developed. The numbers of buffalo, cows, pigs and poultry were, respectively, 25,000, 10,000, 65,000 and 500,000 greater than in 1980.

The various victories scored in this agricultural production have enabled us to become self-sufficient in food supply throughout the country. Our people have retained part of the food supply. We have produced surplus agricultural goods for export, and managed to produce some raw materials for industrial production. These victories have been scored thanks to various factors. One factor is the fact that the climate in 1981 was very favorable for crop cultivation, and no livestock epidemics were prevalent. The most important factor is the fact that we were more capable of effectively guiding agricultural production. Local administrations in various localities were resolved to guide this work profoundly, for example, in carrying out irrigation development and in extensive agriculture, and encouraging the timely planting of crops. Many other localities paid close attention to coordinating setting up and consolidating of agricultural cooperatives with mobilizing and promoting agricultural production.

In the past year, movements to set up agricultural cooperatives in various localities were consolidated a step further. Several new outstanding agricultural cooperatives have been set up. Agricultural cooperatives have now been fundamentally set up in all rice-planting areas in Phong Saly, Houa Phan, Oudomsai and Xieng Khouang Provinces. The agricultural cooperatives in these provinces have been effectively consolidated and developed. The per capita income of agricultural cooperative members is now much higher than when they operated individually. More and more farmers who previously hesitated have now voluntarily joined the cooperative venture. Agricultural cooperatives in various provinces have become leaders in carrying out intensive agriculture, dry-season rice growing and irrigation construction, and genuinely enhancing and developing the outstanding aspects of collectivization.

In the past bumper crop season, 174 agricultural cooperatives were engaged in intensive agriculture, with a total cultivated area of 7,000 hectares and an average production capability of 2.5 to 3.5 tons per hectare, or as much as 5 tons per hectare in certain localities. The average per capita income of a member of an agricultural cooperative engaging in intensive agriculture or dry-season rice farming was 400 to 500 kilos of rice per year. This figure rose to 700 kilos per person in certain cooperatives, such as the agricultural cooperatives of Ban Nong Khon, Ban Hai and Ban Sangkhen villages in Champassak Province. Because of production development, several cooperatives have accumulated more savings funds and increased the number of draft animals as well as the number of water pumps, rice milling machines and other farm tools. Handicraft production foundations, collective trade cooperatives and goods exchange cooperatives have been set up in various localities. The training of cadres for managing agricultural cooperatives has also been carried out. In the past year, some 700 cadres underwent training programs on cooperative management at the central and local levels.

In spite of this development, it can be said that, in general, agricultural cooperatives have failed to develop in a similar manner and at a similar pace. Agricultural cooperatives in several provinces have not yet been consolidated and restored because the party committees and administrative committees have failed to pay attention to genuinely leading in setting up agricultural cooperatives, and to understanding the method of coordinating the task of consolidation and development of agricultural cooperatives with that of the construction and consolidation of political foundations and other movements in the countryside. In addition, several services at the center have almost forgotten their responsibility in the movement to set up agricultural cooperatives.

The building of material bases for agriculture has also entered a new stage. Several major and intermediate irrigation projects have been mapped out and are under construction, including 15 projects that are under the direct responsibility of the Central Committee. In the meantime, small irrigation projects have also been extensively supported by farmers because they were able to timely serve intensive agriculture and dry-season rice growing. In the past year, more agricultural experimental stations were set up by the government. To date, there are 31 agricultural experimental stations throughout the country. Some of them have been equipped with modern machines and agricultural tools. As a result, the cultivated area has been expanded, the number of livestock increased and certain agricultural cooperatives compelled to engage in state-run-type enterprises.

B. With a view to preparing for the exploitation of forests, the forestry sector has scored certain achievements in carrying out surveys of forests in the areas designated in the state plan, such as those areas along Route 9 in Savannakhet Province and certain areas in Sayaboury and Luang Namtha Provinces. Though it encountered numberous difficulties, the forestry sector was able to produce the same volume of timber as in 1980.

C. Industrial production was carried out positively. First of all, we stepped up efforts to carry out surveys to prepare for the mining of mineral ores in certain regions and the establishment and repair of some industrial enterprises, including the repair of electrical generators at the Nam Ngum hydroelectric dam, with a view to expanding the electricity network, and the restoration and development of the tin mining industry at Phon Tieu. Through several industrial plants have encountered numerous difficulties, including shortages of raw materials and spare parts, and lack experience in production management, they have managed to increase industrial production by 13.18 percent compared with the previous year. Many plants were able to fulfill or overfulfill production targets for 1981, such as those producing electricity, coal, soft drinks, beer, tobacco, corrugated iron sheets and bricks.

The handicraft sector has also scored new developments, particularly in Vientiane, the capital, and Luang Prabang and Champassak Provinces. The handicraft work in textile knitting and weaving has been restored and developed to a certain extent to produce goods for export. The handicraft sector is an important service that can produce goods for domestic consumption and export, provided the localities and services concerned pay close attention to guiding production, set up a reasonable price policy and organize an effective purchasing method.

D. The work relating to goods circulation and distribution has been modified a step further. We have started to readjust the price policy with a view to readjusting prices of certain agricultural and industrial goods. At present, we are concentrating on setting up appropriate wholesale and retail prices for certain goods. The readjustment of goods prices has contributed to stabilizing the market and promoting production development. The organization of purchase and exchange methods has made some progress and scored better results. With a reasonable price policy and positive purchasing efforts, coupled with the mobilization of a sense of patriotism and socialism among our farmers, the volume of rice purchased and exchanged in 1981 has shown a 550-percent increase compared with that of 1980, coffee beans a 25-percent increase and (?beef) a 100-percent increase.

Several localities have overfulfilled their obligations in paying agricultural taxes to the state. The volume of rice paid to the state as agricultural taxes by our peasants has increased by 130 percent compared with the previous year.

On behalf of the party Central Committee and the government, I request that the SPC praise and hail our farmers of all tribes throughout the country for heightening a sense of patriotism and socialism by positively contributing to the success in purchasing grain and other crops, thus enabling our party and state to more effectively resolve the problem related to the shortage of food supply. During the past year, all localities and trade services have also paid attention to distributing essential goods, such as salt, fabric materials, agricultural tools and household utensils, to the countryside, including certain remote and inaccessible areas. The total volume of goods sold at retail prices has increased by 11 percent compared with 1980. This has resulted in the solving of certain difficulties in the living conditions of the people of all tribes and in an increase in the relations between the state and the people with regard to the exploitation of forest and farm products to meet the requirements of the state and for export.

E. Even though the transportation and communications sector has failed to meet increasing requirements, during the past year we were able to score numerous achievements in this service. We have concentrated efforts on repairing, enlarging and providing security for the communications service along Route 9 and Route 13, building and repairing several bridges and providing construction machinery and equipment to some road and bridge construction units. At the same time, various localities have also paid attention to repairing and enlarging the communications network within each province, thereby linking communications routes among districts and cantons. In addition, the government has also set up a border transit transportation company, and has made better use of privately-owned transport enterprises, thus increasing the volume of goods transported by these enterprises to 600,000 tons per kilometer when compared with 1980.

F. The finance and banking sector has advanced in managing cash and foreign currencies, inspecting goods and material equipment and supplying capital to various production units. The banking network at the district level has been expanded. The research work to amend some policies and procedures system regarding financing, taxes and the utilization of budgets has been more closely observed.

III. The Education and Public Health Sector Has Continued To Develop

The movements in promoting culture, information, the arts, literature and sports have been more extensively expanded. Our party and state have regarded this task as an important front contributing to the building of new men and new culture, and have applied the motto: "Let us translate into reality the goal that the ideological and cultural revolution must be advanced a step further." On this basis, we have made several attempts on this front.

A. In the education sector, the various branches of education, such as formal education, supplementary education, cultural training education, vocational education and higher education, have been expanded more extensively than in the 1979-80 school year. As for the elimination of illiteracy, thus far an estimated 85 percent of the target population for the nationwide literacy campaigns have learned to read and write. The movements on cultural training in offices, organizations, factories, military units and among the masses have been considerably developed. At present, an estimated 340,000 persons have completed cultural training programs. The quality of cultural training has been elevated a step further. There are currently 84 central cultural training schools throughout the country, with an enrollment of 14,000 students.

The number of formal education students throughout the country in the current 1981-82 school year has increased by 30,000 compared with the previous school year. Seventy-six percent of the students in all classes have passed their final examinations during the past school year.

In addition to the various young tribal pioneer schools in each province, a number of boarding schools have also been set up at the district and canton levels to accommodate several thousand children of our people of various tribes so as to contribute to the effort of disseminating culture among tribal people living in remote regions. More Buddhist monks and novices have also positively contributed to educational development than previously. More attention has been paid to teacher training programs. The number of students training to be teachers has increased by 40 percent compared with the number in 1980. However, it is worthy of note that various local administrations and services concerned have failed to pay full attention to guaranteeing that all the working systems and policies toward school teachers are fully implemented. As a result, a number of school teachers have become discouraged.

The university and intermediate vocational education system has also been expanded. The number of students in this system has increased by 10 percent compared with the 1980-81 school year. At the same time, we have sent an additional 1,600 students to study in the fraternal socialist countries.

Even though the child care and kindergarten work is still new in our country, and in spite of a lack of experience, in the past year we have achieved some degree of development in this field. The number of infants enrolled in the child care and kindergarten schools has increased by 300 percent compared with 1980. More schools for training child care cadres have been set up in various provinces.

Generally speaking, we have scored numerous achievements in the education sector in the past year. However, certain significant shortcomings still remain, for example, the quality of education and teaching techniques remains low. Another issue requiring prompt attention is the implementation of the policy of providing security to schoolteachers.

B. The movements in promoting culture, the arts and literature in offices, organizations, construction sites, factories, production units, armed forces units and among the masses continue to develop favorably. The literature service has organized several contests for poetry and music, with glorious verses aimed at creating a sense of patriotism and socialism and a sense of jubilation in carrying out production and defending and building the country.

C. The sports and acrobatic sports movement in certain districts, factories, agricultural cooperatives, the armed forces and among youth groups and students has been promoted. We have begun to set up a number of professional sports units, and have organized annual sports events at home and sent sports teams to participate in the contests in some fraternal countries in order to gain new experiences and to strengthen our friendly relations with those countries.

D. The propaganda, information and press work has been transformed to more closely serve the political duties of the party and state in each period and to be more closely related to the reality of the people's life. The propaganda on outstanding work of exceptional individuals has been promoted. More attention has been paid to counterattacking any psychological warfare slanders of the enemies.

The postal service has endeavored to advance to ensure our continued communications with foreign countries and the communications between the center and the countryside. The construction of a satellite communications station with assistance from the Soviet Union has been urgently carried out and fundamentally completed. In spite of these achievements, there still remain numerous problems in the propaganda, information and press work. For example, its struggle characteristics remain blunt; the popularization of the line and policies of the party and state has not been profoundly carried out and has failed to fulfill its objectives; and this work has yet to extend its scope to all localities and foundations throughout the country.

E. The public health system has begun to serve the people at the grassroots level. The public health network has been further broadened, while more attention has been paid to the movements of maintaining good health and preventing diseases as well as movements to plant herbs and exploit and use herbal medicine. This is a positive direction of development aimed at enhancing the tradition and position of strength of the public health service in our country. It is an important contribution to solution of the problem of shortages of medicines and the problem of providing medical treatment for and tending the health of the people. The public health services, both in the central area and in the localities, have also paid close attention to the task of building and training the contingent of public health cadres. Monks and novices in many areas have also positively contributed to curing diseases among the people with herbal medicine. Generally speaking, the public health system has not yet met the people's requirements in curing diseases and tending to their health. The efficiency and spirit of doctors and medical cadres in serving the people are still at a low level, while the management and distribution of medicines are still not efficient.

IV. Some Successful Achievements Have Been Scored in Increasing the Efficiency of the Contingent of Cadres, Promoting and Expanding the Efficiency of the State Apparatus With a View To Profoundly Changing the Basic Point of Implementation Arrangements

This is an urgent requirement as stipulated in the eighth resolution of the party Central Committee, with a view to guaranteeing the successful implementation of the First 5-Year State Plan. It is also aimed at further strengthening the consolidation of the system the dictatorship of the proletariat.

By implementing the aforesaid plan and policies, we have fulfilled the following tasks in the past year: We have attached importance to increasing the efficiency of the contingent of cadres with respect to their abilities and revolutionary virtues. Through recent study of the eighth resolution of the party Central Committee and by engaging in political life, cadres at all branches -- ranging from the central to the grassroots levels -- have profoundly understood the line and policies of the party and state in the new stage as well as the various lessons experienced in the maintenance and building of socialism in our country during the past 5 years. As a result of this understanding, the cadres have upheld their acknowledgement of and corrected certain points of mistakes in their line of thinking and attitudes. As a result, an ever stronger cohesion has been built and the spirit of responsibility has been enhanced in the ranks of cadres at all levels and in all branches. We have continued to provide training in basic theory for hundreds of leading cadres, while organizing short-term and long-term training in the technical, specialized and academic fields for more than 1,000 cadres of various branches. We have completed the study of and preparations for the consolidation and rehabilitation of the apparatus organizing system, and have fixed roles, responsibilities, relationship, regulations and working procedures for various branches and various levels in order to further increase the efficiency of the state apparatuses.

Some provinces, for example, Houa Phan, Xieng Khouang, Phong Saly and Oudomsai, have achieved considerable success in implementing the plan and policy of simplifying the organizing system and increasing the number of cadres at the district and grassroots levels. Provincial apparatuses have been reorganized and the contingents of key cadres at the district level have been strengthened in these provinces. To enhance the efficiency of the administration, we have studied and enforced a number of laws, regulations and policies, including laws concerning the democratic rights and obligations of the people, and changed and added certain policies on production, import and export trading, agricultural taxes, industries and so forth. The arrangements for the implementation of these laws, regulations and policies have also been effectively changed. These changes have been demonstrated in some areas. For example, several district and provincial administrative committees have begun to pay attention to turning to the grassroots level to better understand the situation and to study and promote work.

Forces have been concentrated in guiding the implementation of primary, urgent tasks, for example, guidance of the seasonal rice farming, carrying out of intensive cultivation, purchasing and exchanging of goods, the collection of agricultural taxes, the building of national defense and public security forces and so forth. These are very important factors that have guaranteed the achievement of more successes in comparison with previous years. Those localities or branches that have effectively implemented these points would achieve success in clearly changing the working movements.

Champassak and some other provinces have successfully coordinated various tasks, for example, the tasks of persuading and motivating the people to fight enemies and consolidating and building political bases with the task of encouraging the people to promote production by assigning the provincial party and administrative committees to regularly inspect and guide the implementation of these tasks. As a result, progress has been clearly achieved in the movements in several fields, for example, production has been developed, the maintenance of public security has been strengthened, political bases have been consolidated and the movement to switch to agricultural cooperatives has been restored. Party work and the task of building and training key cadres in cantons and villages have also been developed.

Along with these good points, we still have certain weak points in the matter of guidance and arrangement for the implementation of work. Attention has not been paid to examining and reviewing lessons. This is a weak point which has delayed the implementation of tasks and has limited our achievements.

V. Brilliant Achievements Have Also Been Scored in Foreign Affairs

A new step has been achieved in the implementation of a foreign line of peace, independence, self-mastery and socialism. It has created favorable conditions for the defense and building of the country, and has raised to an ever higher level our role and status in the international arena.

We are very proud to note that only 5 years after its establishment, our beloved LPDR has become a member of the socialist community with the great Soviet Union as the core. This is a result of the process of development of the heroic, indomitable revolutionary struggle of our entire party and people. It is also the result of the genuine Marxist-Leninist line of our party and the trust and love given us on the basis of the spirit of socialist internationalism by various fraternal parties and countries.

During the past year, a new qualitative stage of development has been achieved in all sectors in the combat alliance and special solidarity between Laos and Vietnam. The implementation of the treaty on the determination of the national border between the two countries has also been initially successful. The agreement on mutual assistance and cooperation for the 5-year period has also been successfully implemented. This has paved a glorious path for the economic, cultural, scientific and technical cooperation between the two countries. The high-level meetings and talks, as well as the exchanges of visits and lessons between party and state delegations, delegations of the economic and cultural branches and delegations of various sister provinces have prompted mutual understanding, trust and concrete and effective assistance and cooperation between the two countries. The militant solidarity and special relations between Laos and Kampuchea have also been developed. During the past year, we have done our best to give moral support and material assistance to the fraternal Kampuchean peoples in the cause of the rehabilitation, development and defense of the country.

The all-round solidarity, cooperation and relations between our country and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries have also been further consolidated and strengthened. We would like to express sincere gratitude to the Soviet Union for continuously providing great and precious assistance to our Lao people in the cause of national defense and socialist construction.

We highly appreciate and fully support the Soviet peace plan that was presented to the 26th CPSU Congress by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, as well as the initiatives on peace presented by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev during his visits to India and the Federal Republic of Germany. We regard those proposals as a great contribution to the peace and tranquillity of various nations in the world. We also would like to express sincere gratitude to the various fraternal socialist countries for their invaluable, friendly and fraternal assistance to us.

The glorious success of the vice foreign ministers meeting between Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea and the Soviet Union and a number of other socialist countries, which was held in Vientiane last December, has shown the unanimity and vigorous support of the various fraternal socialist countries for the cause of just struggle of the three Indochinese countries.

We wholeheartedly hail and completely support the various resolute measures of the Polish party and government, whose aim is to smash the schemes to seize administrative power by the various reactionaries in the country in collusion with the imperialists; save Poland from crisis; and safeguard independence, sovereignty and socialist revolutionary gains. We solemnly denounce the various pressures and arrogant interference of the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary powers in the internal affairs of the Polish People's Republic -- a sovereign country that is a member of the Warsaw Pact and of the socialist community. We strongly oppose the U.S. use of the Polish problem as a pretext to slander the Soviet Union and return to the use of the outdated policy of an embargo on shipments, which has further increased tension in the world. The United States must bear full responsibility for the consequences arising from their acts.

We fully support the struggle of the heroic Cuban people against the intervention, intimidation and aggression of the U.S. imperialists, to defend socialist Cuba -- the radiant beacon of national independence and socialism in the Western Hemisphere.

The strengthening of the militant solidarity and special relationship between our country and Vietnam and Kampuchea, and the strengthening of the solidarity and all-round cooperation between our country and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, remain forever a cornerstone of the foreign policy of our party and state.

In pursuance of the consistent policy of peace, friendship and good-neighbor relations and closely coordinating with the other two fraternal Indochinese countries, our foreign minister visited some Southeast Asian countries, for example, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines, Burma and Thailand. The visits served not only to strengthen friendship and neighborly relations, but to improve mutual understanding and promote negotiations between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries in order to turn Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, friendship, stability and cooperation. With regard to the Kingdom of Thailand, all the principles and measures aimed at fostering good-neighbor relations between the two countries, which were stipulated in the January and April 1979 joint communiques, have been reiterated. In the interest of the peoples of the two countries -- Laos and Thailand -- we have correctly implemented and will continue to implement the various agreements signed between the two countries. We hope that the Thai side will do likewise.

As a member of the Nonaligned Coordination Committee, we have made earnest contributions to preserving solidarity and the spirit of resistance against imperialism within the Nonaligned Movement, and to supporting the struggle to create a new international economic order on the basis of equality and mutual respect for national sovereignty. At the United Nations, we have resolutely exposed the scheme of the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries, opposed the arms race and demanded a reduction in military forces for the sake of peace, international detente and the security of all nations.

We would like to sincerely thank the governments of India, Sweden and other countries, as well as the international organizations, for their continued assistance to our people to heal the wounds of war, to restore and develop the economy and to develop culture.

We express satisfaction with the resumption of normal international relations between our country and France. Our relations with the United States have yet to improve because the U.S. administration still continues to play the China card and to implement an anti-LPDR policy. As for China, we resolutely oppose the reactionary clique in the Beijing ruling circles. However, the friendship between our people and the Chinese people remains as firm as ever. During the past several years -- as we will continue to do in the future -- we have done everything possible to safeguard and restore friendship and neighborly relations in the interests of peace in Southeast Asia, Asia and the world.

The victories scored in the international arena in the past year include the victory of the foreign policy of our party -- the policy which has clearly identified friend from foe, closely coordinated genuine patriotism with socialist internationalism, coordinated the strength of our country with the strength of the militant alliance of the three Indochinese countries, closely united and cooperated with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries and transformed the epochal strength into a consolidated strength to serve the revolutionary struggle of our people and to fulfill the internationalist obligations of our party and state.

Respected excellencies, the great achievements in various fields that we have scored in the first year of the 5-year state plan clearly point to the potentials of our country and the new factors in the national defense and public security front, the consolidation and building of our political foundations, the comprehensive agricultural production and the transformation of organization. At the same time, we have now come to understand the new conditions that favor our foreign affairs.

All this displays the great efforts of our entire party, army and people during the past year. Most significant of all, the victories scored in the past year testify to the fact that the line and policies of our party and state are absolutely correct. The line and policies are correct not only in the sense of collective plans, but in terms of detailed plans, direction and actual implementation. These victories also show that if we know how to vigorously go to the grassroots level in any locality and at any time, create unity among the masses, enhance the overall strength of all services, closely coordinate all branches of work and effectively build the revolutionary forces at the grassroots level, we will be able to firmly and extensively consolidate and develop the mass movement in that locality at any time.

On behalf of the Council of Ministers, I propose that the SPC praise our workers, peasants, compatriots of all tribes, the armed forces and security forces, cadres and state employees at all levels and in all branches, mass organizations, learned persons, patriotic intellectuals and Buddhist monks and novices for enhancing the spirit of mastery, heroically overcoming all difficulties and making noble contributions to the overall victory of our national construction and national defense during the past year. While scoring the above-mentioned achievements, we are still faced with the following numerous difficulties and shortcomings that must be overcome and rectified:

1. Our revolutionary vigilance has yet to be profoundly understood. We have not yet clearly understood the nature of the fierce, uncompromising, complex and all-round struggle against the various reactionary forces. We have not yet clearly understood their cunning and cruel characteristics. In some areas and on some occasions, we have not been able to fully predict complex events that may take place. We continue to be careless and relax our attention, thus enabling the enemy to take advantage of this to cause difficulties for us in implementing the task of defending and building our country.

2. The task of going to the grassroots level has undergone changes, but this has not yet been done steadily. The situation in some areas is not very good. We have not yet firmly grasped the three-pronged approach for attacking the enemy and building basic establishments.

Some localities and branches of work have not yet shown determination to go to the grass-roots level. The fear of hardships and difficulties, the bureaucratic way of thinking and violations of the right to collective mastery of the masses continue to exist.

3. Generally speaking, production has developed considerably, but some branches of work and sectors have not yet fulfilled state plans or have barely fulfilled them. This shows that we have not yet firmly grasped the economic policy and plans of the party and state. The management work remains very complex. The sense of self-reliance and self-sufficiency and the initiatives to exploit the various superiorities of some localities and mobilize the people's strength to resolve various problems continue to be limited. Small-scale, medium-scale and all-out economic construction has not been effectively applied in the proper direction, thereby minimizing the results of work.

4. Despite efforts being made to improve the spiritual and material life of the people of various tribes, the laboring people, particularly the cadres, combatants, workers, state employees and people living in remote areas, have encountered many difficulties in their living conditions.

5. Guidance in organizing the actual implementation of work continues to lack details and has not yet brought into full play the overall strength of all branches of work. Experiments are not being given the proper weight so that experience can be drawn from them. Examinations to find new favorable factors and the mobilization and promotion of various movements have not yet been timely carried out. Many localities continue to give less attention to these matters.

6. The diplomatic work has yet to bring into full play all the international conditions that favor the implementation of the task of defending and building our socialist fatherland. In particular, proper attention has yet to be given to the aspect of economic relations with foreign countries. The utilization of international assistance has not been pragmatic, has not been carried out in a thrifty manner and has not been truly effective.

Part Two

Direction and Tasks for 1982

Respected personages, we have entered the second year of the First 5-Year States Plan at a time when the situation at home and abroad is basically favorable in many respects. Nevertheless, there remain considerable difficulties and complexities. The U.S. imperialists continue their arms race to push mankind into the dangers of war. The Beijing expansionists and hegemonists are following the bellicose U.S. policy and continue to advance far along the path of betraying socialism and opposing revolutionary movements and world peace. The U.S.-China collusion continues to pose a great danger to the peace and security of various nations, for example, in Asia. However, they are being faced with weakness, crises and contradiction. Their capabilities have been limited, and it is inevitable that they will fail to reverse the wheel of history and the epochal trend.

The struggles of the world's people for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism continue to be difficult, fierce and uncompromising. However, the general trend is: The three revolutionary currents andthe struggle movements for peace in the world will continue to grow and develop continuously, and they have won victories with each passing day.

In Southeast Asia, the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles continue to carry out multifaceted destructive activities against the three countries in Indochina in order to sow discord in each country, destroy the unity among the three countries and between these countries and the Soviet Union and other socialist countries and create hostilities between the three Indochinese countries and the various ASEAN countries, in an attempt to weaken and later swallow up the three Indochinese countries and expand their territory to the Southeast Asian region.

Meanwhile, the revolutions of the three Indochinese countries have been consolidated and further strengthened. The Southeast Asian people have seen ever more clearly that the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists pose the main danger to the national independence, peace and stability in the region. The trend of independence and neutrality and the trend toward negotiations and peaceful coexistence between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries have emerged with each passing day.

In our country, the struggle between us and the enemy remains complex, fierce and uncompromising. Even though the reactionary forces have been continuously defeated and repulsed, they have not yet given up their multifaceted destructive schemes against our country. They are making efforts to know our shortcomings, weak points, difficulties and areas of negligence in order to counterattack us through various heinous, relentless tricks, in the hope of weakening us and fulfilling their aggressive intention of swallowing up our country. For this reason, the entire party, army and people must always heighten their vigilance and be determined to safeguard the country and smash to bits all their schemes and sabotage activities.

No matter how dangerous and relentless our present enemies are, they are being isolated. They are beset with contradiction within their own ranks. Every day their henchmen lose confidence and trust in their masters, and their morale is deteriorating. Our country has become more firmly stable and the all-round forces of our revolution have grown and become stronger than ever before. Our entire party, army and people have become singleminded. With the clear-sighted leadership of the party Central Committee and the government, and with the great assistance and cooperation of the various fraternal socialist countries and broad international support, it is inevitable that we will resolve our weak points and shortcomings, surmount various difficulties and splendidly fulfill the First 5-Year Plan. To splendidly fulfill the second-year projects of the 5-year plan, we have the following objectives and direction as our main tasks:

A. The three main objectives of the 1982 tasks:

1. To continue carrying out the task of defending the country and maintaining public order, and effectively build and consolidate political foundations in order to daily pacify and normalize the situation, for example, in various important strategic areas.

2. To vigorously step up production; ensure self-sufficiency in food supplies, a portion of which should be kept in stock; increase the sources of export goods; and ensure the normalization and improvement of the living conditions of the people, in particular for those cadres, combatants, workers and people living in remote areas.

3. To further conduct basic surveys in preparation for the construction of some main projects of strategic significance in the economic and national defense spheres in the years to come.

B. The direction for the main tasks for 1982:

1. To strengthen the all-people unity; continue to heighten vigilance; strive to build, consolidate and strengthen political foundations; effectively carry out the task of defending the country and maintaining public order and public security; effectively counter the enemy's multifaceted sabotage activities; and ensure that the situation in our country firmly returns to normal, particularly in the areas of strategic importance in the political, economic and national defense spheres.

2. To step up agricultural production in all respects; persevere to win great achievements in the annual farming season; ensure self-sufficiency in food supplies, a portion of which would be kept in stock; consolidate the movement of turning to agricultural cooperatives and ensure the firm development of this movement, particularly in the areas of rice cultivation; broaden the irrigation work, with the purpose of expanding arable areas and carrying out intensive farming; increase the efficiency of production; step up the forestry work, such as surveying, planning, forest reservation, tree planting and forest exploitation; and, at the same time, positively lead the development and materialization of family economy.

3. To preserve and develop the production capacity of the various existing basic industries in order to develop agriculture and communications and transportation and to produce commodities; adopt policies and positive methods to restore and develop handicraft; and further develop survey and research work in preparation for future construction of major enterprises of strategic importance.

4. To modify the distribution and circulation work and, first of all, modify the policies of pricing, wages and purchase of rice and forest products; broaden state and collective trade metworks; strengthen the task of guiding private traders and the task of managing markets, cash, and foreign currencies; and effectively organize the purchase of rice and forest products and the collection of the agricultural tax.

5. To strengthen the guiding of export and import work; strive to find sources of export goods; and effectively organize import procedures, with special attention to the supply of fuel, material, equipment and spare parts, in order to serve industrial and agricultural production, communications and transportation and meet the necessary requirements of the state and people.

6. To improve and guarantee communication networks, particularly the various important strategic routes; expand communications in the countryside; effectively organize the exploitation and use of state and private transport means; develop the existing modified traditional transport means of the people; and pay more attention to waterway transportation.

7. To strictly practice thrift in all areas of production, combat and consumption; carefully manage expenses for administration, national defense, public security and foreign affairs in order to accumulate capital to serve production and improve the people's living conditions; and implement the business procedures and balanced and profitable management regulations toward state factories and plants in accordance with the spirit of the resolution adopted by the Political Bureau in August 1981.

8. To step up the educational, public health, cultural, information, postal and sports work; and pay attention to raising the quality of these works and expand them to minority, hilly and remote areas.

9. To accelerate the consolidation and rebuilding of the party and state apparatuses from the central levels down to the local levels, with particular attention to the district and grassroots levels; modify work procedures and style, strengthen the methods for checking, organizing, guiding and putting into practice the precedures and style and pay particular attention to experimental work in order to draw experience; and strengthen the task of building and nurturing the ranks of cadres, particularly the key and management cadres.

10. To strive to step up diplomatic work to serve the task of defending and building the country; be determined to oppose the schemes and actions of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to oppose the revolution in our country and in fraternal Vietnam and Kampuchea; strengthen the militant alliance and special solidarity between Laos and Vietnam and among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea; unite and cooperate in all respects with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries; struggle resolutely and persistently to bring peace, friendship, stability and cooperation to Southeast Asia, thus honorably contributing to the cause of peace and revolution of the people throughout the world; strengthen the aspect of economic relations with foreign countries; and effectively and thriftily make use of international assistance.

Respected personages, entering the second year of the First 5-Year Plan, we have many splendid hopes. Despite many difficulties and shortcomings, we are aware of the work to be done and the direction to take toward victories. Our country's position and strength have grown and become stronger than ever before.

The militant relations and special solidarity between our country and Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries have been further consolidated. International assistance and support given our revolutionary cause has become basically more and more favorable. Under the clear-sighted leadership of the party, thanks to the traditions of unity and perserverance of our country, which will not yield to any difficulties and obstacles, which dares to think and do and which carries out work while studying and drawing lessons from the work, we will inevitably win victories in implementing the state plans for 1982, thereby creating favorable conditions for the successful implementation of the First 5-Year Plan.

Long live the LPDR! Long live the honorable and glorious LPRP!

SIANG PASASON HAILS LPLA FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK201031 Vientiane KPL in English 0902 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 20 Jan (KPL) -- SIANG PASASON, organ of the party CC, today front-pages and editorial hailing the 33rd anniversary of the Lao People's Liberation Army.

Under the glorious and correct leadership of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party, and receiving the patronage from the entire Lao people as well as enjoying support and assistance from fraternal countries, the LPLA had scored significant success, and actively contributed in the struggle against the French colonialists and U.S. imperialists and their henchmen, culminating in complete liberation of the nation, the editorial writes.

Since the proclamation of the republic, in close collaboration with the Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples and having support and assistance from the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, the LPLA has resolutely and actively engaged in the cause of national socialist construction and defense, the editorial notes. In furthering its heroic and glorious tradition, the LPLA together with the Lao people has foiled all undermining acts of the imperialists, the Beijing hegemonists and expansionists, thus normalizing the social order in the country.

The glorious achievements of the LPLA and the people, in the past 30-odd years during the national liberation struggle as well as in the past 6 years, have clearly proved the correct leadership of the party, the genuine Marxist-Leninist party.

These victories have in effect demonstrated dedication sacrificed by combatants and people who have taken part in the movements of national liberation, social progress, the cause of safeguarding peace and security in Southeast Asia and in the world, the editorial emphasizes. In the tasks of national socialist defence and construction, the paper, however, points out, it requires firmer proletarian dictatorship, and the upgrading of the might of the armed forces is a most important factor, the editorial notes.

On the occasion of the 33rd Army Day, the entire Lao people hailed the successes of the LPLA and wholeheartedly wish the LPLA new and still greater successes in the implementation of the 8th resolution of the party CC and the State First 5-Year Plan, the editorial concluded.

LE THANH NGHI ATTENDS HAI HUNG PARTY CONGRESS

OW200855 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Amid the radiant atmosphere of the new year, Hai Hung recently held the fourth provincial party organization congress. The congress was attended by 500 delegates representing the province's 22 party organizations and units, with a total number of more than 900,000 party members. Also present at the congress were Comrade Le Thanh Nghi, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee, and five other high ranking cadres that the party Central Committee had sent to the congress to run in the election of delegates to the fifth national party congress.

During its session the congress studied and discussed the central level's draft documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress and elected a 36-member delegation, including the 6 comrades that the central level had sent to run in the election, to represent the Hai Hung provincial party organization at the coming party congress. The delegates devoted much time to gathering and studying the suggestions made by cadres and party members from the grassroots-level units and heatedly discussed the central-level documents. They unanimously agreed that the line set forth at the fourth party congress was correct and creative. They also agreed with the central level's assessment of the achievements our entire party, people and army have scored over the past 5 years, among them the national reunification, the consolidation and development of the administration, and the glorious victories over the Chinese aggressors and their lackeys in the wars on our country's northern and southwestern borders. They also voiced their agreement on the objectives that the party Central Committee set forth for the 1981-85 5-Year Plan.

Taking note of the fact that Hai Hung is a province of the Red River Delta with a large labor force and fertile land, the delegates also agreed that the policy of agricultural development through intensive and specialized cultivation set forth by the central level is correct and creative.

Last year Hai Hung was one of the provinces that outstandingly fulfilled its task of grain and foodstuff delivery to the state. It also overfulfilled its export goods production plan. Over the past 5 years, Hai Hung contributed to the state 1.1 tons of paddy, 1 quintal of pork in live weight and 1 quintal of jute per cultivated hectare.

The aforementioned achievements are indeed great and obvious. However, taking into consideration the actual situation in the region, the congress agreed with the central level's observation that we have committed many errors and shortcomings on the economic front over the past 5 years. Due to their subjectiveness and impatience, a few areas overextended the scope of cooperatives. A few districts became too big when they annexed two or three other districts and did not meet the requirements of the present reality and material-technical base. There were also areas that failed to actively create conditions for farming by being too concerned with expanding the winter crop area and that were unable to apply intensive cultivation during the winter crop season, which more or less affected intensive cultivation in two rice crops.

Conservatism and sluggishness were manifested in the fostering and training of young cadres and not enough attention was given to training scientific and technical cadres in many areas. A number of delegates pointed out that although Hai Hung adopted contractual work for most of the winter plants at an early date, it was rather slow in moving this system from the winter subsidiary crops to rice.

The delegates devoted much time to discussing the resolution of the 11th VCP Central Committee plenum and contributed suggestions to improving the province's 1982 plan.

In 1982 Hai Hung will concentrate efforts to further accelerating the production of grain and foodstuffs, boosting stockbreeding, vigorously developing the local industry, expanding the production of consumer and export goods and improving the work distribution system. It will send more workers to new economic zones in the south and the mountain region. It will strive to reach the set targets of 840,000 tons of grain, 600,000 head of hog and 50 million dong in export goods.

Encouraged by the success of the provincial party organization congress, all cadres, party members and people of Hai Hung are actively engaging in a seething 60-day movement to emulate one another in scoring achievements to greet the fifth party congress by registering greater successes, overcoming shortcomings and satisfactorily implementing the 1982 State Plan right from the first month of the first quarter of the year.

HO CHI MINH CITY HOLDS PARTY CONGRESS 11-18 JAN

OW201121 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] According to VNA, the Ho Chi Minh City party organization held its congress from 11 to 18 January 1982 to discuss the documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress and to elect delegates to that congress.

Displaying a spirit of criticism and self-criticism, more than 550 delegates representing more than 40,000 party members of the Ho Chi Minh City party organization contributed more than 10,000 suggestions on developing the achievements scored at party organization congresses at the grassroots, precinct, district and similar levels; on the documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress; and on solving outstanding problems facing the city party organization.

By taking into account local conditions over the past 5 years in terms of equipment, techniques, land and workers' skills and by developing the movement of learning from progressive models, Ho Chi Minh City has bravely overcome obstacles and difficulties in developing production.

The delegates unanimously endorsed the draft political report assessing the situation and setting forth the general economic line for the coming 5 years and the 1980's.

Through the party congresses from the grassroots to the city level, the delegates realized that the Ho Chi Minh City party organization has grown in terms of knowledge, confidence and determination regarding the revolutionary task carried out by our people under our party's leadership. This constitutes resolutions and an impetus for satisfactorily implementing the 1982 State Plan.

The delegates were moved by the fact that the VCP Central Committee had sincerely and seriously criticized its past own shortcomings in leadership and guidance and had set forth the objectives and direction of national development in the 1980's consistent with the country's characteristics and actual conditions.

The delegates criticized a number of incorrect views on the party-building task expressed by attendants of congresses at the grassroots, precinct, district and similar levels. However, all the diverse views on the various issues mentioned in the documents will be presented by the city's party organization delegation at the fifth national party congress.

The delegates warmly commended the party organizations at the grassroots, precinct, district and similar levels for enthusiastically and scrupulously holding their congresses even though they were busily engaged in many yearend tasks, and for contributing many concrete suggestions on the important issues mentioned in the documents.

The delegates appealed to all party organization members to turn their minds to the fifth national party congress, to strive to fulfill the 1982 plan right from the early months of the year and to take good care of the lives of the city's people, especially the workers, cadres, civil servants, troops, families of dead heroes and families in good standing with the revolution so that they will be able to enjoy a merry Tet festival, materially and spiritually.

Some 56 delegates capable of displaying the ability and wisdom of the Ho Chi Minh City party organization were elected to attend the Fifth VCP Congress.

HA NAM NINH PROVINCE HOLDS PARTY CONGRESS

BK211047 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] During its first round held from 9 to 16 January, the third Congress of the Ha Nam Ninh provincial party organization worked intensively, enthusiastically and seriously, concentrating on studying the draft documents of the VCP Central Committee. The congress showed a high degree of unanimity with the documents and contributed numerous suggestions to them. It also appointed 46 delegates to the Fifth VCP Congress.

Of the 497 delegates attending the congress, 448 spoke during group discussions and 29 made statements during plenary sessions, contributing a total of more than 1,000 suggestions. Thus, more than 90 percent of the delegates expressed their views.

The congress showed a high degree of unanimity with the draft documents of the VCP Central Committee, considering them as major theoretical works which summed up realities, and as a concretization of the general line and the economic line laid down by the Fourth VCP Congress.

Over the past 5 years, despite the many difficulties it encountered, Ha Nam Ninh has made progress in both economic building and the people's livelihood. In 1981, overcoming numerous difficulties caused by natural calamities and supply shortages, the province overfulfilled the annual grain production plan by 6.3 percent, producing 190,000 tons more than in 1980. It also exceeded its plan norms for the output of industrial, small industrial, handicraft and export products and quickly fulfilled its grain and foodstuff obligation.

Many new factors have emerged in the province. Aside from the model districts excelling in intensive rice cultivation such as Hai Hau and Xuan Thuy, which have achieved a yield of more than 6 tons per hectare, Duy Tien, a low-lying district, has gained prominence by producing a yield of more than 5 tons per hectare. Duy Tien has also actively sent out people to build new economic zones and practiced family planning, reducing the rate of population growth from 3.2 percent to 1.5 percent. This year, the district plans to cut down the absolute number of its population by 3,000, thus ensuring an average grain supply of 410 kg per capita.

Nam Ninh District last year achieved the highest value of industrial output in the province, turning out products worth 36 million dong. The Son Hong, Son Thuy, Chau Giang and Duy Tien cooperatives produced export goods worth 1.5-2 million dong each.

Ha Nam Ninh Province also has numerous important economic products, such as salt, of which it is a bigger producer of the country. It is producing a number of new products designed to support production and to meet consumers' needs such as insecticide sprayers, foot-operated threshers, ferrocement boats, and high quality bicycles, and bicycle accessories.

Ha Nam Ninh still has many difficulties and shortcomings, however. The province is still unable to meet its own needs for grain. There is an acute shortage of consumer goods. The province's distribution, circulation and pricing work still show shortcomings. Conservatism, sluggishness, bureaucratism, redtape and the practice of subsidization still prevail among the leadership of some grassroots units and sectors.

Fully understanding the views of the VCP Central Committee contained in the draft documents and the resolution of the 11th Plenum of the VCP Central Committee, the Ha Nam Ninh provincial party organization congress unanimously adopted a program of action under which it will concentrate on satisfactorily implementing the 1982 plan. In the immediate future, the province will strive to grow 2,000-3,000 hectares of 5th-month spring rice more than the norms require, thus producing 440,000 tons of grain in this crop season alone as compared with the planned total annual output of 900,000 tons. It will launch a vigorous movement for the cultivation of soybeans, mulberry and other subsidiary food crops and industrial plants. IN the first quarter, it will strive to achieve a value of industrial, small industrial and handicraft output equal to 23-25 percent of the planned annual output value.

The entire party organization and people of Ha Nam Ninh expressed their determination to resolve the food and clothing problem and to make increasing contributions to the state. As a Red River Delta province having considerable potential in manpower, land forests and sea area as well as a great variety of traditional trades, Ha Nam Ninh must bring its management system up to date and build stable and strong party organizations at all levels so as to fully exploit its enormous potential.

The congress held discussions and made many suggestions concerning the building of the district level. For example, it suggested that successful experiences of the frontrank districts be reviewed and applied, that the party and the state make a decision soon on giving concrete responsibilities to districts, and that investments be made in various fields to create proper conditions for the district to become a planning and budgetary level.

In party building, the congress proposed that efforts must be made first of all to enable all party committee echelons and party members to fully understand the line of the central level. They must also promtoe unity and single-mindedness, uphold their responsible, vanguard and exemplary role in work, production and life, and strengthen control and discipline within the party.

ALL-ARMY PARTY ORGANIZATION CONGRESS CONCLUDES

BK210956 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] After five days of urgent and scrupulous work, the all-army party organization congress concluded successfully on the evening of 19 January. Attending the congress were 422 delegates from the party organizations of various military regions, army corps, armed branches and services, agencies, institues and army schools. This figure includes 382 high-ranking cadres and 27 heroes of the people's armed forces.

The delegates to the congress warmly welcomed Le Duc Tho, Vo Nguyen Giap and some other comrades appointed by the party Central Committee to attend the congress and stand as candidates in the election of delegates to the fifth nationwide VCP Congress.

During the congress, with a high sense of responsibility the delegates heatedly discussed the documents to be presented at the Fifth VCP Congress. They expressed agreement on the basic contents of the documents. Many of them referred to the realities in their own localities and units to expound on the Central Committee's observations on the situation in the country during the past. They made many suggestions concerning measures to overcome the urgent problems in the tasks of building the economy and consolidating national defense.

The delegates to the congress discussed and carefully analyzed the enemy schemes, especially those of the reactionary Beijing rulers, who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists to wage a many-sided war of sabotage in order to weaken and annex our country. Many of the delegates made statements on the relations between the two strategic missions and stressed the need to strengthen the all-people national defense and to ensure political security and social order and stability.

It is necessary to make all the armed forces' cadres and combatants and the people of all strata well aware of the enemy's wicked plots so that they can heighten their vigilance, be determined to defeat the enemy's many-sided war of sabotage and be ready to defeat all types of war waged by the enemies under any circumstance.

The delegates also expressed many realistic views on consolidating the party in general as well as the party organizations in the army and on promoting the vanguard role and leadership of the party. They were elated to hear an address by Le Duc Tho, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau. He elaborated on some basic facts contained in the draft documents of the party Central Committee and underlined the present duties of the army party organizations, which are to concentrate the leadership's role in increasing the combat strength and the standard of political and ideological knowledge of troops; to organize training for troops to master modern weapons and equipment; to always uphold vigilance and be ready to fight; and to victoriously fulfill all the tasks assigned by the party and the people.

The delegates to the congress elected an army delegation of 93 comrades to the Fifth VCP Congress. Le Duc Tho, Vo Nguyen Giap, Van Tien Dung and Chu Huy Man were elected with a majority of votes. The congress also approved a message to be sent to the Fifth VCP Congress and a letter addressed to the all the people's armed forces.

Concluding the congress, Van Tien Dung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and first deputy secretary of the party Central Committee's Military Commission, pointed to the immediate tasks of all the units' party organizations. They are to accelerate the movement for revolutionary acts in a broad and enthusiastic manner in order to change the situation in all army units comprehensively, to emulate the scoring of outstanding achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress and to be prepared to implement all of the congress resolutions in the most satisfactory manner.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial

BK211253 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 20 Jan 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 21 January editorial: "Heartily Welcome the All-Army Party Organization Congress of Delegates"]

[Text] After several days of intense work, the all-army party organization congress of delegates has concluded with fine success, at a time when our armed forces and people are accelerating the emulation movement to score achievements to honor the fifth party congress, and when our country has concluded the first year of the Third 5-Year Plan successfully and is embarking on the second year with a new impetus and vigorous confidence in the prospect of our revolution's advance.

During the 5-year period -- a glorious and historic period in our struggle to consolidate national independence and unification and build socialism -- following the convening of the fourth party congress under the leadership of the stalwart and broadly experienced vanguard party, our army and people have surmounted all difficulties and ordeals while advancing steadily. A new system of proletarian economy has been established throughout the country and considerable achievements have been recorded in the struggle to heal the wounds of war and to restore and develop the economy and culture. In addition, we have won glorious victories in the two wars of aggression waged by the Chinese reactionaries in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, thus safeguarding our country's sacred territorial integrity, fulfilling our international duty and creating an unprecentedly strong and interrelated strategic position for the revolutions in the three Indochinese countries.

The leadership of the party has been a decisive factor in all victories of our army. Organized and trained by the vanguard party and esteemed President Ho Chi Minh, our army has grown ever stronger and is rapidly becoming a modern regular army capable of standing combat ready and fighting gallantly to defend the fatherland, while participating enthusiastically in national construction.

As a revolutionary army which is always loyal to the party, country and people and imbued with noble proletarian internationalism, our army is an effective instrument of the state and a solid pillar of the system of socialist collective mastery. For this reason, it deserves the love and confidence of our entire party and all our people.

Over the past 5 years, our army's party organization has been consolidated and expanded constantly. Meanwhile, the contingent of party members throughout our army has developed in both quantity and quality, playing a leading and exemplary role in all combat and noncombat assignments and serving as a core force for the assumption of party leadership among the armed forces and the transformation of party policies into the revolutionary strength of our entire army.

Participating in the all-army party organization congress of delegates this time were outstanding representatives elected from party congresses at all levels and from various grassroots units, national defense enterprises, institutes, military regions, armed services and branches, army corps and general departments, who have been on assignments in all parts of the country -- from the north to the south and from the border areas to offshore islands. With the participation of these outstanding delegates, the congress reflects the growth, the strength and the morale of our entire army.

This all-army party organization congress of delegates, which was held on the basis of the party congresses at various levels and conducted properly in an intensive and serious manner, also shows that all the party organizations in the army have reached a high identity of views on the party line and have contributed their views to the draft documents of the congress.

Through the convening of party organization congresses at various levels, cadres and party members have been able to further improve their political background, strengthen solidarity and unanimity, understand clearly the situation and tasks of the new revolutionary stage, and believe firmly in the progress and certain victory of our revolution and the bright prospects of our nation.

Mustering the intellect of the entire army, the all-army party organization congress of delegates has discussed and contributed many of its views to various draft documents -- the political report, the report on party-development activities and suggestions for the amendment of the party statutes -- which will be presented at the national party congress, as well as to appointed delegates to this congress.

The voice of the all-army party organization congress of delegates was the voice of high identity of views by our entire army on the party's revolutionary, economic and military line. The congress has demonstrated the persistent determination of all party organizations throughout our army to unite closely behind the party Central Committee, to implement successfully the resolution which will be adopted by the fifth party congress, and to make the People's Army a powerful and modern regular army so that it can fulfill its current historic mission -- to remain combat ready for national defense while participating in economic development and fulfilling its national and international duties.

Each party congress is an important milestone marking a period of glorious development of our revolution. In making preparations for the fifth party congress, we have created an abundant source of encouragement and hope among our entire party, people and army, and a high tide of revolutionary movement through the country, as well as vigorous changes in the struggle to build socialism and defend the socialist fatherland.

Heartily welcoming the success of the all-army party organization congress of delegates, our people's armed forces continue to emulate the greatest achievements to honor the fifth party congress. With steel-like confidence in the party's far-sighted leadership, our cadres and combatants in all units and on all battle fronts are studying and working tirelessly and enthusiastically, striving to overcome all obstacles in order to fulfill all assignments in an outstanding manner and score great successes in fighting, maintaining combat readiness and training as well as in national construction.

Letter To All Personnel

OW230009 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1200 GMT 21 Jan 82

[All-army congress of party organization delegates 19 January letter to all personnel of the People's Armed Forces]

[Text] Affectionately to all party members, youth union members, cadres, combatants and national defense workers and personnel,

Dear comrades: The all-army congress of party organization delegates, held from 15 to 19 January 1982, enthusiastically discussed and fully agreed with the drafts of the political report, of the party building report and of amendments of party regulations of the party Central Committee.

With a high spirit of political responsibility, this congress fully reflected the mind and feelings of the party organizations throughout the armed forces, offered many suggestions to the documents of the party congress and elected outstanding delegates to the fifth national party congress of delegates.

Imbued with enthusiasm, confidence, solidarity and cohesion, the all-army congress of party organization delegates affectionately extends to all the party members, youth union members, cadres, combatants, and national defense workers and personnel its greetings of certain victory. It was very happy to receive many letters and messages from various units and party organizations throughout the armed forces, enthusiastically greeting it. It will convey to the national party congress the armed forces' absolute confidence and deep gratitude for the party's and President Ho Chi Minh's leadership and education and will report on the initial achievements of the emulation drive to greet the party congress. All the armed forces pledge to devote all their mind and efforts to resolutely and successfully implementing the resolutions of the forthcoming national party congress and outstandingly fulfilling all the tasks assigned by the party and the state during the new revolutionary stage.

Dear comrades, each party congress is a historical landmark that evidences the victories achieved by our country's revolution and paves the way for our people to advance and register new and still greater achievements. The fifth party congress will decide on important issues on our people's path. It will review the implementation of the lines of the fourth party congress, correctly assess the strong points, shortcomings and actual situation of our country at present, clearly analyze the causes of successes and difficulties, map out the objectives, guidelines and tasks of the 1981-85 period and the 1980's and decide on policies and measures aimed at developing the country's strong position and advantages, insuring that the economy surmount difficulties and advance steadily.

Turning toward the fifth party congress, a major congress of all our party, people and armed forces, with enthusiasm for the great achievements scored and with firm confidence in our strength and capability to surmount immediate difficulties, the all-army congress of party organization delegates calls on all the party members, youth union members, cadres, combatants and national defense workers and personnel engaged in fighting, standing combat ready, training, productive labor, economic construction and international obligation:

1. To be ready to seriously, thoroughly and effectively implement all resolutions of the fifth national party congress of delegates; to continue to hold aloft the invincible banner given by the party and Uncle Ho to the armed forces; to uphold patriotism and love for socialism; to develop the awareness and capability of socialist collective mastery; to raise aloft revolutionary heroism and to firmly defend our socialist fatherland, thus contributing to the successful building of socialism and fulfilling our international obligation.

2. To continue to push forward the drive for the defeat of the aggressors and national defense emulation, making it into a stirring, enthusiastic and widespread emulation drive; to successfully fulfill the five objectives of the major campaign concentrating on the three major issues, namely, to uphold the will and responsibility of the cadres, party members, youth union members and combatants, to strictly observe army regulations and push forward training and combat readiness activities, and to actively work, produce and economize, thus contributing to maintaining and improving the cadres' and combatants' material and spiritual life.

The congress is firmly confident that, under the party's leadership, our armed forces will always be a powerful revolutionary people's army, an invincible army that firmly defends our territory, airspace and territorial waters and our people's work of socialist construction, and will at the same time be a big school for the young generation that contributes to training new-type socialist men. Our armed forces pledge to forever be worthy of our revered Uncle Ho's behest that they be a revolutionary army that is faithful to the country and the people, is ready to fight and make sacrifices for the fatherland's independence and freedom and for socialism, and that fulfills any task, surmounts any difficulty and defeats any enemy.

Hanoi, 19 January 1982
On behalf of the all-army congress of delegates,
[Signed] the presidium

HAU GIANG PROVINCE HOLDS PARTY CONGRESS

BK240703 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] The party organization of Hau Giang Province recently held a congress of delegates to discuss the draft documents and nominate its delegates to the fifth national party congress. On the basis of the views adopted by the congresses held at the grassroots, district, city and municipal levels, the delegates contributed their opinions expressing an identity of views with the central level as concerns the assessment of the situation, the general line and the line for economic development in the years ahead. The delegates also cited the realities in Hau Giang in presenting their views on specific problems such as determining major grain areas for the entire country, investing in the major rice-growing areas of the Mekong Delta, the building of a district model with an agroindustrial or agroindustrial-forestry economic structure and combining closely the development of the central economy and the promotion of the local economies.

The delegates devoted much time to deabating the question of thrift and agreed with the central level on the policy to introduce thrift as a strict system in production and life.

In studying the resolution of the party Central Committee's 11th Plenum, the delegates recognized clearly the responsibilities of Hau Giang as a major rice-growing province in the Mekong Delta and reached an identity of views with the orientations and tasks adopted by the province for 1982, which consist of stepping up the application of science and technology in production, creating new developments in agricultural and industrial production and in export and meeting the demands of the people's life. As an immediate step, Hau Giang will concentrate efforts on caring for the winter-spring rice, developing soybeans and other short-term industrial crops for export, fulfilling intensively the grain obligation for the 10th-month crop season, controlling the sources of goods and cash and meeting the demands of production, life, security and national defense.

The congress nominated 13 delegates to attend the national party congress.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL PRAISES PARTY CONGRESSES

BK231443 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 23 Jan 82

[From the review of Hanoi press for 23 January]

[Text] Dear friends: Over the past month many congresses of party organizations at all levels have been held in various areas throughtout the country and have concluded with high success. Welcoming this success, NHAN DAN today carries an editorial entitled: "All the Congresses of the Party Organizations at Various Levels Have Concluded With Fine Success." The editorial reads in part as follows:

These congresses reflect the concentration of the mind. Many rich discussions [in the course of these congresses] testify to the fact that the general knowledge of cadres and party members are being increasingly improved. Those attending these congresses have concurred in various documents of the VCP Central Committee. Their solidarity and unanimity have been shown in various elections of delegates [to the fifth national party congress]. The fine success of these congresses of the party organizations at various levels will assure the success of the fifth party congress.

LE DUC THO SPEAKS ON VCP DRAFT DOCUMENTS

BK221424 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] On 20 and 21 January the VCP Secretariat held a conference at the Ba Dinh conference hall in Hanoi to discuss the draft documents of the Fifth National VCP Congress. More than 800 elderly and retired party cadres attended the conference. Le Duc Tho, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, and Song Hao, secretary of the VCP Central Committee, were present.

Those present heard Le Duc Tho present more details of the basic contents of the VCP Central Committee draft documents. He discussed developments, tasks and experiences gained from the earlier revolutionary stages.

Le Duc Tho expressed his belief that the elderly and retired party cadres clearly understand the guidelines set forth by the party congress and will contribute, together with the VCP Central Committee, to overcoming numerous difficulties, creating new opportunities for production and the people's daily life in order to fulfill various great and important tasks in the new stage of the revolution.

PHAM VAN DONG SPEECH TO NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

BK230800 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 31 Dec 81 pp 1, 3

[Text of Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong's speech at closing meeting of the Seventh National Assembly]

[Text] Dear comrade National Assembly deputies: With regard to the general situation and tasks of our country at present and in the coming years, in his important speech at the First Session of the Seventh National Assembly, Comrade General Secretary Le Duan already pointed out the major issues we all are concerned about. Today I will address only those issues related closely to the implementation of the 1981 State Plan and particularly those of the 1982 State Plan. We have held lively discussions at the various group meetings and in this conference hall.

Going back to 1981, we must try to discover all of our achievements as well as our shortcomings. In 1981 our people achieved many inspiring successes in agricultural and industrial production and in the national economy as a whole.

On the agricultural front, thanks to the application of end-product contracts with labor groups and laborers and the promulgation of various policies encouraging production and the fulfillment of grain obligations, we have been able to create a growing movement among the peasants to use manpower and land optimally by expanding the cultivated area and carrying out multicroping and to apply advanced technology in order to step up intensive cultivation and increase the crop yield, thus securing benefits for cooperative members, collectives and the state. We have, for the first time, fulfilled our agricultural production plan in all three aspects -- acreage, yield and output. Thanks to this success, the demand for grain in the rural areas has been met better now than in the previous years, the peasants have been able to fulfill their grain obligations to the state enthusiastically, and the heavy consequences of natural calamities in the north in 1980 have been overcome. The application of the contractual system in agricultural production has now become a mass revolutionary movement and is posing many new problems -- including problems of management, organization, consolidation of cooperatives, intensive and specialized cultivation, and equipping of material and technical bases -- which we must solve with the most effective measures I order to fulfill the peasants' earnest aspirations. Meanwhile, great attention must be paid to overcoming promptly all the inevitable errors in a movement which is expanding every fast and on a large scale. This is necessary in order to make it possible for the movement to continue to develop in all aspects and to help boost agricultural production incessantly, thus contributing significantly to the building of a new socialist countryside.

In industry in general as well as in the fields of capital construction and communications and transportation, the expansion of entrepreneurial rights and the application of contract wages and bonuses under various forms and other policies encouraging production are motivating workers in many establishments of various sectors and localities to promote their right to collective mastery, exploit their potential capabilities, and enhance their positiveness and creativeness in order to overcome difficulties, increase labor productivity, boost production, reduce production costs, and increase income for the laborers while securing benefits for collectives and society. As a result, although with less energy and materials than in the past, we still have been able to increase industrial production, particularly in local industry and small industry and handicrafts. In capital construction, several projects have been completed on schedule and a new and promising construction method has emerged: "the central government and localities work together, the state and the people work together." Local communications and transportation, especially rudimentary transportation, have begun to be developed in a number of provinces and cities.

The successes in the fields of agriculture, industry and capital construction have demonstrated convincingly the great and diversified capabilities of our people in the production establishments at the district level as well as in all localities. These successes have also reflected the abundant source of manpower and our working people's creative skills, which have been developed by policies encouraging production and business transactions and by a rational system of management, and have marked a new step of development in their right to collective mastery. We must pay special attention to these successes and exert further efforts toward studying policies to encourage production and business transactions and having these policies promulgated promptly by all sectors and echelons, especially by all establishments. We must also study and implement policies and principles concerning the new management system, in which the formulation and implementation of the state plan from the grassroots to central levels is the most important task.

Today, in light of such successes and prospects, let us commend our working class, our peasant class and our intelligentsia warmly. At the same time, let us commend our heroic armed forces warmly for having defended our socialist fatherland firmly while performing their noble international duties.

However, besides these inspiring successes, we must also admit that we might have done more and better in many fields of economic and cultural life, thereby further advancing our revolutionary cause. We have also committed shortcomings, particularly in the management and performance of work, the direction of production, the control of distribution and circulation, and the struggle against all negative manifestations. It is the Council of Ministers, especially the Standing Committee of the Council of Ministers, which is responsible for these shortcomings. Therefore, we accept the correct criticism from the National Assembly deputies sincerely.

The forthcoming fifth party congress will decide on strategic policies for the first stage (during the 1980's) of socialist industrialization and will, on that basis, set forth guidelines and tasks for the 1981-85 5-year period. By implementing these strategic policies, we will create favorable conditions for major and vigorous developmental steps in the subsequent years.

To meet that spirit, it is necessary for us to implement satisfactorily the 1982 State Plan, with special attention given to the following tasks: We must concentrate all of our efforts on developing agriculture comprehensively and, in combination with forestry and fishery, on a national basis as well as in each major economic zone, of which the district level is of primary importance; and strive to be successful in ensuring sufficient grain -- including paddy and subsidiary crops -- and food -- including vegetables, beans, sugarcane and fruits -- while stepping up animal husbandry -- including hogs, fowl, cattle and fish. This is aimed at enabling all localities to enjoy a rational diet in terms of quantity and quality. We must strive to ensure sufficient raw materials for industry and every larger quantities of valuable products for export. At this point, I must emphasize the need for all localities, especially those at the district level, to produce sufficient grain and food to feed their people and fulfill their obligation to the state while keeping part in reserve. Recently, a number of localities have engaged satisfactorily in growing soybeans and mulberry, raising silkworms, and planting cotton as well as in making fabrics and other farm products. It is necessary to make these good models widely known so that other localities can follow them.

Along with developing agriculture, we must pay attention to developing consumer goods. Here also the role played by the localities is extremely important. With their sources of local raw material, abundant labor resources, knowledge of the consumption habits and the creative force of cadres and the laboring people, the localities are totally capable of developing the various branches and trades of handicrafts and small industry in order to produce large quantities of ever more sophisticated goods that have good consumption value both at home and abroad.

We must exert efforts to develop agriculture and the consumer goods industry comprehensively in order to serve the people's material and cultural life more and more satisfactorily -- namely, to meet their demands for food, clothing, housing, movement, education, health care and so forth.

At present our country's main sources of export goods consist chiefly of agricultural, handicraft, small industry and mineral products; and we must, therefore, recognize the export capability of some industrial sectors. Efforts must be made to boost exports in order to import necessary items by promulgating policies and systems designed to encourage the various sectors, localities and establishments to carry out this important task satisfactorily under the state's unified management.

The heavy industry sectors, first of all the energy, power, coal, engineering, chemical, construction materials, communications and transport and other sectors, must develop their capacities to the highest degree to serve agriculture and the consumer and export goods industry.

We must pay special attention to the petroleum and natural gas sector and strive to cooperate satisfactorily with the Soviet Union in this sphere.

In capital construction, we must reclassify the various projects resolutely so that efforts can be concentrated on completing key projects on schedule, especially those designed to serve agricultural production and the consumer and export goods industry. Special attention must be attached to power, coal, chemicals, fertilizer, engineering, spinning, paper and construction materials projects; and firm decisions must be made to suspend projects which we are not yet able to build, and to extend the construction schedule for less important projects.

At present we must resolve a very important problem that is attracting everyone's attention -- the problem of production, distribution and circulation. We must draw upon the good experiences as well as the shortcomings in our past activities in this field immediately. On the basis of boosting agricultural (grain and food) and industrial (chiefly consumer goods) production, we must exert tighter control over the market and prices and manage financial and cash revenues and expenditures more closely so as to better serve the life of the people of all strata, especially members of the armed forces, workers and civil servants inthe cities and industrial centers.

Along with carrying out the important and pressing tasks mentioned above, we must exert efforts to rationally develop education, culture, public health, physical education and sports and protection of mothers and children; and practice family planning strictly.

The socialist transformation being undertaken in the south, especially the transformation of agriculture and the market, must be stepped up vigorously along with developing and consolidating socialist production relations on a national scale, maintaining security and social order and safety firmly and overcoming negative phenomena in economic and social life effectively. To do this satisfactorily we must develop the strength of the people under the leadership of the party and the management of the proletarian dictatorship state.

All of the above tasks require that we pay attention to distributing the country's abundant work force rationally in order to, first of all, exploit all agricultural lands still left lying waste and all exploitable forest lands. This is a job having great strategic significance in many fields -- economic and defense -- in both the short and long terms, which will lay the basis for developing a comprehensive agriculture together with forestry. In industry in general, we must build step by step a system of production and business enterprises, from the central to local level, that encompasses all the branches and trades of the entire country.

Here, special attention must be given to studying and arranging employment for the youths coming of working age and the unemployed. We must strive to carry out these tasks satisfactorily. Of course, these are no simple tasks; we must overcome many difficulties and tackle these tasks step by step with due programming and planning and with the timely introduction of correct viewpoints and policies, and especially by satisfactorily applying the motto "The state and the people work together; the central government and the localities work together."

In the present situation of our country, especially with regard to the economic situation, the question of management has become the most urgent requirement of the laboring people and a very essential task of the socialist state. The fine experiences gained in 1981 in this field testify to the fact that we are capable of studying and resolving step by step the question concerning a new system of management for the national economy.

Central to the system of national economic management is the state plan. The state plan is a manifestation of the party's line and major policies and a reflection of the people's will and interests. At the same time, the state plan reflects the most rational use of the people's work force, the cadres' capabilities, the country's natural resources and our existing technical material supplies. In a word, the state plan must provide for steady development of the national economy and further improvement of the people's material and cultural life.

We advocate formulating plans at the three fundamental levels with the district level assuming a particularly important position. In formulating plans, we must start from the grassroots units -- cooperatives and enterprises -- and from there we should formulate sector plans and regional plans, and finally combine them into a state plan.

In order to arrive at a good plan, we must give importance to the following points:

1. The plan must reflect a balance among the various aspects of the national economy and among the various sectors and localities, starting from the grassroots units. This will assure the stability and practicality of the plan.

2. The plan requires that we carry out profit-and-loss accounting on the basis of advanced economic-technical norms.

3. The plan must develop the effect of promoting the awareness and business capabilities of the various sectors and echelons, particularly the grassroots level, for the purpose of overfulfilling plan norms and satisfying the three interests, with attention given to the interest of those who directly are engaged in production.

Thus, we must link planning to finance, link the implementation of plan norms to the application of scientific and technical innovations, and link the plan to the market. This is the question of the domestic market, the importance of which we must grasp.

In a word, the process of working out and implementing the plan is a struggle to develop the national economy in accordance with the laws of socialism. It is a struggle to develop the creative labor capabilities of the laboring people, the contingent of scientific and technical cadres and managerial cadres, constantly increase labor productivity, reduce production costs and improve the effectiveness of investment -- thus leading to ever higher social product, national income, accumulation and consumption.

In formulating and implementing the plan, we also have the opportunity to conduct the three revolutions from the central to grassroots level, with the scientific-technological revolution serving as the kingpin. We must develop full and profound awareness about conducting the three revolutions. With regard to the scientific-technological revolution, we should always remember that it serves as the kingpin not only because it helps us resolve a series of extremely crucial problems of the national economy, but also -- and this is the important and profound reason -- because it is the instrument with which we can think, study and find the singular and creative ways and means necessary to advance in the process of socialist industrialization, in building the material and technical bases of socialism and in bringing to our people a civilized and happy material and cultural life.

In saying that central to the system of management of the national economy is the state plan, we mean that the harmonious and effective operation of the state plan management system must be influenced closely and uniformly by the principle of democratic centralism. The principle of democratic centralism calls for broadening democracy and developing the labor and creativity of all the people, collectives and organizations while strengthening centralization in an appropriate manner. In this spirit, the competent party and state organs at the central level promptly must devise and promulgate viewpoints, policies, laws and regulations for organizing and managing the whole political, economic, cultural and social life as well as foreign affairs and national defense.

The changes in management mentioned above constitute a step taken to do away with the system of centralized and bureaucratic management and subsidization and to eliminate the limitations and bottlenecks that freeze the initiative and creativity of the various localities, establishments and the laboring people.

We must emphasize here the positions and effects of the various sectors, ministries, ministerial level organs and organs subordinate to the Council of Ministers which are in charge of extremely important activities of the national economy as well as in other fields and which exert real influence over the economic activities and the life of the people throughout the country. Therefore, we call on the leaders and cadres of all sectors to struggle to build and develop their sectors and contribute to the cause of developing the economy and culture and building the material and technical bases of socialism. At the same time, we urge all sectors to train scientific and technical cadres, managerial cadres and professional cadres for themselves and for the various localities and grassroots units.

We must attach importance to the task of building and developing the socialist legal system. We must always bear in mind that the socialist state is an organized and disciplined state, and that all of us must struggle persistently against all phenomena of disorganization and indiscipline in order to bring all activities of the state and society to socialist order and discipline. All the competent organs in this field must pay attention to performing their functions correctly.

At present we are carrying out a socialist revolution in our country. This is the broadest, deepest and most thorough revolution in man's history. To realize this great undertaking we must arouse the revolutionary will and ardor of all the laboring people in our country under the leadership of the VCP -- the experienced vanguard of the working class which is armed with Marxism-Leninism and is associated closely with the masses -- and launch a broad revolutionary movement nationwide aimed at fulfilling the 1982 State Plan, overcoming negative phenomena, countering the enemy's war of multisided sabotage, safeguarding political security and social order and safety, and contributing to stabilizing the situation concerning the national economy and the people's life. In this revolutionary movement, the role played by the organizations of the trade unions, youths, women and people of other strata is of great importance.

At this point, I have reason to tell you about our country's difficulties and its favorable conditions.

As everyone knows, we are faced with numerous difficulties, large and mounting difficulties coming from various directions. They not only add up but also multiply and have often caused concern among many of us. We must realize very clearly the deep origins and direct cause of these difficulties, realize their disastrous effects and forecast their development. In the final analysis, these are difficulties of a backward agricultural economy which has sustained the heavy consequences of 30 years of war and which is presently the target of extremely vicious sabotage by new and old enemies. It is these large and mounting difficulties which have given rise to the serious and diverse imbalances which we have known.

Under such circumstances, overcoming these difficulties is, precisely, our party's and state's revolutionary task and the objective of our people's struggle as reflected in the party's line and policies, in the Constitution and laws adopted by the National Assembly, in the state plan and in the management and organization of the Council of Ministers as well as of the various sectors and echelons.

Considering the aforesaid situation, the 1982 State Plan aims at resolving partially a number of the most serious and urgent imbalances in the national economy and the people's livelihood. Herein lies a question of great significance.

We must achieve, at all costs, a balance between requirements and capabilities; that is, the important and urgent requirements set forth must be compatible with the realistic capabilities of the economy and the country. This requires that we see clearly and vividly the comprehensive and extremely great capabilities which we have not yet fully utilized -- actual as well as latent capabilities in terms of labor, cadres, the people's creativeness and in international cooperation, particularly in cooperation with the Soviet Union, with the two fraternal neighboring countries and with the socialist countries in the CEMA. Here are capabilities whose true scope and effect we have yet to realize fully.

On the other hand, while worrying about the imbalances in the economy, we have paid insufficient attention to the SRV's strength and its powerful position in the political field. This concerns the clear-sighted leadership of the party, the superiority of the socialist regime -- the regime in which the people are masters of their own destiny -- relations with other countries, comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries and our country's international prestige.

Knowing how to utilize fully this powerful position and strength, we will be able fully to overcome gradually and in a planned manner -- in the long and short term -- the difficulties and imbalances in order to advance and build socialism successfully and defend our socialist fatherland firmly and to bring a plentiful, civilized and happy life to our people gradually, thus fulfilling the sacred testament of esteemed and beloved President Ho Chi Minh and contributing to the cause of revolution and peace of the world's people.

Dear deputies of the National Assembly, the year 1982 is of great importance. Implementing the 1982 State Plan satisfactorily will bring about beneficial effects. As a result, everyone of us and all of our people, under the VCP leadership, must strive selflessly to fulfill the 1982 State Plan satisfactorily.

My best wishes on the occasion of the new year for the Vietnamese people and for this session of the SRV National Assembly.

VARIATIONS OF TRUONG CHINH ASSEMBLY SPEECH

A comparison of the Hanoi VNA version of Truong Chinh's 30 December 1981 speech to the National Assembly, published on page K 7 of the 4 January 1982 Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT under the subtitle "Truong Chinh Speech," with the version published in the 31 December issue of NHAN DAN indicates the following variations:

NHAN DAN replaces the first two sentences of the item with the following: "Dear deputies of the National Assembly,

"At this session, the SRV National Assembly considered the reports of the Council of Ministers, passed two new laws, decided on the immediate problem concerning the national economy, and the direction, tasks and main objectives of the 1982 State Plan and so forth."

Between the first and second paragraphs on page K 8, NHAN DAN inserts the following paragraph: "On behalf of the Council of State, I propose that the National Assembly warmly commend our compatriots throughout the country, officers and combatants of the heroic people's armed forces of their vigilant spirit in defending the fatherland's borders, firmly maintaining the political security and social order and safety and their efforts to score achievements in agricultural and industrial productions and in other domains."

The initial passage of the second paragraph on page K 8 becomes: "'Dear deputies, 1982 is a ...'"

Between the fifth and sixth paragraphs on page K 9, NHAN DAN adds the following two paragraphs:

"Dear deputies, the Seventh National Assembly has begin activities to accelerate the formulation of state laws. It is necessary to concentrate efforts on studying and initially drafting draft laws to be presented to the National Assembly and the Council of State as scheduled. At the same time, it is essential to accelerate the tasks concerning propaganda, education and investigation, so as to ensure that the Constitution and laws are scrupulously implemented.

"In developing the role of the National Assembly and echelons of the people's councils in the system according to which the party is the leader, the people are the master and the state is responsible for management, various people-elected organs must, together with party organizations, the administration and mass organizations at equivalent levels, formulate work forms and methods in order to establish an effective coordination system to concretely develop the workers' right to collective mastery."

The sixth paragraph on page K 9 deletes the introductory clause and begins: "'The revolutionary cause...'"

The ninth paragraph on page K 10 begins: "'Dear deputies, the Vietnamese people...'"

On page K 11, NHAN DAN adds the following three paragraphs at the end of the item: "The new year is approaching. On behalf of the Council of State, I cordially wish compatriots throughout the country,officers and combatants of the people's armed forces and overseas Vietnamese a happy new year!

"I wish all deputies of the National Assembly good health. May they be able to score greater achievements in their production and struggle, and in carrying out their tasks and study.

"All for the socialist fatherland and for the people's happiness!"

NHAN DAN URGES STATE-PEOPLE COOPERATION

OW130103 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 11 Jan 82

NHAN DAN 12 January editorial: "The State and People Work Together"]

[Text] Building socialism is an undertaking of the masses. Under the collective mastery system, our people and their state have worked together in their daily activities to build the economy and develop culture. By implementing the motto "The people and state work together," many mass movements in various localities have achieved obvious economic efficiency.

In irrigation work we have mobilized tens of millions of workdays to dig tens of millions of cubic meters of earth, build or perfect many ditch and canal networks and irrigate and drain several million hectares of land.

In the Tet tree-planting movement over the past 20 years, more than 2 billion trees have been planted on an area equivalent to 1 million hectares of forest land, thus increasing our cooperatives' income and bringing many benefits to our society.

The mass movement to grow mulberry trees and raise silkworms now prevailing in some 70 districts has contributed to meeting part of the local need for clothing.

The Quang Nam-Danang people together with the state contributed nearly a half of the capital to the construction of irrigation and hydroelectric networks and breeder centers in 1981.

Many families in Ho Chi Minh City have contributed tens of thousands of dong to the economic construction in various districts.

The people in Phu Khanh and other localities have used their own manpower and local materials to restore and build rural roads in order to better serve production and livelihood. With the people's positive contributions, many localities have achieved practical results in sending the population to reclaim land and build new economic zones.

In the cultural, educational and public health spheres, many localities have also scored remarkable achievements. The people in many districts have contributed manpower and materials to repairing and building schools, kindergartens, nurseries, health stations and cultural homes.

The movement to plant and use medicinal herbs has developed widely. To date, more than 3,000 villages and 68 districts have resolutely planted and used only medicinal herbs.

Realities have proved that the popular masses' capabilities are great and endless. Socialist construction is not only the work of state agencies or state-owned economic installations but also an undertaking of the entire people.

Bureaucratic management and distribution of the administrative-subsidy style will only restrain creativity and positiveness and engender the self-reliant spirit and a situation in which grassroots installations and localities rely only on upper echelons and the central government. As a result, the available latent potential cannot be exploited in the best way. If this management style is eliminated, if the laboring people's collective mastery is developed and if the socialist trading system is applied, creativity and positiveness will be spurred, and each person, installation and locality will be able to exert ever effort to solve his or its own problems.

The interests of the state, people, central government, localities and installations must be unified. In working together, the central government, localities, state agencies and the population can manifest the close relationship between the people and their managerial apparatus in their activities. Therefore, they can exercise the right to collective mastery over the entire country, localities and installations.

By properly implenenting the motto "The central government, localities, state agencies and people work together," we can effectively overcome many difficulties to further step up economic and cultural development and to gradually solve the food, clothing, disease treatment, travel and educational problems.

We must widely popularize and apply our past experiences to vigorously develop the mass movement in carrying out irrigation work, reclaiming land, building roads, planting trees, rearing fish individually, growing mulberry trees to raise silkworms, planting fibrous trees, building homes according to a common plan and contributing capital and manpower to build together with the state economic and cultural projects.

Without the people's contributions, even very easy work cannot be completed. This truth has been proved by revolutionary realities. In all activities related to economic construction and cultural development, a proper coordination of the efforts of the state and population constitutes a primary and important factor for success.

VO CHI CONG SPEECH ENDS CONTRACTUAL WORK MEETING

OW051255 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Excerpts] At the meeting on contractual work at state-operated installations in the agricultural, forestry, fishery, water conservancy and rubber sectors, the following important conclusions can be drawn from the reports by the sectors and typical units concerned:

1. Product contract is a powerful means helping the production installations extricate themselves from the administrative subsidy system and gradually embark on the system of large-scale socialist production and business, characterized by constant increases in labor productivity and in farming and stockbreeding production and by efficient use of existing material and technical bases and capabilities.

2. Although still at the initial stage, the product contract system, which has not yet yielded the desired results, has helped sectors, especially that of state-operated installations, properly assess their overall potentials and tap them most efficiently.

3. With the application of its varied forms, the product contract system in the past helped state-operated production installations adopt the mode of contract that best suited them.

4. In order to help expand the product contract system into a large-scale movement involving cadres and workers at state-operated production installations, one of the questions that we need to resolve is that of creating favorable conditions for the enterprises in production and business.

In his speech closing the meeting, Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, said:

[Begin recording] To better understand the problem, all sectors, localities and production installations must further grasp the related government decisions, especially Decisions Nos 16, 25 and 26.

I suggest that all sectors, production units and localities make initial reviews in the near future so as to draw experience, which is a very important task. I notice that we have made few initial reviews to draw experience and reexamine economic, technical and labor norms to better suit each occupation and each type of work. We must step up planning, ensure continuous work at the production installations, reorganize production, rationally assign and utilize the work force, expand production and particularly ensure satisfactory implementation of (?Part A), which calls for training cadres and workers and providing further training for cadres to enable them to firmly control production installation activities and to vigorously and uniformly develop contractual work. While carrying out production contracts, all sectors and localities must study the various situations and the application of appropriate levels of incentives and penalties, which is a key issue.

Finally a very important question is guidance in implementation. We have so far advanced many resolutions and policies -- and good ones -- but it has turned out they have not been very effective because what really matters is guidance in implementation. It is necessary that all ministries, sectors and production installations have a section dealing with contractual work to help the leadership in its guidance in implementing contractual work. By so doing we will be able to better control, supervise and draw experience. The Agriculture ministry and the various localities must regularly control, supervise and follow up the implementation of contracts by production installations so as to promptly straighten out erroneous practices. All production installations must scrupulously implement the system of reporting on the work done [words indistinct] the localities so as to ensure satisfactory implementation of contractual work.

Following this conference, cadres and localities must make studies and reappraise the implementation of contractual work and the incentive system in the past so as to assess their capabilities, their weaknesses as well as the causes of such weaknesses, and then devise specific remedial measures for vigorously expanding the application of contractual work in their respective sectors and localities and at grassroots-level production units. [end recording]

TRAN QUOC HAN ADDRESSES MEETING OF ETHNIC WOMEN

OW311425 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 29 Dec 81

[Report on speech by Tran Quoc Hoan, member of the Political Bureau of the VCP Central Committee, at the opening session of the conference of representatives of nationality women of northern border provinces on 29 December in Hanoi -- recorded]

[Text] Over the past several decades in the struggle for national independence, freedom and socialism of our entire people under the party leadership, the sister nationality women in the northern border areas of our country have made very great contributions. Particularly since the reactionaries within the Chinese leadership openly waged a war of aggression against our country, the sister nationality women, along with our entire people and armed forces, have remained united in struggle, scored outstanding achievements and repelled the invaders. They are now, every day and every hour, intensifying the defense of our fatherland's northern borders. [applause]

Developing the traditions of heroic Vietnamese women, many of our women, mainly youths, along with their male counterparts, have fought very valiantly and stalwartly. In addition to fighting valiantly, they have registered many great achievements in promoting solidarity, mutual assistance and production in support of combat. Apart from their role in combat and combat support in defense of our fatherland's borders, the sister nationality women constitute a very important force for developing production, building the economy and enhancing the cultural life in the northern border provinces.

The Vietnamese Women's Union and its chapters in the northern border areas should study the related party and state policies, map out realistic activities for the women's movement, develop their strongpoints and achievements and overcome their shortcomings and weaknesses in order to advance the women's movement more vigorously. [applause]

HANOI COMMITTEE SOLICITS RETIRED CADRES' VIEWS

BK040936 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 4 Jan 82

[Text] Yesterday, 3 January, the Standing Committee of the Hanoi City Party Committee called a meeting of a number of retired high-ranking cadres to seek their views on the draft political report and the draft report on party building to be presented at the fifth nationwide party congress by the VCP Central Committee and also on the city's policies and measures for applying the spirit and viewpoints of these documents.

Comrade Le Van Luong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and secretary of the Hanoi City Party Committee, and Comrade Le Quang Dao, secretary of the VCP Central Committee and deputy secretary of the Hanoi City Party Committee, heard each of the participants express his views.

The participants expressed enthusiasm for and shared the views of the VCP Central Committee on its evaluation of the situation as well as the guidelines and tasks outlined in the draft documents. They presented their views on how to solve problems concerning food, clothing and the production of consumer and export goods and how to perform economic and social managerial tasks. They recommended to the party Central Committee that greater attention be paid to such party-building tasks as intensively carrying out the party's control work; severely punishing persons who violate party discipline and state law and persons whose revolutionary qualities have decreased; educating and improving youths; and developing the party.

The participants also contributed many practical views on building the capital city in the domains of maintaining political security and social order and safety; accelerating the production of foodstuffs and consumer goods to meet the city dwellers' demands; and building and consolidating grassroots-level party organizations and administrative organs at the ward level.

They unanimously agreed with the city party committee Standing Committee that, even before the congress is convened, it is necessary to adopt positive measures for correcting shortcomings and to launch a revolutionary movement among the people to build and defend the socialist fatherland.

PHAM HUNG SENDS TET MESSAGE TO SECURITY FORCES

BK060400 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 5 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the 1982 -- the Year of the Dog -- Tet New Year, Comrade Pham Hung, member of the VCP Central Committee [as heard], vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and Minister of Interior, has sent a letter of greetings to all the cadres and combatants of the People's Security Forces.

Comrade Pham Hung heartily cited the great efforts and progress made by all the public security cadres and combatants, by all the cadres and combatants of the VPA, by the various sectors, mass organizations and public security organizations and by those units that are providing security guards for various public organs and enterprises. Many new lofty examples and countless courageous and resourceful actions were noted over the past year, such as braving hardships and sacrifices encountered while working in the political, economic, cultural and social fields throughout every part of the country.

Comrade Pham Hung gave the following advice: In order to greet the new spring and the fifth party delegates congress with elation and confidence, with a determination to achieve self-reliance and with the revolutionary offensive spirit, the People's Security Forces must keep themselves well informed of the two strategic missions to be achieved by our country in its socialist cause, namely, successfully building socialism and strengthening national defense and security so as to stand combat ready and to fight victoriously for national defense. The People's Security Forces must strive to carry out all the political tasks assigned to them by the party and the state along with efforts successfully to implement the resolution of the 37th national public security conference, to heighten vigilance constantly, resolutely to defeat the all-out war of destruction waged by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries, to safeguard the peaceful life and the revolutionary gains of our people and to build steadfast rear areas in order to ensure victories over the enemy under all circumstances.

VO NGUYEN GIAP ATTENDS CUBAN ENVOY'S PARTY

OW071952 Hanoi VNA in English 1545 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 7 -- Cuban Ambassador Faure Chomon Mediavilla gave a party today on the 23rd National Day of the Republic of Cuba. His Vietnamese guests included Vo Nguyen Giap, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam and vice-chairman of the National Assembly; Hoang Bich Son, deputy foreign minister; Tran Danh Tuyen, deputy head of the Commission for External Relations of the party C.C.

Also present were members of the diplomatic corps. Vo Nguyen Giap and Faure Chomon Mediavilla and the other guests raised toasts to the great achievements made by the Cuban people under the leadership of the Communist Party, headed by Fidel Castro, in building socialism and national defense, in their international obligations, and in helping strengthen the Non-Aligned Movement and the forces of peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. They wished the Cuban and Vietnamese peoples new success in their revolutionary cause and the friendship, militant solidarity and cooperation between Vietnam and Cuba further development.

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 018 27 January 1982

JAPAN

Suzuki: Japan To Bear Greater Responsibilities C 1
Sakurauchi Speaks on Trade, Polish Issue C 1
Sakurauchi Addresses Management Association C 2

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Hits Chon's Unification Statement [26 Jan] D 1
Daily Denounces Trial, Sentencing of Dissidents D 3
[NODONG SINMUN 26 Jan]
Maltese Foreign Minister Trigona Pays Visit D 4
Meets Kim Il-song D 4
Agreement Signed D 4
Delegation Departs D 5
Broadcasting Accord With Hungary Signed D 5

SOUTH KOREA

Parties Urge North to Accept Peace Overture E 1
[KOREA HERALD 27 Jan]
North's Rejection of Chon's Proposals Denounced E 1
[KOREA HERALD 27 Jan]
Government To Reexplore Seabed Oil Resources E 2

MONGOLIA

MONTSAME Scores U.S. Sanctions Against Poland F 1
U.S.-Japan-China Form 'Dangerous Alliance' F 1

BURMA

Communist Party Issues Statement to Nation [VOPB] G 1

KAMPUCHEA

Indian Delegation Pays Friendship Visit H 1
Arrival of Delegation H 1
Meeting With Heng Samrin H 1
Meeting With Chea Soth H 1
Talks With Hun Sen H 2
Nationwide Army Logistics Meeting Held H 2
Chan Si Opening Speech H 2
Further Chan Si Remarks H 2
Ending of Conference H 3
Agricultural Reportage for 18-24 Jan Period H 3
VODK Reports Activities of LNLF Guerrillas H 4

LAOS

SIANG PASASON Scores U.S. Charges on Chemicals [26 Jan] I 1
Further Materials on People's Council Plenum I 2
Comment on Kaysone Report I 2
Souphanouvong Closing Speech I 3
Communique Issued by Plenum I 4
Army Paper Hails LPLA Founding Anniversary [LPLA 20 Jan] I 4
Briefs: Religious Delegation to Prague; New Bridge Construction I 7

THAILAND

Sitthi Silent on Khmer Rouge Coalition Rejection [POST 27 Jan] J 1
Rebels Attack Police Station in Chiang Rai J 1
AFP Report J 1
Interior Minister's Comments J 1
Report on Arrests J 2
Supreme Command Reports Clashes With 'Terrorists' J 2
POST Cites Source on SRV-Backed Communists [27 Jan] J 3
Trade Volume With Laos Decreases in 1981 J 3

VIETNAM

Le Duan, Truong Chinh Thank USSR for Lenin Order K 1
27 Jan NHAN DAN Editorial K 1
Leaders' Meetings, Visits Mark Tet Holiday K 2
Meeting With Veterans K 2
Truong Chinh at VFF Meeting K 2
Hoang Quoc Viet in Lang Son K 3
To Huu Visits K 3
Le Thanh Nghi in Ha Son Binh K 4
Tribute to Ho Chi Minh K 4
Van Tien Dung at Factory K 4
Truong Chinh at Flower Show K 5
Le Van Luong in Hanoi K 5
Vo Chi Cong in Haiphong K 6
Pham Van Dong in Hanoi K 7
Van Tien Dung With Army Units K 7
Nguyen Van Linh Visits K 7
Nguyen Duy Trinh in Gia Lai K 8
Le Quang Dao Visits K 9
NHAN DAN Editorial Greets Lunar New Year [25 Jan] K 9
Pham Van Dong Article on Contractual System [TAP CHI CONG SAN November] K 10
NHAN DAN Lauds Prospects for Revolution [1 Jan] K 15
Van Tien Dung Attends SRV-GDR Soccer Match K 16

SUZUKI: JAPAN TO BEAR GREATER RESPONSIBILITIES

OW210239 Tokyo KYODO in English 0200 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 21 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, while calling for expanded but balanced world trade, said Thursday Japan is ready to play a role and bear greater responsibilities as a world economic power. Japan is reducing import tariffs two years ahead of schedule and exerting efforts to make its market more open and accessible for foreign products, Suzuki said in an opening address to a convention of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP). Suzuki said: "Trade friction between Japan and the United States, and between Japan and EC, are not two individual problems.

"They cannot be settled by balancing (Japan-U.S. or Japan-EC trade) alone as a result of protectionism," he added at the party convention held at Tokyo's Hibiya public hall. "It is important," Suzuki went on to say, "to settle the trade imbalance as part of efforts to put the world economy in shape by expanding world trade in a balanced manner."

Noting that Japan now has a 10-percent share of the world economy, Suzuki said it is "ready to play an international role and carry out greater obligations as an economic power." But he added that an economic power does not mean a military power as far as his country is concerned. Although Japan is building up its defense capability "independently and steadily," greater defense strength is not designed to turn Japan in to a military power, but aimed at effectively coping with possible external aggression, Suzuki said.

Suzuki also said he is concerned about the situation in Poland, and added: "I share the perception that the Soviet Union is behind the military crackdown in that country." Calling the current international situation "severe," Suzuki called for unity among countries of the Western bloc.

The prime minister's stance on world trade and national defense was backed up later by a convention declaration which sought "compliance with international faith" by exerting greater efforts in the fields of diplomacy, economy and defense. A resolution, adopted at the end of the LDP meeting, also called for a settlement of the trade disputes under the current free trade system.

SAKURAUCHI SPEAKS ON TRADE, POLISH ISSUE

OW260751 Tokyo KYODO in English 0743 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26 (KYODO) -- Japan will announce liberalization measures this week on 67 out of 99 nontariff barriers its trade partners have asked to be lifted, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said here Tuesday. However, he said 15 of the requests were "based really on misunderstanding," which Japan would seek to dispel in further consultations with its trade partners. Sakurauchi was addressing a luncheon at the Foreign Correspondents Club.

He did not specify which of Japan's complex import procedures were to be amended, but according to sources close to the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party earlier in the day, nine items involving mainly agricultural import regulations will remain unchanged. The LDP's special international trade research committee is expected to recommend the amendments to a Cabinet meeting later this week.

Sakurauchi said the two major issues facing Japanese foreign policy were trade friction with Europe and the United States and the issue of Poland. He said Western industrialized countries should not be "overly distracted by the account ledgers for bilateral trade," but cooperate to revitalize their economies on the basis of multilateral free trade principles, "each giving free rein to its own area of strength." He said Japan was making every effort to open up its market, but European and American businessmen must take advantage of this by working to increase their exports.

On the question of Poland, the foreign minister simply referred journalists to his earlier statements that Japan agreed with the Western countries in holding the Soviet Union responsible and that Japan would act in concert with the West in dealing with the Polish problem. However, he said moves such as U.S. President Ronald Reagan's proclamation of January 30 as "Solidarity Day" could provide "strong moral support" for efforts to have the problem solved by the Polish people themselves. The voice of the Polish people could be called "the voice of international conscience for all who desire freedom and peace," Sakurauchi said.

Asked whether Japanese foreign policy had taken a "hawkish" turn, with greater emphasis on military spending and closer relations with the United States since he became foreign minister last November, Sakurauchi laughed and said he appreciated the compliment. "Some people think my attitude is too soft," he said. "If you see me as a hawk, that balances things out."

SAKURAUCHI ADDRESSES MANAGEMENT ASSOCIATION

OW261235 Tokyo KYODO in English 1216 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Tuesday the Japanese Government would exert efforts to promote direct dialogue with the Soviet Union.

The foreign minister made the remark in an address delivered at a meeting of the Japan Administration Management Association here, saying that it was desirable to have bilateral talks with the Soviet Union if they could lead to any breakthrough in relations. But he stressed that the government could not shut its eyes to the fact that Soviet defense authorities were deploying long-distance backfire bombers and nuclear-tipped SS-20 missiles in the Soviet Far East.

In his speech, the foreign minister also said the government would redouble its efforts to reach an agreement with the Seoul government on the issue of Japanese economic assistance to be extended to South Korea. The $6 billion in loans that the South Korean Government is seeking have been found to include commodity loans, he said, adding that people believe such loans are unnecessary because the South Korean people's living standards have been improving.

With reference to Poland, Sakurauchi said the government would stick to its stand of keeping a close watch on developments in the East European country. He was commenting on Polish military chief Gen Wojciech Jaruzelski's remark to the Polish parliament Monday that various restrictions in force under martial law could be lifted by the end of February.

NODONG SINMUN HITS CHON'S UNIFICATION STATEMENT

SK270728 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2246 GMT 26 Jan 82

[27 January NODONG SINMUN commentary: "Nothing Can Be Obtained Through False and Deceptive Propaganda"]

[Text] On 22 January traitor Chon Tu-hwan uttered tedious jargon in the name of a policy speech at the puppet National Assembly. As one who has been subjected to the curse and condemnation of the people for the last year because of his fascist and treacherous acts, war preparation rackets and splittist schemes, he should have frankly admitted the crimes he has committed before the people and apologize for them.

Instead, however, while trying to cover up his crimes, traitor Chon Tu-hwan perpetrated the fabrication of converting black to white and pretending there is something when actually there is nothing and shamelessly praised his own achievements.

The policy speech was replete with preposterous sophistries designed to embellish the results of his brutal military terrorist politics, maladministration and tyranny. While clamoring about a new politics and the eradication of corruption, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, who has indulged in a fascist dictatorship since the first day of his seizure of power, tried to cover up the dark situation in South Korea, repeating the same jargon.

He said that the last year was a year in which South Korea extricated itself from political and social chaos, restored stability and established a new political climate. He said progress was made in laying the groundwork for democracy, building a welfare society and embodying a just society. The progress made in South Korea over the past year is not democracy, social welfare and justice, as he says, but only fascist dictatorship, lack of rights, poverty, social evil and corruption. In South Korea, new evil laws were fabricated, oppression was strengthened and many patriots, democratic personages and students who advocated democratization of society and national reunification were arrested, detained, put on trial and executed.

In the past year, 2,000 enterprises went bankrupt. As a result, over 100,000 jobless people took to the streets. As a result of new government licensing regulations and bankruptcies, the prices of daily necessities climbed 30 percent, the trade deficit amounted to $5.5 billion and the national income sharply decreased compared with the previous year. Can this be called democracy and welfare?

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan called for an end to corruption psychology, inflation psychology and the psychology of habitually disregarding civic responsibility. This is preposterous and empty talk to deceive the people.

The corruption and irregularities in South Korea are the products of the reactionary and antipopular social and political system. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is the most vicious illegal fortune seeker among the successive puppet rulers of South Korea. It is indeed shameless for such a man to clamor about the eradication of a corruption psychology. To talk about uprooting corruption and irregularities while leaving intact the Chon Tu-hwan ring, the ringleader of corruption and irregularities, is absurd.

Because of the antipopular economic policy pursued by the puppet clique, not only small and medium enterprises but also large enterprises in South Korea have been suffering. The South Korean economy is enduring chronic inflation. The economy is a catastrophe. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan's talk about an end to the inflation psychology and stabilizing the workers' living standard is a derision of the people.

It is an economic principle that the military buildup, economic catastrophe and inflation are the reason for rising prices. The Bank of Korea recently officially announced there is no possibility of stabilizing prices at the 10 percent level this year.

As long as the economy is dashing toward disaster and the reactionary economic policy of the Chon Tu-hwan ring, running wild to prepare for war and plunder the people, continues, stabilization of prices is out of the question. Only political swindlers would use such words to deceive the people.

It is also preposterous for traitor Chon Tu-hwan, the ringleader creating political chaos and disorder in South Korea, to discuss an end to the psychology of habitually ignoring social order.

As is known to the world, with the appearance of the fascist Chon Tu-hwan regime in South Korea, the bayonet is synonymous with politics, the violent words of the dictator are synonymous with laws and execution is the ruling method. Oppression is rampant. Needless to say, the people reject this fascist oppressive order. This is called chaos.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan's talks about ending the psychology of habitually ignoring social order means the one who has subjected South Korea to repressive mechanisms and fascist evil laws and perpetrated the massacre in Kwangju will use the same repression and will commit new massacres in the future.

The puppet Chon Tu-hwan shamelessly discussed political modernization. But popular politics cannot exist under a brutal, fascist military rule. This is evinced by the ruling method of the puppets over the past year. He made many promises, including talk about price stability and an increase in employment. Needless to say, these promises are made to deceive the people and to assuage their anger.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan advanced a proposal for unification and is now running amok to create the impression at home and abroad that this proposal is constructive, realistic and epochal. He cannot mock the people of the world with such cheap propaganda; nor can he cover up his splittist and treacherous nature. The puppet and traitor advanced a proposal for holding a general election which would include the organization of a Consultative Conference for National Reunification with participants representing the views of the residents in the South and North, drawing up a constitution at the conference, adopting the constitution through national referendums, organizing a unified legislature and establishing a unified government through a general election to facilitate national reunification. This is nothing but empty talk which ignores the realities of our country.

With all the dedicated politicans either imprisoned or banned from engaging in political activities, who can represent the people of South Korea? With foreign troops stationed there and a colonial fascist military rule maintained in South Korea, how can a general election on the principle of national self-determination and in compliance with democratic procedures be held? In view of the complicated relations existing between the North and South, it cannot be predicted when such a general election can be held.

The idea of holding a general election makes us wonder if the puppet clique is genuinely interested in reunification. The question of concluding a provisional agreement on basic relations between the North and South -- the practical arrangement until reunification is achieved -- that the clique clamored about increases our misgivings.

It is necessary to tear down the wall separating the North and South and promote national reconciliation for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country. The provisional agreement on basic relations, however, is expected to build an even higher wall between the North and South, just as other measures such as maintenance of the existing armistice agreement and respecting each other's treaties and agreements concluded with foreign countries will.

Clearly, to maintain the existing armistice agreement means to allow U.S. troops to remain in South Korea and to continue national division. By respecting each other's treaties and agreements concluded with foreign countries, the puppet clique means that it intends to maintain the aggressive and treacherous South Korea-U.S. mutual defense agreement.

While paying lip service to national reconciliation, the traitorous puppet clique has never said it would abandon the policy of anticommunist confrontation or that it would abolish fascist military rule and achieve social democratization in South Korea.

To clamor about reunification while turning its back on such fundamental matters as the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea, democratization of South Korean society and abandoning the policy of anticommunist confrontation means that the clique is pursuing a two Koreas policy while displaying a false slogan of reunification.

The traitorous puppet Chon Tu-hwan clique's proposal for reunification is a splittist proposal. Referring to defense issues, it babbled about strengthening the puppet armed forces. This exposes more nakedly its splittist nature, reflected in its proposal for reunification. While internally opposing the nation, the traitorous puppet clique is adamantly clinging to dependence on foreign forces. Referring to diplomatic policy, Chon Tu-hwan said he would develop the relations with the United States more broadly and work to consolidate cooperative relations with Japan. This means that he intends to permit the U.S. imperialists to keep South Korea as their colony and military base and that he would serve the United States and Japan as a faithful stooge by allowing more Japanese reactionaries into South Korea, revealing his vicious, flunkiest nature.

The new year's policy statement of the puppet Chon Tu-hwan clique, replete with lies and infused with hypocrisy, mocks the masses. It is pure balderdash. Chon Tu-hwan cannot cover up the treacherous crimes he committed as a fascist hangman, murderer, splittist and flunkey every since he usurped power by using bayonets.

If the traitor Chon Tu-hwan clique is allowed to remain in power, the South Korean people and the nation will suffer more. The traitorous puppet clique should apologize to the people for its crimes and immediately step down from power.

DAILY DENOUNCES TRIAL, SENTENCING OF DISSIDENTS

SK261518 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1501 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 26 (KCNA) -- The Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique held a "verdict trial" on January 22, at which it inflicted harsh penalties upon those involved in the "cases" of the "Federation of Democratic Workers" and the "Federation of Democratic Students," fighting organisations of South Korean workers and students. Denouncing this "trial," NODONG SINMUN today prints a signed commentary.

At the "verdict trial" the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique passed life imprisonment upon Yi Tae-pok, director of the "Kwangminsa" publishing house and a leading figure in these "cases", and prison terms of ten or seven years upon other personages involved in these "cases."

Pointing out that those involved in these "cases" had carried on activities to develop the movement for the democratisation of society in the teeth of fascist suppression, the commentary says:

The military fascists suppressed the just struggle of the "Federation of Democratic Workers" and the "Federation of Democratic Students" by invoking such evil laws as the "national security law," the "martial law" and the "criminal law" and held a trial to pass heavy penalties upon those affiliated with these organisations. This is a brutal violation of the democratic freedom of the people and their right to existence and entirely illegal and military ganster-like act trampling underfoot human rights. They try to totally stamp out the democratic forces and put down the democratic movement and thereby turn South Korea further into a most horrible living hell at the end of the 20th century and realise their dirty ambition to maintain power on the "grave of human rights."

The military fascists must immediately discontinue the brutal fascist outrages, promptly set free Yi Tae-pok and other personages involved in the "cases" of the "Federation of Democratic Workers" and the "Federation of Democratic Students" who were arrested and tried on baseless charges, apologize to the people and step down from "power."

MALTESE FOREIGN MINISTER TRIGONA PAYS VISIT

Meets Kim Il-song

SK270433 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2205 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 27 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on Jaunary 26 received the government delegation of the Republic of Malta.

Present on the occasion were the members of the delegation headed by Alex Sceberras Trigona, foreign minister of the Republic of Malta, and Alfred Falzon, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Republic of Malta to our country. Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Ho Tam and Vice-Premier Kong Chin-tae were on hand.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song had a conversation with the guests in a cordial and friendly atmosphere. The delegation presented to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song a gift in the name of the government of the Republic of Malta.

Agreement Signed

SK270443 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2209 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 27 (KCNA) -- An agreement between the government delegations of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Republic of Malta was signed in Pyongyang on January 26.

Present at the signing ceremony on our side were Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Ho Tam, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Kim Chung-il and other personages concerned, and on the opposite side were the government delegation of the Republic of Malta headed by Foreign Minister Alex Sceberras Trigona and Maltese Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Korea Alfred Falzon.

The agreement was signed by Foreign Minister Ho Tam, head of the government delegation of the DPRK, and by Foreign Minister Alex Sceberras Trigona, head of the government delegation of the Republic of Malta.

The agreement says that both sides make active efforts to defend peace and security of the world against the policies of aggression and war and to firmly defend the principle and idea of the Nonaligned Movement and expand and develop it.

It further says: The Korean side hailed the position of the Republic of Malta as a neutral state pursuing a nonaligned policy chosen freely by the Maltese people and government and recognised and fully supported the neutrality of Malta proclaimed in the declaration of the Maltese Government on May 15, 1980.

The Maltese side fully supported the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point policy of the unified state advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the sixth congress of the Workers Party of Korea.

The two sides decided to further strengthen cooperation in the political, economic, cultural and scientific and technological fields.

The two sides actively strive to strengthen cooperation and solidarity and take common steps at international organisations and international conferences.

The two sides strengthen relations and cooperation between the Foreign Ministries of the two countries and greatly encourage the exchange of delegations.

Both sides fully support the just struggle of all peoples including the peoples of Palestine and southern Africa fighting against imperialism and colonialism and for their national independence and building of a new society.

The agreement says that the Maltese side expressed thanks to the Korean side for the warm hospitality accorded the government delegation of the Republic of Malta headed by His Excellency Foreign Minister Alex Sceberras Trigona, and the Korean side expressed thanks to the Maltese side for inviting the foreign minister of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to pay a goodwill visit to the Republic of Malta.

Delegation Departs

SK270459 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2217 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 27 (KCNA) -- The government delegation of the Republic of Malta headed by Foreign Minister Alex Sceberras Trigona left here on January 26 by plane after paying an official goodwill visit to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

It was seen off at the airport by Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Ho Tam, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Kim Chung-il and other personages concerned.

BROADCASTING ACCORD WITH HUNGARY SIGNED

SK270523 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0356 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 27 (KCNA) -- An agreement on cooperation in radio broadcasting and protocol of cooperation for 1982-1984 were signed between the Radio and Television Broadcasting Committee of the DPRK and the Hungarian Radio Broadcasting Committee in Budapest on January 19, according to a report.

The agreement and the protocol of cooperation were signed by the DPRK Ambassador to Hungary Kim Yong-son and Vice-Chairman of the Hungarian Radio Broadcasting Committee Jozsef Bocz.

PARTIES URGE NORTH TO ACCEPT PEACE OVERTURE

SK270234 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 27 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] The three major political parties announced yesterday that North Korea is turning back on the hopes of 60 million Koreans for peaceful national unification by not discarding its diabolical scheme to communize the entire Korean Peninsula.

Expressing deep regrets over Pyongyang's negative response to President Chon Tu-hwan's unification proposal, the three parties reiterated their earlier call for North Korea to accept the overture without delay.

Rep.Pong Tu-wan, spokesman of the majority Democratic Justice Party, said in a statment that North Korea's negative response to the "most concrete and practicable way to peaceful unification" by President Chon disappointed 60 million South and North Koreans.

"We cannot understand what Pyongyang hopes to accomplish with a negative response," he said. The spokesman called upon the dialogue for peaceful unification.

Rep. Kim Chin-pae, spokesman of the first minority Democratic Korea Party, said that Pyongyang's rejection of the proposal for peaceful unification was a clear signal that "it has no intention to hold any unification talks with the Republic of Korea."

In a statement, the spokesman also said that the negative response was apparently aimed at concealing their internal feuds among political power groups. "The Pyongyang regime will be judged severely by the Korean people at home and abroad," he said.

Meanwhile, Rep. Yi Song-il, spokesman of the second minority Korea National Party, said that the North Korean response, which betrayed the ambitions of 60 million South and North Koreans, is an indiction that the Pyongyang regime has not abandoned its dream to communize the entire Korean Peninsula by force.

NORTH'S REJECTION OF CHON'S PROPOSALS DENOUNCED

SK270223 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 27 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Don't Shut the Unity Door"]

[Text] Though not altogether surprising, Pyongyang's negative response to the most comprehensive- and concrete-yet proposal for Korean unification made by President Chon Tu-hwan last week is extremely regrettable. This reaction, one of the many such North Korean vetoes to Seoul's overtures, worries us very much because it implies Pyongyang's irreversible bent for sealing one way after another of achieving a unified Korea by peaceful means.

North Korea's rejection came, as in the past, in the form of a statement issued by Kim Il, Pyongyang's No. 2 man who also heads the so-called Committee for Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland. The basis of his repudiation is just the same old premise that South Korea should be "democratized" and give up its "two-Korea policy." It is no secret at all today that Pyongyang's term "democratizing" means the repeal of anticommunist institutions in the South and what is more, the replacement of the present government there with a communist-sympathizing one. North Korea had stuck to this precondition all along during the short-lived dialogue held between the two sides in the 1970's.

North Korea comes up with the "two Korea policy" charge against Seoul over the proposed modus vivendi pending reunification of the divided peninsula. By so doing North Korea is only trying to hoodwink those third parties who are not familiar with the history of the Korean division, including especially the North Korean armed invasion of the South in 1950.

It takes no more than a kindergartener's logic to understand the need of a period for achieving national reconciliation between the South and North so as to start a joint search for the proposed unified constitution which, in turn, would give birth to a unified government for the whole of Korea.

One of the basic principles underlying any unification endeavor is that neither side of the divided halves should impose its ideology or social system on the other. In a similar vein, any formula for unification should not represent, let alone, safeguard, the interests of a particular stratum or strata of society only. From this point of view, North Korea's "confederated Korea" scheme is not only incomplete but highly machinating. It is predicated on the condition that "undemocratic" or "unpatriotic" elements are to be excluded from the national conference of representatives Pyongyang visualizes as a means of carrying out its unity scheme. Put in a candid term, the "confederated Korea" plan aims at unifying the country on North Korean terms.

Pyongyang must realize that this irrationality of the "confederation" scheme can no longer be veiled, especially in the international community of nations. Bearing witness to this reality is the increasing number of countries, notably of the Third World, extending support to Seoul's initiative for peace and peaceful unification. It should be noted, in this regard, that well over three scores of countries around the world hailed President Chon's unification proposal in a matter of a few days.

For Pyongyang authorities to block even a chance of discussing with Seoul all possible options, including their own, of course, will amount to killing, once and for all, the undying aspiration of all Koreans for a reunion as the nation. The communist rulers have no right to do it; to begin with, they represent the smallest possible group of Koreans. Pyongyang therefore should reconsider its position in order not to shut the door to unification offered by President Chon.

GOVERNMENT TO REEXPLORE SEABED OIL RESOURCES

SK270152 Seoul YONHAP in English 0118 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 27 (YONHAP) --Korea will make an overall reexploration of seabed oil resources in its offshore areas, separately from the Korean-Japanese joint oil development projects in the seventh and fifth mining zones, along the continental shelf lying between the two countries.

The Energy-Resources Ministry has decided to review the data contained in seismic surveys of the first, second, fourth, sixth and part of the fifth mining zones, all independent development areas of the country, in the hopes of finding a promising prospecting site.

The ministry and the quasi-government Energy-Resources Research Institute, in a technical tie-up with the United States Geological Survey, have already embarked on the reexamination of data about the past prospecting projects in the sixth mining zone. According to officials, they expect to find a promising prospecting site within this year.

The 27,400-square-kilometer sixth zone, stretching from northeast of Korea's Cheju Island, to the area off the southeastern coast, where the Shell Oil Co. of the United States dug three holes in quest of oil from 1972 through 1975, is said to have the highest oil potential among the independent mining zones.

Meanwhile, Korea and Japan have reached a provisional agreement to undertake prospecting projects in the joint development seventh mining zone, some time in the second half of this year.

MONTSAME SCORES U.S. SANCTIONS AGAINST POLAND

OW251815 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1704 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 25 Jan (MONTSAME) -- The official Washington is seized with an epidemy of a disease which can be defined as an "anti-Polish syndrome." Its symptoms are a total oblivion of the international law, a loss of the sense of reality and an uncontrollable fury transient to hysteria.

President Reagan, confusing Poland with either Alabama or Puerto Rico, everyday comes out with additional sanctions against the country's sovereign government. He alternates condolences on alleged worsening of the Polish situation and statements that "the American sanctions against Poland have yielded specific results"; i.e. have aggravated difficulties which the Polish people face. This total absence of logic and sober mind testifies to a serious disease.

In its attempt to spread the anti-Polish epidemy the American administration goes to all lengths from twisting its European partners' arms to producing poor-quality propaganda shows such as the so-called "the solidarity day with the Polish people" to be observed on the 30th of January, the date fixed by the U.S. President Reagan and the subsequent appearances of Reagan himself and his nearest aides in a "let Poland be Poland" TV program which is to be broadcast via satellites all over the world.

Washington strives to utilize the home-bred bacillus of the anti-Polish rage not only for frustrating the process of normalization of the Polish situation but also for torpedoing the detente.

But the world has acquired certain immunity against the Washington epidemics which hit the U.S. ruling circles any time the changes distasteful to Washington occur in any country.

Such outbreaks were provoked by the developments in Angola, Iran, Afghanistan, Nicaragua.... This one is due to the collapse of all hopes of restoring capitalism in Poland, of breaking Poland away from socialist camp.

And it is natural for concern to build up in the world when such unbalanced people who easily become subject to dangerous for mankind diseases come to power in the United States.

U.S.-JAPAN-CHINA FORM 'DANGEROUS ALLIANCE'

OW212012 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1719 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 21 Jan (MONTSAME) -- The military alliance of the U.S., Japan and China, acquiring evermore clear-cut ominous shape, becomes a serious threat to peace in Asia and the whole world.

American imperialism -- an inspirer and organizer of this dangerous alliance [words indistinct] strengthen the American military presence in region, forces Japan to whip up its military build-up, supplies China with sophisticated offensive weapon. Proceeding from the [word indistinct] given to Washington, Japanese spokesmen have reached a point of declaring that the Japanese security lines stretch for [as received] the Indian Ocean. The Japanese long-range "national defense" program envisages the armed forces of the country to become the fourth in the world for its might by the end of the current five years. At the same goal of achieving military might are directed all thoughts and strivings of the Peking leaders.

Although this alliance is based on anti-Sovietism and anti-communism, its participants cherish own far-reaching and intersecting interests: American imperialism, through making use of Japan and China, strives to restore its lost positions in Asia as a step towards the world supremacy; the Japanese military dream of revanche; and the Chinese hegemonists are gathering strength for the future implementation of their cartographical manipulations with the territories of their neighbours.

But all this comes to one thing -- an unchecked arms race, which will involve all regions' countries and at the end will lead to a new war. But the peoples of Asia strive for peace and normal good-neighbourly relations, the road to which is indicated in a number of proposals: to turn the Southeast Asia and the Indian Ocean to a peace-zone, to work out confidence-building measures in the Far East and establish a convention on mutual nonaggression and non-use of force in relations between the states of Asia and the Pacific. Nevertheless the ruling circles of the U.S., Japan and China totally ignore all these constructive ideas of peace-loving Asian countries.

They don't like normal atmosphere in Asia and they stubbornly aggravate the situation in the region, toying in cold blood with the destinies of their peoples and the whole world.

COMMUNIST PARTY ISSUES STATEMENT TO NATION

BK241643 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese to Burma 0030 GMT 24 Jan 82

["Statement to the nation by the Central Committee of the Burma Communist Party in connection with the military government's frenzied preparations for an offensive" -- dated 21 January, read by announcer]

[Text] On 23 September 1980 the Burma Communist Party [BCP] proposed to the military government that bilateral talks be held to end the civil war and to build peace in the country. As the military government accepted the proposal, two rounds of talks were held. During the second round of talks, the military government demanded that the communist party, the People's Army and the base areas be abolished. Anyone with common sense knows very well that such unfair demands will never be met by the BCP. The military government, however, could not see this. They are obsessed with the destruction of the communists through military means. They overestimated their military power as well as the extent of assistance they could expect from the imperialists and international reactionaries.

According to some reports, while the talks between the two sides were going on, two schools of thought emerged within the military government in the implementation of the policy to oppose the communists and oppress the people. One thought was to immediately terminate the talks and to defeat the BCP militarily while the other thought was to prolong the negotiations and to win over the BCP at the negotiating table. It was reported that the first school of thought prevailed and consequently the negotiations were unilaterally terminated. Whatever the reasons might be, the fact is that the talks were hastily terminated by the military government and that Ne Win, the top man of the military government who had promised to continue holding rounds of talks until results were achieved, reneged on that promise and declared on radio that the talks had been terminated.

Following the termination of the talks, the BCP foresaw that it would have to face the frenzied offensives of the military government aimed at destroying the BCP as well as that it would have to continue resolutely waging the just war to preserve itself. Following the termination of the talks in May 1981, the military government did everything to plan an offensive which had to be postponed time and again until now for a variety of reasons: The military strength was insufficient; troops were tired and needed rest after Operation King Conqueror in 1979-80; there were daily casualties; army units were on the verge of collapse from rising numbers of AWOL soldiers or deserters as they called it; companies and regiments remained below regulation strength despite repeated reinforcements and difficulties were being encountered even in recruiting a mere 500 men for each regiment; combat morale of commanders and soldiers alike remained low because of casualties over the years as well as because they were haunted by the memories of Operation King Conqueror, in which whole columns and regiments were annihilated; noncommissioned officers and privates were gradually realizing that their sacrifices were only to help a handful of military bureaucrats stay in power and to become richer; and so forth.

In the 34 years since the antifascist People's Freedom League government started the reactionary civil war in 1948, the BCP has on many occasions tried to end the civil war. What every successive reactionary government wanted, however, was to destroy the communist party completely. They imagined that through military means they would succeed in implementing their destroy-the-communists policy in a short time. The results, however, have always been contrary to their expectations. Only those who wanted to destroy the communists were themselves eliminated. Communists have faced and overcome all sorts of obstacles and continued to march ahead.

Now, once again, with bellicose haughtiness, military madmen and military ogres have come up with another plan to completely destroy the communists in 3 years. At such a time as this, the BCP once again profoundly and solemnly wants to make the following declaration:

As long as the military government continues to resort to military means, the BCP will mobilize the people, firmly join hands with its allies and continue to wage the just war to defend itself and struggle through to final victory. At the same time, it will continue to struggle for the sake of ending the civil war, building peace and promoting national unity. Although the military government has declared that negotiations have been terminated once and for all, the BCP is still interested in talks to end the civil war and build peace in the country. It will therefore continue to strive at every opportunity to reconvene these talks.

Dear people, dear democracy-loving patriotic people: Let us all oppose and stop the blood-thirsty acts of the military government. We profoundly urge you to join hands with our communist party to struggle for democratic rights and to support unanimously the just demands of the communist party.

Dear members of the Communist Youth League and the communist party; dear commanders and combatants of the people's army; dear regional people's armed forces; dear people's militia; dear people in base and guerrilla base areas: The Ne Win-San Yu military government, baring its war fangs, is once again preparing to test its strength and make an onslaught on the base areas. Throughout the revolutionary war, you have frequently encountered such search-and-destroy tactics of the enemy. This is nothing new. The enemy troops participating in the offensive are merely units which have been repeatedly punished by our people's army, people's guerrillas and people's militia. The military government has healed the wounds of these units and is returning them to be sacrificed.

It is a great task for all of us to take this opportunity to effectively smash the offensive of the enemy. We must struggle with conviction to defend courageously and resolutely our wealthy and pleasant base area which was built with the sweat and blood of thousands of martyrs as well as the lives, property and farms of our elders, brothers and sisters. Any enemy troop which dares to intrude into our area must be drowned in the sea of the people's war. Let us emulate each other in making greater contributions in the interests of the BCP and for the sake of the people throughout the country and for the cause of the liberation of the oppressed peoples of all nationalities.

Dear soldiers, noncommissioned officers and low-ranking commanders in the Ne Win-San Yu government's army: You are being sent as sacrificial victims to be drowned in the sea of the people's war. We believe that recent memories of the events in Operation King Conqueror still linger in your minds. Some of you will die and some will be wounded again only to preserve the power and luxuries of the top members of the military clique. We fear that you will be sacrificed once more in this civil war which is of no benefit to you.

Top members of the military clique talk as if the war you are fighting is a war for the state and a war of national defense. Is it genuine national war in the interests of the state as they claim? The answer is definitely no. When the Ne Win-San Yu military government, which relies on all sorts of imperialists and reactionaries, says this is a national war, it is merely a lie. The claim by the Ne Win-San Yu military government, which is making the people suffer with its oppression and rule, that it is fighting to protect the sovereignty of the country is also an outright lie.

The war it is waging is a reactionary civil war. If it is really necessary to fight a national war, we the communists are prepared to fight in the frontline and in the most difficult of situations against the enemy aggressors. This is something which we have declared publicly. We have also informed this to your U Ne Win. U Ne Win himself even said that we would join hands in fighting such a war.

Those who know about or experienced the revolutionary war against the fascists still remember that communists fought at the frontline and in the most perilous and difficult positions in that war. The communists, together with the people, also unflinchingly fought at the frontline against the British imperialists. Even your military leaders cannot refute this fact.

Since hegemonism is on the rampage in the world and some countries are waging national wars to oppose imperialist expansion today, the BCP -- with an eye to the future -- sees that Burma can also face a similar threat. It is for this reason that the BCP ardently wants to justly end the civil war. Your big leaders, however, do not want to end the civil war. Not only are they not interested in ending the civil war, they do not even want to agree to a temporary halt in the fighting during the negotiations. Although the military government did not accept a cease-fire with the BCP, it halted the fighting with one of our allied organizations. This reveals the military government's policy to attempt to divide us. It also exposes the lowly scheme of first trying to destroy the communist party and then trying to smash the allied organizations and their armed forces one after the other.

Dear privates, noncommissioned officers and low-ranking commanders in the military government's army: Now is the time for all of you to think about these matters very seriously. We hope that you will think about them seriously and make the right decision.

[Signed] The Central Committee, BCP

[Dated] 21 January 1982 -- The 12th Waning Moon of the Pyatho, 1443

INDIAN DELEGATION PAYS FRIENDSHIP VISIT

Arrival of Delegation

BK211521 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1432 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Jan (SPK) -- An interministerial delegation of the Republic of India led by Dr G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture, arrived in Phnom Penh today for a friendship visit to Kampuchea at the invitation of the PRK Government. The delegation was welcomed upon its arrival by Kong Samol, minister of agriculture, and other officials. Jarwantrai Schadev, Indian charge d'affaires ad interim in Kampuchea, was also on hand.

Meeting With Heng Samrin

BK220722 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0359 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Jan (SPK) -- During talks in Phnom Penh on 21 January with the Indian interministerial delegation led by G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, said: The establishment of diplomatic relations between India and Kampuchea deepened the ties of friendship and solidarity that unite our two countries. Chairman Heng Samrin spoke on the physical and moral suffering sustained by the Kampuchean people during the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique's bloody regime. After liberation, continued Heng Samrin, with the staunch aid of Vietnam, the USSR, the fraternal socialist countries and progressive peoples in the world, the Kampuchean people obtained great successes in various fields, particularly agriculture. The chairman sincerely thanked the Indian Government and people for their multifaceted aid to the Kampuchean people exposed to difficulties after the toppling of Pol Pot-Ieng Sary.

Doctor G.V.K. Rao expressed the good will of the Indian Government and people to develop friendly relations and cooperation, which bind the two countries.

A reception was held on the same day in honor of the delegation.

Meeting With Chea Soth

BK230819 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1430 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Jan (SPK) -- Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning, received in audience in Phnom Penh this morning the visiting Indian interministerial delegation led by Dr G.V.K. Rao, former agriculture minister.

Chea Soth talked about the damage, particularly in the economic, agricultural and industrial sectors, under Pol Pot, which had caused the Kampuchean society to retrogress and had created numerous difficulties in economic reconstruction. The Kampuchean people, he stressed, have exerted enormous efforts in agricultural production during the past 3 years under the just leadership of the KPRP, and have made many successes in this field despite natural calamities this year. Chea Soth laid emphasis on the difficulties Kampuchea faces insofar as rice seeds, draft forces, techniques and production instruments -- consequences left behind by the genocidal Pol Pot regime -- are concerned.

The two sides talked about the broadening and strengthening of the economic, social and cultural relations between Kampuchea and India. Kong Samol, minister of agriculture, attended the meeting. India's acting charge d'affaires to Kampuchea, Jarwantrai Schadev, was present on this occasion.

Talks With Hun Sen

BK230915 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0707 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Jan (SPK) -- Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs, met with India's interministerial delegation led by G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture, in Phnom Penh on 22 January. The two sides exchanged viewpoints on cooperation in all fields between the two countries. Kong Samol, minister of agriculture, assisted Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers Hun Sen at the meeting. India's acting charge d'affaires, Jarwantrai Schadev, was also present.

NATIONWIDE ARMY LOGISTICS MEETING HELD

Chan Si Opening Speech

BK221322 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] The third nationwide army logistics meeting opened on 18 January at the Defense Ministry's guesthouse to review the results of logistics work in 1981 and set targets for logistics work in 1982. The meeting was presided over by Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense.

In his opening speech, Comrade Chan Si highly appraised the success of the logistics work achieved by cadres during the past 3 years. The comrade added: These successes were made possible due to the efforts of the army and people. Thus, as logistics cadres, we must strive to strengthen, expand and thoroughly implement our tasks in controlling the material and technical foundations. In this way, we will be able to enhance the combat strength of our armed forces and achieve more and greater victories. In particular, the comrade stressed that defense, which is the primary task of the army, should be linked to production work by increasing production of all types of crops and breeding more hogs, fowl, oxen and buffalo in all localities and units.

In conclusion, Comrade Chan Si exhorted all the participants to be loyal to the party, to abide by the revolutionary ethics and discipline, to behave gently and politely and to wholeheartedly and sincerely love and respect the people, as well as to strengthen and increase national unity and international solidarity -- particularly the bonds of friendship and militant solidarity with the fraternal VPA -- in order to contribute to defeating all the psychological warfare activities and maneuvers of the enemies of all stripes in our glorious Angkor land.

Further Chan Si Remarks

BK231249 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] The KPRAF's General Logistics Department organized the third logistics conference from 18 to 20 January 1982 at the military hotel in order to sum up achievements during the past year and to set plans to be implemented in the future. On this occasion, Comrade (Tum Samnang), representing the General Logistics Department, read the report on work achievements during the past year, indicating victories in building logistics work and administration. He also mentioned the relations between the General Logistics Department and the network of other offices, particularly the assistance and support of the comrade Vietnamese experts. He pointed out the target of logistics work in 1982 and said the struggle has to be strengthened and developed. He further added that in order to improve their cooperation in this struggle and successfully fulfill their revolutionary duties, they must have a high sense of responsibility; determination to serve the army faithfully; a good logistics capability; an increase in materiel administration work; and internal and international solidarity.

Following this, representatives of all units that scored good achievements briefed the conference on their good work experiences that have already been implemented. They were determined to overcome all obstacles and to develop their units in all fields. They decided to strengthen internal and international solidarity to defeat all the maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists and all kinds of reactionaries.

Later, Comrade Di Phin, chief of the KPRAF General Logistics Department, summed up the achievements in logistics work and noted the important role played by logistics cadres in various units regarding logistics distribution, administration and preservation in the army. The comrade added that logistics cadres must overcome their past shortages and, within their abilities, attend to the well-being of our combatants in order to strengthen and develop the revolutionary army in the future in conformity with their role and duties.

On this occasion, the conference was greatly honored by the presence of Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense. The comrade visited and gave advice to all the logistics cadres. He said they must unite with one another against all the psychological tactics of the enemies aimed at destroying our genuine revolution. The comrade highly praised all the logistics cadres for their high sense of responsibility in successfully fulfilling their duties during the past 3 years. As part of his advice, Comrade Chan Si stressed: [begin recording] In the name of the Defense Ministry, I want to highly praise all comrade logistics cadres of our KPRAF for their high sense of responsibility. All of our combatants everywhere must have good health in order to fight the enemies. Therefore, all comrade logistics cadres must (?try to do everything without relying on external aid, but instead on our own logistics). Our Kampuchean people, cadres and army are the masters. Therefore, the General Logistics Department has the duty of guaranteeing the (?living standard of the army) and the good health of the combatants in order to fight the enemies. A well-defined plan must be established. You must do everything for the victory of our army. You must heighten your great responsibility to your units. You must be faithful to your units and love your people. [end recording]

This conference ended successfully in a joyful atmosphere and all the participants were determined to fulfill their 1982 duties.

Ending of Conference

BK231115 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 20 January 1982 the third national logistics conference successfully ended its 3-day work session after summing up logistics work in 1981, setting new directives to be implemented in 1982 and listening to the reports of various municipal and provincial logistics units on their achievements.

On this occasion, Comrade Di Phin, chief of the KPRAF General Logistics Department, said that in order to fulfill the logistics work plan in 1982, cadres and combatants of all logistics units must work very hard -- physically and morally -- to correctly and carefully fulfill all their duties in order to successfully guarantee the achievement of the target plan. The comrade emphasized the standard of living of the army as well as the administration and control of materiel, weapons, vehicles, engines and fuel. Cadres and combatants must adhere to the principle of independence and mastery and be inventive and frugal. Later, he addressed the quality and shortcomings of logistics cadres to those in attendance and asked them to be honest and work faithfully for the military collectivity with a lofty sense of abnegation by eliminating all non-socialist attitudes. They must overcome all difficulties and obstacles. They must respect revolutionary discipline and morale in order to be revolutionary combatants -- children and grandchildren of the people -- and work for the people.

AGRICULTURAL REPORTAGE FOR 18-24 JAN PERIOD

BK251517 [Editorial Report] Kampuchean media have reported the following agricultural developments in the reporting period 18-24 January:

Kandal: According to Phnom Penh SPK in French at 0409 GMT on 23 January, the Kandal provincial commercial service bought 3,300 tons of paddy, 1,450 tons of corn and 137 tons of palm sugar from the peasants in 1981. They also sold 4,000 tons of rice to the people. This year's plans call for purchasing 2,000 tons of rice and other products, 200 tons of palm sugar, 50 tons of tobacco and 2,000 tons of fresh fish.

Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 1230 GMT on 18 January reported that in Kien Svay District nearly 4,000 hectares of rainy season rice were planted last year. So far some 1,635 hectares of dry season rice of the planned 4,438 hectares have been planted.

Kompong Chhnang: Phnom Penh radio at 1230 GMT on 18 January reported that by 10 January people in the province had sold 1,318 tons of rice to the state. The report added that 70 percent of the 43,000 hectares of rice planted has now been harvested. A further report at 1230 GMT on 23 January said that the 32,000 hectares of rice harvested thus far have yielded 42,000 tons. On 24 January at 0400 GMT, the radio reported that 2,000 tons of rice had been sold to the state and 88 percent of the rice crop had been harvested. More than 1,000 hectares of dry season rice have also been planted, along with 400 hectares of subsidiary crops.

Prey Veng: Phnom Penh radio at 0400 GMT on 18 January reported that in Kompong Trabek District 30,000 hectares of rice were transplanted last year, but there was some damage by floods. More than 8,000 hectares of rice are being harvested.

Kompong Thom: The radio reported at 0400 GMT on 18 January that according to a report presented to a provincial agricultural meeting the province planted almost 20,000 hectares of rice and almost 6,000 hectares of subsidiary crops in 1981. At 0401 GMT on 21 January SPK reported that the same meeting was told that during the main agricultural season of 1981 the province grew 10,600 hectares of floating rice, 23,250 hectares of ordinary rice and 32,300 hectares of short-term rice, of which 10,620 hectares were of rapid growth strains. The peasants also planted 3,520 hectares of broadcast rice, and almost 10,000 on family allotments. They also planted 5,650 hectares of subsidiary crops.

Takeo: The radio reported at 1230 GMT on 19 January that 72,799 hectares of rainy season rice were planted last year, of which 11,296 hectares have been harvested.

Svay Rieng: Phnom Penh radio at 0400 GMT on 19 January reported that people in the province have sold 900 tons of rice to the state. This year's target is 600 tons. In Chantrea District, according to the radio at 1230 GMT on 23 January, more than 9,600 hectares of rainy season rice were planted, of which 3,000 had been harvested by mid-January. The radio at 1230 GMT on 24 January said that in Kompong Rou District 5,000 hectares of rice have been harvested and 18 of the planned 389 hectares of dry season rice have been planted.

Kompong Speu: At 0400 GMT on 23 January Phnom Penh radio reported that by mid-January more than 16,000 hectares of rice had been harvested, comprising 35 percent of the sown area.

Battambang: Phnom Penh SPK in French at 0403 GMT on 20 January reported that a recent meeting in Battambang to review the province's achievements during the past 3 years was told that last year the province planted 260,100 hectares of rice, 17 percent more than in 1980. Almost 37,000 hectares of this were damaged by natural disasters. Peasants also planted 4,970 hectares of corn and subsidiary crops, while the fish catch was 4,570 tons. Plans for 1982 call for growing 2,500 hectares of dry season rice and 280,000 hectares of subsidiary crops. [as received]

VODK REPORTS ACTIVITIES OF LNLF GUERRILLAS

BK080922 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] Here is a combat report from Laos: On 2 January 1982 the Vietnamese enemy sallying out of (Khlem) position to (Preal) position ran over landmines planted by the Lao National Liberation Front [LNLF] guerrillas, suffering four killed and one wounded. The LNLF guerrillas also seized 100 meters of telephone cable.

SIANG PASASON SCORES U.S. CHARGES ON CHEMICALS

BK261306 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 26 Jan 82

[SIANG PASASON 26 January commentary: "Who Has Actually Used Chemical Weapons?"]

[Text] In an effort to oppose the Soviet Union and Vietnam, sabotage the solidarity of the three Indochinese peoples and slander the just assistance rendered by the Soviet Union to the Afghan people, the U.S. administration has repeatedly and baselessly charged that toxic chemicals have been used in Laos, Kampuchea and Afghanistan. This deceitful and slanderous campaign launched by Washington is designed to cover up its own crimes against the three Indochinese peoples and to provide an excuse for its increased production of chemical weapons, for which it has allocated a total of more than $4 billion despite the fact that the United States is a signatory to the 1925 Geneva Accord prohibiting the use of toxic chemicals for military purposes.

The United States currently holds the largest stockpiles of chemical weapons in the world -- weapons capable of destroying all life on this planet. Moreover, it has also stockpiled more than 150 tons of toxic chemicals, nearly 3 million artillery shells, tens of thousands of bombs, hundreds of thousands of hand grenades and a large quantity of other chemical weapons.

Past records have shown that the waging of chemical warfare constitutes part of Washington's global strategy, which includes all forms of warfare ranging from general conflicts to local wars. The so-called orange rain found in Indochina during the past decade as a result of U.S. experimental use of chemical weapons and other conventional weapons in this region is clear evidence that cannot be denied by anyone. More than 2 million Indochinese people were killed and several thousand American soldiers died from the effects of toxic chemicals used by the United States in this region.

According to a statement made by U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Schweiker, during the period of U.S. aggression in Southeast Asia, the U.S. Armed Forces carried out 41 operations involving the use of chemical weapons. In Vietnam alone, they used more than 100,000 tons of toxic chemicals, which killed more than 2 million Vietnamese people. A total of 1.3 million hectares of land, or some 43 percent of that country's total arable land area, were destroyed by chemical weapons and napalm bombs.

Discoveries in Afghanistan show that the United States has used this country as a testing ground for its chemical weapons. All the chemical weapons and poisonous bombs discovered in that country bore trademarks showing that they were manufactured in the United States. There is absolutely no truth, therefore, to the U.S. slander that chemical weapons produced in the Soviet Union are being used in Afghanistan. As for Laos, during the U.S. war of aggression thousands of Lao people were killed by toxic gas and napalm bombs dropped by U.S. aircraft on rivers and inhabitated areas. Extensive forest and arable land areas in the northern and central regions of Laos were destroyed by U.S. toxic gases and chemical weapons.

Washington, of course, wants all countries in the world to forget its crimes against the peoples in the three Indochinese countries and its use of chemical weapons on a scale unprecedented in the history of mankind. Instead, it seeks to throw the blame on other people and tries to distort the truth so that it will be able to use these weapons again in the future.

All peace- and justice-loving countries throughout the world demand an end to the arms race, which poses a serious danger to all mankind. They have also solemnly condemned Washington's scheme to increase its production and use of chemical weapons against the will of all countries in the world as well as the American people themselves.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON PEOPLE'S COUNCIL PLENUM

Comment on Kaysone Report

BK180800 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Unattributed editorial: "Spare No Efforts To Materialize the Direction and Tasks for 1982"]

[Text] On 11 January the Supreme People's Council [SPC] convened its regular plenum for 1982. At this session, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and prime minister of the LPDR, read a political report on the situation during 1981 and the direction and main tasks for 1982. This document is of great importance. It correctly evaluates the efforts of the entire party, army and people at all levels in persistently implementing the 1981 plan and, at the same time, analyzes six remaining problems. It also delineates the 10-point direction and tasks for 1982. General Secretary Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan's report clearly points the direction for leading our country in firmly advancing toward socialism.

Our people of various tribes must follow the main directions for this year. We must boost production more vigorously, with agriculture being at the forefront. At the same time, we must strengthen the unity of all the people. We must strength the national defense, public security, educational, cultural, social and diplomatic fronts and raise the quality of the cadres. These directions are closely interrelated. To rapidly advance the tasks of building and developing a new economy and culture, the people in the country are required to unite and think as one, persistently struggle to surmount all obstacles and difficulties, exploit all potentials existing in the country and continuously step up diplomatic work. What guarantees the success of these tasks is the quality of the party and state cadres at the grassroots level.

All Lao people have entered 1982 with ardent confidence in their bright future. We have had favorable conditions for effectively implementing this year's plans. We have recorded great and firm achievements in the cause of defending the country, restoring and building the economy and developing the culture during the past 5 years. These achievements create a favorable revolutionary condition for our advancement in scoring new and greater achievements in 1982.

The past year was a year in which our people won victories on many fronts, the most outstanding of which was the agricultural front. It is on this front that we have ensured self-sufficiency in food supplies throughout the country, retained some stock for the people, acquired sources of agricultural goods for export and obtained raw materials for some industries.

The movement of turning to agricultural cooperatives has been further consolidated in many localities. The distribution, circulation, communications, financial and banking tasks have advanced a step further. The educational, public health, cultural, information, art and literature and sports tasks have been broadened extensively. Efforts have been made to improve the quality of the cadres and promote the efficiency of state apparatuses in order to bring concrete changes to the implementation of tasks. Experience in guidance work has been effectively summed up. We have knowledge of the work to be done and the direction for our advance to victories. We have recorded fine achievements in the diplomatic work and international cooperation and assistance continues fruitfully, in accordance with our foreign policy of peace, independence, self-determination and socialism.

All this serves as a guarantee and a factor in our firm advance. The persistent struggle to implement the direction and main tasks for 1982 requires the entire party, army and people at all levels to spare no efforts, fear no difficulties or obstacles, dare to think and act and to draw experience while working in order to turn into practice General Secretary Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan's political report and make the people at the grassroots level profoundly understand it.

Mobilization campaigns must be launched to encourage enthusiastic emulation movements among the masses to respond to the new tasks. Only by so doing can we win new, greater successes in 1982 and create favorable conditions for the successful implementation of the First 5-Year Plan.

Souphanouvong Closing Speech

BK141450 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] The regular Supreme People's Council [SPC] plenum for 1982 ended in Vientiane at 1730 on 14 January after a 4-day session.

On this occasion, Souphanouvong, president of the LPDR and chairman of the SPC and the Central Committee of the Lao Front for National Construction, made the closing speech. [Begin recording] Respected deputy prime ministers; respected ministers, deputy ministers and the government adviser; respected vice chairmen of the SPC; dear members of the SPC Standing Committee and SPC members: We have been positively attending our plenum for 4 full days and have achieved successes, as expected, in the agenda and our objectives. I would thus like to express happiness and wholeheartedly hail all SPC members, particularly the senior ones, for their endurance and for surmounting fatigue and concentrating strength and energy on following, studying and considering the session's activities and for contributing to the splendid success of the session. [applause]

During the first part of the session, we worked shoulder to shoulder with the many members of the Council of Ministers, who sacrificed their time to attend the session with us to jointly hear an important report from our beloved and respected Kaysone Phomvihan, prime minister and general secretary of the party Central Committee. This report dealt with the situation in 1981 and the direction and main tasks for 1982. The two supreme institutions of the state -- the SPC and the Council of Ministers -- jointly studied and considered the various major, key and urgent issues in a profound and all-round manner. I am very proud to see that all members of our two supreme institutions reached complete unanimity in evaluating the situation and tasks in 1981 and the direction and main tasks for 1982 adopted by our party and state. All the members also joined in expressing views affirming that our party and state line and policies are always correct, clear-sighted and timely. [applause] We also jointly heard and agreed to unanimously approve a report submitted by Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Nouhak Phoumsavan on the implementation of the 1981 state budget and the proposed 1982 state budget. [applause]

I would thus like to express joy and hail the members of our two institutions for unanimously accepting the two reports. [applause]

During the second part of our session, we considered the adoption of some internal documents of the SPC. We also unanimously agreed on many matters, the most important of which is the matter regarding the determination of all SPC members to positively carry out their responsibilities and duties toward the party, state and people of all tribes in all spheres of work, all branches of work and all localities and to try their best to contribute to stepping up all major tasks and movements of the party and state -- that is, to defend the country; maintain public security; transform and build socialism; promote production, education and public health; conduct a political life with the purpose of improving the living conditions of cadres, combatants, policemen and laboring people of all tribes; and improve the organization and training of leading cadres, management cadres and so forth.

We are still required to continue studying and grasping the prime minister's report on the task of going to the grassroots level. We must attentively report to our fraternal people of all tribes on the contents and spirit we have grasped in order to enable them to clearly understand the situation, our victories and the enemy's schemes. We must heighten our revolutionary vigilance, promote the spirit of collective mastery, the spirit of self-reliance and the confidence in our own strength. We must concentrate our labor on production in a spirit of enthusiasm and thrift and strive to triumphantly carry out all the main tasks for 1982 -- the second year of our 5-year plan. [applause]

I would like to ask you to extend greetings, solidarity, love and regards from the party and state to our compatriots of all tribes. I wish them happiness and hope that they will have confidence and unite to win new victories. [applause] I once again express deep thanks to Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan, Deputy Prime Minister Nouhak Phoumasavan and Deputy Prime Minister Sali Vongkhamsao for submitting the documents of the Council of Ministers to the SPC session, and to the SPC members and the government adviser for honoring this session. [applause]

In conclusion, I wish all members of the Council of Ministers and the government adviser good health and success in all tasks. [applause] I wish our SPC members good health, joy and enthusiasm in surmounting all difficulties and fulfilling their complex duties. [applause] I hereby would like to declare the regular SPC plenum for 1982 closed. [applause] [end recording]

The closing ceremony of the regular SPC plenum for 1982 ended amid the shouting of slogans hailing the splendid success of the session.

Communique Issued by Plenum

BK141414 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Communique issued by the Supreme People's Council -- dated 14 January]

[Text] The regular Supreme People's Council [SPC] plenum for 1982 ended on Thursday, 14 January, with glorious success after a 4-day session which begaon on Monday, 11 January.

The first part of the session was attended by the prime minister, deputy prime ministers and members of the Council of Ministers. The session heard Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan's report on the situation in 1981 and the direction and main tasks for 1982. The session also heard Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Nouhak Phoumsavan's report on the implementation of the 1981 budget and the proposed state budget for 1982. After carefully studying them, the SPC and the Council of Ministers unanimously approved the two documents.

During the second part of the session, the SPC adopted some of its internal documents. They are: An amended resolution on the location, responsibilities and role of the SPC; plans to visit localities; a resolution on the spheres of rights and duties of the SPC members assigned to various localities, offices and units; and a report submitted by the SPC Standing Committee on the results of the implementation of the SPC projects for 1981 and its program of action for 1982.

The SPC members positively contributed to making the session enthusiastic and joyous. Following the closing of the session at 1730 on 14 January, the SPC Standing Committee held a solidarity dinner in a joyous atmosphere on the evening of 14 January. In attendence were a large number of the SPC and the Council of Ministers members. This was an opportunity to further strengthen the internal unity within the SPC and the unity between our two supreme institutions.

Vientiane, 14 January 1982
[Signed] Khamsouk Keola, vice chairman and secretary general, on behalf of the SPC

ARMY PAPER HAILS LPLA FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK211440 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 20 Jan 82

[LPLA 20 January editorial: "Wholeheartedly Salute the Historical Day Marking the 33d Founding Anniversary of Our Army, 20 January"]

[Text] Today, our entire party, army and people are elated to join in celebrating the 33d anniversary of a historical day -- the founding of the army.

Under the clear-sighted, talented leadership of the glorious LPRP and supported and fostered by the Lao people of various nationalities, as well as with the support and assistance of various fraternal countries, during the past 33 years of building and fighting the LPLA has been rapidly developed and strengthened in all fields. It has scored great and brilliant achievements in fighting and fulfilling various tasks. The LPLA, together with the people of various nationalities, has determinedly surmounted all obstacles and difficulties with determination, in a lofty spirit of sacrifice on the road of fierce and complicated struggle. It has defeated the French colonialists and then the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their henchmen, pushed forward the cause of national liberation until complete victory was achieved, completely done away with the reactionary feudalist system as well as old and new colonialism, and victoriously established the LPDR, thereby opening a new era -- an era of the most prosperous development in the history of our Lao people, and an era of socialist construction throughout the country.

Since the complete liberation of the country and the establishment of the LPDR, our Lao army and people, closely coordinating with the resolute, firm and heroic struggle of the peoples of the two fraternal countries -- Vietnam and Kampuchea -- and with the great support and assistance of the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries, have continued to march forward with determination in the cause of defending and building their socialist country. Our LPLA has enhanced its glorious traditions and has, together with the people throughout the country, systematically and ignominiously smashed all sabotage schemes and acts of the imperialists, the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, other international reactionaries and their lackeys. As a result, tranquillity has been basically maintained in our socialist country while our people of various nationalities have freely promoted and expanded their rights of collective mastery, and built a new lifestyle -- a socialist collective one -- in peace under the party's leadership.

The various great and glorious achievements scored by our army and people during the past 30 years of national liberation struggle and the past 6 years of the defense and building of the socialist country have proved the vitality of the correct, pure and creative line of our party -- a genuine Marxist-Leninist party -- which serves as a banner concentrating all Lao patriotic forces and revolutionary forces and as a resolute and firm combatant of the international communist-worker movements. The various great achievements of our Lao revolution today have also proved the value of the numerous sacrifices of blood by our cadres, combatants and people of various nationalities. These achievements have greatly encouraged the movements of struggle for national liberation and social progress, and are significant contributions to the cause of maintaining peace and security in Southeast Asia and the world.

The noteworthy point of the world situation at present is that the imperialists, with the U.S. imperialists as leaders, have colluded with the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in rallying all the big ultrareactionaries of the era. Despite the fact that they have been driven into an all-round crisis and a weakening position, they have continued to stubbornly step up their strategy against the world revolutionary movements, particularly against the Soviet Union and the socialist community. In Southeast Asia, the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and the reactionary powers are stubbornly colluding in stepping up activities to oppose and sabotage our LPDR as well as the two fraternal countries -- Vietnam and Kampuchea -- by various subtle, cruel and barbarous methods.

In light of the aforementioned situation, our country is now experiencing peace, yet it is necessary to be prepared to face sabotage and a destructive war launched by various enemies. At the same time, it is necessary to always be prepared to fight to defeat the various forms of aggressive war that might be waged by the enemies.

In light of this situation, in a discussion of the problem of socialist construction, the problem of maintaining peace and the problem of striving to improve the material and spiritual life of our people in the country, we should note that we must not ease or relax our vigilance even a single minute. We must be determined to crush all sabotage and destructive schemes and acts of the enemies, and must maintain a high level of combat readiness to safeguard the independence, freedom and socialism of the country, while maintaining our people's life of peaceful labor.

The defense of the socialist country is our urgent task now and in the immediate future. It is also a basic, regular and long-term duty of our entire party, army and people. The enhancement of the country's strength in all fields and the combination of the economic development with the defense of the country and the maintenance of public order are also duties of each of us. It is our responsibility to do our utmost to make our country prosperous and strong.

Our party Central Committee has said that we must mobilize the efforts of the people in all fields and throughout the armed forces, and that we must also make effective use of the assistance given by Vietnam, the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries in the socialist community in order to guarantee that the country always maintains sufficient strength so as to defeat enemies in all circumstances or in any type of war waged by the enemies. In defending the country, the national independence, the socialist system and the system of collective mastery of the laboring people, it is required that the overall strength of the proletarian dictatorship system be enhanced. Attention must be paid to building and strengthening the various people's armed forces so as to make them the key forces for the entire people's national defense and the core forces in the people's war to defend the country.

The LPLA must strive to train and foster itself to become a new type of strong, revolutionary army of the working class, an army which is determined to remain vigilant to score victories, maintains an ever higher level of well-organized and modern principles, always maintains combat readiness and fights victoriously in order to defend the country and fulfill its glorious national and international tasks. Educated, trained and fostered by the LPRP, our army, together with the people, has worthily recorded the glorious traditions and achievements in the golden book of the nation's history.

The past 33 years has been a glorious, historical path of our army -- an army which originated from the people. The party's leadership is the decisive factor for the growth, development and all victories of our various armed forces. The people throughout the country have heartily trusted, loved, fostered and built our army. Our army has joined with the people in carrying out the resistance during two major periods when the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialist aggressors were defeated and all sabotage and subversive schemes of the imperialists and the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, whose aim is to swallow up our country, have been systematically smashed. As a result, the country has been securely defended and its international obligations have been successfully fulfilled.

Our army's traditions have been incessantly maintained, promoted and expanded. In fighting and carrying out actual tasks, our army has been loyal to the party, the nation and the people. It has maintained determined vigilance to fight and to win victory. It has fought heroically; been diligent and showed initiative in engaging in labor; closely maintained internal solidarity and maintained firm solidarity with the people while effectively maintaining international solidarity; strictly followed regulations and discipline; diligently studied and attended training sessions to achieve progress; persisted in training itself; raised the revolutionary qualifications to a higher level; and maintained sufficient strength to carry out activities to defeat all enemies and to fulfill all tasks entrusted to it.

In the past 3 years of the implementation of the already fulfilled plan of the party and state on the socialist transformation and building in our country, following the slogan on the enhancement of fine tradition and the enhancement of combat strength, our entire army has accomplished new changes in several fields. Its combat strength has been enhanced with each passing day. The various lessons experienced in consolidating and building forces during the aforementioned period will enable us to promote and expand on our good points, surmount our weak points, and continue to push our army forward in a vigorous march on the road to building a modern, well-organized army. A new lesson is that to successfully enhance the combat strength, it is necessary to pay attention to building various all-round strong basic units, all-round party-led units and advanced units of the Lao People's Revolutionary Youths, and to vigorously make changes in the political, ideological and organizational fields and in the strength of movements. It is necessary for the all-round strong basic units and the all-round party-led units to have cadres and party and youth union members who maintain a high level of political qualifications and noble sentiment and maintain the strength to take a leading role in carrying out activities. These are decisive factors for the maintenance and enhancement of the army's revolutionary nature, for the proper use of the party's military line, and for the promotion and enhancement of the strength of various people's armed forces in performing the combat task as well as all other tasks entrusted to it by the party.

We have properly applied the various combat lessons that we have experienced over the past third of a century or so, together with other advanced lessons that we have learned from the armies of various fraternal socialist countries on the practical conditions for a new step of development of our army, so as to enable our army to march forward to score new, still greater victories in the new stage of revolution.

Our army is a beloved child of the people of various nationalities. The army and the people have united as one. They are the sources of our immeasurable strength. The great, spiritual strength of our army is the pure spirit of cherishing the country, socialism, classes and the people. Therefore, at all times and in all places, it is necessary for the army to make the people love and trust it so that it will deserve to be nobly called the heroic army of the heroic Lao people of various nationalities.

On the occasion of this year's 33d founding anniversary of our army, in a joyous atmosphere in which our entire people throughout the country are continuously competing to implement the eighth resolution of the party Central Committee and the 5-year state plan in this, the second year, let all our cadres and combatants energetically strive to achieve new successes in fulfilling the plan for 1982.

BRIEFS

RELIGIOUS DELEGATION TO PRAGUE -- Vientiane, 15 Jan (KPL) -- A Buddhist delegation led by Khamtan Thepbouali, head of the Religious Affairs Department, on January 13 left here for the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic. Khamtan Thepbouali is to attend the Conference on Peace and Disarmament. This conference is sponsored by religious organisations of the socialist countries, [and is] scheduled to be held in Prague on January 18 to 22. [Text] [Vientiane KPL in English 0945 GMT 15 Jan 82 BK]

NEW BRIDGE CONSTRUCTION -- Vientiane, 17 Jan (KPL) -- The construction of a 95-meter-long bridge on the Hung River was recently completed by the local efforts of Sayaboury District, in the province of the same name. [Text] [Vientiane KPL in English 0910 GMT 17 Jan 82 BK]

SITTHI SILENT ON KHMER ROUGE COALITION REJECTION

BK270127 Bangkok POST in English 27 Jan 82 p 2

[Text] Foreign Minister ACM Sitthi Sawetsila yesterday declined to comment on the Khmer Rouge rejection of Singapore's proposal for a loose coalition of the three Khmer resistance factions. Meanwhile, the director general of the Information Department, Mr Chet Sutcharitkun, said he expected that the five member countries of the ASEAN would consult each other before giving a response.

Referring to the Khmer Rouge call for a new summit of the three resistance factions, and the possibility of holding the meeting in one of the five ASEAN nations, ACM Sitthi said he didn't think ASEAN was ready for the summit which, in his opinion, was not an urgent matter for the time being. "Ghazali (the Malaysian foreign minister) is still sick in the hospital," he said. He added that he preferred to wait for the result of a forthcoming meeting in Beijing between Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Democratic Kampuchea's President Khieu Samphan and Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

An ASEAN diplomat commented that although the Khmer Rouge rejection was "not unexpected," they still supported the aim of a coalition provided that it contained well-defined political principles. The Khmer Rouge have previously insisted on consensus decision making in the proposed coalition. Such a formula would give the Khmer Rouge veto power, not allowing them to be outvoted by the other two factions.

REBELS ATTACK POLICE STATION IN CHIANG RAI

AFP Report

BK260529 Hong Kong AFP in English 0505 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 26 Jan (AFP) -- Three people, two of them civilians, were killed and four others injured early today in what a Thai military officer called a "revenge" strike by Burmese rebels loyal to opium warlord Khun Sa. The rebels attacked a police station in Mae Sai District in the northernmost province of Chiang Rai at about 4:00 am (2100 GMT) in the first such move since Thai Government forces pushed into their border stronghold last Thursday. The attack, 30 kilometres (18 miles) west of the operation at Ban Hin Taek, has sparked an alert order to all urban areas, the officer said. [passage omitted]

Interior Minister's Comments

BK270452 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Excerpt] The interior minister has instructed the ministry under secretary and heads of government units concerned to pay attention to security of government premises, particularly those near the borders. Regarding the attack on the Mae Sai District police station by an unidentified foreign force yesterday morning, Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot told newsmen at the Interior Ministry yesterday afternoon that although security practices for government premises already exist, government officials must not neglect such practices now. He said his order is general, but its emphasis is intended for areas on the northern border in view of the attack on the Mae Sai police station.

Asked if the Khun Sa force's attack on the police station shows the force's total disregard for the government, the interior minister said that, judging from its attack on an office of the Thai Government, this seems to be the case. Asked if cooperation will be sought from the Burmese Government so that Thai officials could pursue the Khun Sa force into Burma, the interior minister said the Thai Government could not make such a request. The Burmese Government can take action on its own. The interior minister said the action of Thai officials against Khun Sa is intended to preserve Thailand's national sovereignty -- no foreign force will be allowed to carry out activities on Thai soil as it pleases.

He said the current government action against the Khun Sa force demonstrates the government's policy against narcotics. The government action is viewed abroad as correct, said the interior minister.

Report on Arrests

BK270824 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Statement by deputy Government House spokesman Wanida Chitman; given on 27 January -- recorded]

[Text] Yesterday [26 January] officials arrested a total of 12 Thai citizens and Mong hilltribesmen in the central district of Chiang Rai Province. They are believed to hold high-level positions in the Khun Sa group. They have been turned over to district police authorities for investigation. At 1000 yesterday the 3d Army Region dispatched two units to patrol near Ban Hin Taek and to clear the area. They discovered a 10-kilowatt electricity generator, a rucksack and a flak jacket and some medical tools.

Regarding the general situation in Mae Sai District, a report states that the people in Mae Sai and Mae Chan Districts and in the Chiang Rai provincial capital are going about their business as usual. Some stores, however, remained closed, as it is the Chinese New Year. The authorities in Mae Chan and Mae Sai Districts are on alert for possible untoward incidents. Therefore, the security of the people in the area is not a cause for concern.

SUPREME COMMAND REPORTS CLASHES WITH 'TERRORISTS'

BK261318 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] The Supreme Command Information Office has reported that during the past week, government forces engaged in 10 clashes with communist terrorists and one landmine was stepped on. Communist terrorists ambushed government authorities once and sniped at and encircled government troops during two separate incidents.

Touching on the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border, government forces clashed with an armed Khmer group. The fighting between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin side and the Khmer resistance groups continued inside Kampuchea near the Thai border. During this period, two mortar shells fell on Thai territory. In the areas under the 1st Army Region's responsibility, two 82-mm mortar shells fell in the vicinity of Sangae village in Ta Phraya District, Prachin Buri Province. A Thai military unit clashed with an armed Khmer group that was trespassing over the border at a point north of Thap Siam village in Ta Phraya District.

In the areas under the 2d Army Region's responsibility, violent operations by communist terrorists against the government side declined in comparison with the previous week. Four clashes between communist terrorists and government soldiers took place in Don Tan and Pla Pak Districts of Nakhon Phanom Province. Communist terrorists ambushed government authorities who were traveling along the road between Bang Man and Bang Yen villages in Mukdahan District, Nakhon Phanom Province. On one occasion, communist terrorists encircled government troops at Khim Siu village in Chanuman District, Ubon Ratchathani Province. The police station and central office of Don Tan District came under sniper fire on one occasion. Authorities were informed about the appearance of communist terrorists in Nam Yun District, Ubon Ratchathani Province.

In the areas under the 3d Army Region's responsibility, three clashes occurred west of Nong Mae Na village and southwest of Khao Pu village in Muang District, Phetchabun Province, and in Thung Chang District, Nan Province. A government soldier stepped on a landmine in Lom Sak District, Phetchabun Province.

In the areas under the 4th Army Region's responsibility, three clashes occurred in Muang District of Nakhon Si Thammarat, Phra Saeng and Wiang Sa Districts of Surat Thani Province. Two clashes between Chinese Communist bandits and government authorities were reported to have occurred west of Ai-Yaweng village in Betong District, and southwest of Than To District, both in Yala Province.

It should be noted that the insurgency situation during the past week has become less violent compared with the previous week. This can be attributed to the regular government patrol missions, which have forced terrorists to disband and leave their areas of operation. In particular, authorities in the southern provinces have sent out patrol cars to defend the property and lives of the people. Additionally, since the activities of these bandits and the communist terrorists have created trouble for the people, patriotic Thai people have stopped supporting these terrorist and bandit groups and cooperated with the government.

POST CITES SOURCE ON SRV-BACKED COMMUNISTS

BK270110 Bangkok POST in English 27 Jan 82 p 2

[Text] A pro-Vietnamese Thai communist faction has seized control of areas in Renu Nakhon District of Nakhon Phanom from elements of the pro-China Communist Party of Thailand, an informed government intelligence source disclosed yesterday. The source said the seizure of the formerly CPT-controlled areas by the Pak Mai (New Party) about two weeks ago followed internecine clashes between Pak Mai and CPT guerrillas. The source could not provide details about the rival groups' casualties, but said the CPT elements were driven out of the areas.

The next two targets for Pak Mai infiltration are Mukdahan District of Nakhon Phanom and Amnat Charoen of Ubon Ratchathani, he said, adding that the new communist faction has received material support from Vietnamese refugees in the two provinces. The source pointed out that the emergence of the Pak Mai was a threat to the CPT, which is finding it more difficult to recruit new ranks among local inhabitants.

Pak Mai was formed last year with its headquarters, called "Office 75," believed to be located in Laos. Its leading members include some former CPT members, including an ex-MP, who were disillusioned with the CPT's ideology and internal squabbling. The source said the Pak Mai was under the control of a Vietnamese, identified as Ong Kwang, and two Lao known as Kambao and Khamman.

TRADE VOLUME WITH LAOS DECREASES IN 1981

BK200812 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Bilateral trade between Thailand and Laos through the common border slowed down greatly during 1981. The Bank of Thailand's northeastern region branch says that this is because of the weakening purchasing power of the Laotian economy. During the first 11 months of last year, Thailand's exports to Laos decreased by 58 percent from that of the same period of the preceding year. During November last year, trading volume between the two countries totaled only about 17 million baht. This is a decrease of 59 million baht from the preceding month.

LE DUAN, TRUONG CHINH THANK USSR FOR LENIN ORDER

OW261540 Hanoi VNA in English 1511 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 26 -- Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, and Truong Chinh, Politbureau member of the C.P.V. Central Committee and president of the Council of State. today sent a joint message thanking the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Central Committee and the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet Presidium for conferring the Lenin Order on them.

The message, addressed to Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the C.P.S.U. Central Committee and president of the Supreme Soviet Presidium, reads: "We regard the conferment of this high distinction on us as a great honour for our party and people, who have constantly worked for the complete victory of the great Lenin's thinking in Vietnam and for the promotion of the indefectible friendship and comprehensive cooperation between our two parties and countries and as a vigorous encouragement to our entire party and people in socialist construction and national defence.

"We, from the bottoms of our hearts, express our warm gratitude to you and, through you, to the C.P.S.U. Central Committee and the Supreme Soviet Presidium for these high rewards. We avail ourselves of this opportunity to sincerely wish you the best of health to join the C.P.S.U. Central Committee in leading the Soviet people in successfully accomplishing the great historic tasks set by the 26th C.P.S.U. Congress.

"The Communist Party and the people of Vietnam will do their best for the constant consolidation and development of the great Vietnamese-Soviet friendship in the interests of the two peoples' revolutionary cause and of world peace and revolution."

27 Jan NHAN DAN Editorial

OW270745 Hanoi VNA in English 0721 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 27 -- Under the title "Blooming Spring of Vietnam-Soviet Friendship", NHAN DAN today carries an editorial hailing the conferment of the Lenin Order by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR on General Secretary Le Duan and President Truong Chinh on the occasion of their 75th birthdays as "a magnificent bouquet presented to the Vietnamese people in the early days of spring".

The paper goes on: "Advancing along the path charted by V.I. Lenin and the October Revolution, the heroic Vietnamese people have defeated the aggressive imperialist forces, liberated and reunified their country, and are now taking it toward socialism.

"The deep origin of all the successes of the Vietnamese people lies in the application of Marxism-Leninism, the all-conquering revolutionary theory of our time. After President Ho Chi Minh, the teacher of the Vietnamese revolution, who introduced Marxism-Leninism into Vietnam, there have been many other eminent leaders who have greatly contributed to the national liberation and many Marxists-Leninists who have overcome all trials and remained absolutely loyal to the party, the working class and the nation. Comrades Le Duan and Truong Chinh, two outstanding leaders of the Vietnamese party and state, have worked tirelessly for the Vietnamese revolution for more than half a century now.

"They are outstanding patriots and internationalists. Together with the Vietnamese party and people, they have been attached to the great Soviet Union since the early days of the Vietnamese revolution. The conferment of the Lenin Order by the Supreme Soviet on Le Duan and Truong Chinh and the conferment last year by the Supreme Soviet of this high distinction on Pham Van Dong on the occasion of his 75th birthday is a solemn acknowledgement by the Soviet Communist Party and state of the contributions made by the leaders of the Vietnamese party and state to the revolutionary movement; to the consolidation of socialism and peace and to the development and strengthening of the militant friendship and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union. It is a solemn praise of the glorious revolutionary cause of the entire Vietnamese party and people".

NHAN DAN goes on: "The victory of the Vietnamese revolution has always been associated with the great support and assistance from the Soviet party and state and the fraternal Soviet people. In the present stage when the Vietnamese people are engaged in the great task of building socialism throughout the country and defending the socialist motherland against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the other reactionary forces, the Soviet Union has given to Vietnam its great sympathy and support and an extremely important and valuable assistance. The treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries, the documents on multiform cooperation and the annual summit talks between the party and state leaders of the two countries are all demonstrations of the new and all-round development of the Vietnam-Soviet relations. The big and effective assistance of the Soviet Union is a factor for the Vietnamese people's successes in national construction and defence. The Vietnamese people's deep sentiments and sincere gratitude to the Soviet Union find a striking expression in the conferment in July 1980 of the Golden Star Order, the highest distinction of the Vietnamese state, on Comrades L.I. Brezhnev, M.A. Suslov and A.N. Kosygin."

NHAN DAN says in conclusion: "The Vietnamese people always bear in mind these heartfelt words full of revolutionary sentiments of Comrade L.I. Brezhnev: 'To unite with Vietnam is the dictate of the heart and mind'. They sincerely thank the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Soviet state and the fraternal Soviet people".

LEADERS' MEETINGS, VISITS MARK TET HOLIDAY

Meeting With Veterans

BK221331 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the Lunar New Year, SRV leaders recently held a get-together with revolutionary veterans and retired senior cadres who had just attended a conference in Hanoi to discuss documents of the fifth national VCP Congress.

Amid the warm atmosphere of the new year, Pham Van Dong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau; Le Duc Tho, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau; Le Van Luong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and secretary of the Hanoi municipal party committee, solicitously enquired about the health and family life of the senior party cadres. They talked and read new year poems to one another.

Pham Van Dong, on behalf of the VCP Central Committee, warmly welcomed the revolutionary veterans and retired senior cadres and wished them good health. He urged them to strive to contribute to improving their family lives and [words indistinct] to the national building cause.

He expressed the belief that despite numerous difficulties and complexities, these senior cadres -- who have gone through glorious revolutionary stages and have contributed to and gained valuable experiences from the revolution -- will realize more clearly their obligation to contribute to this common cause. This will surely help our party and people overcome all immediate difficulties and record increasingly greater victories in the new stage of the revolution.

Truong Chinh at VFF Meeting

OW222128 Hanoi VNA in English 1539 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 22 -- The Central Committee of the Vietnam Fatherland Front held a meeting here tonight to celebrate Tet, the traditional Vietnamese Lunar New Year festival. The meeting was attended, among others, by Truong Chinh, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and president of the Council of State; and Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly.

Addressing the participants, President Truong Chinh called upon the entire people to successfully build socialism and firmly defend the country, and discharge their internationalist duties towards the world people's struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

Hoang Quoc Viet in Lang Son

OW241237 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the approach of the Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog] Lunar New Year, on 27 and 28 December [of the old Tan Dau Lunar Year], that is, 21 and 22 January 1982, Comrade Hoang Quoc Viet, member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Presidium of the VFF Central Committee, paid a Tet visit to cadres and combatants of the armed forces and ethnic minority compatriots in the Lang Son border province.

Comrade Hoang Quoc Viet was warmly welcomed at the places he visited by large numbers of cadres and combatants and local people. After listening to Comrade Hoang Quoc Viet's talk and receiving his Tet presents, the cadres and combatants of the armed forces expressed their emotion for the concern of the VFF Central Committee and asked his delegation to convey to the party Central Committee, the Council of State, and the National Assembly their promise to resolutely promote army-people solidarity and achieve army-people single-mindedness, to constantly remain vigilant, to stand ready to deal timely counterattacks against the enemy's acts of aggression, and to firmly defend the fatherland's border.

To Huu Visits

OW241333 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the new spring, Comrade To Huu, member of the Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, visited and held working sessions with many grassroots units in Thanh Hoa, Hai Hung and Quang Ninh Provinces and Haiphong.

In Thanh Hoa he visited the Bim Son cement factory, a modern enterprise, built with Soviet assistance, with an annual output of 1.2 million tons, the Trung Son and Tho Xuan Districts and the Sao Vang [Gold Star] farm. Working with the leaders of Trung Son and Tho Xuan Districts, he offered many concrete views on the direction for production, managerial organization, and livelihood and party building aimed at turning the district into an agroindustrial structure, ensuring good living conditions for the people and making increasingly greater contributions to the state.

In Hai Hung, Quang Ninh and Haiphong, he visited Tu Loc District, the fields of Gia Tan village in this district, the Pha Lai thermoelectric construction site, the Uong Bi power plant, the Hoang Thach cement factory, the Mao Khe, Ha Tu, Coc Sau, Nha Sang and Cua Ong coal mines, the Ha Long shipyard, the Haiphong cement factory and the Dinh Vu shrimp and fish breeding project.

Working with the party committee and administration echelons and talking to the cadres, workers and people in the aforementioned localities and production installations, Comrade To Huu highly assessed their production achievements in 1981 thanks to their successful implementation of the central government's new lines and policies and their development of the cadres' and workers' initiative and creativity in production and livelihood and particularly the significant progress during the last months of the year.

In some of the areas he visited he met Soviet experts who are devotedly guiding and helping our cadres and workers in construction and production. On behalf of the party Central Committee and the government, he conveyed to them sincere thanks and good wishes for the new year.

Also on the occasion of the new year Comrade To Huu visited a number of armed forces units, which are day and night defending the fatherland. The cadres and combatants were extremely touched by the love of the party and state and expressed their determination to uphold vigilance and their readiness to fight in defense of the socialist fatherland and the cause of the country's socialist construction.

Le Thanh Nghi in Ha Son Binh

OW241036 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Amid the atmosphere of emulation to greet the fifth party congress and the spring of Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog], Comrade Le Thanh Nghi, member of the Political Bureau of the VCP Central Committee and vice chairman of the Council of State, has paid a Tet visit to the people of Ha Son Binh Province and the cadres, workers and combatants at the Hoa Binh hydroelectric plant construction site on Da River. On behalf of the party Central Committee, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers, he acclaimed the achievements of all the cadres, workers and combatants at the Hoa Binh hydroelectric plant construction site and thanked the Soviet experts who have upheld proletarian internationalism and joined Vietnamese cadres and workers in making emulation pledges to register achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress.

Comrade Le Thanh Nghi also praised the party organization, compatriots and combatants of Ha Son Binh Province for their achievements over the past year, especially on the production front and in discharging their food obligation. He offered some views on grasping the resolution of the 11th party Central Committee plenum on successfully organizing implementation of the 1982 state economic plan. He conveyed the New Year greetings from the party Central Committee, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers to all the cadres, workers, compatriots of various nationalities, combatants, fallen combatants' families, and families of those who have scored merits for the revolution in Ha Son Binh Province, wishing them good health and urging them to strive and emulate to register achievements (?to greet) the fifth party congress.

Tribute to Ho Chi Minh

OW231545 Hanoi VNA in English 1505 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 23 -- A delegation of the Communist Party Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State, the Council of Ministers, and the Central Committee of the Fatherland Front, paid a floral tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum this morning, on the occasion of the Lunar New Year. The wreath bears the inscription: "Eternal gratitude to great President Ho Chi Minh".

The delegation included Truong Chinh, Political Bureau member of the party C.C. and president of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau member of the party C.C. and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly and vice-president of the Council of State; Hoang Quoc Viet, and member of the party C.C. and president of the presidium of the Fatherland Front. Homages were also paid by delegations of the Vietnam People's Armed Forces and of government agencies and mass organizations.

Van Tien Dung at Factory

OW230951 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the traditional national Tet festival, Sen Gen Van Tien Dung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, first deputy secretary of the Military Commission of the party Central Committee and minister of national defense, called on and presented gifts to the cadres, combatants and employees of factory X-30 under the communication and signal command on the morning of 22 January.

Factory X-30 has outstandingly fulfilled its plans for repairing and manufacturing [words indistinct] communications equipment for 5 consecutive years. Particularly, in 1981, in applying the product contract and profit-and-loss accounting systems, the factory developed some 210 innovations of technical improvement in production and repair work, fulfilled all the set plan norms a month ahead of schedule and achieved a 16 percent increase in the gross output value.

Col [Dqaij Tas] Hoang Niem, commander of the Communication and Signal Corps and Lt Col Vo Dang, director of factory X-30, guided the comrade defense minister around the manufacturing workshop, nursery, dining hall and billet of the cadres, combatants and employees of the factory.

In his cordial meeting with a large number of cadres, combatants and employees of the factory, Sen Gen Van Tien Dung warmly acclaimed their spirit of creative labor and achievements scored in past years. He urged them to develop the self-reliant spirit, overcome all difficulties, step up production, satisfactorily fulfill all tasks in 1982 and unceasingly increase labor productivity and product quality in order to fulfill the tasks and requirements of the communication and signal corps in the new situation.

On behalf of all cadres, combatants and employees of factory X-30, director Vo Dang pledged to the defense minister to resolutely and comprehensively consolidate the factory and successfully fulfill the 1982 repair and production plan right in the first months and quarters of the year.

Truong Chinh at Flower Show

BK251000 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 24 January -- that is, on the eve of the Lunar New Year -- Comrade Truong Chinh, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of State, visited a spring flower show in Hanoi. He was given a jubilant welcome by officials in charge of the show, service cadres and a large number of visitors.

On display at the show were flowers in pots, vases and baskets; ornamental plants; orchids, including species which grow close to the ground; artificial flowers made of various beautifully colored materials; ornamental, singing and speaking birds; various kinds of ornamental fish rock gardens; and so forth. The displays came from Hanoi capital, Ho Chi Minh City, Haiphong, Binh Tri Thien Province and Hue City.

Chairman Truong Chinh commended the flower and ornamental plant growers, flower makers and ornamental bird and fish raisers for their many efforts and creations which helped make spring even more beautiful.

Le Van Luong in Hanoi

OW251049 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On 22 January, Comrade Le Van Luong, secretary of the Hanoi municipal party committee, paid Tet visits to the cadres and people of Phuc Tho and Thach That Districts [of Hanoi]. After hearing reports by the leading cadres of the two districts on the situation in production and the people's lives, Comrade Le Van Luong praised the districts for their correct production orientation in overcoming difficulties -- especially the very great difficulties in agricultural material supplies and electricity -- carrying out intensive cultivation and increasing crop yields, fulfilling fairly well a number of the major targets of the 1981 plan, initially stabilizing the people's lives and overfulfilling their tasks of selling grain and foodstuffs to the state.

He urged the leading cadres of both districts to renovate their management mechanisms, to apply profit-and-loss accounting and to make great efforts toward building the districts into agroindustrial economic units. He said that on the basis of boosting intensive rice cultivation, the districts must devise rational cultivation patterns and form a number of cultivation areas to provide raw materials for industrial production and for export.

Comrade Le Van Luong also paid Tet visits to the cadres, people and elders at orchards and gardens for medicinal plants in (Xen Chieu) and Phung Thuong villages of Phuc Two District and in Can Kiem village of Thach That District.

Vo Chi Cong in Haiphong

BK251150 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the Lunar New Year of the Dog, Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, visited and conveyed Tet greetings to the people, combatants and cadres of Haiphong municipality.

On hand to warmly welcome Comrade Vo Chi Cong were Bui Quang Tao, member of the party Central Committee and secretary of the municipal party committee; Doan Duy Thanh, chairman of the municipal people's committee; and many cadres from the various sectors and mass organizations.

At a new year function of representatives of the municipality's various sectors and echelons, Comrade Vo Chi Cong conveyed new year greetings from the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers to the party organization and people of Haiphong municipality. He warmly praised Haiphong for its efforts last year to overcome many difficulties and score successes in many fields, particularly in agriculture where the municipality took the lead in contracting out production quotas for workers and recorded the largest ever grain production volume which represented a 16.7-percent increase over 1980. The municipality also recorded fair increases in the number of hogs and the production of vegetables and food crops -- especially vegetables for export -- and stabilized the livelihood of peasants. Many families of these peasants had stocked grain reserves.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong encouraged the activities of some cooperatives of Kien An and Do Son Districts which, along with contracting out product quotas for workers, have applied profit-and-loss accounting to every branch and trade as well as to the whole unit, achieved a balance in vigorously developing all branches and trades; carried out planning at the family level; clearly reflected the three interests, especially the interests of workers; and motivated their members to pay attention to overfulfilling contract quotas as well as to fulfilling cooperative tasks and their obligations to the state.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong also commended Haiphong for its success last year in gradually expanding export and import activities; exploiting many sources of goods for exports; promoting local export operations; building up a foreign currency fund; and taking the initiative in importing raw materials, supplies and some essential consumer goods to contribute to resolving the difficulties facing production and stabilizing the people's life.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong paid a visit and offered Tet greetings to the party organization and people of Nghi Duc village, Kien An District. He also paid visits and offered Tet greetings to cadres and workers at the grain and food crops research institute of Hai Hung and the Dong Trieu state farm in Quang Ninh.

Pham Van Dong in Hanoi

BK251048 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the new spring festival, on 24 January -- that is on the eve of the Lunar New Year -- Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, visited and presented his New Year greetings to a number of establishments of the distribution-circulation sector and families of workers in Hanoi. He also attended a function with the comrade leaders of the Hanoi municipal party committee and the people's committees of Hanoi and its four urban precincts.

Comrade Tran Vy, alternate member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Hanoi municipal people's committee, accompanied the chairman of the Council of Ministers.

Chairman Pham Van Dong cordially conveyed to the people and combatants in the capital the New Year greetings from the party Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers.

Chairman Pham Van Dong learned with satisfaction that Hanoi has recently made many efforts to step up production and improve distribution-circulation work, and satisfactorily organized activities in support of the celebration of the traditional New Year festival of the people in the capital.

The Comrade chairman solicitously reminded the party and administrative committees at all echelons and all the responsible sectors in the capital to carry out distribution-circulation work even more satisfactorily on the basis of stepping up production. Cadres and personnel of the grain and trade sectors must adopt concrete operational plans and programs to improve distribution-circulation work, strengthen market management and ensure the direct distribution of goods to consumers.

Chairman Pham Van Dong expressed his wish that in 1982, Hanoi capital will improve production and distribution-circulation work and will score many new achievements to greet the fifth national party congress.

Van Tien Dung With Army Units

OW251718 Hanoi VNA in English 1636 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 25 -- General Van Tien Dung, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, first deputy secretary of the central party commission of the Vietnam People's Army, and minister of defence, has paid Lunar New Year visits to the "Quyet Thang" (Determined to Win) Army Corps, the air force, anti-aircraft, armoured and border guard units and the General Department of Civil Aviation.

He commended these units for the achievements they recorded last year and recommended them to resolutely fight against the Chinese multiform war of sabotage against Vietnam and to firmly defend Socialist Vietnam while contributing to the building of socialism. Also on the occasion of the Lunar New Year, General Van Tien Dung called on a base of resistance to French colonialism and some families which had rendered meritorious services to the Vietnamese revolution.

Nguyen Van Linh Visits

OW252018 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog] Lunar New Year festival, Comrade Nguyen Van Linh, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and secretary of the Ho Chi Minh City party committee, has paid Tet visits to the families of Comrades Luong Van (Xang), grade-7 mechanic and head of the fitter team at the Caric machine plant, who has been named "Outstanding Emulator" for 3 consecutive years; Nguyen Da Loc, a technician at the Ly Thuong Kiet engineering cooperative; and Nguyen Thi Kim Tuyen, deputy principal of the Tan Dinh primary-level general school, whose two sons are discharging their internatonalist obligations in Kampuchea.

Comrade Nguyen Van Linh handed them Tet presents from the Ho Chi Minh City party committee and people's committee and praised them for their worthy contributions to the city's common success in 1981, thereby making this year's Tet celebrations more joyful and enthusiastic than those in previous years. He also inquired about the living conditions of the families and of the brother and sister workers and teachers working with them.

Nguyen Duy Trinh in Gia Lai

BK261206 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the advent of the Year of the Dog, Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and secretary of the VCP Central Committee, paid a visit to the compatriots of various nationalities and the cadres and combatants in Gia Lai-Cong Tum Province.

Comrade Ksor Kron, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee, secretary of the provincial party committee and chairman of the provincial people's committee, joined with a large number of leading cadres of various departments, services and mass organizations in the province to extend a warm welcome to Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh. The comrade was taken on a tour of a number of localities and units and to many families who have rendered meritorious service to the revolution.

On a warm spring day in the Central Highlands, on the eve of Tet, Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh held a cordial get-together with more than 300 key cadres of the province at the provincial party committee headquarters. Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh conveyed the VCP Central Committee's New Year greetings to the compatriots of various nationalities and to the combatants and cadres of Gia Lai-Cong Tum Province.

The comrade praised the party organization, the army and the people of Gia Lai-Cong Tum for their efforts in 1982 [as heard] to overcome difficulties and for having scored many achievements in the areas of economics, culture and social development.

Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh said: As Gia Lai-Cong Tum has the potential to achieve comprehensive agricultural development, it must struggle to increase its grain productivity quickly and to create more agroforestry products and goods for delivery to the state. As jungle land represents one of the province's great economic assets, while exploiting timber and other forestry products the province must attach the greatest importance to afforestation and forest protection. At a time when our country still has difficulties in finding fuel, the province must pay attention to and vigorously develop its means of transportation with regard to the transportation of goods in order to serve production and the people's livelihood.

All party committee and administrative echelons and mass organizations must keep themselves informed of and satisfactorily implement the party's nationalities policy by realistically caring for the material and spiritual life of the compatriots of various ethnic minority groups, especially those in the former revolutionary bases. The province must pay constant attention to providing leadership and additional training for the contingent of district and grassroots-level cadres in order to make them qualified to lead mass revolutionary movements.

In view of the approaching fifth national party congress and the goal of struggling to overfulfill the 1982 State Plan, the province must launch a vigorous emulation movement to effect a more drastic change in the province's economy and social welfare.

During his stay in Gia Lai-Cong Tum, Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh was taken by the comrades in the local leadership on a Tet visit to the party organizations and people of Pleiku and Cong Tum cities and to the Doan Ket and Dac La agricultural cooperatives, which are known for their production and managerial achievements. The comrade visited many families who have rendered meritorious service to the revolution, including the family of hero (Nuk).

On this occasion Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh also visited a boarding school for Lao students about their livelihood and urged the school to struggle to fulfill its tasks satisfactorily so as to contribute to strengthening the exceptional friendship between Vietnam and Laos.

Comrade Nguyen Duy Trinh also visited the (Cong Ty) prison -- where 50 years ago the comrade and many other revolutionary fighters we detained by the French imperialists -- and the tombs of those revolutionary fighters who sacrificed their lives in the province.

Le Quang Dao Visits

BK261419 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the New Year, Comrade Le Quang Dao, secretary of the VCP Central Committee and deputy secretary of the Hanoi Municipal VCP Committee, paid a Tet visit to the cadres and workers engaged in the building of the Thang Long bridge, to those cadres and combatants belonging to the capital air defense corps and to the cadres and combatants of the Hanoi public security office and of the Hoan Kiem precinct public security station.

Meanwhile Comrade Tran Vy, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee and chairman of the Hanoi Municipal People's Committee, paid a Tet visit to the cadres and office of manual workers of the Sector I Hanoi Electricity Management and Distribution Office, the Yen Phu powerplant, a sanitation works corporation, the Hanoi railroad station, the Thong Nhut Passenger-Car Corporation, the 2d Housing Construction Corporation and the Hanoi Waterworks Corporation.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL GREETS LUNAR NEW YEAR

OW251209 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 24 Jan 82

["Text" of NHAN DAN 25 January editorial: "New Year Greetings"]

[Text] On the occasion of the first days of the new year, we extend our best wishes to our combatants who are holding fast to their guns to defend the fatherland in the border areas, on remote high mountain ranges and on faraway islands constantly buffeted by waves and winds, the beloved sons of the country who are fulfilling their international obligation in fraternal countries, all the cadres and combatants of the heroic People's Army who are training, learning and standing combat ready, and the security troops of the heroic People's Security Force who are standing guard or patrolling to defend order, security and social safety. The firmness of our defense constitutes the most important assurance of the building of the country and of a new society and new life for all our people.

We greet the heroic working class that is continuing to uphold revolutionary heroism, surmounting difficulties and hardships, working indefatigably at factories and construction sites and building the most important material bases for socialism; the diligent, patient and heroic peasant class that is working arduously and changing the rural areas' age-old backwardness, building a new countryside, feeding the entire society and making increasingly greater contributions to national construction and defense; the brainworkers in all scientific cultural, educational, literary and art sectors who are working valiantly, creating the material and spiritual values of the new society; the compatriots of fraternal nationalities in all regions of the fatherland who are developing the precious tradition of solidarity and joining forces in building and defending the fatherland; the overseas Vietnamese who are constantly turning toward their fatherland and contributing to the cause of national construction; and the vanguard fighters of the revolution, the communists of the heroic VCP who are firmly maintaining the fine tradition of solidarity and cohesion, advancing toward the fifth party congress and exerting efforts to surmount difficulties and leading our people's glorious revolution to new victories.

Entering the new year, we are optimistic and confident. Our experienced and tested party and heroic people assure us of the complete victory of the revolution. The country is on an upward course. The course for development has been set. New battles are being planned. A new revolutionary mettle is being manifested.

The motive force that pushes all of our actions forward is our responsibility as collective masters of the country and of our own lives. The tremendous strength of a free nation is being marshaled for the fight against poverty and backwardness and for fostering a plentiful, happy and civilized life. Each person cares for the happiness of all and all care for the happiness of each. The interests of each person and of the whole society are interconnected.

To successfully resolve the urgent problems of livelihood and to reorganize all of our activities constitute immediate combat objectives. The success of this struggle will also be the success of the cause of national construction and defense. The success of today's struggle will pave the way for the success of tomorrow's struggle.

For the communists, to struggle for the people's happiness is the ideal and goal of their lives. Let us valiantly stand at the vanguard of the immediate struggle, successfully resolve the questions of food, clothing, housing education and health protection of the people and always live and work in accordance with the communist style and following the examples of the great Uncle Ho and the heroes and martyrs who have (?struggled and made sacrifices) for the cause of the fatherland and the people.

Under the slogan, "All for the socialist fatherland, for the people's happiness," let us strive to enter the new year with the determination to push the situation forward, foster the revolutionary mettle and successfully implement the struggle platform mapped out by the party.

PHAM VAN DONG ARTICLE ON CONTRACTUAL SYSTEM

BK231323 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Nov 81 pp 1-5

[Article by Pham Van Dong: "New Steps in the Cooperativization Movement and the Development of Agricultural Production in Our Country" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] The implementation of the new contractual system in agricultural cooperatives has had a positive effect on promoting the development of production and has yielded encouraging results in the last 5th-month spring crop season. Facts have shown that the new contractual system marks a new developmental step in the cooperativization movement that is closely linked to the development of agricultural production in our country.

1. THEORETICAL AND PRACTICAL MEANING AND IMPORTANCE OF THE PRESENT CONTRACTUAL MOVEMENT

Recently, the new contractual movement has developed very quickly and broadly, mobilizing millions of peasants to engage enthusiastically in production. They have worked in an interested, voluntary and self-conscious manner in a spirit of real mastery and with a seething impetus. This is a mass revolutionary movement in agricultural production.

We should continue to study and discover new ways to further enrich this revolutionary campaign theoretically and practically. As Lenin said: The revolution is a festival and an undertaking of the masses. Its effect is described by Karl Marx as follows: Once great concepts have impregnated broad segments of the masses, they will generate a great invincible material force. We must adopt a proper attitude to direct this seething revolutionary movement which is taking place in all the rural areas of our country. The general public expects the new contractual movement in agricultural cooperatives to manifest the socialist revolution in the countryside. It is vitally significant in both the short and long terms. It is closely linked with the entire process of advancing toward improving the management and organization of cooperatives and perfecting the socialist production relations in the countryside; contributes to the development of agricultural production; and is inseparable from the socialist revolutionary cause of our entire country.

The new contract movement has raised many new problems with respect to the management and organization of cooperatives, to specialized and intensive cultivation, to technical equipment and to the material and technical bases of cooperatives. These are problems which we must be aware of and must urgently resolve as demanded by the people.

At the same time, we must pay the utmost attention to overcoming the unavoidable errors and shortcomings as well as the difficulties and complexities facing a movement that is developing at a fast rate and on a large scale in different regions of the country (including those localities where agricultural cooperativization is being carried out along with the development of agricultural production). We must face the fact that the new contractual system has been implemented improperly, poorly and even erroneously in some localities, having some adverse effects. We must promptly detect these shortcomings and errors and help the units involved overcome them, permitting all localities and cooperatives to advance uniformly in the right direction.

We can clearly see that the new contract movement in agricultural cooperatives is of profound significance in several aspects. We should pay attention to two issues related to this contract movement.

First, as stated above, this movement requires that we resolve the problems concerning the management and organization of cooperatives, and problems concerning technical equipment and the material and technical bases of cooperatives. These are problems related to the three revolutions: The revolution in production relations, which is closely connected with the development of productive forces; the ideological and cultural revolution which cannot be belittled; and the scientific and technical revolution, the key of the three revolutions. We must clearly see and clarify this matter in order to enrich the theoretical and practical aspects of this new contract movement in agriculture.

Second, the new contract movement in agriculture is linked to a very important policy of our party to implement the socialist collective mastery of the laboring people. Facts have shown that wherever the new contractual system is implemented well, the socialist collective mastery of the laboring people there is gradually manifested and the masses are liberated from "ties" and restrictions in order to truly exercise their mastery over production and distribution. It must be stressed here that mastery means socialist collective mastery. Some comrades, nevertheless, are still worried that the conclusion of contracts with individual workers would risk leading the movement toward individualism. In a socialist society and in the present movement of agricultural cooperativization in our country -- especially in the north where cooperativization has been implemented for several years now -- collectives and individuals have closely cooperated with each other to grow at the same time. Collectives here do not mean many individuals but are the sum total of socialist men. Uncle Ho once taught us: There must be socialist men before socialism can be built.

If the movement for contracts with groups of workers and individual workers in agricultural cooperatives is led, guided and administered well, it will certainly give rise to a countless number of socialist men who are attached to our beautiful socialist collectives and regime. In the process of building socialism to advance toward communism, individual development is a condition for collective development. We are not worried at all about the surge forward and growth and the heightening standard of comprehensive knowledge of people living under a socialist regime. On the contrary, this is what we want and think of day and night with a view to creating the necessary favorable conditions for such a development.

In this spirit, the new contractual system in agricultural cooperatives must be considered the initial stage of a revolutionary course which leads to the improvement, development and perfection of production relations and productive forces. These are very necessary to our socialist construction.

2. DISTRICT AREAS

It is a policy of strategic significance to make districts the vital areas in which our party and state can build cooperatives and accelerate agricultural production.

It is vital for us to build districts into areas where the production, distribution and circulation of grain, foodstuffs and certain types of consumer goods under district management will be implemented. This is to enable districts to satisfy to the highest degree possible the needs of the local people of various strata. For us, this is the most rational economic process to be implemented immediately and on a long-term basis. In this spirit, we must regulate distribution and circulation on a provincial scale. Additionally, districts must fulfill their obligations toward the state vis-a-vis the quotas of goods, especially grain and foodstuffs. This inevitable contributory duty should not be treated lightly. Only through these activities can districts gradually guarantee and improve the well-being of their people. It should be noted that only when districts fulfill their obligations more satisfactorily toward the state can the latter provide grain and foodstuffs more satisfactorily for the people in various cities and especially for cadres, workers, soldiers and their dependents. By satisfactorily carrying out these tasks, we will be able to build a stable economy and life. This will enable us to concentrate on accomplishing many essential tasks in our cause of achieving socialist industrialization and defending the socialist fatherland.

For its part, the state must provide districts with those means of production and those consumer goods which the cooperatives and people in these districts need in accordance with those policies now in force, including the policy on two-way exchange of goods. At present, we are still experiencing a shortage of goods and the related management is still not good enough. The implementation of two-way contracts is therefore still unsatisfactory. We, especially those responsible sectors at the central level, must strive our utmost to give more attention to the two-way exchange of goods in order to boost agricultural and industrial production. Both agricultural and industrial production must be directed toward serving the people's livelihood. To achieve a combination of agricultural and industrial production is precisely to achieve worker-peasant cooperation in the political and economic fields.

All of these matters have been discussed among us several times in detail. When asked about this, however, those comrades at the provincial level and especially at the district level appear to know nothing. I do not know if this is a result of their lack of knowledge or of their reluctance in its implementation. Why don't the responsible cadres in various districts -- the areas known by everyone to be very important -- boldly take responsibility for activities concerning production, distribution and circulation in their districts? Those comrades at the central level also do not have a clearly defined concept and are indecisive in providing technical equipment for districts.

They are unaware that districts are regarded as centers where technical equipment will be provided to agriculture and where technical and managerial cadres will be sent in accordance with the unified state plan. Altogether our country has approximately 400 districts. We must search for a way to classify districts according to (their sizes and) various factors in order to determine an economic and technical plan for them, to build material and technical bases for them, to give them technical equipment, and to provide cadres -- technical and managerial cadres -- for them. In summation, it is imperative that all the sectors at the central level and all the provinces must regard districts as centers where technical equipment will be provided for agriculture. They must regard building material and technical bases for districts as building material and technical bases for agricultural production cooperatives in order to gradually establish an agroindustrial economic structure in districts with realistic results.

3. BUILD NEW SOCIALIST RURAL AREAS

The practice of a product-contract system in agricultural cooperatives and the building of districts and new socialist rural areas are closely related. For some decades now, the north has been building new socialist rural areas. At present, this is being carried out on a national scale. The results obtained in building the northern rural areas economically, culturally and socially and in terms of a new type of men are very encouraging. These results are the flowers of our country's socialism. They eloquently testify to the fine objective of our party and state, which is to build a bountiful, happy and healthy life for the people at a time when the national economy has not fully developed and when the production force is not yet strong enough. Foreigners who visit our cooperativized countryside have expressed surprise and admiration at the new population centers, housing areas, schools and public health centers, and so forth. All the tasks that we have performed to implement the new contractual system in agriculture and to build districts and new socialist rural areas are closely connected with one another. It is necessary that we kill two birds with one stone. Moreover, these are theoretical and practical matters worthy of our attention. All comrades of agricultural and economic sectors and of the party and state agencies either at the central or local level are dutybound to participate in this revolutionary cause. Those who conduct research in the natural and social sciences, work for the press or perform in the cultural and artistic fields must contribute to this great revolution that is taking place daily in front of our eyes. If all of us concentrate properly on accelerating this revolution, we will certainly make valuable developmental steps in the revolution. These steps will be more valuable than ever before because we are encountering a host of difficulties in our economy and livelihood. By accelerating the new contract movement properly, while at the same time striving to gradually resolve all the problems arising from the movement, we will make an important step toward developing agricultural production and building districts and the new socialist countryside which constitutes an area of stable support for the SRV in its building and defending socialism and a valuable mainstay in the socialist industrialization of our country.

4. DISTRIBUTION OF THE WORK FORCE ON A NATIONAL SCALE

Manpower is the most valuable asset of every socialist country. Rationally redistributing the work force on a national scale in order to exploit land, jungles, seas and other natural resources of the country to the fullest is a demand in our fundamental strategy to develop vigorously and steadily the agricultural sector and some other economic sectors.

In the current situation of our country, we must gradually reduce the overconcentration of people in the Red River Delta, where the land area is very small, and must redistribute the work force to those sparsely-populated areas where the land is vast and fertile and where there are conditions to expand the areas under cultivation. Ha Nam Ninh is a case in point where there is an annual population increase of 10,000 people or so. Responsible comrades over there have sent many people to build new economic zones. The number of people who have been sent, however, is very small compared with the rate of population growth. What has happened in this province -- as well as in other overpopulated provinces in the Red River Delta where land is scarce -- will further worsen the country's irrational distribution of population and labor and the waste of manpower and land. Therefore, along with maintaining a rational rate of population growth through the practice of family planning, we must attach great importance to the redistribution of the population on a national scale. Under a socialist regime, an intelligent, brave and creative people as us will never allow the irrational distribution of population and manpower to be prolonged. We must be very strict with this problem. All the leadership and authoritative organs at the central level must urgently and seriously study this problem while preparing plans for the next 5 and 10 years.

This is a great, difficult and complex task which requires determination, perseverance and great efforts in terms of organization, management, leadership and investment. In other words, it requires the adoption of uniform and effective measures. We should select several provinces and districts as places from or to which people will be sent. In accordance with the "state and people work together" spirit, the state must do its utmost to contribute to the redistribution of the work force on a national scale, while the people in those localities involved in the sending and receiving of people must make active contributions regarding this task.

This is a strategic arrangement beneficial to the economic, social, defense and security domains which must be implemented immediately and on a long-term basis. It could be a permanent arrangement applicable to the younger generations of the Vietnamese people for their comfortable and happy lives forever.

Every one of us -- comrades from the central agencies to comrades of provincial, district and cooperative levels or those who are carrying out tasks relating to cooperatives, agriculture, districts, rural areas and those who work in the fields of information, press, literature and art -- must realize that it is our duty to contribute to this important revolutionary movement. At the same time, we must not overlook our mistakes, shortcomings, unsatisfactory work and failures in the movement. We must maintain a high degree of vigilance against these deviations. Reality has proven that mistakes and shortcomings -- sometimes serious -- cannot be avoided in a broad mass movement which develops quickly. As a result, we must watch for and promptly discover all shortcomings and deviations and then overcome them. Our party requires us to hold discussions to achieve unanimity and acquire a united impetus and action from all echelons. This will give strength to the implementation of party lines.

The VCP Central Committee and the government want us to make our utmost efforts to contribute optimally to the present revolutionary movement in the rural areas. We must follow, gradually evaluate and summarize the activities of this movement in order to acknowledge at the proper time all achievements for the public and, at the same time, discover deviations for prompt action.

That's what the situation is! That's what the problem is! Let us strive to fulfill our responsibilities!

NHAN DAN LAUDS PROSPECTS FOR REVOLUTION

BK130544 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 31 Dec 81

[NHAN DAN 1 January editorial: "Glorious Prospects for the Vietnamese Revolution"]

[Text] Under a stalwart revolutionary impetus to transform the situation, we begin the new year with new struggles to continually advance our people's revolution.

The 1.7 million communist party members in various production, combat and work units and on the fronts of socialist construction and national defense have held congresses to prepare the documents to be presented at the Fifth National VCP Congress. The party organizations at the district and precinct or equivalent levels are holding congresses of their delegates.

The unanimity of cadre conferences at all levels and of the congresses at the grassroots as well as district and precinct levels concerning the responsibility for developing the tasks, guidelines and objectives of the revolution in the immediate future and in the 1980's will firmly secure the success of these congresses. The 11th Plenum of the VCP Central Committee has determined the program of action and the second session of the Seventh National Assembly has formulated the economic and cultural development plans and the 1982 State Plan.

In a situation characterized by complicated developments and serious difficulties, the identity of views among leading agencies, grassroots-level organizations and the vanguard body of the revolution as well as the highest institution of state power on the fundamental situation of the country and the direction of advancement eloquently demonstrates the steadiness and development potentials of our country's revolution.

The victories of the revolution are the results of our struggles, which have been full of difficulties and hardships. The history of nations and mankind has never before witnessed such straightforward steps toward development. The struggle of our nation is very great because of the many battles it has fought and the sacrifices it has made to defeat the large and cruel forces of imperialist aggression -- especially the U.S. imperialists -- fulfill the historic missions of the national revolution for the people's democracy, advance the entire country to socialism and contribute to liberation cause of all nations.

Building socialism in a backward agricultural country ravaged by several long wars and at a time when we are faced with the threat of a new war and must be always ready to cope with the danger of an imminent aggression and the subversive envelopment of hostile forces constitutes an extremely difficult undertaking.

Due to the correct party line, the revolutionary stalwartness of our people and armed forces and great international assistance and support, we have defeated the Chinese aggressors, fulfilled our international obligations, strengthened our national defense and security forces, gradually reorganized our national economy along socialist lines, restored our economy, developed our culture and built some important material bases of socialism.

The victories and successes of the revolution are fundamental and of long-term significance. Nevertheless, there still are many important and urgent tasks which we have not been able to fulfill as expected by all the people in order to ensure the livelihood of the people, especially workers, cadres and poor urban people. Specifically, the revolution and the national administration is still faced with many outstanding problems. A large number of the revolutionary and social forces have degenerated.

The reality of the revolution at present is that there have been both successes and difficulties and that, along with correctness and creativity, there have been errors and shortcomings. The basic situation and trend, however, is one marked by success and an advance in the right direction of socialism.

Reviewing its recent steps, our party, fully showing its sense of responsibility to the country and people, has emphatically affirmed the victories of the revolution while severely criticizing its own errors and shortcomings. It is now applying effective measures to strengthen its guidance and managerial work in order to alter the situation quickly, build a healthier economic and social life, effect a change for the better in the cause of building socialism and stabilizing and advancing toward gradually improving the people's living conditions.

Since the Sixth Plenum of the VCP Central Committee, many undertakings of the party and the state have gradually progressed in the right direction and have yielded practical results. On the production front, agriculture, local industry, some central industrial sectors and a number of construction sites have shown a distinctly upward trend. This progress is only an initial step, however. Conservatism and sluggishness remain rather serious in the managerial apparatus and must be done away with, the sooner the better.

The 10th and 11th Plenums of the VCP Central Committee and the second session of the Seventh National Assembly definitively affirmed that, given the existing capabilities of the economy, if we update our organizations, revamp our managerial apparatuses, promote the people's spirit of collective mastery and actively labor and practice thrift, we will be certainly able to satisfy the immediate demands and prepare for a new developmental step in the cause of national construction.

Resolving the problems of food, clothing, housing, education and health at all costs is the immediate objective of the struggle for the victory of socialism. These socioeconomic targets, which are of important political significance, must become the program of action of all agricultural and industrial production units, of each cooperative and enterprise, each district, precinct, province and city, and each economic and cultural sector -- that is, our entire party and people.

To implement such a minimum program of action successfully, the independence and creativity of each unit and each locality must be guaranteed. All unsuitable forms of restriction in the organizational and managerial system must be removed. The harmonious combination between the interests of the laborer, the collective and the country and between the common efforts of the state and those of the people will certainly serve as the premise for the creation of a new strength and a revolutionary movement throughout society.

Our country's potentials are very great. Our people's revolutionary energy is abundant. Our momentary difficulties are surmountable. The established guideline for the development of the revolution is correct. We have every necessary material and moral condition for successfully building socialism and firmly defending the socialist fatherland.

In the past, the communists, starting their undertaking from scratch, resolutely asserted that by following the revolutionary road of the era, the Vietnamese people would surely win back their independence and freedom. Today, we also resolutely assert that a prosperous, strong and socialist Vietnam and a decent, happy and civilized life will certainly become a reality. Under the slogan "All for the socialist fatherland, for the people's happiness," let all of us valiantly march forward.

VAN TIEN DUNG ATTENDS SRV-GDR SOCCER MATCH

OW261650 Hanoi VNA in English 1528 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 26 -- The junior army soccer team of the German Democratic Republic played against the Vietnam Army Club here this afternoon. The match was watched, among others, by General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and minister of national defence; Lieutenant General Phung The Tai, deputy chief of the General Staff of the Vietnam People's Armed Forces; and Ta Quang Chien, deputy general director of the General Department for Physical Culture and Sports. The guest eleven won two-nil.

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 019 28 January 1982

JAPAN

Text of 25 Jan Suzuki Policy Speech to Diet C 1
Research Institute Issues Report on Soviet Union C 6
LDP To Ease 67 Nontariff Trade Barriers C 8

NORTH KOREA

Reunification Proposal Called 'Splittist Plot' D 1
[NODONG SINMUN 28 Jan]
RENMIN RIBAO Cited on Kim Il Talk on Reunification D 4
Election Committees Start Work for Seventh SPA D 4
Kim Yong-nam Heads KWP Delegation to Thailand D 4
NODONG SINMUN on KWP Role in People's Struggle [23 Jan] D 5

SOUTH KOREA

Unification Body Hits North Attitude on Proposal E 1
Chon Urges 'Prudent' Foreign Exchange Policy E 1
[KOREA HERALD 28 Jan]

KAMPUCHEA

Leaders' Messages Mark Indian National Day H 1
Heng Samrin Greeting H 1
Chan Si Greeting H 1
Hun Sen Greeting H 1
Soy Keo Pays Visit to VPA 'Frontline' Post H 2
Kong Srun Presents Report on Battambang in 1981 H 2
Khieu Samphan Visit to Sisophon Reported [VODK] H 3
Nuon Chea Visit to South Battambang Noted [VODK] H 3
Ieng Sary Holds Talks With Japanese Group [VODK] H 4
Demonstrations in Canada Against SRV Reported [VODK] H 5
PRC Journalists Interview Khieu Samphan [cross-reference] H 5
AFP: Son Sann Discusses DK Coalition Rejection H 5

LAOS

Kaysone Addresses Oudomsai Party Congress I 1
Mekong Committee Delegation Returns From Meeting I 8

THAILAND

Official on Naval Buildup in Kampuchean Waters J 1
[POST 28 Jan]
Prospects for Kampuchean Coalition Plan Viewed J 1
[NATION REVIEW 25 Jan]
Government Narcotics Suppression Drive Discussed J 2
Police Chief's Remarks J 2
Editorials on Drive J 2

Former CPT Front Spokesman Interviewed J 4
[NATION REVIEW 13 Jan]
Commentary on Interview J 6
Briefs: EEC 1981 Aid; Orders for Rice J 6

VIETNAM

Death of Soviet Leader Mikhail Suslov Noted K 1
Party-State Condolences K 1
28 Jan NHAN DAN Article K 1
NHAN DAN Hails Award of Lenin Order to Leaders [27 Jan] K 2
Leaders Pay Tet Visits Throughout Country K 3
Issue of Nam Bo Landless Peasants Examined K 4
[TAP CHI CONG SAN December]
Tasks of Armed Forces in New Stage Explained K 6
[TAP CHI CONG SAN December]
Vo Van Kiet Speaks at Conference on Youth K 11
VFF Preparatory Committee Holds First Meeting K 11
Pham Van Dong Receives UNICEF Representatives K 12
Do Muoi Inspects Pha Lai Powerplant Construction K 12
Pham Hung Talks With Public Security Forces K 12
Pham Hung Visits Units in Ho Chi Minh City K 14
Pham Hung Visits Ho Chi Minh City Security Unit K 14
Pham Hung Visits Sites in Hau Giang Province K 15
Nguyen Van Linh at Ho Chi Minh City Gathering K 15
VFF Get-Together Held for Vietnamese From Japan K 15
Khmer Minority Said To Improve Lifestyle K 16
Le Duan Letter Praises Coal Sector Successes K 16
Vietnamese Democratic Party Holds Conference K 17
Anniversary of Indian National Day Marked K 17
Pham Van Dong Message K 17
Truong Chinh Message K 18
VCP Greets 11th Indian Communist Congress K 18
Hanoi Greets People of PRC on Spring Festival K 18
SRV-PRK Amity Group Head Sends Greetings K 19
GDR Labor Delegation Signs Cooperation Protocol K 19
Delegation Concludes Visit K 19
Achievements in Mental Health Care Reviewed K 20
[VIETNAM COURIER]

TEXT OF 25 JAN SUZUKI POLICY SPEECH TO DIET

OW251345 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0404 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Prime Minister Suzuki's policy speech delivered at the resumption of the 96th Regular Diet Session on 25 January -- live]

[Text] As we resume the 96th Regular Diet Session, I would like to express my views on immediate internal and external problems.

The year 1982 has dawned amid a heightening of international tension, as epitomized by the situation in Poland. There still is no sign of relaxation in sight of the tension between East and West, the most fundamental problem since the end of World War II; and a lasting world peace is still far off. The Western industrialized nations are still beset by many difficulties, such as worsening inflation, slackening business, increasing unemployment and unbalanced international trade. A worldwide slowdown of economic development and increasing trade frictions have now emerged to threaten the future of the free trade principle. In addition, economic management of the developing countries has fallen short of expectations and it will require still more effort and support to help them extricate themselves from poverty and social unrest.

On the other hand, Japan has maintained a stable economic growth, registered a low unemployment rate and shown a very stable trend in commodity prices, whereas many other countries have shown two-digit rises. It is no exaggeration to say that Japan, enjoying freedom, peace and prosperity in a world now beset by many causes of unrest, is one of the most blessed countries. With the nation richly endowed with ingenuity and vitality, Japan is steadily laying the ground for the 21st century, including in the frontier fields of science and technology. On this foundation, built by the wisdom and efforts of the nation, we must build a more mature and more open society. To this end, I believe that, as our particularly urgent tasks, we need, first, to further accelerate the implementation of administrative and financial reforms and, next, to resolve international economic frictions.

Since I took the helm of government, I have been grappling with administrative and financial reforms with a view to restoring soundness in finance and making administration suit the new age by conducting a drastic review. In the days ahead, I am determined to continue to further promote them as the most important task of the Cabinet.

On the other hand, today, as international interdependence is further deepending, it is Japan's obligation as an influential member of the international community to hold rising protectionism in check and to contribute to preserving and expanding free trade as well as to stimulating and developing the world economy. To this end, I intend to strive, first of all, to help further open up the Japanese market on a voluntary basis, and thus smooth our trade relations with other countries.

I will now state my basic views regarding important policies of the government. As regards administrative reforms, the Provisional Council for the Survey of Administrative Reforms submitted its first package of recommendations last July. Paying utmost attention to this package and making it basic policy to implement the required policies at an early date, the government had the Diet enact the so-called special bill on administrative reforms at its earlier extraordinary session dealing with matters requiring legislation. As for other matters, the government is also trying its best to carry them out in the fiscal 1982 budget. This year a package of recommendations concerning the readjustment and rationalization of licensing and authorization procedures is scheduled to be presented before long, and another package of full-dress basic recommendations sometime around summer. I am determined to devote more energy than previously to the administrative reforms, a matter of deep concern for the nation. [applause]

I think that it is impossible to carry out the administrative reforms without the nation's trust in government and administration. For this reason, I will strive to further establish political ethics and official discipline so as to prevent incurring the nation's distrust in the execution of the budget and in all other areas of government and administration. I am aware of the fact that the Diet is deliberating on a reform of the national constituency system for the House of Councillors and various other plans to promote the further development of parliamentary democracy. In this connection, I eagerly hope that prompt improvements will be made.

Next, I will speak about the rehabilitation of finance. In formulating the fiscal 1982 budget, the government has striven to pare expenditures as thoroughly as possible on the basis of the first package of recommendations presented by the Provisional Council for the Survey of Administrative Reforms and the so-called zero ceiling. As a result, the government was able to peg the rate of increase in general expenditures, except for national bond expenditures and local allocation taxes, in the general account budget at 1.8 percent, making it the first tight-money budget since 1955.

In the area of revenues the government has striven to increase nontax income, and in the area of the taxation system it has carried out readjustment and rationalization of special taxation measures and a review of taxation on social expenses. As a result of these measures, the total of public bonds to be issued in 1982 has been set at 20,440 billion yen [figure as heard], a decrease of 1,830 billion yen from the original budget for the preceding fiscal year. As a result of this, the dependence of the budget on public bonds has dropped from 26.2 percent in the original budget for the preceding fiscal year to as low as 21 percent.

Although the fiscal 1982 budget is very austere, the government has tried its best to allocate financial resources to priority areas and has paid particular attention to energy measures, the development of science and technology, economic cooperation and the buildup of the defense potential -- areas which need to be given more substance from the mid- and long-range viewpoint. The government has also paid careful attention to social insurance and education and has worked out plans to give more substance to measures for the economically and socially underprivileged, such as by planning the enforcement of a health care system for the aged, strengthening at-home welfare services for senior citizens and expanding measures for the mentally and/or physically handicapped.

In the supplementary budget for fiscal 1981, the government proposes to issue an additional 630 billion yen in public bonds. This is indeed an inevitable measure to cover the expenses for the rehabilitation of disaster areas requiring a colossal amount and to make up for revenue shortfalls incidental to a decrease in tax income that was not anticipated at the outset of the fiscal year. However, this will entail no change whatsoever in the basic policy of financial rebuilding. [applause] On this matter, I would like to say this again clearly, here and now, and ask for the nation's understanding and further cooperation in administrative and financial reforms. [applause]

Now, taking a look at the present situation of the Japanese economy, it is hard to expect the high growth rate we once achieved, but it is showing a smooth trend as compared with other industrially advanced nations that suffer from inflation and unemployment caused by the second oil crisis. However, the expansion of domestic demand still remains sluggish, and a disparity can be found in business recovery according to the type of business, according to area and in terms of scale. Meanwhile, we depend on trade for the major portion of our economic growth. This present situation is by no means a desirable one.

Today, as national finance is unable to play the role it played before in expanding business, it is important that activity in housing construction, investments in private facilities, technical reform and other private sectors produce the maximum effect. It is necessary to work out plans to boost domestic demand and stabilize employment of steadily expanding consumption on the basis of stable prices in addition to similar economic activities in the private sector. To this end, the government plans to exercise care in stabilizing commodity prices, applying monetary policies flexibly, and giving consideration to unaided projects of local autonomies as well, thus ensuring a good environment and properly running economy. By so doing the government plans to harmoniously carry out economic policies both at home and abroad.

To maintain and foster the vitality of our economy and society and to help invigorate the economic activities of the private sector, which is richly endowed with creativity, it is necessary to work out measures to help preserve amicable labor-capital relations, stabilize the management of small and medium businesses and enable them to properly cope with changes in the economic environment.

In the agricultural area, the government will strive to reorganize agricultural production and enhance productivity from a long-range viewpoint and work out measures to maintain and strengthen self-sufficiency in food. The government will also strive to develop fisheries by coping with the new age, and to promote forestry by preserving forest resources.

Next, I will focus on our measures to cope with the international community. This year we will mark the 30th anniversary of the San Francisco peace treaty. The Japan-U.S. security arrangement, established along with the conclusion of the treaty, has consistently served as the foundation for safeguarding the peace and security of Japan. This is a fact recognized by the majority of the people. Today, thanks to efforts of both sides, the Japan-U.S. relationship has become a very firm one. However, continuing to develop this mature relationship between Japan and the United States is of utmost importance not only for Japan and the United States, but for the peace and prosperity of the international community.

It is safe to say that the development of Japan as we enjoy it today is the fruit of the untiring efforts of its people and the result of the cooperation between Japan and the countries of the world including the United States, the West European countries, other advanced democracies and the Asian and Pacific nations. With this cognizance, I have been striving to carry out active diplomatic efforts to contribute to the stability and development of the international community as a whole.

My tour of the ASEAN nations, the United States and the West European countries and my attendance at the Ottawa summit meeting of major industrial nations and the North-South summit conference last year were an important link in this active diplomacy. I have been striving for the steady development of our relations with China under similar considerations. Because this year marks the 10th anniversary of the normalization of diplomatic relations between Japan and China, I would, in particular, like to bring about an exchange of mutual visits between the Chinese premier and I. I also wish to further strengthen and develop our relations with the ASEAN member nations, which are important forces of stability in Asia.

I think that it is important to build our relations with the ROK, our closest neighbor, on the basis of a broad national foundation and a deeper mutual understanding. Regarding the question of economic cooperation that has been pending since last year, I intend to strive for a satisfactory settlement of this issue with a view to rendering as much cooperation as possible in accordance with our basic policy for economic cooperation.

Economic cooperation is an important area to which Japan should contribute in the international community. Through my tour of the member nations last year, I was able to witness with my own eyes that Japan's economic cooperation is greatly contributing to those nations with a high spirit of self-help in their national construction.

In order to continue to assist in the economic and social development of developing countries and to help improve their national livelihood and welfare, the government plans to strive for expanded assistance under a new medium-range goal and play an active role for the peace and prosperity of the world.

In recent years the situation involving external economic relations has become increasingly severe. For its part, Japan should strive to prevent protectionism, preserve and strengthen free trade and work out measures for further opening up its market and promoting the import of manufactured goods. It was based on this cognizance that, in inaugurating a new Cabinet recently, I issued instructions on a package deal policy of reducing tariff rates.

One of the important diplomatic tasks facing Japan is improving Japan-Soviet relations. Regrettably, however, due to the Soviet military buildup in the northern territories of our country, its military intervention in Afghanistan, the Polish situation, etc, the relationship between the two countries remains in a difficult situation. The government strongly urges an early correction of these situations and plans to tenaciously continue talking with the Soviet side with a view to concluding a peace treaty after resolving the northern territories issue and establishing stable relations based on true mutual understanding between the two countries.

The Polish situation is now seriously affecting the peace and stability of the world. Above all, it is important that the situation in Poland be independently resolved by the Polish people themselves without any outside intervention. For its part, Japan wishes to strive for the improvement of the situation through close contacts and consultations with the United States and the West European nations.

In January of this year, the refugee treaty, which has been a pending issue for many years, came into effect. The government plans to make it an occasion to work out and substantiate measures for refugees from a humanitarian viewpoint.

To ensure the security and development of Japan under the volatile international situation, the government plans to pay particular attention to carrying out active foreign policies to cope with the turn of events.

How our country should decide on its national defense in order to preserve prosperity in peace constitutes the fundamental question of state administration, one which requires the serious evaluation of everyone. Defense is a question bearing upon the survival of the nation. Therefore, it is above all, important that a national consensus be formed and defense endorsed by its support. In the present international community, it is difficult for a country to ensure its security by itself. In the case of Japan, we must ensure national security by voluntarily maintaining a defense potential of an appropriate scale and also by holding fast to the security arrangements with the United States.

It is a due obligation imposed on us that Japan, as an influential member of the Free World, steadily enhance its defense potential to the minimum necessary within constitutional limits and with the resolve to defend itself, on its own, initally. [applause] To this end, I am resolved to strive to bring Japan's defense potential to the level envisaged under the defense program outline as soon as possible while staying completely within the bounds of self-defense in keeping with Japan's basic defense policy, without posing a military threat to neighboring countries and holding fast to the three nonnuclear principles.

Of course, the peace and security of a nation cannot be ensured by simply beefing up defense potential. To preserve peace, it is necessary that Japan, which depends on overseas sources for most of its resources, energy, food and other needs, establish a comprehensive security policy for carrying out all policies through coordination. This is the basic policy I have consistently pursued since my inauguration.

It is an undeniable fact that today's internatonal community rests upon a balance of power. However, if this should result in both the East and West continuing a race for arms buildup, there would be no room to hope for the happiness of mankind. While recognizing the reality that the balance of power is backing up peace and stability, we must strive to maintain the balance and, at the same time, continue efforts to hold it at as low a level as possible.

Disarmament and arms control are tasks the world must unanimously strive to accomplish, and the reserve energy to accrue from that accomplishment should be directed toward cooperation with developing countries and the development of the world economy. Otherwise, a true peace cannot be realized. This is the view concerning which I have appealed to the top leaders of nations at summit meetings of major industrial nations, the North-South summit conference and in other arenas. The Second Special UN General Assembly Session on Disarmament, scheduled for June this year, will be a rare opportunity to further promote such endeavors on an international scale. Therefore, I plan to attend it in person and strongly appeal for the acceleration of disarmament centering on nuclear disarmament from the position of Japan as a peaceful country.

On the energy issue, as a result of all-out efforts by the government and the civilian sector, our dependence on petroleum in energy needs fell below the 70-percent level last year for the first time in 11 years. Thanks to the easing of the supply-demand situation and stable oil prices, as well as this decreased oil dependence, the energy supply situation is stable.

Nevertheless, the weakness in our nation's oil supply, which is subject to the changing Middle East situation, remains virtually unchanged. It is all the more necessary for us to work out medium- and long-term energy policies in this relatively stable period. To this end, the government will strive to secure a stable oil supply and promote thoroughgoing energy conservation by strengthening friendly relations with oil-producing nations and increasing oil stockpiles. At the same time, the government will make comprehensive efforts to develop and introduce alternate energies, such as the promotion of atomic power generation and the use of coal, LNG and solar energy, while paying full attention to safety and environmental protection.

Although not blessed with oil and other important resources, we can make the future of our country secure by training an upcoming generation with creative human resources and developing science and technology through a full utilization of our people's intelligence. Japan is already in the forefront of technology in electronics, industrial robots and similar fields. But it will be necessary in the future to exert efforts in basic studies, as well as in fields such as space, life science and new materials technologies, which are expected to occupy a key place in science and technology in the future.

With this awareness, I will pool the efforts of all our people through mutual cooperation among the industrial and academic circles and the government to tackle the task of developing science and technology for the creation of a new age, to move our industries into more advanced fields and to make our people's living still more abundant. At the same time, we want to actively contribute to the development of international society through science and technology.

In the early part of the 21st century, our society is expected to become a type of aging society, which no other nation will have experienced. Problems confronting an aging society are not limited to welfare measures to be taken for the aged. We must cope with these problems in a comprehensive manner by coordinating measures in a wide range of fields, such as welfare, labor, industry, education, housing and local peculiarities, without confining ourselves to conventional ideas.

To this end, it is necessary, first of all, to enable elderly citizens to live each day in good health and with a sense of fulfillment. The old age insurance bill currently under deliberation in the Diet will mark the first step toward an old age insurance system for the future. So I urge you to pass the bill soon. As for the annuity system, we plan to make a detailed study of the entire system in anticipation of the time when the aging process of the population will reach its peak, in 30 to 40 years.

The employment problem is of particular importance in maintaining the vitality of society. Taking employment measures for the aged, including early introduction of a system of retirement at age 60, has become an immediate necessity, and the government is endeavoring to push these measures. In a maturing society, the community as a whole, as well as each individual, is required to have consideration for others and allow some latitude. Therefore, we must take various measures to ensure safety in our daily lives, build easily accessible public facilities and comfortable living space and prevent the pollution of our environment. The question of harmony between nature and human activity must be considered from a global point of view, not from a regional or national point of view.

Furthermore, to make our society one rich with creativity, I look forward to women's activities in particular, and will pay attention to problems of the mind, namely, cultivation of fine human qualities. Seen from this point of view, the ever-increasing incidence of juvenile delinquency in our peaceful, wholesome society is indeed a matter of serious concern. I think that in order for society to become bright and filled with hope, the entire community, including the schools, must make concerted efforts to raise youth and children into a wholesome generation from infancy. In particular, we have to remedy the kind of social environment apt to corrupt our youth and children. We must make utmost efforts to prevent our society from becoming one in which crime and use of narcotics are rampant. I urge each of our citizens to pool his efforts with others to build a society that prizes culture and tradition and that is filled with the warmness of humanity.

I have thus far outlined government measures designed to protect our people's livelihood and carry out effective international cooperation in this fluid, changing world. None of the multitudinous problems at home and abroad are easy to tackly. However, affluent and peaceful Japan as we see it today has been built by the wisdom and efforts of each citizen living in a free society; and these efforts and wisdom, I believe, are the motive force for blazing a new path for our country for tomorrow. Realizing the immenseness of my responsibilities, I will renew my determination to solve our problems at home and abroad so that I can live up to your expectations. I ask for your understanding and cooperation.

RESEARCH INSTITUTE ISSUES REPORT ON SOVIET UNION

OW260359 Tokyo KYODO in English 0342 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, 26 Jan (KYODO) -- The Soviet Union will be forced to rely more on military power to maintain its position as a superpower in the years ahead, according to a study released this week by a Japanese research institute.

But the study claims worsening economic problems will force a slowdown in Moscow's military buildup by the end of the 1980's.

The report, "An Evaluation of the Comprehensive National Strength of the Soviet Union," was prepared by the Japan Institute of International Affairs, headed by former Japanese Ambassador to Moscow Toru Nakagawa. It was begun at the direction of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki last September, following publication of the 1981 defense white paper with its emphasis on what it termed "the growth of the latent Soviet threat." Suzuki called for a comprehensive analysis of economic, scientific, social and other indicators of Soviet stability. The two main questions addressed by the study are how long the Soviet Union can maintain its rapid military buildup, and how powerful the country is in relative terms in the Far East, the Pacific Ocean and other parts of the world.

It found the Soviet Union is pursuing an "idiosyncratic" economic policy that sacrifices future economic growth to current military needs. The growth [of] weapons procurements, which ran at about 5 percent in the late 1970's, has been boosted to between 7 and 8 percent. However, with total military expenditures including personnel costs growing at an annual rate of 6.5 to 7 percent, well in excess of total growth in GNP (gross national product), the study predicted that the flagging economy will force procurement rates down to the 4 percent level in the second half of the decade.

Overall, the report concludes, it is no longer possible for Moscow to seek growth in both its consumer and military economies. The Russian economy is facing a grave crisis in agriculture and energy, the report continued, predicting that exports of Soviet oil to its European satellites will have to be sharply curtailed in the later 1980's. The ensuing economic difficulties, combined with the situation in Poland, could force the Soviets to reassess their control of Eastern Europe, the study said.

Meanwhile, the minimal progress in the production of consumer durables coupled with food shortages and other fallout from the emphasis on military production will leave the Soviet public increasingly out of step with its leadership. The study predicted that over the long-term consumer dissatisfaction could erode political authority and the power base of the Communist Party.

The report raised the possibility of an increasingly intense internal debate over the distribution of resources, and warned that ample consideration must be taken of the effects of the transfer of power from Leonid Brezhnev and other aging Soviet leaders to a younger set of rulers.

The Soviet Union could take an increasingly belligerent foreign policy if the military consolidates its position further in the succession struggle, it said.

In its regional overview, the report stressed that the deployment of Soviet SS-20 missiles and Backfire bombers is changing the theater nuclear balance in the Far East. Moreover, the report said, there are some factors conducive to a reconciliation between Moscow and Peking, making it dangerous to automatically assume that the military confrontation between the two communist giants will continue.

Japan's ability to withstand the political and military pressure of the Soviet Union will depend on its will to defend itself, the report said. It predicted that Moscow will try every political ploy to exploit any suggestion of a break between Japan and the United States, especially over the question of Japan's share of the defense burden.

The study called for Japan to increase its military strength, and particularly its naval and air defense capability. It said Japan should secure its sealanes, while not in any way weakening the deterrent power of U.S. forces in the Far East.

LDP TO EASE 67 NONTARIFF TRADE BARRIERS

OW261147 Tokyo KYODO in English 1121 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26 (KYODO) -- The ruling Liberal-Democratic Party decided Tuesday to remove or ease 67 "nontariff trade barriers," which Japan has been asked to eliminate by its major trading partners. The number accounts for a majority of a total of 99 nontariff barriers cited by the United States and European nations.

The decision was reached at a meeting of the party's special international trade research committee, chaired by Masumi Esaki, former minister of international trade and industry. The special task force has been studying measures to counter mounting foreign criticisms against Japan's ever-swelling trade surplus.

The government will formally announce the measure after holding a meeting of economic affairs ministers Saturday. It hopes to put it into effect as soon as possible.

The committee also decided to establish a special government panel to deal with foreign complaints about difficulties of selling goods in the Japanese market. Establishment of the panel will also be formally decided at Saturday's economic ministers meeting. The primary task of the special group, tentatively named the office to deal with foreign trade complaints, is to speedily process such foreign complaints.

Based on Tuesday's decision, the government will dispatch Esaki to the United States and the European Common Market in mid-February to explain in detail the Japanese policy on measures to be taken to curtail this country's huge trade surpluses with the two major trading partners.

The 67 nontariff trade barriers which Japan plans to ease or remove mainly concern testing and inspection rules of such items as cars, cosmetics and pharmaceuticals. Of the so-called "barriers," 32 fall under the jurisdiction of the Welfare Ministry, 13 under the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, 10 under the Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Ministry, nine under the Transportation Ministry, six under the Finance Ministry and one each under the Education and Home Affairs Ministries.

REUNIFICATION PROPOSAL CALLED 'SPLITTIST PLOT'

SK280613 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2244 GMT 27 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 28 January commentary: "Splittist Plot To Fabricate Two Koreas With Sham Reunification Signboard"]

[Text] As was reported, in his new year policy speech delivered before the puppet National Assembly on 22 January, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, after delivering a harangue aimed at justifying the terrorist military rule and splittist maneuvers of the past year, advanced a so-called reunification proposal. Now, mobilizing all vile propaganda means, the clique is making a commotion as if the proposal has brought about a new phase for the solution of the reunification question.

While the clique is intent on molding public opinion by mobilizing even its vile overseas organizations, the Mindan, the puppets' stooge in Japan, issued a statement supporting the proposal when it had not been actually announced. This shows that the proposal advanced by the clique is not for reunification but is a means of political propaganda worked out to mislead public opinion. Clear evidence of this is the content of the reunification proposal.

As was reported, the main point of the proposal is the holding of a so-called general election, calling for the achievement of reunification by organizing a legislature and establishing a unified government through a general election and referendums on a constitution drafted by a Consultative Conference for National Reunification to be formed with participants from the North and the South representing the views of residents of the two sides.

The clique's proposal for a general election is a political trick intended to oppose reunification while advocating reunification with the facade of an election. The clique demands that the general election be held in accordance with the principle of national self-determination and democratic procedures. However, it is defilement of national self-determination and democracy to babble about national self-determination while leaving half of the national territory trampled under the military boots of occupation troops by begging for the permanent presence of the aggressive forces of the U.S. imperialists and to babble about democracy while creating a terrorist atmosphere by making war commotions and by violating human and civil rights through the outrageous terrorist military rule.

The proposal for the formation of a Consultative Council for National Reunification with participants representing the views of the residents of the two sides is contemptuous empty political talk deriding public opinion. No matter how loudly the clique may clamor about the people's opinion, no one will believe it as long as it continues to ban political activities for democratization of society and reunification of the nation and continues to imprison and confine democratic personages, including Kim Tae-chung. The most realistic and reasonable way to rejoin the severed national relations of our country is to achieve reunification of the fatherland by establishing a confederal state while leaving the two systems of the North and South intact, as was proposed by our party.

It is nothing more than a farce aimed at concealing splittist schemes that the South Korean puppets ignore our proposal which has illuminated a shortcut to reunification of the fatherland, making commotions by coming forth with a unrealistic proposal for a general election without any measures of assurance.

The splittist nature of the so-called proposal of the puppet traitor was more fully disclosed by the proposal for conclusion of a provisional agreement on basic relations between the North and the South which he put forward as a practical arrangement leading to reunification. For the achievement of independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, misunderstanding and distrust between North and South must be eliminated, national harmony achieved, and the barriers between North and South destroyed.

Nevertheless, the puppet traitor's proposal for a provisional agreement envisages further raising the barriers between North and South and perpetuation of the division between North and South. For instance, it envisages maintenance of the existing armistice system, respect for international treaties and agreements concluded with other countries, and establishment of a resident liaison mission in both sides through appointment of plenipotentiary envoys with the rank of Cabinet minister.

The proposal means the continued presence of U.S. troops in South Korea, the maintenance of the aggressive and treacherous ROK-U.S. mutual defense treaty and the ROK-Japan treaty and the treatment of relations between North and South as those between two states. If such things become reality, the barriers obstructing reunification will be further heightened and Korea will face a danger of permanently remaining as two states and nations.

The proposal for the provisional agreement babbled about by the puppet traitor is exactly a copy of the German method, which has legalized the existence of two states. Thus it is nothing but a plot to perpetuate the division of our country and realize two Koreas through an agreement between North and South.

As far as reunification is concerned, the case of the two German states and the case of the North and the South of our country are basically different in nature. The German question is one of a country that has been divided because it was defeated after participating in a war of aggression. But Korea has never participated in a war of aggression and is not a defeated country. The Korean question is one to end the division artificially imposed by foreign forces. It is all too clear that the Korean question cannot be dealt with in the same way the German case was handled. In reality, both sides in Germany favor the status quo of division. Besides, the European countries adjacent to Germany do not desire that Germany be reunified and that it become powerful militarily. Those countries worry that Germany may again become an aggressive force if it became militarily powerful. The treaty on relations between the two German states reflects the specific nature of the German situation and the surrounding circumstances.

The case of our country is entirely different from that of Germany. The Korean nation, which has lived as a single nation in a unified state with the same language and culture throughout a long history, has never desired continued division. The reunification of the fatherland is the Korean people's national desire, one that cannot be repressed. Our country was liberated from colonial rule; the neighboring countries think that Korea, even if it is reunified, will not invade another country.

The Asian and world people do not desire that Korea remain a divided country or a permanent threat to peace, but want Korea reunified at an early date and its development as a peace-loving country. In these circumstances, why is an attempt being made to mechanically apply the German method, one for division, to the reunification question of our country? With such a method, the puppet is scheming to lead the country to permanent division by perpetuating national division, by realizing the simultaneous entry of North and South into the United Nations and by cross-recognition. This amounts to an insult to the Germans and a derision of the Korean people.

If the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique truly desires the solution of the reunification question of the country, it should not have come forth with such a splittist proposal camouflaged with a facade of reunification, but should demand that the aggressive forces of the U.S. imperialists, the ringleader of division and the main obstacle to reunification, withdraw from South Korea. As long as the occupation of South Korea by the aggressive forces of the U.S. imperialists and the U.S. imperialists' intervention into its internal affairs continue, the independent solution of the reunification question of the country is impossible.

The stand taken toward the U.S. military occupation of South Korea is a touchstone of whether one desires reunification or permanent division. However, this basic question was never mentioned in the puppet's proposal. What is the use of such a proposal which ignores the basic and top-priority question for the fatherland's reunification?

To achieve reunification of the country, a practical step for democratization of society must be taken. Reunification will be achieved not by any specific person but by the general opinion of the people. Thus, it is a task of the whole nation. If democratic freedom and the rights of the masses of the people, the masters of reunification, are not guaranteed, the reunification question cannot be solved in accordance with the intention and demand of the people.

Nevertheless, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, while babbling about the opinion of the people, did not say a single word about the liquidation of the fascist military rule and the democratization of society in South Korea. It is nothing but deception and paradox which can convince no one to talk about the opinion of the people and reunification while imposing an outrageous fascist rule under which people calling for reunification are sent to prison and punished and the political parties and organizations calling for reunification are dissolved.

For the reunification of the country, in addition, the anticommunist confrontation policy in South Korea must be abandoned and grand national unity sought. Reunification is not a question of swallowing someone or being swallowed by someone. The course of achieving the independent reunification of the fatherland is one of achieving national harmony between North and South and of achieving collaboration and unity. If discord and confrontation instead of collaboration and unity are promoted, not even a single step of progress can be made for the solution of the country's reunification question. As long as the South Korean fascist military elements continue to feverishly seek anticommunism and to promote the sentiment of North-South confrontation, clamoring about victory over communists and the annihilation of communists, no national harmony can be achieved and there can be no approach to reunification.

The withdrawal of the U.S. forces from South Korea, the democratization of South Korean society, and the abandonment of the anticommunist policy -- these are the most fundamental and urgent questions for the solution of the reunification question in accordance with the three principles of the fatherland's reunification: independence, peaceful reunification and grand national unity. To ignore these basic questions and to talk about reunification has no practical meaning and means nothing but the pursuit of permanent division, not reunification.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan's proposal is a deceptive one aimed at seeking a policy of two Koreas under a sham reunification signboard. Thus, it is nothing but a modification for the worse of the splittist 23 June declaration of traitor Pak Chong-hui and is not worth consideration. The puppets' clamor about the so-called proposal is a poor and clumsy trick aimed at thwarting the influence of our proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], which is actively supported and welcomed by many countries and peoples of the world; at escaping from denunciation, rejection and isolation at home and abroad by giving the impression that they are doing something for the reunification of the country and the future of the nation; and at winning popularity among the world's people, including the people of the nonaligned and newly emerging nations.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan's gibberish about reunification only further discloses his nature as a flagrant enemy of reunification and as a member of the shock brigade for the splittist line. It is not by chance that no sooner had the puppets' proposal been announced than it was unanimously denounced and bitterly rejected by fair public opinion in the world.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique must immediately halt the criminal act of deriding the nation over the sacred reunification question. If he truly desires reunification, traitor Chon Tu-hwan must put forward a proposal for the withdrawal of the U.S. forces from South Korea, liquidate the fascist military rule in South Korea, rescind evil laws such as the national security law, take practical steps for the democratization of the society, abandon the anticommunist confrontation policy, and take the road of grand national unity. As far as the present rulers are concerned, they also have an unavoidable obligation to apologize before the nation for the atrocious crimes such as the mass slaughter of compatriots in Kwangju and the bestial arrest, imprisonment and killing of the democratic personages and patriotic people.

The proposal for the establishment of the DCRK is the only reasonable and realistic proposal which has illuminated the best shortcut leading the reunification question of our country to a solution under circumstances in which there are two different ideologies and systems in the North and the South and the surrounding situation of the country is complicated. The Korean people will certainly achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by smashing the splittists' schemes for two Koreas and by implementing the proposal for the establishment of the confederal state.

RENMIN RIBAO CITED ON KIM IL TALK ON UNIFICATION

SK280447 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0332 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Beijing, January 27 (KCNA) -- Chinese mass media gave wide publicity to the talk issued by Comrade Kim Il, vice-president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and chairman of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland, on January 26 in connection with the so-called "unification proposal" brought forward by the South Korean rulers recently.

"PEOPLE'S DAILY" on January 27 reported a detailed summary of the talk under the title "Kim Il on question of Korean reunification in connection with Chon Tu-hwan's new proposal. He declares that the North side of Korea is ready to meet the South Korean authorities, if they made the U.S. troops withdraw, carried out democracy and gave up anti-communist confrontation policy." The XINHUA NEWS AGENCY and Radio Beijing report the talk on January 26.

ELECTION COMMITTEES START WORK FOR SEVENTH SPA

SK240844 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0838 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 24 (KCNA) -- Provincial, city and county election committees were organised for the elections of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea slated for February 28.

The committees started preparations to successfully ensure the elections in accordance with the rules on the election of deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly.

KIM YONG-NAM HEADS KWP DELEGATION TO THAILAND

SK230419 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2203 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 23 (KCNA) -- A delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau, and secretary of the Central Committee of the KWP, left Pyongyang on January 22 by air for a visit to Thailand.

It was seen off at the airport by Comrades Kim Hwan, Kim Ki-nam, Hyon Chun-kuk and Kang Sok-sung and Chinese Ambassador to the DPRK Lu Zhixian.

NODONG SINMUN ON KWP ROLE IN PEOPLE'S STRUGGLE

SK232346 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2217 GMT 22 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 23 January special article: "KWP Is an Organizer and Guide of All the Victories Our People Have Won"]

[Text] Our people are accelerating revolution and construction, upholding the banner of the great chuche idea. Our party is in the vanguard of this great struggle. The history of the KWP is glorious and brilliant. Our people's revolutionary struggle has been led to a great victory. Without the party's leadership, we cannot contemplate the success attained in our people's revolutionary struggle and construction work. Thanks to the KWP's correct leadership, our revolution and construction have advanced without failure. For this reason, our people proudly cheer the slogan: "Long live the KWP! The KWP is the organizer and guide of all the victories of the Korean people!" This slogan reflects the people's endless confidence in the party which has led them to victory. Our people are resolved to follow the party, upholding this slogan.

1. The party of the working class assumes the arduous task to win victory in the cause of socialism and communism by organizing and leading the people. The party is a political leader which illuminates the road ahead of the people and leads them to victory. All of the people's struggles for revolution and construction are organized and led by the party. For the party of the working class, nothing is more important than the mission to organize and lead the people's struggles to victory. The dignity and glory of the party lie in victoriously advancing the revolution and construction under any circumstances. How well the party leads the people's revolutionary struggle is a basic question related to the victory of the revolution and the people's destiny. The struggle of the working class is a difficult and complicated one to stand up to enemies at home and abroad and basically remold nature and society. This struggle can be successfully advanced only through the correct leadership of the party. This is a precious lesson of the revolutionary struggle of the working class.

The KWP is a great party which has always devoted itself to its historic mission as an organizer and guide of all of the people's victories. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our party is the headquarters of the Korean revolution and an organizer and encourager of all of our people's victories. The KWP is a glorious chuche-type revolutionary party founded and led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Our party's intrinsic trait and greatness is in embodying the chuche idea in all activities, regarding the chuche idea as a unitary political guideline. The chuche idea is an invincible revolutionary idea whose justness and vitality have been tested in the long course of implementing the revolution.

Thanks to our party's advancement, upholding the banner of the chuche idea, the Korean revolution is advancing under complicated circumstances, following the path to victory. The KWP has led people to the road of brilliant victory. This is because of its revolutionary nature and leadership in revolution and construction. Our party is a militant vanguard of the Korean working class and working people. To lead the working class and working people to victory, the party should become a vanguard of class. This is because the vanguard of class can protect the interests of the working class and the working people, fulfill their desires and demands, firmly unite, organize and mobilize the people and win victory in the revolutionary struggle and construction work.

Our party stands for the interests of the Korean people and the Korean nation and is energetically struggling for the freedom and happiness of the working peoples. The goal of our party is to build communism -- mankind's ultimate ideal -- under the banner of the great chuche idea. All our party activities are to permit all the Korean people to live in the paradise of socialism and communism by achieving this noble objective. Thanks to such a party, which leads our people, the interests of the working class and working people in our country are being defended, the nation's sovereignty is being defended and all the people are vigorously advancing toward a brilliant future.

The KWP has inherited the brilliant tradition of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, whose objective is to bring about national liberation and class liberation. The tradition of the anti-Japanese revolution is the source of inexhaustible might enabling our party to defend its revolutionary character and advance triumphantly, overcoming all obstacles.

It is chiefly because our party was borne by the deep and tenacious roots of history of the anti-Japanese revolution and is now succeeding and developing a revolutionary tradition that our party commands invincible combat ranks in the struggle to defend the interests of the working class and working people, fearing no trials or ordeals and experiencing no reluctance.

Without the leadership of the KWP, which stands for the true interests of the working people and is carrying out the glorious tradition of struggle for the freedom and liberation of the people, we cannot conceive of any victories in revolution and construction.

The KWP is a revolutionary organization of our country's working class and working people. It is a fundamental demand of the revolution and construction that the party of the working class in power should enjoy a firm position as a leader among the various organizations and apparatuses that constitute the proletariat's dictatorial system and correctly lead all the other organizations.

Only when the party carries out its leadership of the units ready to be mobilized [imjondae] by enhancing its leadership can it fulfill its mission. Our party is enjoying its power as a leading and guiding force in the international proletarian system. Having all the organizations of the working people at its command, it leads them in their activities.

Thanks to the authority of the party and the endless loyalty of the people to the party, our country maintains an orderly work system and revolutionary discipline with which all the organizations and all the people advance following the leadership of the party center.

It is a proud aspect of our society that all the apparatuses and organizations, including the governing organs of all strata, economic and cultural institutions and the People's Army, and the people of the country move as one, firmly defend and safeguard the party and hold it in high esteem.

The authority of our party in the proletarian dictatorial system is absolute. As a result, all the struggles in our country are carried out under the leadership of the party, and the revolution and construction are advancing.

Our party is the headquarters of the Korean revolution which leads all the revolutionary struggles and construction work, assuming full responsibility. It is the duty of the party of the working class to firmly grasp all the work arising in the revolution and construction, organize and lead them. Such a demand is faced more urgently by the party in power.

When power is in the hands of the party, the destiny of the people, their living standard and the future of the revolution depend on the party. For the party to fulfill its responsibilities, it should have all the works in all the fields of the revolution and construction such as political, economic, cultural and military works at its command and correctly lead them. Only such a party can become a great organizer and guide the destiny of the people.

Our party takes full responsibility for all the questions concerning the Korean revolution and our people's life today and in the future. Our party's prudent and energetic guidance extends to all works and units of our revolution and construction. Our people confront tasks to accelerate socialist construction in the northern half of the republic, to reunify the divided nation and establish national sovereignty across the nation and to step up the anti-imperialist cause.

None of these tasks is easy. However, our party is successfully carrying out all historic tasks by taking full responsibility for the people's destiny and the revolution.

The brilliant successes in all fields of the state construction, cultural and economic construction, military tasks and foreign affairs and struggle to step up national reunification and the anti-imperialist cause cannot be considered without our party's leadership. The struggle of our party, leading all the tasks in the revolution and construction to victory, is a brilliant example showing how the party in power, which builds socialism by assuming responsibility for the people's destiny, should play its role and how it should struggle.

A long time has passed since the Worker's Party came into being and led the revolutionary cause. The most precious lesson of history is that the party's leading role in the revolution and construction should not be weakened at all and the party's militant role and functions should be enhanced even as the socialist and communist construction advances.

This is a firm principle we should adhere to in implementing the revolutionary cause of the working class. Our party's greatness and invincibility result from our party's adherence to this revolutionary principle. Nothing is more honorable for our people than to have such a revolutionary party as the KWP, which is faithful to its historic mission and has great authority.

2. The KWP is brilliantly carrying out its role as the organizer and leader of our people's victories. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our party led our people's revolutionary struggle along the single road of victory by upholding the banner of the chuche idea. The party put forward correct lines and policy based on a correct analysis and judgment of the situation. It skillfully organized and mobilized the people in the struggle to implement such lines and policy. The leading role of the Worker's Party is being shown by actual practice of organizing and leading the people's struggle. All the activities of our party leading the revolution and construction to victory are correct and outstanding.

Our party has traversed only the road of victory and glory during the period it has led the revolution and construction. It is an important characteristic of our party to be ever-victorious in the revolution and construction. The main factor in the party's activities for leading the revolution and construction to victory is to correctly establish the lines and policy and outstanding revolutionary potentials are the basic characteristics of our party's activities. Our party is making its lines and policy with insight into the future based on a correct analysis of the requirement and situation created in the development of the revolution.

Therefore, our people have a correct understanding of the future of the revolution and their tasks for struggle. They live and struggle by cherishing optimism and confidence in the future. In our country, no questions or fields in the revolution and construction lack correct lines and policy.

The lines and policy put forward by our party are all just, corresponding to the requirements of the development of revolution and to the people's will. They have a profound scientific and theoretical base. They serve as the unitary guidelines in leading our revolution to victory.

Our party, after putting forth the lines and policy, is implementing them to the end through a very active and persistent struggle. It is an important trait of our party that it carries out its operations boldly and on a large scale, with lofty objectives, organizing the tasks to implement its objectives vigorously. Our party has fulfilled its targets with a firm will to the end. Thus, all the lines and policy of the party have been carried out thoroughly in our country, with good results. The great victory and gains won in the Korean revolution and the progress made in the fatherland vigorously demonstrate the role of our party as an outstanding organizer and leader.

To carry out all activities based on a consistent revolutionary principle is a firm guarantee for our party's leading the revolution and construction to victory. In order for the Worker's Party to fulfill its leading role, it should have revolutionary principles to which it can firmly adhere in any activity.

When a party fails to adhere to such principles, it can neither guarantee consistency in carrying out its lines and policy nor can it correct errors it may make. Only when the party adheres to revolutionary principles can it lead the revolution and construction along the single road of victory.

The KWP firmly adheres to the stand of chuche in organizing and leading the revolution and construction. The revolution in a country is the struggle for the people's independence. It is a most just policy for the Workers Party to adhere to the principle of independence corresponding to the requirements of the current age. Only an independent party can victoriously lead the revolution by taking full responsibility for the destiny of its people.

The communist revolutionaries, who struggle for the people's freedom and happiness, should carry out the revolution in accord with their faith and (?subjective view). Firmly establishing chuche is a basic principle which our party has consistently adhered to in leading the revolution and construction. Our party, which takes the great chuche idea as the firm guidance ideology, thinks and solves all problems with its own strength, adhering to the stand of being the master fully responsible for the Korean revolution. Demonstrated in this are the glory and dignity of our party as the revolutionary party which advances by upholding the banner of independence.

Proceeding from the historic experience of the Korean revolution and the requirements of the complicated revolutionary situation, our party has set forth and thoroughly implemented slogans on living in our own style. Thus, chuche is being established more firmly and more extensively in our revolution. Our people's spirit of national independence and their revolutionary pride are unprecedentedly enhanced and national sovereignty and dignity are being firmly protected. Korea is shining as the chuche fatherland.

The actual experiences in our revolution have proved that only a party which adheres to the principle of independence can lead the revolution in its country in a responsible manner and without deviation, and can brilliantly fulfill its national and international revolutionary mission.

The KWP firmly adheres to the working class stand and to the basic interests of the revolution in organizing and leading the revolution and construction. The revolutionary cause of the working class and the socialist and communist cause are being achieved through fierce struggle against all class enemies. The maneuvers of the enemies at home and abroad to crush the socialist cause and to eliminate the revolutionary gains are becoming more cunning and vicious with each passing day. In this situation, if the party retreats from its class stand and ignores the basic interests of the revolution, the revolution will confront various ups and downs and fail in mid-course. The firm adherence to the faith in communism and to the stand of (?working class) is one of the basic principles which the party, which has taken full responsibility for the destiny of the people, should not neglect, even slightly, in its activities.

In setting and implementing lines and policies, our party, first of all, considers and protects the basic interests of revolution and the demands of working class. It is the firm stand of our party to solve the problems of revolution and construction in accordance with the desires of working class and people, to struggle uncompromisingly against anti-revolutionary things and to continue the revolution till imperialism has been finally eliminated.

Under the correct leadership of our party, our country is successfully carrying out the work to educate the working people in a revolutionary way. As a result, all people are armed with sound ideas and consciousness and live and work in a revolutionary way. Reactionary and corrupt ideas, the culture and living style of imperialists, cannot penetrate us.

Despite the division of the nation and the fact that we are carrying out revolution while facing the imperialists, socialist construction is being successfully carried on and the cause of the working class is being firmly protected. This is a fruition of the leadership of our party struggling and advancing with the banner of revolution always raised high.

The KWP also thoroughly implements the revolutionary line of the people in its activities of leading revolution and construction. The masses of people are masters of history and a decisive force of revolution and construction. Only when the party of the working class fully depends on the strength and wisdom of the masses of the people and correctly mobilizes them, can it accomplish its historic mission. Therefore, it is a principled demand of the activities of the party of the working class to thoroughly implement the revolutionary line of the people.

Without depending on the endless creative power and rich experiences of the masses of the working people, the party cannot play its leading role successfully. The invincible might of our party, making the revolution and construction ever-victorious, stems from our party's dependence on the masses and its mobilization of their strength and wisdom. In setting lines and policies, our party always synthesizes the opinions and demands of the masses and, in implementing them, mobilizes their revolutionary zeal and creativity.

To become a true organizer and guide leading people to victory, the party of the working class must not alienate itself from the masses but must penetrate deep and mingle with them. The combat capability and brilliant leadership of our party stems from its respect for this principle.

Within itself, our party has firmly established the working style of the anti-Japanese guerrillas and the Chongsan-ri spirit and method and is thoroughly fulfilling the demands of the revolutionary line of the people. As a result, in our country, the intent of the party center is smoothly conveyed even to the lowest units, and the intent of the lower echelons is promptly conveyed to the party center.

The party's root in the people and its blood relations with them are the source of the combat capability of our party and one of the secrets of the shining advance of the revolution and construction of our country. The activities of our party leading revolution and construction along the single road of victory show the way for enhancing the leading role of the part of the working class in the accomplishment of its mission as the headquarters of the revolution. Thanks to the organizing power and leadership of the party, victory always awaits our revolution.

3. By organizing and leading revolution and construction to victory, the KWP enjoys the absolute trust of the people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Our people, who have traversed the arduous and rewarding path of revolution and construction with the party, endlessly trust and follow our party with an unchanging faith gained through their real-life experience. They entirely depend on our party for their destiny.

To become a truly political leader of the people, the party of the working class must win the support and trust of the people. The trust of the people is the source of the firmness of the leading role of the party and of its combat capability. The people's trust in the party forms in the course of history and is based on the greatness of the party. Only a great party which leads the revolution and construction to victory can win the broad support and trust of the people.

Our people firmly trust their party and fully depend on it for their destiny. The noble trait of our people endlessly trusting the party and firmly struggling under its leadership stems from the unchanging faith gained in real-life experience along the path of the rewarding struggle that they have traversed with the party.

Almost 40 years have elapsed since the birth of the KWP. This history has been embroidered with the most glorious struggle and triumphs which can be carried on and won only by the great party of the working class. Since its inception the KWP, as the true political leader of our people, has advanced with all the burdens of the Korean revolution on its shoulder.

By leading the people, our party has successfully carried out the two-phase social revolution and brilliantly achieved the historic cause of socialist industrialization. By so doing, it has turned our country into a self-reliant and independent socialist power which is able to defend itself. Under the leadership of the KWP, our people could have won the great victory in the just fatherland liberation war against the armed invasion of imperialists and honorably defended the sovereignty and prestige of the nation. The path of the revolution our party has traversed in taking charge of the destiny of the fatherland and people was a course of countless difficulties and trials. Nevertheless, our party overcame all the difficulties on the road of advance and led the revolution and construction to victory.

Without the KWP leadership, our people should have never been able to get through the initial stage of the difficult new social construction and to cope with the countless difficulties arising from the bloody class struggle against domestic and foreign enemies and the struggle of enormous economic construction.

The victorious advance our revolution has made on the road of arduous struggle was a great miracle which could be created only by the KWP. Relying on the proud achievements it has won, our party is now victoriously organizing and leading the work to permeate society with the chuche idea. The chuche-ization of society is a sacred struggle to complete the cause of our revolution, which was pioneered and has been carried on under the banner of the chuche idea.

In a brief period of several decades since the victory in the revolution for national liberation and the launching of a new social construction, the remnants of the old society have been completely exorcised in all fields of social life, and the complete independence of the working people has been achieved. This is a monumental change and evidence of the wise leadership of our party. Along the road of leading the revolution and construction to victory, the KWP has won countless achievements and performed immortal feats for the fatherland and people and before history and the nation.

Our party has been disciplined and tested during the historic course of leading the class struggle against domestic and foreign enemies and the arduous struggle for creations and changes to victory. At the same time, it has gained rich experiences and nourished endless might.

The invincibility of our party as the great guide of the Korean revolution has been proved by history.

Our party has grown and strengthened as a party with a bright future which has a firm organizational and ideological foundation by which the cause of the revolution can be achieved and as an ever-victorious party with incomparable authority. As a result, our country has brilliantly solved the basic question on which the future of the revolution depends. A firm guarantee for the final victory of the chuche cause has been provided. This is an endless joy and confidence of our people.

The historic course during which our people have struggled and won victories under the leadership of the party was a precious time when they fully realized the greatness of the party and built deep trust in the party. Our people have seen the advance our revolution made along the single road of victory under the KWP's leadership and the pride they have in struggling in the era of the Workers Party.

Through their experience, our people have come to firmly believe that only the KWP is the bosom of the revolution and the banner of victory and glory on which they can depend. Without the party, revolution and construction cannot advance, and our people cannot be happy.

This is a most precious truth and faith that the history of our party's struggle has inscribed in the hearts of the people. The slogan "Long live the Korea Workers Party, the organizer of the victories of the Korean people and their guide"! which is echoing everywhere in the nation is a reflection of our people's faith, formed in the struggle and in history.

This eloquently shows our people's ardent admiration of their party. Our people's faith in the party is the noblest sentiment with which they maintain the belief that they know only their party and follow it until the end of the world.

Today, our people call the KWP "the motherly party," fully depend on it for their own destiny and the destiny of their descendants and consider it a supreme honor and joy to be loyal to the party. To share sweetness and bitterness with the party under all circumstances is an unchanging faith of our people. Our party enjoys the support and trust of the people with such a faith and sense of commitment. The noble trait of our people determined to indefinitely struggle under the leadership of the party is proved by their belief in the party's authority and their protection of the party center.

To defend and protect our party is an important task to defend the Korean revolution and to lead it along the road of victory. Our people know this. They consider it their sacred duty and noble moral oblitation to protect and defend the party politically, ideologically and at the risk of their lives. It is a sign of the noble revolutionary spirit of our people that they unconditionally support and accept the party's decisions and directives and implement them through floods and fires.

Indeed, in believing their party and holding it in high esteem, no other people in the world are as thorough and firm as our people. Our party has struck roots among such faithful people and a formidable grass-roots base which nothing can destroy. The party which is completely united with the people is ever-victorious. The people's trust in the party, the blood relations between the party and the people and their invincible unity and cohesion -- all these are a noble achievement of the Korean revolution, which has been victorious under the leadership of our party. Our country's political foundation of the party and the people's rallying around the party are unprecedented.

Thanks to the great unity and cohesion which has been formed in long trials and its invincibility, the Korean revolution can overcome any difficulties and trials and can always be victorious. The revolutionary cause which was pioneered by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been carried on under the leadership of the party along the proud road of victory and glory. However, our revolution has not come to an end. We will continue to advance along the distant and rugged road. The more distant and rugged the road of the struggle, the more we must strengthen the party and work to uphold the party leadership. Our party is the center of the Korean revolution and the star of guidance for the bright future of communism. Only under the leadership of the party can our revolutionary cause be achieved and the endless prosperity of the nation and our future descendants be attained.

The future of our revolution and fatherland depends on our people's loyalty to the party and their espousal of the party leadership. The hearts of the people must be always pure and genuine in following the party. They must be firm as a rock.

Only with revolutionary conscience representing their honest hearts and with a firm belief unchanging in all circumstances can they be called true revolutionary fighters of the party.

With the indefatigable revolutionary spirit which was displayed by Kim Hyok, Cha Kwang-su and other young communists at the dawn of the Korean revolution, the party members and working people must protect and defend the party and loyally struggle to the bitter end along the single road pioneered by the party.

We must continue to carry on the work to strengthen and perfect the organizational and political foundation of the party and ceaselessly bolster and enhance the combat capability and the leading role of the party. Upholding the revolutionary lines and militant tasks put forward by the sixth party congress, the party members and working people must more vigorously struggle to accelerate the complete victory of socialism, the independent reunification of the fatherland, and the victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence.

By so doing, they must make the year of 1982 a most significant one in the history of the glorious struggle of our party and people and display the honor and prestige of the KWP. Long live the Korean Workers Party, the organizer for the victories of the Korean people and their guide! Our people will continue to shout this slogan and to struggle and advance under the leadership of the party.

UNIFICATION BODY HITS NORTH ATTITUDE ON PROPOSAL

SK280528 Seoul YONHAP in English 0315 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 29 (YONHAP) -- Chairman Chon Kwan-u of the Central Committee for National Unification of Korea Thursday called upon North Korea to regain its national conscience and accept President Chon Tu-hwan's new peaceful unification formula calling for the writing of a common constitution for a unified Korea.

In a statement, Chon said that the new presidential peace formula announced last week in his new year policy statement is the "most concrete and feasible" proposal for the unification of the two divided halves of the Korean Peninsula through peaceful means.

He expressed deep regret over the North Korean rejection early this week of the epoch-making peace formula.

"The North Korean communists stick to their proposal of the formation of a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo. If they consider this a unification formula, they should come to the dialogue table to have candid consultations with our side over the issue, and immediately halt the malicious slandering of the South," Chon said.

Deploring that the North Korean rejection of inter-Korean talks and mutual exchanges between the South and the North has perpetuated the divided state of the peninsula, Chon urged Pyongyang to respond favorably to Chon's reasonable peace overtures for the fundamental solution to the inter-Korean question.

CHON URGES 'PRUDENT' FOREIGN EXCHANGE POLICY

SK280249 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 28 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan yesterday directed the Cabinet to be "prudent" in carrying out policy programs which might affect the foreign exchange rate.

He told pertinent Cabinet ministries to do away with any won currently devaluation which they might consider only to boost exports without considering the problems facing the national economy.

President Chon gave the directives after receiving a new year policy briefing from Minister of Finance Na Ung-pae at Chongwadae.

Chon called for the increase of domestic savings as, he said, this is a way to curb the accumulation of foreign debts.

He said that if bank interest rates need to be readjusted downward, this should be done so in "full consideration" of public savings trend.

The president instructed the ministry to place particular emphasis on the improvement of the financial structure of banks.

He also told the ministry to work out positive measures to support small and medium industrial firms.

LEADERS' MESSAGES MARK INDIAN NATIONAL DAY

Heng Samrin Greeting

BK250329 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On 22 January Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State, sent a congratulatory message to His Excellency Neelam Sanjiva Reddy, president of the Republic of India, on the occasion of the anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic of India. The message says, among other things:

On behalf of the Kampuchean people and in my own name, I have great pleasure in extending warm congratulations to Your Excellency and the government and people of India on the occasion of the anniversary of the proclamation of the famous Republic of India. I would like to reaffirm that the people and government of the PRK are very happy that our two countries have rebuilt normal relations with each other. We highly appraise the valuable support and assistance given the PRK by the Republic of India. I am firmly convinced that the reestablishment of relations of friendship and traditional cooperation between our two countries constitutes a decisive factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia, and that these relations will always develop for the interest of our two countries.

Chan Si Greeting

BK50655 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On the occasion of the 32d anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic of India, Comrade Chan Si, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers of the PRK, on 22 January sent a congratulatory message to Mrs Indira Gandhi, prime minister of the Republic of India. The message says:

On behalf of the government and people of Kampuchea and in my own name, I would like to extend most sincere congratulations and best wishes to you on the occasion of the National Day of the Republic of India. After gaining their independence, the people and Government of India have brought about remarkable economic and social changes greatly admired by the entire world. Thanks to its active work for peace and its vigorous and decisive role in the movement of the nonaligned countries, the Republic of India has made concrete contributions to peace in the world.

I am convinced that the bonds of traditional friendship and cooperation between our two countries will grow forever. I wish you good health and greater victories in fulfilling your noble mission.

Hun Sen Greeting

BK250934 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On 22 January Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK, sent a message to Comrade Narasimha Rao, minister of external affairs of the Republic of India, congratulating him on the 32d anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic of India. The message says:

On the occasion of the 32d anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic of India, I extend sincere congratulations and best wishes to Your Excellency for success in your noble mission, for the prosperity of the Republic of India, for happiness and good fortune to the Indian people and for peace in Asia and the world. May the bond of traditional friendship between our two countries firmly strenghten and develop forever.

SOY KEO PAYS VISIT TO VPA 'FRONTLINE' POST

BK280616 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 25 January a Defense Ministry delegation led by Comrade Soy Keo, vice minister of defense and chief of the KPRAF General Staff, visited and gave New Year wishes to VPA cadres and combatants at the frontline battlefield command post, Hospital No 5 and the 4th Division. On that occasion, Comrade Soy Keo warmly spoke with General (Xao Nam), commander in chief of the frontline battlefield. He warmly conversed with and presented best wishes to various comrade cadres and combatants of the VPA who are being treated in Hospital No 5, as well as fraternal combatants of the 4th Division.

On behalf of the KPRAF cadres and combatants throughout the country, Comrade Soy Keo deeply thanked the Vietnamese party and government for their assistance and support -- materially and morally. He particularly thanked the VPA, which was very efficient in toppling the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. From this the Kampuchean people and the KPRAF have developed quickly in the construction and defense of their fatherland during the past more than 3 years. The presence, in particular, of the Vietnamese troops who are fulfilling their internationalist duty in Kampuchea by closely cooperating with the KPRAF and all Kampuchean people has played an important part in the defense of the revolutionary cause of the three Indochinese countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

He also sent his best regards and New Year wishes to all the VPA cadres' and combatants' families, who are separated from their beloved husbands, children and grandchildren fulfilling their lofty internationalist duty on Kampuchean territory. He hoped that the friendship between the parties, governments, armies and peoples of the two countries -- Vietnam and Kampuchea -- would last forever and grow stronger.

Our Defense Ministry delegation presented gifts to the VPA cadres and combatants wherever it visited. They joyously expressed New Year wishes to each other in a sincere and warm atmosphere.

KONG SRUN PRESENTS REPORT ON BATTAMBANG IN 1981

BK270932 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Kong Srun, vice chairman of the Battambang Provincial People's Revolutionary Committee, presented a report on general conditions in the province at a meeting held from 14 to 16 January 1982 to summarize past achievements in 1981 with all strata of the provincial cadres and all members of the district people's revolutionary committees present.

In the field of border defense, the people, the state power and the three categories of army forces -- regular, regional and militia forces -- successively smashed all of the enemies' maneuvers. In 1981 our brothers and sisters tried to fight the enemies who had infiltrated the Kampuchean border. They used propaganda to persuade more than 2,700 persons who were following the enemies to surrender and bring with them 589 weapons. Thousands of youth in villages and communes throughout the province have volunteered to serve in the army.

Because the authorities of Battambang Province can defend their people against the enemies' activities, our brothers and sisters who are peasants of 11,982 solidarity groups throughout the country transplanted rice on 260,100 hectares of land -- 16.84 percent more than in 1980. During the past year, natural disasters destroyed nearly 37,000 hectares of our brothers' and sisters' rice. The 1981 rice production was equal to 79 percent of the 1980 total. But our peasants also tried to grow subsidiary and industrial crops, as well as fruit, in their solidarity groups and in their families, which could improve our standard of living. This year, our brothers and sisters planted nearly 5,000 hectares of corn -- 1,400 hectares more than in 1979 [year as heard].

Our brothers and sisters increased animal feeding, fisheries and forestry work. Fisheries production, which is still active, has produced 4,500 tons of fish -- one and a half times more than in 1980.

Concerning the industrial and handicraft fields, our brothers and sisters developed 28 small and big enterprises -- 7 times more than in 1980. In the telecommunications, transport and postal fields last year, our people repaired 240 vehicles of all types and 9 boats, 18 small motor boats and 13 barges, and transported 59,000 tons of goods. In the commercial field, our brothers and sisters actively and successfully bartered their rice with the state during the 1980-81 harvest season.

In the education, health and social affairs fields, there was progress in the number of schools, pupils, students and employees. There was a 55-percent increase over the number of schools last year and the number of pupils and students was double that of last year. The number of commune dispensaries increased by 17.2 percent and the number of patient beds increased by 14.6 percent from last year.

In their directives to fulfill the 1981 duties, apart from the continued strengthening of the border and security, our brothers and sisters -- the people, the army, cadres and employees of the entire Battambang provincial state power -- were determined to grow 2,500 hectares of dry season rice, 280,000 hectares of rainy season rice and 20,000 hectares of various crops, barter 40,000 tons of production with the state and continue to increase achievements in all fields. In addition, our brothers and sisters will continue to strengthen their knowledge of the political line of the party and the front. They are resolutely determined to heighten their revolutionary vigilance against all the enemies' tricks.

KHIEU SAMPHAN VISIT TO SISOPHON REPORTED

BK210540 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2300 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] On 15 and 16 January 1982 Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium, prime minister and provisory chairman of the PDFGNUK, together with responsible regional cadres, visited the south Sisophon region. Khieu Samphan visited and talked sincerely with our people, going from house to house in various villages. He is interested in the daily life of our compatriots, their health and their efforts to increase production, as well as other aspects of life in each village. Our Democratic Kampuchean prime minister expressed his joy, satisfaction and congratulations to our people in different villages for living in harmony with each other as well as for their struggle spirit in working to overcome all types of obstacles caused by the aggressive war being waged by the Vietnamese enemy. Our people support themselves and contribute to the fight against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors by actively assisting the frontline battlefields.

Prime Minister Khieu Samphan visited a number of schools and asked about the subjects of the courses and the program in each class, as well as the teachers' living conditions. He also called on our brothers and sisters to strengthen their solidarity, raise the banner of patriotism and actively contribute to the present struggle against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors until they withdraw all of their troops from our Kampuchean territory, which we love as our own life.

NUON CHEA VISIT TO SOUTH BATTAMBANG NOTED

BK240304 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] On 23 December 1981 Nuon Chea, chairman of the Standing Committee of the Kampuchean People's Representative Assembly, visited the south Battambang region with local responsible cadres.

He stayed in the area until 14 January 1982 in order to observe the conditions of our people in the region and to give advice to the regional responsible cadres and people to help them solve their problems in daily life arising from the suffering caused by the aggressive and genocidal war of the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy.

During his nearly month long stay in the zone, Nuon Chea held talks and asked for details on the living conditions of our people, our brothers and sisters from the Democratic Kampuchean-controlled areas, the disputed zones and the regions temporarily occupied by the Vietnamese enemy. He was interested in talking with our brothers and sisters about production and their health. He discussed the production situation in detail and their experiences in protecting the crops.

Our people from the disputed regions and the areas temporarily controlled by the Vietnamese enemy expressed their feelings more strongly than the others when they personally met Nuon Chea. Although they have suffered much from the Vietnamese enemy, our brothers and sisters are confident that one day they will be relieved of all this suffering. They are certain that the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas wage a stronger struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. Our brothers and sisters are determined to overcome all obstacles and difficulties in order to assist our Democratic Kampuchean Army and guerrillas, and to participate with them in waging a stronger struggle in all forms against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors.

IENG SARY HOLDS TALKS WITH JAPANESE GROUP

BK280231 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] On 22 January 1982 His Excellency Hideo Den, member of the Japanese House of Councillors, chairman of the Japanese Center for Relief to the Kampuchean People and well-known Japanese personality; His Excellency (Tashuo Izikawa), secretary of the New Liberal Club; and another colleague visited Democratic Kampuchea.

Chhorn Hay, secretary of state of the Ministry of Telecommunications; Mey Mann, second vice chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross; and a number of Foreign Ministry cadres warmly welcomed the friendly guests when they arrived.

That afternoon, Ieng Sary, deputy prime minister in charge of foreign affairs, held sincere talks with the guests. He organized a party, which took place in a friendly and warm atmosphere. On that occasion, His Excellency Hideo Den and his colleagues handed over $5,000 and a quantity of material such as medicines and milk to Ieng Sary. These gifts were gathered from the Japanese people by the Japanese center to be given to the Kampuchean people who are suffering from the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy's aggressive and genocidal war. After deeply thanking the guests for visiting our region under such difficult circumstances and for the generous aid of the Japanese people, Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary told them of the actual situation in the present struggle of the Kampuchean people, which is developing well against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy in Kampuchea. He said: Your visit to our area in these circumstances and these generous gifts are evidence of the Japanese people's sentiments toward our Kampuchean people. They are also a strong encouragement for our people and national army who are waging a tough struggle on the frontline battlefields.

During this short visit, the friendly guests visited a number of villages, hospitals and schools. They were greatly impressed by the disciplined condition of the villages and the valiant battle spirit of our Kampuchean people and national army in the just cause of defending our nation and race.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN CANADA AGAINST SRV REPORTED

BK161014 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] On 9 January, on the occasion of the third anniversary of the Kampuchean people's struggle against the aggressive war of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy, more than 150 of our Kampuchean brothers and sisters resident in Canada and Canadian friends marched along various streets in Montreal and demonstrated in front of the Soviet Consulate. They condemned the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea, demanded the prompt withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and called for an end to Soviet aid to Vietnam. At the end, the demonstrators adopted a resolution, the main points of which are as follows:

The resolution firmly condemned the aggressive and genocidal acts of the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy in Kampuchea. The Kampuchean people are suffering greatly from this aggression and many of them have been killed while others fled their country. The Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea has strongly threatened Southeast Asia, particularly Thailand. The resolution noted that the firm struggle of the Kampuchean people during the past 3 years indicates clearly that they will win over the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy at the end. The Kampuchean people receive more assistance and support from the world community, which acknowledges clearly the duty of the Kampuchean people in their struggle against the Vietnamese expansionists in order to defend peace and security in the region and in the world. Our Kampuchean brothers and sisters resident in Canada unanimously demanded an end to the aggressive war of the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy in Kampuchea.

1. The Vietnamese must unconditionally withdraw all their aggressive forces -- their army and their civilian agents -- from Kampuchea.

2. A universal and free election will be held in Kampuchea under UN supervision.

3. An independent, peaceful, neutral and nonaligned Kampuchea should be guaranteed by the world community and the United Nations.

This resolution also appeals to the world not to cooperate in any way with the Hanoi Vietnamese unless they withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea.

PRC JOURNALISTS INTERVIEW KHIEU SAMPHAN

For a Beijing Radio interview with Khieu Samphan, prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea, see the Southeast Asia and Pacific section of the 27 January China DAILY REPORT.

AFP: SON SANN DISCUSSES DK COALITION REJECTION

OW272110 Paris AFP in English 2050 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Paris, 27 Jan (AFP) -- Khmer Rouge refusal to form a loose three-pronged anti-Vietnamese coalition could mean the end of United Nations recognition of them as the rightful rulers of Cambodia, former Cambodian Premier Son Sann said today. Mr Son Sann, leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE that the Khmer Rouge, overthrown with Vietnamese assistance in 1979, had rejected an offer to join forces with the KPNLF and with a faction led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk because they had adopted a new strategy. They aimed to demonstrate that there were only two Cambodias, he said -- the Vietnamese-backed Phnom Penh regime and the Chinese-backed exiled Khmer Rouge. But according to Mr Son Sann, the anti-Vietnamese Cambodian resistance was a tripartite one. The KPNLF, he said, controlled an area of "114,000 people and thousands of combatants." Observers said that Prince Sihanouk's resistance fighters were also estimated to be several thousand-strong.

Mr Son Sann was here on the fifth leg of a tour through the Western nations. After visiting the United States, Canada, Great Britain and West Germany, he was due to leave for Brussels tomorrow to give a press conference organized by the Belgian Foreign Ministry.

KAYSONE ADDRESSES OUDOMSAI PARTY CONGRESS

BK240513 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Speech by Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee, at inauguration of Second Congress of Oudomsai Provincial LPRP committee on 15 January -- read by announcer]

[Text] Dear members of the presidium, comrades: Today I am moved and very happy to meet you, comrades, outstanding delegates of the party committees at various levels in Oudomsai Province, attending this congress of the provincial party committee. Among these delegates are senior party members who engaged in the national salvation struggle against two imperialist aggressors -- the hardest, most protracted, glorious and honorable resistance in the history of our country. There are also young party members who have grown in the cause of defending and building the socialist fatherland. There are also party members from the various tribes in the province, and male and female delegates.

This beautiful picture points to one thing which is of profound significance -- the Oudomsai provincial party committee has taken deep root among the people of various tribes and has succeeded in building a revolutionary force embracing people of various generations and ages.

Having closely followed the activities of the Oudomsai Provincial Party Committee since its birth, I am very proud of the growth and development of the various party organizations in the province. In this atmosphere of joy and happiness, I would first like to express on behalf of the LPRP Central Committee my wholehearted salutation to the Second Congress of the provincial party committee. I ask you, comrades, to convey New Year best wishes to all party members and people of all tribes in Oudomsai Province.

Dear comrades, over the past 30 years, under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the party Central Committee, our people throughout the country have performed a glorious heroic deed unprecedented in the history of our nation by defeating two most ferocious imperialists, completely liberating the country and setting it on the road to socialism.

Looking at the development of mankind's society, our country is 700 or 800 years behind other developed countries in terms of economic development. Nevertheless, thanks to the leadership of a genuine Marxist-Leninist party and to the support of the strength of the era, our country has brought into full play the traditions of solidarity, heroism and unyielding struggle and defeated all enemies, thus scoring many fine achievements in the cause of defending and building our socialist country.

Our country has joined the ranks of the leading countries of the era and has been recognized as a full member of the world socialist community. This honor is glorious, and such revolutionary steps are great. However, the responsibilities of our party and country are extremely heavy.

The party Central Committee is pleased to learn that the party committee and people of Oudomsai Province have recorded honorable achievements contributing to our revolutionary cause. It is one of the provinces which scored many brilliant achievements in the national salvation struggle and is one of the provinces which have developed all-round and solid movements to carry out the current cause of defending the country and building socialism.

Oudomsai Province is at the forefront of the struggle against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, and has been a target for the extensive and heinous sabotage activities perpetrated by the expansionists and hegemonists over several years. The provincial party committee has quickly enabled the people of the various tribes to be aware of their new enemy.

It has promoted and developed the patriotic and revolutionary traditions of the people in the province; heroically and resolutely struggled against the enemy's subversive activities and threats; effectively cemented unity among various tribes, unity with the various vanguard provinces and unity with the Vietnamese volunteer forces; effectively carried out the task of defending the country; and has scored great victories in resisting the all-round subversive activities carried out by the imperialists and expansionists.

In the past, Oudomsai was among those provinces which suffered from starvation. More than 90 percent of the people in the province were illiterate. Now, however, only 6 years after the liberation of the country, the people of various tribes, under the leadership of the provincial party committee, have made heroic endeavors and have successfully achieved self-sufficiency in food. They have even stockpiled some foodstuffs for future use while contributing part to the state. They have also translated a position of strength in the economic field into a gradual improvement in the people's living conditions. As a result, poverty has been eliminated.

Initial success has been achieved in introducing agricultural cooperatives in rice farming areas. The superiority of the agricultural cooperatives has been promoted and expanded. At the same time, efforts have been made to stamp out illiteracy among the people. At present, the people in 5 districts, 49 cantons and 444 villages have become literate. Many members of various tribes in Oudomsai Province have become scientific and technical cadres working in various state sectors.

Regarding party building, at the very beginning there were two party units comprising six party members. These two party units were set up in Omphoun and Nam Se cantons in 1956. At that time, these party members carried out their activities in secret and hid in the jungle. Through training and tempering in the flames of complicated, fierce and furious struggle against the enemy, the Oudomsai provincial party organization has now become a strong party organization of more than 200 party units with more than 2,000 party members and a contingent of nearly 3,000 cadres -- including 1,130 female cadres -- belonging to nearly all fraternal tribes in the province. [figures as heard]

These great, all-round and firm achievements have helped develop various factors in the province, and have helped build a new, basic workstyle for Oudomsai Province to march forward to achieve new, ever greater and more lasting victories.

On behalf of the party Central Committee, I wholeheartedly hail the party organization and people of the various tribes in Oudomsai Province for upholding the patriotic revolutionary spirit, heroically overcoming all difficulties, and making a worthy contribution to the common cause of revolution of our nation and our party.

Dear comrades, more than 2 months ago I also visited Oudomsai Province. But, during this visit, I am elated to note that the party members, cadres, combatants and people of Oudomsai have positively fulfilled their pledges toward the party Central Committee with a high level of determination. Various activities in the form of broad mass movements carried out to score achievements to welcome the congress -- such as activities to boost production, fulfill obligations toward the state, build roads and other projects, and clean offices, organizations and houses as well as various cultural, art and literature, sports and acrobatic activities -- prove that the people of the various tribes throughout the province show great concern for the congress of the provincial party organization, and that they earnestly hope that this congress will achieve glorious success and will decide on the correct line of advance while laying down concrete, effective measures to lead Oudomsai Province in marching forward with a firm step to bring new things to them in their daily life and activities.

This congress of yours, comrades, is the first provincial-level congress to be held in the country since the revolution of our nation entered a new stage -- the stage of socialist revolution. Therefore, your achievements and lessons will contribute to the opening of the national congress of provincial party organizations, just as they will serve as preparation for the meeting of cadres from throughout the country to be held in the immediate future.

Dear comrades, in your political report at the congress you have clearly valued the achievements scored over the past 10 years, and pointed out in detail the various remaining problems which have limited the successes and held back advances in the province. The party Central Committee regards these observations as the result of the active preparation of the whole party organization and people of Oudomsai Province.

You, comrades, have effectively organized conferences at the grassroots and district levels and successfully mobilized party members to concentrate on studying, debating and resolving various decisive and fundamental problems. You have sounded out the opinion of the masses to select the most outstanding comrades as party members and as representatives to participate in the provincial party congress. This has further solidified and purified the party organization.

The party Central Committee would like to hail your spirit of criticism and self-criticism. This manifests the thoroughgoing nature of revolution of true communists who have firmly grasped the party's law of development and who display the spirit of serving the people of all tribes in the provinces. I hope that such a spirit will be brought into full play in this congress and in implementing the various resolutions to be adopted by the congress. This is a strong point of the party since it serves to build unity within the party and to strengthen relations between the party and the masses. You should strive to nurture and develop it continuously so that you will understand more clearly some overall problems of the country.

To help you, comrades, study, debate and decide on the direction of advance in the province over the next 4 or 5 years, I would like to raise some issues for discussion with you.

1. You must clearly understand that our country is an outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia. Oudomsai is one of the provinces located at the forefront of the resistance against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists. For this reason, we must always heighten our vigilance, be determined to defeat the enemy's subversive activities in all respects and be prepared to smash schemes of peaceful transition, distrubances and aggression by the enemy.

Our enemies are the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists. They are being weakened and isolated and are being driven into an impasse. The Chinese expansionists -- our country's direct and most dangerous enemy -- are daily engaged in a fierce and uncompromising internal power struggle. They are contending with and cruelly eliminating each other. Their four modernizations plan is going bankrupt. The reactionary ruling clique's expansionist and warmongering policy has brought more and more hardships to the Chinese people in their daily life. The poverty afflicting the people and working people is getting worse. The Chinese people in many areas have risen up to oppose the Beijing ruling clique's traitorous and reactionary policy. Under such conditions they cannot easily launch a large-scale war to swallow up our country and other fraternal countries in the Indochinese Peninsula.

Nevertheless, because of their aggressive and stubborn nature, the expansionists are stepping up their collusion with the imperialists to wage an all-round war of destruction against our country by resorting to various relentless, cunning tricks. They are provoking and beating us and draining our blood so as to weaken us, with a view to fulfilling their scheme of swallowing us.

We must know their shortcomings and weaknesses, but should not overestimate their strength. We must heighten our vigilance toward the expansionists' ferociousness, bellicosity and adventurist nature since they are still ruling their country and enjoy the support of the imperialists in opposing and sabotaging our revolution. Meanwhile, they are aware to some extent of the psychological and social conditions in our country, for example, in various northern provinces. They have employed many tricks to deceive our people and have carried out protracted psychological warfare.

For this reason you comrades must firmly grasp the two strategic tasks -- defending and building the country. These two tasks must be interrelated. An effective implementation of the defense task will facilitate the building work; and once the building work is effectively carried out, the defense work will be successful.

You must resolutely smash the enemy's all-round subversive activities and remove the sources of rebellious activity and the so-called peaceful transition. If this issue is effectively tackled, we will be able to take the offensive in preventing and countering aggression and directly break the enemy's aggressive schemes. Your political report has already provided details on how to tackle this issue.

I would like once again to stress: To effectively carry out the task of defending the country and maintaining public security in localities, the party committee must firmly build and strengthen political bases in all respects, firmly take control of the local armed forces and public security forces, consolidate and continuously strengthen unity among various tribes, oppose the enemy's divisive schemes, and develop the might of the militant alliance between Laos and Vietnam in order to defeat the enemy's all-round war of destruction.

This is a fundamental issue that must be tackled in order to firmly build a field position for the people's war and develop an overall strength to defeat the enemy. Without a firm basis, we can neither defeat the enemy nor build a prosperous, strong country. For example, in the present situation in which our enemies are carrying out all-round sabotage activities, without firm unity among the various tribes, it is impossible to build a firm basis or a strong potential for national defense and public security.

Another important issue is that the party committee and the revolutionary administration must pay attention to educating and training the armed forces and public security forces. They must guarantee that the armed forces and public security forces are absolutely loyal to the party and the revolution and maintain high qualifications and sufficient capabilities to serve as a sharp tool in defending the country, maintaining tranquillity and social order, and in fruitfully taking part in national construction. Attention should be paid to stepping up the activities of guerrilla and self-defense forces, in particular in border areas and in areas where the people of major tribes live. Another issue that you comrades should pay attention to is taking the political offensive against the enemy. You must not wait and see how the enemy carries out psychological warfare against us and then seek ways to resist. This will only place us in a defensive position and the enemy might inflict losses on us.

Our party's line is correct and clear-sighted. We maintain a line of justice, while the enemy are renegades and reactionaries. We maintain conditions to allow the people in their countries, particularly those living in areas bordering us, clearly understand their traitorous, cruel and wicked nature and to join with us in maintaining peace and friendship and struggling against various reactionary powers.

2. It is necessary to effectively exploit various sources of strength in the localities; organize to solve various problems in the economic field in the province in a spirit of taking the initiative, being self-reliant and building to become strong; vigorously step up production; and effectively solve the problem on the circulation of goods in order to gradually improve the living conditions of the people of various tribes in the province.

The provincial report clearly points out the duties, goals, and major methods for the transformation and development of the provincial economy on the basis of the potentials in various fields in the localities. In studying and discussing this report, you, comrades, should pay attention to specific measures to realize the duties and goals set out by the congress.

Oudomsai Province has maintained a firm political basis. It has also maintained many positions of strength in the economic area. However, some of the economic establishments in this province have developed slowly compared with those in other province. The cadres' ability in economic management is still low when compared with the requirements. In addition, the number of technical cadres working in the economic branch is still too small. This is a problem that must be effectively tackled in the process of building and developing the economy. A careful inspection and detailed discussions on this matter have not yet been held. Practical conditions in various northern provinces show that in doing away with the natural economy, achieving self-sufficiency, vigorously stepping up the production of goods and gradually improving the living conditions of the people of various tribes, problems of production, purchasing, prices, communications and transportation as well as the question of culture must be related and must support each other. If all these problems are not settled simultaneously, there will be no success achieved in developing production. When production is developed, requirements in the management of techniques and production equipment will be raised automatically. When that time comes, we will have the practical conditions to make use of science, techniques and equipment in carrying out and stepping up production and combining agriculture with industry from the grassroots level.

Another major issue here is the necessity to grasp the details of appropriate steps -- ranging from the lower to higher levels, from simple to complex, from ordinary to transformed tools, and from semi-mechanization to full mechanization. It is not good to be in a hurry. At the same time, it is necessary to oppose the old line of conserving and being satisfied with an old thing, not daring to seek and implement a new thing.

With regard to your province alone, the transformation of production relations remains important. But what is more important is the expansion of production forces. It can be said that there is almost no problem with the various fraternal tribes in the province claiming ownership over production means. Efforts must be concentrated on expanding production forces and on making the working people realize their right to mastery, raise their cultural and technical levels and know how to manage the tools in their possession in order to endlessly develop production and create many more jobs, with a view to bringing prosperity to the country and to ourselves -- collectively and privately.

Regarding the exploitation of economic potentials in the province, you have a clear direction for your advancement already -- to engage in intensive farming, increase ricefields, step up the planting of industrial and subsidiary crops, expand animal husbandry, exploit forest products and develop local handicrafts and industries. All this is to serve agricultural production, forestry and the people's consumption requirements.

We must be determined to achieve self-sufficiency in food supplies and stockpile some for the cause of national defense. This is of paramount importance. You comrades should effectively carry out this task.

On the other hand, to make the province prosperous and improve the living conditions of the people of various tribes, it is important to exploit the sources of valuable goods for export and effectively organize exports. Regarding this, you have many favorable conditions. For example, you have a stock of cattle that grow well; natural conditions for raising animals are favorable; contagious diseases among animals are minimal; you have abundant forest products and other goods; and we are highly capable of planting two-season industrial crops.

In exploiting these potentials, the question of organizing the exploitation, purchasing, processing, storing and exporting of the goods is a decisive factor. If we cannot solve this question, the potentials will not be utilized.

In this congress you comrades should discuss and promote the spirit of self-reliance, build and strengthen ourselves, take the initiative in resolving various difficulties encountered by the party organization and people in the province and march forward on the basis of concrete deeds, local manpower and local capability.

3. Let us strive to bring culture, education and public health to our fraternal tribes in order to change their way of life and way of making a living, gradually reducing the economic and cultural gap among various tribes in the province.

In Oudomsai Province, most of the population are tribal people living in hilly areas. Their cultural and social level is still low. The number of the illiterate people remains high, and there are not many who are literate. This is a great obstacle to the struggle to build and make the province prosperous and strong in all respects. Various fraternal tribes have in the past been tied to old customs and superstitions. This has made the people foolish and caused difficulties and instability to their living conditions in time of natural disasters.

From a general point of view, these fraternal tribes ardently want to have enough food to eat and clothes to wear, live a happy life and make progress in their study. For this reason, it is especially important to push ideology and culture a step further and deeply instill them into the people of the various tribes. This is a true act of revolutionary mobilization which faces many difficulties. Nevertheless, we must do it. If we do not do it, we will not be able to create any basic, firm and steady changes in building Oudomsai Province. Generally speaking, our fraternal tribes have made much progress in their living conditions, culture and way of living. New changes have been made in this regard. Our children are in good health. The rate of death at delivery has been considerably reduced. However, the population in some villages and some tribes is not expanding. Some villages are quiet as if there are no children. A village of the (Kongsat) tribesmen continues to be inhabited by only 20 families as in the past several years. We should go deep to seek the reasons for this in order to help solve problems for the fraternal tribesmen. This is to help all tribes and villages achieve development.

What I have just said is the aim of our persistent struggle and a quality of we communists. It reflects the close relations between our party and the people of various tribes. The reason our fraternal people of various tribes are confident in and have wholeheartedly followed the party and do not fear any difficulty or sacrifice in implementing the party's line and policies is that our party always represents their interests and true aspirations and persists in struggling to materialize this obligation.

All acts of indifference to the masses, such as a lack of interest in their livelihood, education and health and a lack of respect for their right to collective mastership, run counter to the true nature of our party and will only weaken our party's strength. This matter must be regarded as an important element in resolving problems of unity among the people of various tribes. Your report also touched on the issues of educational, cultural and public health development in the province. I recommend that you, comrades, consult one another more closely on these issues so that you will reach unanimity in the plan and policy and will adopt methods which enable you to extend educational, cultural and public health services to all tribal people in mountainous regions. After the conclusion of this congress, I recommend that you hold separate meetings on specific topics so as to discuss and study these issues more profoundly.

In the immediate future, you should concentrate on building and consolidating all tribal schools in all regions, adopt a policy to mobilize and encourage teachers who volunteer to work in mountainous areas with tribal people, and persist in encouraging children of tribal cadres and people to train to become teachers in these areas.

4. Let us step up the work of building the party and training cadres to become capable enough to carry out leadership roles and of organizing triumphantly effective implementation of all plans and policies of the party. Oudomsai Province has scored numerous excellent achievements and drawn much experience from this work. In your political report to the congress, you have discussed clearly and adequately this issue to a certain extent. However, I would like to present some points for your consideration regarding this work.

The aim of building the party organizations and training cadres is to organize effective implementation of the party's policies and plans. This is a practical measure to check the building of all party organizations and the training of cadres. Generally speaking, previouusly, our cadres and party members always fulfilled effectively all tasks entrusted by the party and state.

However, several weak points still exist. The most prominent are as follows: We fail to grasp the party's line and tasks profoundly on certain important matters, such as bypassing the capitalist period, the proletariat dictatorship, the collective mastership system and the three revolutions -- all of which must rely on socialism absolutely. Several of you have not understood these issues clearly. You tend to isolate these issues from one another, and fail to understand that they are linked together closely and support each other. They cannot be isolated from one another. The organization of the implementation of the party's policies and plans still remains weak. Some of you are wavering and weak, and easily fall for the psywar tactics of the enemies. These weak points have stemmed from several different factors. The three primary factors are:

1. The training on the principle and viewpints of the proletariat class for party members and cadres is ineffective and inconsistent. As a result, our party members and cadres fail to grasp firmly the principles and viewpoints of the proletariat class in studying and appreciating the party's policies and plans. They are still influenced by the principle and viewpoints of the small capitalists and peasants.

2. The cultural standard and the level of understanding of Marxism-Leninism among our party members and cadres remain low.

3. The system of managing the training and scrutinizing cadres is yet to be executed effectively. Carelessness still prevails in certain matters and on various occasions.

Therefore, we must concentrate efforts on resolving the above-mentioned weak points so that we will be able to materialize the ultimate goal, that is, to organize successfully an effective implementation of the party's policies and plans. Because Oudomsai Province has cadres from several tribes, you, therefore, must understand clearly the afore-mentioned specific points in building the party and training cadres. In addition to providing such training and party building in schools and specific places, attention must be paid to training party cadres and members in a practical form called "actual deeds of outstanding individual persons" by drawing lessons from actual experiments and deeds in fulfilling certain tasks. As a result, such experinces can be applied and studied practically. This is to gradually raise the standard of our cadres. Attention must be paid to doing away with the line of subjective, hasty, careless thinking. At the same time, we must pay attention to opposing the line of conservative thinking, contentment with achievements, avoidance of experiments, and laziness and study -- all of which are factors retarding our advancement.

We must pay special attention to convincing the people of all strata, particularly party members and cadres, to understand profoundly the nature of the class struggle, which is fierce, uncompromising, complex, protracted and difficult, during the period of bypassing capitalism toward socialism; and mobilizing party members and cadres to strive to enhance further the fine tradition of the party and our country, to study and sharpen revolutionary characteristics, to remain unwavering in fighting against all enemy forces, and to continue to make more and effective contributions to the tasks of building and defending our socialist country and to the future of our children. Internal unity within the party and among cadre ranks is an issue of life and death in the revolution. The party committees at all levels, particularly Standing Committee members and party secretaries and deputy secretaries, must act as models in this issue and as the mainstay in consolidating and strengthening unity within the party and among the cadre ranks and people of various tribes.

Beloved comrades, the party Central Committee is extremely happy with the growth and development of the party committee of Oudomsai Province, which has been displayed clearly through a sense of unity and unification among all party committee members in evaluating the achievements of the province and clearly pinpointing remaining weak points and shortcomings with a view to bringing more progress to their localities. For each of you, this is a fundamental, decisive factor for scoring victory in all tasks. You, comrades, must pay close attention to preserving and enhancing this sense. This congress has outlined the tasks and targets which must be fulfilled, and general methods for actual implemention. This is already a major victory for you. However, it is only an initial victory. From this moment on, you must strive to materialize the resolutions adopted at this congress, and transform them into actual deeds for all services at all levels. You must map out detailed measures for implementation, and organize meetings on specific topics so as to study profoundly and resolve successfully all the difficult problems pointed out at the congress.

The party Central Committee and I are firmly convinced that with their revolutionary tradition and determination to march forward, the party committee of Oudomsai Province will be able to lead the people of all tribes in the province to overcome all difficulties and score more and greater achievements in building this province into a province which is politically stable, militarily strong, economically rich and culturally and socially progressive, and a province deserving the honor of being in the forefront of the heroic Lao nation, thus contributing to the international obligations of our party.

May all of the delegates enjoy good health! May the congress be crowned with glorious success!

MEKONG COMMITTEE DELEGATION RETURNS FROM MEETING

BK221237 Vientiane KPL in English 0922 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 22 Jan (KPL) -- The Lao delegation of the National Mekong Committee led by its chairman, Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, on January 21 arrived here after attending the 13th conference of the Interim Inter-Governmental Mekong Committee which was held in Hanoi from January 14 to 19. The conference, chaired by Singkapo Sikhotchounlamani, was attended by Vietnam, Thailand and delegations from 21 non-member countries and 12 international organizations. The Interim Inter-Governmental Mekong Committee on this occasion approved five aid projects of Holland. They include three projects for Laos on fish-catching at Nam Ngum, the Tha Ngon fish-raising, and training course on fish-raising at Tha Ngon; and the two projects on the protection against floods in Huang My region and the Lam Pao project respectively for Vietnam and Thailand. A number of countries and international organizations at the meeting pledged to further their assistance to the Interim Inter-Governmental Mekong Committee.

OFFICIAL ON NAVAL BUILDUP IN KAMPUCHEAN WATERS

BK280125 Bangkok POST in English 28 Jan 81 p 1

[Text] The Royal Thai Navy has boosted its patrol force off Trat Province to counter any possible intrusion by alien gunboats and armed trawlers massing near Thai waters, RTN chief-of-staff Adm Samak Saiwong said yesterday.

Speaking to reporters at RTN headquarters, Adm Samak said that intelligence reports showed that the alien naval forces were most active near Kampuchea's Kong Island, which is opposite Trat. He said the naval force buildup inside Kampuchean waters is being closely watched by Thai reconnaissance planes and gunboat patrols. The RTN has also asked Thai fishing trawlers operating in the area to report any developments, he said. Adm Samak said Thai naval forces were ready to retaliate against any act of aggression and to prevent any unauthorised intrusion in Thai waters.

On December 28 an armed Kampuchean fishing boat manned by Vietnamese officers and a Khmer crew chased a Thai trawler into Thai waters. The Kampuchean boat was sunk after it fired on two Thai gunboats which had answered a distress call put out by the trawler. The Kampuchean boat had been modified from a seized Thai trawler. Six Vietnamese and two Khmers were believed to have died in the clash.

PROSPECTS FOR KAMPUCHEAN COALITION PLAN VIEWED

BK250221 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 25 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Khmer Rouge Is Playing Tough With ASEAN"]

[Text] Politicans and journalists, rightly or wrongly, try to act within the realm of the possible -- at best, partially successfully. Neither ASEAN leaders nor we, in these columns, had expected the Khmer Rouge to keep the 23 January deadline with a firm 'yes' or firm 'no' to the proposal that had been put forward 2 months ago by Singapore about the formation of a 'loose coalition' that would be internationally acceptable and would receive international aid for the patriotic forces of Kampuchea to oust the Vietnamese occupiers. The equation formulated by Singapore was simple and, if we may say so, was excellent, but it was viewed as a double-edged weapon in that any acceptance would mean the internationalization of aid to the forces of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, while the status quo just meant Khmer Rouge, fully backed by China, opposed the Vietnamese who, in turn, are fully backed by the Soviet Union.

Possibly from the Chinese and Khmer Rouge point of view, ASEAN 'good offices' are not necessary right now until the UN General Assembly again meets later this year when the high international prestige of ASEAN may again be called upon to play a role -- to get Democratic Kampuchea to keep its seat in the UN. ASEAN leaders might have to do a lot of rethinking on this subject and, as a matter of fact, the leaders of Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore have been and are doing that right now. ASEAN is not an organization that can be bullied -- those who do not believe that will find that out in no time.

Sihanouk has made his own suggestion that both Son Sann and Khieu Sampan should meet him in Beijing and thrash out problems -- but the Chinese leaders seem quite lukewarm about it and we would be surprised if such an exercise in attaining unity ever takes shape. Sihanouk talks about the Khmer Rouge dissolving the communist party and downgrading Pol Pot in order to acquire an international image of respectability but, although he does not say it, we can confidently presume that the world will not be hoodwinked and the genocide will not be forgotten -- there are long memories when the atrocities of Pol Pot are in question, since even the genocide of Hitler is still mentioned almost in a routine manner.

Let there be no doubt in the minds of anybody that the representative of Democrati Kampuchea sits in the United Nations because of extraordinary efforts by ASEAN. And, further, there should be also no doubts in the mind of anybody that Democratic Kampuchea or the Khmer Rouge stand convicted of genocide. ASEAN must do a lot of rethinking on this issue, and from all the reports we receive from Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur and Singapore, a lot of rethinking is being done. ASEAN is an organization that works through the process of consensus and there is not even the faintest hope that there will be minor differences when the top men sit down and discuss this matter.

But we must also think about those who are against ASEAN efforts for uniting Khmer resistance forces so that a political solution can be found for Kampuchea. The UN voting record should reveal the names of those countries. So, if the ASEAN solution for a 'loose coalition' fails, both the Khmer Rouge and China must chalk up round 1 to the Soviet Union, and the Soviet Union, as everybody who reads newspapers knows, has been extremely active in this region to the point of overstepping diplomatic nuances.

GOVERNMENT NARCOTICS SUPPRESSION DRIVE DISCUSSED

Police Chief's Remarks

BK280600 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Interview given by Police Department Director General Gen Suraphon Chunlaphram to unidentified newsmen on 27 January -- recorded]

[Text] [Suraphon] We have the situation at Ban Hin Taek under complete control. Troops have been deployed in strategic areas to augment the police operations and to provide assurances for the people in Mae Sai District. I am pleased to say that the cooperation between the police, army and air force units during the opeation has been excellent.

[Question] How long do you expect the current operatin to drag on, with Khun Sa's men still in the area?

[Answer] At first we thought that the operation would be of short duration -- we felt they would stop fighting shortly after we launched our suppression operation. It looks like the operation will be prolonged, as they are trying to regroup and fight back. In any event, we will try our best to keep them out of our territory.

[Question] Have they used heavy weapons, such as antiaircraft and artillery guns?

[Answer] No, they have only used antipersonnel grenade launchers.

[Question] Does the government plan to relocate the local people, or does it have plans of a similar nature?

[Answer] I met with the Chiang Rai governor last night. We agreed that after the end of the suppression operation the province will allow innocent people to return to earn a normal living. Those under detention now will be interrogated, and if it is learned that they were not involved in the fighting, they will be resettled in the province's settlement areas. The governor has agreed to this. Troops have been deployed in Mae Sai since yesterday. Therefore, there is nothing to worry about as far as the security of the people is concerned.

Editorials on Drive

BK271535 [Editorial report] Four Thai-language dailies -- MATUPHUM, MATICHON, SIAM RAT and THAI RAT -- on 25, 26 and 27 January carried editorials commenting on the Thai Government's suppression drive against notorious drug kingpin Khun Sa's stronghold at Hin Taek village in the border area of Mea Chan District, Chiang Rai Province. The government's combined military, police and civilian forces launched the operation on 20 January and reportedly captured huge amounts of weapons and medical supplies in the village.

The 25 January MATUPHUM editorial, entitled "The War in the Northern Region," cited official reports on the unexpected discovery of the huge caches of medical supplies and weapons during the raid on Hin Taek village, which leads to the suspicion that "these foreign troops might be backed by some big shots who have procured these weapons and war materiel for them." The editorial continued: "It should be noticed that the manner in which they occupied that part of the country indicates that they intended to stay there permanently, not temporarily. It is reported that some of their strongholds are no different than ordinary small towns in that they are equipped with all public facilities, including conventional administrative and taxation systems."

The editorial concluded by saying: "This operation is aimed at defending Thailand's national sovereignty from illegal occupation by foreign troops and at suppressing the world's big narcotics source. The Thai Government has made the correct move. However, what puzzles everyone is the question of how these foreign troops managed to get into Thai territory and violate Thai laws for several decades. It is very possible that they have been backed by some big shots in this country. How would the Thai Government explain this mysterious story to the people of the world?"

The 26 January MATICHON editorial, entitled "The Double-Edged Sword," noted: "The existence of minority groups' armed forces is a common problem faced by all countries. There are many reasons for their existence. For example, they might be used as a 'buffer' between two countries that have different administrative systems, or as a front line to ward off external infiltration by any group of individuals who have seized the ruling power of the country for their personal interests." The editorial continued: "The Thai Government realizes that the Burmese Communist Party is trying to expand its influence over areas along the Thai-Burmese border. It, therefore, is suppressing this armed minority group to prevent it from falling into communist hands. We suggest that the government and those in charge of national security review certain policies in dealing with various movements and groups in this country. We must bear in mind that any movement, particularly the independent ones which do not follow the country's laws, can expand beyond the government's control and become the double-edged sword, as in the case of Khun Sa."

The 26 January SIAM RAT editorial, entitled "The Opium Suppression -- How Long Will It Continue?" presented a brief biography of Khun Sa, the self-proclaimed leader of the Shan United Army, and reviewed the government's raid on his stronghold at Hin Taek village. The editorial cited the Police Department's statement justifying the suppression operation against the drug kingpin's base and points out international efforts to suppress narcotics trade. It noted that this group of drug producers and traffickers are using the cause of national liberation merely as a pretext to carry out their illegal business.

The editorial concluded by saying "We wonder how this movement was allowed to grow so large on Thai soil. The government was certainly able to detect its presence. We hope that the suppression operation against this drug producing and trading racket will be continued through to the end."

The 27 January MATUPHUM editorial, entitled "Khun Sa and the Minority Group Problem," said the sudden statement made by Deputy Prime Minister Prachuap Suntharangkun on the setting of a 500,000-baht bounty on Khun Sa has surprised everyone because Khun San, alias Chang Si-fu, and his people have been ignored by many previous governments, which enabled him to build up his strength in Thai territory and his personal relations with some generals and senior officers in the Thai Armed Forces.

The editorial cited reports from the Internal Security Operations Command as saying that certain neighboring countries like Laos are welcoming minority groups to help them grow opium, and noted: "The problem of the minority groups in the north is no longer a minor matter." The editorial revealed that the suppression of the notorious drug racket of Khun Sa was only an accident resulting from a border patrol police team clash with Khun Sa's men on 20 January and a conflict of opinions among the officials concerned.

The editorial concluded by saying: "The operation to push Khun Sa's armed forces out of Thai territory is a good thing. However, it is not known whether the government has mapped out any plans to cope with the problems that may arise from the operation. No one can be sure that the operation will not trigger any other problems in the northern region."

The 27 January THAI RAT editorial, entitled "Who Is Backing Khun Sa?" said: "It was reported that senior government officials had earlier met with Khun Sa and asked him to withdraw his troops from Thai territory. Khun Sa and his people maintained large arms caches and built up their 'strongholds,' including permanent structures on Thai soil. The question now is: Who allowed Khun Sa to establish an independent state in Thailand?" The editorial pointed out that the area where Khun Sa built his bases is not beyond the reach of government officials. If government officials had strictly enforced the country's laws, those 17 policemen would not have had to sacrifice their lives in the operation against the drug kingpin.

The editorial noted: "So far, the government officials concerned have not yet spelled out the government's antinarcotics policy or what action would be taken against the officials who have ignored the problem in that part of the country, leaving the impression that Khun Sa is above the country's laws, and the government officials."

FORMER CPT FRONT SPOKESMAN INTERVIEWED

BK130143 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 13 Jan 82 pp 1, 10

[By S. Kasitipradit and Phiphat Loetkittisuk]

[Text] Si Inthapanti, a former official of the Public Relations Department [PRD] who was named spokesman of a front organization of the Communist Party of Thailand in 1976, disclosed yesterday that the "jungle conflict" reached a break-up point when the CPT rejected most of the recommendations of the front for a more "independent line." Si flew back to Bangkok yesterday from Sweden, where he had been staying since May, 1981, when he left Kunming, southern China, having stayed with two leading CPT members, Wirat Angkhathawon (a member of the CPT's Politburo) and Plueng Wannasi (a member of the CPT's Central Committee) since he fled to China from Laos in November, 1979.

In an exclusive interview with the NATION, Si, 44, indicated that the CPT and the front, the Committee for Coordination of Patriotic and Democratic Forces (CCPDF) developed conflicts over policy matters before the series of defections started in 1980 from the jungle. "The breakup point came when the front also wanted a role for itself, while the CPT refused to be responsive to suggestions of changes from the front, which naturally contained several lines of thinking," he said.

Si is the first defector from the jungle to admit having met, stayed and discussed the issues with such leading CPT members as Wirat and Plueng. Si quoted the leading CPT figures as saying that the outlawed party would convene its long-delayed congress "after all sectors of the party in various zones have completed their analyses of the Thai society."

The former communist front member said a member of the CPT Central Committee told him that the fourth congress would have to be held to "resolve internal problems." The timing of the party congress, however, would have to wait until a consensus could be reached on the situation within the party. Si refused to be more specific in his analysis of the conflicts between the CPT and CCPDF (in which former student activist Thirayut Bunmi served as secretary general until he defected last year). But he did indicate that the CPT's heavy dependence on the Chinese Communist Party and the CCPDF's demand for a more nationalist line clashed head-on before the stream of defectors began from the jungle.

"The main reason that forced me to resign as spokesman of the CCPDF was the feeling that the CPT did not give us enough respect by using our name without having consulted us in advance," Si said. Si said he told Wirat in December, 1980, that he wanted to leave China for Sweden. "It took me three months to process the whole departure, which eventually took place in March, 1981," he said.

The former government official and a free-lance journalist said he decided in December, 1976 to "take to the hills" for fear of political reprisals following the Oct 6, 1976 bloodbath at Thammasat University. "The situation then was very oppressive. I was subjected to all sorts of intimidation. I decided first to seek asylum with the U.S. Embassy, which turned down my request. Later I was contacted by the CPT and left for the jungle on Dec 30, 1976," Si said.

For the first 3 months, Si was stationed in a CPT base in Chiang Rai Province. In March, 1977, he was advised to proceed to Laos. He ended up at Muang Sing of Oudomsai Province, about 200 km from the Thai border and about 70 km from the Chinese border. "The CCPDF was formed as a front organization in September of that year. And I was appointed spokesman," he recalled.

The Sino-Vietnamese conflicts affected the CPT and its front organization to a great extent. Si recalled: "In late 1979, Laos handed an ultimatum for us to leave the Lao territory. In November, 1979, I left for China together with Mongkhon Na Nakhon, Khaisaeng Suksai and Nopphon Suwanphanit. Since then, I was cut off from all activities in the Thai territory."

Si said that before he left China in March last year for Sweden, he had discussions with Wirat in Kunming, southern China, about the CPT's thinking. "I asked Wirat whether the CPT's line was really for the benefit of Thailand. The second question was whether the CPT was sincere in fighting for real democracy. Wirat admitted to me that his party might have committed some mistakes, since most of the party members were peasants. That's all he was willing to say. He, however, was ready to listen to my criticism without comment," Si said.

The former PRD official said that he had decided to return to Thailand "because I feel that the political atmosphere now is more democratic. I hope Oct 6, 1976 would have served as a good lesson for those involved, and that history would not repeat itself." Si added: "I also hope that the government would not do anything that would push the people into the jungle once again." Si said he had received assurances from the Thai Ambassador to Sweden, Wichet Suthayakhom, that all charges against him had been lifted. "I was covered by the amnesty declared during the Kriangsak government," he said.

During his 9-month stay in Sweden, Si said he took up some language courses. He was there as a political refugee.

Commentary on Interview

BK161300 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 16 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "The Ties That Bind"]

[Excerpts] On 12 January many reporters crowded Don Muang Airport. They were awaiting the return from Sweden of Si Inthapanti, aged 44, a former official of the Public Relations Department who had gone into the hills to join the Communist Party of Thailand [CPT] after the disturbances in Bangkok involving students in October 1976.

The following points were obvious from Si's own accounts:

1. Laos, which has been under Vietnamese domination since the fall of the Souvanna Phouma government in 1975, has been giving refuge and base facilities to the CPT. This fact stands out contradicting the public statements of both Lao and Vietnamese leaders that they would not interfere in Thailand's internal affairs. It was only in 1979, after the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea and the Chinese military offensive against Vietnam, that Laos stopped giving assistance and refuge to the CPT.

2. Si is one of the last members of the front organization -- the Committee for Coordination of Patriotic and Democratic Forces -- to return to Thailand, the other members having returned before him, and so must end any hope that the CPT may have had of joining forces with students, journalists and intellectuals in order to broaden their base of followers, proving once again that the CPT is doctrinaire and reactionary, having no broad-based appeal.

3. The fact that Si and the 30 or so other Thai before him could leave China at their request is interesting, for it indicates the deteriorating relationship between the CPT and China. For a certainty, the CPT hardliners would not be pleased at the many people leaving them to return to Thailand, for it clearly indicates their failure to hold them. Despite this, the Chinese authorities have allowed them to leave.

4. Apart from Si's doubts concerning whether the CPT is really working for the benefit of Thailand and for true democracy, which echoes the reasons given by the others who had defected from the CPT, Si also said that he decided to return after 5 years and 13 days of exile to take care of his old parents, who are in poor health. My parents need me to take care of them, he said. It shows that Si is really like any other Thai -- his sense of filial duty is strong, as in most of us.

BRIEFS

EEC 1981 AID -- Thailand received a total of 524 million baht in the form of technical and economic assistance from the EEC last year. This was about 300 million baht higher than the estimate. The entire amount of the money was spent on several agricultural development projects, with its major part extended to the development of water sources in Pha Mong area. Director General of the Department of Technical and Economic Cooperation Aphilat Osathanon revealed that during the past few years EEC assistance to Thailand was widening. [Excerpt] [Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 19 Jan 82 BK]

ORDERS FOR RICE -- Local exporters this week received orders for some 32,000 tons of top-grade rice worth about 260 million baht. The 32,000 tons of cereal will be for shipment to buyers within next month. [Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 25 Jan 82 BK]

DEATH OF SOVIET LEADER MIKHAIL SUSLOV NOTED

Party-State Condolences

OW271557 Hanoi VNA in English 1539 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 27 -- The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam today sent a joint message of condolences to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet and the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. over the demise of M.A. Suslov. The message reads:

"We are deeply grieved to learn of the demise of Comrade M.A. Suslov, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the C.P.S.U. Central Committee, deputy to the USSR Supreme Soviet, chairman of the Foreign Relations Commission of the Soviet of the Union, and twice Hero of Socialist Labour of the Soviet Union.

"A well-known activist of the C.P.S.U. and a prominent combatant of the international communist and workers' movement, Comrade M.A. Suslov devoted all his life to the lofty revolutionary cause of the Communist Party and the people of the Soviet Union, to the communist ideal. In all his positions Comrade M.A. Suslov proved to be a talented organizer, having meritoriously fulfilled all the tasks assigned to him by the party and the people of the Soviet Union, and a great theoretician, having actively contributed to preserving the purity of Marxism-Leninism and enriching it.

"A prominent international activist, Comrade M.A. Suslov always attended to the consolidation and strengthening of the oneness of mind of all-sided cooperation between the fraternal countries of the socialist community, to the militant solidarity of the communist and workers' movement, and made considerable contributions to the cause of peace and friendship among nations and to international cooperation. Comrade M.A. Suslov's revolutionary life is a bright example of the virtues and quality of a genuine communist.

"In his capacity and as a great friend of Vietnam, Comrade M.A. Suslov always extended invaluable wholehearted assistance to the revolution of the Vietnamese people. He paid constant attention to the consolidation and development of the great friendship and all-sided cooperation between the parties and the states of Vietnam and the Soviet Union.

"Comrade M.A. Suslov's death is a great loss not only to the Communist Party and the people of the Soviet Union, but also to other socialist countries and the international communist movement. We wish to express our most profound sympathy to the C.P.S.U. Central Committee, Presidium of the Supreme Soviet and the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. and to the bereaved family".

28 Jan NHAN DAN Article

OW280707 Hanoi VNA in English 0713 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 28 -- Deeply grieved at the demise of Comrade M.A. Suslov, the communists and the entire people of Vietnam express profound condolences to the Soviet Communists and people, says NHAN DAN in a frontpaged article today. The central organ of the Communist Party of Vietnam and the other Hanoi papers today frontpage a black framed portrait of Suslov, an obituary released by TASS, and the message of condolences from the Vietnamese leaders.

NHAN DAN Says: "Comrade Suslov has departed from us but his revolutionary life remains a bright example of a communist who devoted all his long life to the prosperity of his country and his people's happiness, to the triumph of scientific communism, to world peace and the friendship among nations.

"His life has been one of absolute loyalty to his party and people. With his vast capabilities and rich experiences, he has greatly contributed to the success of socialism in the Soviet [Union] throughout the world. Suslov was an eminent theoretician of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the international communist movement.

"He has greatly contributed to cultivating the solid militant solidarity and developing the all-sided cooperation between the Vietnamese and Soviet parties, states and peoples. The Gold Star Order conferred on him by the Vietnamese state shows the Vietnamese people's profound respect and love for their great friend."

NHAN DAN goes on: "The communists and entire people of Vietnam express their boundless regret at the demise of Comrade M.A. Suslov, their esteemed friend. They extend their deepest condolences to the Communist Party, state and fraternal people of the Soviet Union and to the bereaved family."

NHAN DAN HAILS AWARD OF LENIN ORDER TO LEADERS

OW271315 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 26 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 27 January editorial: "Blooming Spring of the Great Vietnamese-Soviet Friendship"]

[Text] A great and happy report from Moscow reached us on the first day of this Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog] spring: On the occasion of the 75th birthdays of Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of our party Central Committee, and Comrade Truong Chinh, member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and chairman of the SRV Council of State, the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium has decided to award them the noble order bearing the name of the world revolution's teacher -- the great Lenin. This new manifestation of the ardent Soviet-Vietnamese friendship constitutes a magnificent bouquet greeting our people on the occasion of the new spring, making our nation's traditional festival warmer and more splendid.

Following the path of Vladimir Ilich Lenin and of the October Revolution, our people have fought valiantly, surmounted all difficulties in national construction and defense, defeated all cruel, aggressive imperialist forces, liberated their land, reunified their fatherland and advanced their whole country to socialism. The Vietnamese Communists are preparing for their fifth party congress with firm solidarity and cohesion under the slogan "All for the Socialist Fatherland, for the People's Happiness." We are advancing toward the congress with just pride in our party and heroic people.

Founded and educated by the most beloved President Ho Chi Minh and under the Central Committee's clear-sighted leadership, our party and people have gone through glorious phases of struggle and achieved most glorious historic victories. Thanks to these victories, the Vietnamese nation has entered a new era, the era of independence, freedom and socialism.

The deep origin of all of our victories is the guidance of the epoch's invincible revolutionary doctrine. After President Ho Chi Minh, the teacher of the Vietnamese revolution who first introduced Marxism-Leninism into our country, there have been many other outstanding leaders who have made great contributions to the liberation of the people and many experienced and tested Marxist-Leninists who have been absolutely faithful to the party, their class and the nation.

Comrades Le Duan and Truong Chinh have worked tirelessly for more than half a century and have been outstanding leaders of our party and state. They are our front-rank patriots and internationalists. Together with our party and people, they have associated themselves with the great Soviet Union since the first days of the Vietnamese revolution.

Like the awarding last year of the Order of Lenin by the USSR Supreme Soviet to Comrade Pham Van Dong on the occasion of his 75th birthday, the conferment of this noble order on Comrades Le Duan and Truong Chinh by the USSR Supreme Soviet constitutes not only a solemn commendation of the CPSU and the Soviet state for our party and state leaders' contributions to the revolutionary movement, the cause of consolidation of socialism and peace and to the development and strengthening of the militant friendship and all-round cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union, but also a solemn commendation of the glorious revolutionary cause of all our party and people. This important event is our common honor.

Our people are greatly elated over the high evaluation by the CPSU and the Soviet state for the contributions of Comrades Le Duan, Truong Chinh and Pham Van Dong, the close comrades in arms and faithful successors of beloved President Ho Chi Minh, those who have, together with other leaders, led all the party, armed forces and people in fighting for the victory of Marxism-Leninism in our country, thus contributing to the cause of liberation of all nations and strengthening of forces of socialism in the world.

The victories of our country's revolution have always been linked to the great support and assistance of the Communist Party, state and fraternal people of the Soviet Union. At the present stage when our people are facing great tasks of building socialism in the whole country and defending our socialist fatherland against the Chinese hegemonist expansionists, in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces, the Soviet Union is giving us great sympathy and support and extremely important and valuable assistance. The treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two countries, the agreements on multifaceted bilateral cooperation and the annual summit talks by the party and state leaders of the two fraternal countries have manifested the new stage of all-round development of the Vietnamese-Soviet relations.

The great and effective assistance of the Soviet Union has been a factor of our victories in our national construction and defense. Our people's sentiments of deep love and sincere gratitude for the Soviet Union were notably manifested in our state's awarding in July 1980 to Comrades Brezhnev, Suslov and Kosygin of the Gold Star Order, our country's highest order. In the draft of its document to be presented to the fifth congress, our party once again strongly affirmed that the cornerstone of our party's and state's international line and foreign policy is all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union. This is our long-term and fundamental strategy and a matter of utmost importance for our people's revolutionary cause.

Greeting the spring of Nham Tuat, we respectfully extend the feelings of fraternal solidarity and the most cordial comradeship to the Communist Party, state and great people of the Soviet Union. Our people will forever remember Comrade Leonid Ilich Brezhnev's words full of revolutionary sentiments: "To unite with Vietnam is the dictate of the heart and mind." We sincerely thank the Communist Party, state and fraternal people of the Soviet Union.

LEADERS PAY TET VISITS THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

OW280735 Hanoi VNA in English 0708 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 28 -- Vietnamese party and state leaders paid Tet (Lunar New Year) visits to various parts of the country.

President of the Council of State Truong Chinh went sightseeing at the spring flower show at the Lenin Park in the capital city.

Chairman of Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong visited the northern border province of Cao Bang, where the late President Ho Chi Minh installed the first revolutionary base following his return to the country in 1941. Chairman Pham Van Dong commended the Cao Bang population for its high food-crop output last year in spite of heavy consequences of the Chinese war of aggression in February 1979. He urged the local people and armed forces to remain constantly prepared to inflict harder blows on the Chinese expansionists if they dare invade Vietnam again.

Le Duc Tho, Political Bureau member and secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee, toured Hoang Lien Son, another northern border province.

General Vo Nguyen Giap, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers, paid visits to the rice-growing provinces of Thai Binh and Ha Nam Ninh in the Red River Delta.

Tran Quoc Hoan, Political Bureau member and secretary of the party Central Committee, visited Haiphong Port City.

ISSUE OF NAM BO LANDLESS PEASANTS EXAMINED

BK270430 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese December 1981, pp 34-36

[Unattributed article: "Why Are a Number of Peasants in the Nam Bo Rural Areas Still Landless?"]

[Text] The policy on agrarian reform in the southern rural areas was published 5 years ago. It was designed to allocate land and ricefields to peasants who have not enough land and ricefields or none at all. Why has this policy not been adequately implemented? Why is it that a number of peasants in the Nam Bo rural areas still have no land and ricefields or not enough? And must they resign themselves to being employed and exploited?

There are a few landless peasants who dare not receive a land allocation. If they accept some land or ricefields, they will sell it or leave it fallow. This situation actually exists and has happened against the landless peasants' will. Poor peasants allocated some land and ricefields have not been assisted by local administration in developing the material conditions for production. They have had to hire machinery, draft animals and plows at high prices and borrow seeds and capital at high interest. As their production output cannot match their costs, they must ask for employment all the year round to earn a living.

The fact that large numbers of peasants still have no land and ricefields or not enough is due to the failure of some local authorities to reduce the excessive amounts of land and ricefields being used by their owners for exploitative purposes. Moreover, the land confiscated or requisitioned and that voluntarily surrendered by exploitative elements should have been allocated to peasants having little or no land and ricefields. The land has even been used illegally by some state agencies, cadres, workers and civil servants and by some local cadres for their own production purposes.

Some 13 percent of the peasant families in Dan Quan hamlet, Viet Hung village, Phu Tan District, Minh Hai Province still each occupy from 5 to 17 hectares of land and ricefields. In addition to their own manpower, each year these families have to hire between 30 and 60 percent of their total requirements of labor in order to complete work on their land. Mr To Van An in this hamlet owns 17 hectares. He rents out 2 hectares and keeps 15 hectares for cultivation. With seven workers of his own, he has to hire 61 percent of the total required labor in order to complete cultivation of all his land and ricefields.

From 1978 to 1981, the state agencies and cadres in Vinh Khanh village, Thoai Son District, An Giang Province, seized 147.5 hectares of land and used it for their own production purposes.

This land was seized as follows: from 25 to 35.5 hectares by two agencies; 7 hectares by one agency; 4 hectares each by six agencies; 2 hectares by one agency; 6 hectares by one cadre; 4 hectares each by two cadres; 2 hectares each by 11 cadres; from 1 to 1.5 hectares each by six cadres and 0.5 hectare by one cadre. In Hoa Hung hamlet, Hoa Binh Thanh village, Chau Thanh District, An Giang Province, 21.1 hectares were seized by eight units and individuals of various provincial agencies; 26.6 hectares were seized by some district cadres; and 5.8 hectares were seized by four village cadres for their own production purposes. However, they have all rented out the land for money or rice. Meanwhile, 22 families in this hamlet have no land. They have to work for others or rent land from others who have excess land.

In localities where such seizures of land have occurred, there is obviously no land left for allocation to those who have little or no land for cultivation. As a result, there are still many peasants who have to work for others or rent land from those who own too much land and use it for exploitation. Various forms of exploiting labor through hiring agricultural workers and collecting heavy rentals are therefore prevalent in many parts of the south.

The following forms of exploitation prevail in some hamlets of Minh Hai Province: Renting ricefields for rice or money -- some 1,000 square meters of ricefields are rented for 160 to 300 kg or rice or 200 dong; hiring cheap labor in the pre-harvest season -- 40 dong for a man to plow 1,000 square meters of land (60 dong must be paid when the harvest is in full swing); paying 15 dong for transplanting 0.1 hectare of land (in the harvest season from 20 to 25 dong must be paid); hiring labor with a rice loan -- 20 kg of rice for a job such as banking up rice plots over 0.2 hectare of ricefield or transplanting rice over 0.4 hectare (in harvest season 30 kg of rice must be used instead); lending money for rice to be collected at harvest, such as in the case of Nguyen Van Hoi, who borrowed 300 dong and paid back 800 kg of rice; giving monetary loans plus daily, monthly, seasonal and yearly interest with rates ranging from 10 to 20 percent; giving loans of paddy to get payment back in paddy plus interest, such as in the case of Hoang Van Hoac, who borrowed 200 kg of paddy and paid back 300 kg, and the case of Tran Thi Bay, who borrowed 800 kg and paid back 1,200 kg; lending rice to get paddy back at harvest time such as in the case of Nguyen Van Duong, who borrowed 50 kg of rice and reimbursed with 200 kg of paddy equivalent to 120 kg of rice and the case of Ma Tien, who borrowed 100 kg of rice and paid back 300 kg of paddy equivalent to 180 kg of rice; and finally, selling commodities on credit for payment in paddy at harvest time -- 20 dong worth of commodities must be paid for with 20 kg of paddy (1 kg of paddy in the harvest season cost 4 or 5 dong).

The situation of land and ricefields being seized and exploited is causing difficulties to the livelihood of not a small number of laboring peasants and their families, and is hampering the development of production and the socialist transformation of the southern countryside. Why do some peasants still have little or no land and ricefields, and why are they still being exploited more than 5 years after the policy on agrarian reform was published? Why have some cadres and party members seized peasants' land and ricefields? How have the local authorities dealt with these problems?

Faced with this situation, the correct attitude which we must adopt is to resolutely and urgently continue agrarian reform, eliminate the seizure of land and ricefields for exploitative purposes in agriculture, and resolve the problems of land and ricefields for those peasants with little or no land. At the same time, we should motivate peasants to join in the movement to build production organizations and collectives in order to help each other overcome difficulties and accelerate agricultural production.

The state should formulate a policy to realistically help those peasants who have recently been allocated land and ricefields so that they can have the conditions for developing production.

Financial and material aid should be given on a priority basis to those collective production organizations of peasants which produce effectively. In those localities where the per capita land allocation is small, special attention should be paid to the development of jobs and professions, seeking employment for peasants, and to the relocation of people to new economic zones.

In allocating land and ricefields to those peasants with little or no land, we must use the land and ricefields of those long-standing landlords who have such assets in excess and use them for exploitative purposes; of the rich middle peasants who hire workers to till for them (but not of the needy small peasants who must hire workers to till and harvest for them because they lack breadwinners); and of those nonagricultural people living in towns and cities who previously received some land and ricefields through mistakes.

We must recover all the land and ricefields illegally occupied by the various agencies, factories, army units, individuals, cadres, workers and civil servants, and all the land and ricefields confiscated and requisitioned by the state or voluntarily surrendered by exploitative people which various agencies and individuals have seized for the so-called "self-sufficient production" but are actually renting out for personal benefit. All army units, agencies, factories, cadres, workers and civil servants requiring land on which to produce and improve their livelihood, are authorized to reclaim virgin and fallow land. They cannot take land acquired by peasants. In those localities where peasants cannot till all their land, army units and state agencies, cadres, workers and civil servants may borrow some of the peasants' lands for self-sufficient production but they must use their own manpower in production and are not authorized to hire workers.

The recovered land and ricefields mentioned above will be allocated only to those peasants who now have no land for cultivation or not enough. In those localities where the per capita land allocation is small and the amount of recovered land and ricefields is insufficient for allocation to all those people with little or no land, priority allocation should be given to the families of fallen heroes, wounded soldiers and revolutionaries, and to those landless families whose sons are on active army service. Wherever there are many peasant families without housing land, the local administration should motivate families with ample housing land to give some to those who need it. When there is no more land for allocation to the remaining landless peasants, these people should be motivated to reclaim virgin and fallow land for cultivation. If there is no more virgin and fallow land to reclaim, such jobs as handicrafts and maritime-products processing should be organized and developed to seek employment for these people and to stabilize their livelihood. In overpopulated areas where the per capita land allocation is small, it is necessary to organize the relocation of people to new economic zones where there is plenty of land to till.

TASKS OF ARMED FORCES IN NEW STAGE EXPLAINED

BK251409 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Dec 81 pp 1-5

[Editorial: "Important Tasks of the People's Armed Forces in the New Stage" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] In a speech at the First Session of the Seventh National Assembly in July this year, Comrade Le Duan, on behalf of the party Central Committee, pointed out: "With constant vigilance against the Beijing reactionaries and the bellicose imperialist forces, we must mobilize the efforts of the people and the armed forces in all respects and, simultaneously, make the best use of assistance from the Soviet Union and other countries of the socialist community to ensure that our country always has the necessary strength to defeat its enemies under any circumstance and in any type of war they may wage."

The comrade general secretary also said: "We must continue to build the People's Armed Forces so they are strong enough to serve as the pillar of the all-people national defense system and the nucleus of the people's war for the defense of the fatherland.

The People's Army must undergo intensive training to become a powerful revolutionary army with an unshakable determination to win and an ever higher level of standardization and modernization. At the same time, they must participate in production labor and economic construction through suitable methods."

All our party, people and army must be deeply aware of the strategic importance of the task to defend the fatherland and their great responsibility toward the undertaking of building the army and consolidating national defense in the new stage. All our army and all of our cadres and combatants must demonstrate high determination, exert great efforts and develop their constantly improving capabilities in order to fulfill successfully all the tasks entrusted by the party, the state and the people.

THE MOST IMPORTANT AND SACRED TASK OF OUR ARMY IS TO REMAIN READY UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES TO FIGHT AND FIRMLY [?DEFEND] THE SOCIALIST FATHERLAND. The task of defending the fatherland in the new stage is very heavy and complex, as it involves great requirements which are broad in scope and urgent in nature.

A striking feature of this new stage is that our army and people have been and are being forced to cope directly with a hostile policy of our most dangerous direct enemy -- the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists -- with their vast territory, large population and massive army, whose land, airspace and sea lie adjacent to those of our country. For many years they have successively resorted to various overt and covert perfidious maneuvers to counter and sabotage the revolution in our country. When we had just emerged from decades of a war of liberation, they -- staying behind the scene -- employed the lackey Pol Pot-Ieng Sary army to wage a war of aggression on our southwestern border. Afterwards, they blatantly massed over half a million of Chinese troops to launch a war of aggression on our northern border. At present they are still stubbornly pursuing the scheme of weakening and annexing our country together with fraternal Laos and Kampuchea. Using military forces, they have constantly exerted pressure, carried out provocations and launched landgrabbing attacks on our country's border in an attempt to nibble at our territory and weaken our armed forces. They have actively waged psychological and espionage wars by means of very crafty maneuvers to foment national disunity, disrupt political security and public order and safety, and undermine our country politically, ideologically and organizationally. They have feverishly embarked on sabotaging our economy by means of blatant and sophisticated tricks to destablize our economic situation and living conditions and obstruct our people's socialist transformation and socialist construction. They have sought all means to slander Vietnam in an effort to isolate it in the international arena. They have rallied traitors and counterrevolutionaries and formed them into lackey armies to oppose the revolutions in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. In addition to these measures of comprehensive sabotage, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists have continued to prepare actively for a war of aggression against our country. They have truculently stated that "they will teach Vietnam another lesson." Generally speaking, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries, are actually carrying out a VERY INSIDIOUS AND COMPREHENSIVE SABOTAGE STRATEGY against our country in all the political, military, economic, cultural, social and diplomatic fields in an attempt to destabilize and weaken us, to foment rebellions, to launch a war of aggression against our country when an opportunity presents itself, and eventually to annex Vietnam together with Laos and Kampuchea. For this reason, OUR COUNTRY IS NOW IN A SITUATION IN WHICH IT, WHILE ENJOYING PEACE, HAS TO COPE WITH THE COMPREHENSIVE SABOTAGE STRATEGY OF THE CHINESE EXPANSIONISTS AND HEGEMONISTS IN COLLUSION WITH THE U.S. IMPERIALISTS, AND IN WHICH A LARGE-SCALE WAR MAY BREAK OUT.

The world situation is also very tense. World imperialism, led by U.S. imperialism, is strenuously building up its armed forces and actively preparing for a new world war with nuclear weapons.

U.S. imperialism -- the chief, long-term enemy of our people and other peoples throughout the world -- is intensifying its military collusion with the Beijing reactionaries. In view of this situation, we have to fulfill two very weighty strategic tasks: To step up the building of socialism and always maintain the highest combat readiness simultaneously so as to defend the fatherland firmly under any circumstances and, at the same time, to contribute actively to the struggle to preserve peace throughout the world.

As the principal instrument in the direct struggle against wars of aggression and as the pillar of the all-people national defense system, our armed forces must naturally stand on the first line of the national defense front. Our armed forces must certainly fulfill their task of firmly defending the independence and freedom of the fatherland, the sacred sovereignty of the nation, and the territorial integrity, airspace, sea areas, continental shelf, borders and offshore islands of the country, preventing the enemy from infringing upon a single inch of the fatherland's territory. They must firmly defend the state of proletarian dictatorship and the working people's socialist collective mastery; protect political security and public order and safety; and safeguard the cause of socialist revolution and the building of socialism by our people. Together with the entire people, our armed forces must frustrate the Chinese reactionaries' insidious and comprehensive sabotage strategy against our country. Our armed forces must fulfill their national and international duties simultaneously. They must always stand shoulder to shoulder with the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean peoples and armed forces to defend firmly the monumental revolutionary achievements which the three Indochinese countries have recorded and safeguard steadily their present great revolutionary cause -- namely, consolidating national independence and advancing toward socialism. In this way they will be directly contributing to the development of a strong strategic position and increasingly powerful forces for the countries on the Indochinese Peninsula. Only by fulfilling these tasks can our armed forces clearly show themselves worthy of being the pillar of the all-people national defense system.

In addition to the most important task of standing ready to fight in the defense of the fatherland, in the new stage our armed forces also have THE TASKS OF ENGAGING IN PRODUCTIVE LABOR, BUILDING THE ECONOMY IN APPROPRIATE WAYS, and joining the entire people in stepping up socialist transformation and building socialism. Realities have proven that this policy of the party is totally correct. Over the past 5 years and more, along with successfully fulfilling their combat duties joining the entire people in heroically defeating two wars of aggression started by the Beijing expansionists -- thus defending the fatherland's territorial integrity -- and discharging their international obligations to the Kampuchean and Lao peoples, our armed forces have made their contributions to healing our war wounds, restoring production, developing the economy and building the country. The main forces, local forces and units carrying out the task of maintaining combat readiness and fighting on the borders and offshore islands and in the air and on the seas -- as well as the armed forces units engaged in economic work, army logistics units, and so on -- have intensively and actively performed production and economic building duties on different scales and levels and in different methods. In the present economic situation, our armed forces' productive labor and economic building task remains extremely important. This is because it helps to bring about new changes and overcome the major difficulties in our economic and social life. Imbued with the guiding thoughts of the party Central Committee, in economic building our armed forces must first of all join efforts with various economic sectors and localities throughout the country in stepping up agricultural, forestry, fishery and industrial production, and contribute to promoting the development of the energy, mining and capital construction sectors in support of agriculture, forestry, industry and communications and transportation.

At the same time, they must contribute to shaping new economic zones and population centers in important regions; satisfactorily carry out air transportation; fully utilize the capacity, equipment, work forces and discards of national defense factories and enterprises to produce more consumer and export goods; satisfactorily discharge their international duty; and advance international cooperation. Of all the economic building tasks suitable for the conditions of the armed forces, the task of contributing to stepping up the production of grain and food and consumer goods is the most significant. To fulfill their economic tasks, OUR ARMED FORCES MUST DEFINE REALISTIC AND SUITABLE DEMANDS AND PROCEED WITH APPROPRIATE METHODS. The entire armed forces must step up the movement for increased production and practicing economy so as to produce plenty of grain, foodstuffs and consumer goods, thereby helping to stabilize and gradually improve the living conditions of soldiers and reducing the common difficulties of the state and the people. This is a very important and pressing demand for all units from the rear to the frontline, and all cadres, combatants, workers and national defense personnel from organs and units to factories and enterprises. In those units exclusively engaged in economic work and in charge of all or part of the projects under the state plan, it is necessary to correctly define the specific demands and tasks of each unit, to apply satisfactorily various productive labor systems and policies promulgated by the state and, at the same time, to implement close socialist cooperation with various economic sectors and localities so as to develop the strengths and overcome the limitations of military organizations engaged in economic work. The principle that the armed forces must satisfactorily fulfill both the tasks of national defense and economic building must be ensured and these two tasks must be closely coordinated. Our armed forces must certainly strive to make the most active contributions to economic building. This is because they are a revolutionary armed force which is always closely attached to the people in fighting as well as in building, and also because they are a force endowed with considerable capabilities to contribute to the cause of building a prosperous and strong country.

To fulfill these major tasks, the armed forces should MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO BUILD THEMSELVES IN ALL RESPECTS SO AS TO CREATE THE GREATEST POSSIBLE AGGREGATE STRENGTH IN NEW CIRCUMSTANCES AND CONDITIONS. The task of building and defending the socialist fatherland in the new stage requires that our armed forces be built into a powerful people's revolutionary armed force, an increasingly modern regular army which simultaneously stands ready to fight and fights victoriously in the defense of the fatherland and participates in productive labor. In this way they will be contributing to economic building and national construction and fulfilling their national duty and international obligation.

Together with the entire people, our armed forces must always HOLD HIGH THE BANNERS OF NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE AND SOCIALISM. They must clearly realize that, at present, the dangerous and direct enemy of our armed forces and people is Chinese expansionism and hegemonism in collusion with U.S. imperialism. They must resolutely struggle against and defeat all of their acts of sabotage and aggression. They must be highly loyal to the fatherland and socialism, clearly show their working-class character, remain closely attached to the working people, maintain close solidarity with international friends and resolutely fight and defeat all enemies. Our cadres and combatants must ceaselessly uphold socialist patriotism, proletarian internationalism, the sense of collective mastery and revolutionary heroism, and must fulfull all tasks entrusted by the party, the state and the people.

Organizationally, our armed forces have currently reached a higher state of development than ever before. They must constantly IMPROVE THEIR ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE and achieve a coherence and balance between the demands of their tasks and the necessary number of troops, between the main and local forces, between the mobile and on-the-spot forces, and between the standing and reserve forces.

They must correctly settle the relationship between the quantity and quality of troops and satisfactorily implement the military service system.

Our armed forces are being outfitted gradually with increasingly modern facilities, weapons and technical equipment and are facing the new demands of the war for national defense. Our cadres and combatants must make strenuous efforts in studying and training and incessantly raise their cultural, scientific and technical standards as well as their fighting ability so as to MASTER EVER MORE SKILLFULLY, HANDLE EVER MORE EXPERTLY AND MAINTAIN IN A TRULY SATISFACTORY MANNER MODERN EQUIPMENT and make the most of the effectiveness of all the weapons in their possession. Study in several different forms must become a truly wide and vigorous movement, and an indispensable activity and an objective for all cadres and combatants of our armed forces. At this juncture, if they do not study, they will surely be unable to fulfill their tasks satisfactorily.

Our armed forces have undergone more than 35 years of fighting and 5 major fights: A general armed uprising, two wars of national liberation, and two wars of national defense. Our cadres and combatants must know how to carry on and develop the highly diversified military traditions and fighting experience achieved by our armed forces and people over the past few decades and by our forefathers thousands of years ago. At the same time, they must study and creatively apply the progressive experiences of the military science of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. They must fully understand the party's military line in the period of national construction and national defense and make the most active contribution to STUDYING AND RESOLVING NEW PROBLEMS CONCERNING MILITARY SCIENCE AND THE ART OF NATIONAL DEFENSE AGAINST THE NEW ENEMY IN THE NEW CONDITIONS.

At present, our armed forces are in a position in which they must ALWAYS MAINTAIN A VERY HIGH LEVEL OF COMBAT READINESS. Our cadres and combatants must constantly sharpen their vigilance, deepen their hatred for the cruel and perficious enemy, constantly acquire a firm knowledge of the enemy's situation, remain alert in the face of all his activities and the negative phenomena in society, and promptly smash all his maneuvers of sabotage and aggression in any situation.

Our armed forces are actively carrying out the strategically significant campaign "to develop their fine character and increase their fighting strength." This campaign, aimed at developing the general quality and fighting strength of our armed forces, has set correct and realistic targets for 1981 and 1982 which our entire armed forces must concentrate on achieving at all costs. All party and administrative echelons, all mass organizations and all sectors must pay greater attention to the campaign and, depending on their functions, must make practical contributions to helping it obtain fine results.

Building the armed forces, consolidating national defense and defending the fatherland are the responsibilities of the entire party, people and armed forces as well as of the entire system of proletarian dictatorship from the central to the grassroots level UNDER THE CENTRALIZED AND UNIFIED LEADERSHIP OF THE PARTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE. The major experiences of the revolutionary war and the building of the revolutionary armed forces in Vietnam have confirmed this fact, which is the basic condition for creating a great aggregate strength in the Vietnamese revolution and revolutionary war. The correct leadership of the party, the adequate attention of the state, the wholehearted care of the people, the close coordination among all sectors and localities, and the study and training undertaken by the armed forces to enable themselves to fulfill any tasks -- these are the sources of our armed forces' invincible strength in the past, at present and in the future.

The present revolutionary cause of our nation requires that all our cadres and combatants uphold their resolve and readiness to make sacrifices for the fatherland, to devote all their mental powers and physical strength to the defense and building of the fatherland, and to discharge their international duty and to contribute to the world peoples' struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. At the same time, our country's revolutionary cause calls for our entire party and people to devote themselves wholeheartedly to building the armed forces, consolidating national defense and caring for the material and spiritual life of our troops by showing correct understanding, a full sense of responsibility and profound sentiments, and by taking practical actions. This is truly a strong moving force, a sacred sentiment and an indispensable condition for motivating and spurring our armed forces to move forward zealously to fulfill the important tasks entrusted by the party, the state and the people in the new stage.

VO VAN KIET SPEAKS AT CONFERENCE ON YOUTH

BK060736 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 5 Jan 82

[From review of NHAN DAN for 5 January]

[Text] Today's NHAN DAN devotes all of its page 2 to carrying excerpts from a speech delivered on 28 December 1981 by Comrade Vo Van Kiet at the conference to review 6 years of construction and growth of the Ho Chi Minh City Assault Youth Force under the bold headline "New Dien Bien Phu and New Truong Son Are Awaiting the Youth." Comrade Vo Van Kiet's speech points to some experiences gained by the Ho Chi Minh City Assault Youth Force in economic construction. Proceeding from the current situation, Comrade Vo Van Kiet clearly outlines the immediate tasks that must be carried out by the younger generation of the Ho Chi Minh era.

He says: Whom can we count on to exploit the most difficult, immense and fertile part of the more than 3 million hectares of agricultural lands still lying wasted and to satisfactorily exploit and preserve 15 million hectares of forest lands? If your generation neglects this task, your children and your children's children will have to do it. Since this is essential work, the responsibility for it cannot be refused by today's society and passed on to tomorrow's society. In resolutely carrying out difficult and pressing tasks of historic nature, every nation has to depend on the offensive spirit and assault labor of the youth.

Under the call and guidance of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union Central Committee and following in the footsteps of the capital youth -- the pace setter -- the youths of Ho Chi Minh City, Hue City, Vinh City and other centers must prepare plans and conditions in all respects and promptly adopt a system of appropriate and uniform policies and measures this spring with the assistance of the state organs concerned. It is necessary to launch a broad and deep publicity campaign among the youths and organize the first assault labor units for operation on the vital front of land reclamation in support of the state's strategy for taking a big leap forward in agricultural development.

VFF PREPARATORY COMMITTEE HOLDS FIRST MEETING

BK080957 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 7 Jan 82

[Text] The preparatory committee for the VFF congress on 7 January held its first meeting in Hanoi under the chairmanship of Hoang Quoc Viet, chairman of the VFF and head of the preparatory committee. The committee discussed and adopted a number of necessary tasks concerning the forthcoming VFF Congress, which include the drafting of documents for the congress, the supervision of propaganda work and the provision of guidance for front members and organizations in the provinces and municipalities to appoint delegates to the congress. It also discussed procedures on convening the congress according to the front Presidium's decision and defined tasks and functions of the preparatory committee.

PHAM VAN DONG RECEIVES UNICEF REPRESENTATIVES

OW151642 Hanoi VNA in English 1612 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 15 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today received R.Y. Freiberg, representative of the UNICEF office in Geneva, F. Kronfol, representative of the UNICEF office in Hanoi, and delegations of the UNICEF national committees from 17 countries, now on a visit to Vietnam. These delegations are from Great Britain, Belgium, Canada, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Holland, Hungary, the Hellenic Republic, Italy, Norway, Yugoslavia, Australia, France, Finland, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

Chairman Pham Van Dong welcomed the UNICEF officials and thanked them for their assistance to Vietnamese children. F. Kronfol, R.Y. Freiberg and other UNICEF officials expressed their high appreciation of the Vietnamese Government's efforts in child care despite the difficulties the country was facing. They underlined the necessity of providing international aid to Vietnamese children. The reception proceeded in a very cordial and friendly atmosphere.

DO MUOI INSPECTS PHA LAI POWERPLANT CONSTRUCTION

OW151221 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 13 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Do Muoi, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the VCP Central Committee and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, in early January 1982 inspected the construction of the Pha Lai thermoelectric plant.

He stressed: The party and the state have decided that the Pha Lai thermoelectric plant building project is the most important project of the whole country. In this spirit, the various ministries and sectors must give first priority to this key enterprise. First of all, they must concentrate the greatest efforts on making due progress in building and installing various stages of the project so as to be able to put Mechanical Section No 1 into operation by the end of this year. At the same time, they must urgently install the equipment of Mechanical Section No 2 so that it could be put into operation shortly after that. They must ensure the balanced completion of all stages of the project both inside and outside the plant.

Also at this project, Vietnamese cadres and workers and Soviet experts working there on 11 January pledged to strive to step up various aspects the project to complete the construction and installation work with high quality so that Mechanical Section No 1 could be put into operation by the end of this year in accordance with a decision of the Council of Ministers.

In December 1981 Construction Company No 18 registered the highest construction record ever. At a recent work recapitulation meeting, the federation of machinery installation enterprises expressed determination to apply the success lesson of last year at Bim Son calling for direct guidance by the director in construction work and to strive, from the 6th to the 10th day of the first lunar month, to bring in 600 more machine installation cadres and workers from subordinate units to join Joint Enterprise No 69 in vigorously pushing ahead the tempo of installation of equipment at the Pha Lai thermoelectric plant in the first quarter of the year.

PHAM HUNG TALKS WITH PUBLIC SECURITY FORCES

BK191048 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 17 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Pham Hung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and concurrently ministry of interior, recently worked with public security forces of Ho Chi Minh City and Hau Giang Province.

On this occasion, Comrade Pham Hung was briefed on the political security and social order situation and on the training results of the People's Security Forces in these two localities.

During their training, the People's Security Forces in these two localities have been guided by the city, provincial and precinct and district party committees with great attention. Thanks to adequate preparation and efficient organization, cadres and combatants of these forces have been able to understand the revolutionary situation and tasks more thoroughly, thus heightening their vigilance against all schemes and activities of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists who, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries, are carrying out a multifaceted war of sabotage against our revolution and the revolutions in fraternal Laos and Kampuchea.

In addition, they have been able clearly to see the urgent need to continue to make the People's Security Forces pure and strong along with improving their organization so that they can fulfill their task of safeguarding political security and maintaining social order and safety in light of the new situation

To date, the improvement of the organization and assignment of cadres basically has been completed at the municipal and provincial levels and is being carried out at the precinct, district, city ward and village levels. The city and province have studied plans for the consolidation of the Public Security Forces in city wards and villages, with special attention given to the development of people's security teams.

The Hau Giang provincial public security service has promulgated temporary regulations on the organization and operation of village public security forces in order to draw experience. The service is also consolidating and developing people's security teams at all levels both in terms of organization and operation in order to combine the activities of these teams closely with production and other daily activities of the local people. Many people's security terms are now able to operate effectively while progress has been made in leadership and command over activities related to the effort to master the situation and inspect, direct and assist various establishments in an intensive and practical manner.

Combining the task of safeguarding security and social order with the organization and training of cadres, provincial level cadres in charge of a district must grasp the situation in all villages of that district successfully while district level cadres in charge of a village must grasp the situation in all hamlets and the progress made in the development and operation of people's security teams.

Thanks to the adoption of a new organizational system and more scientific guidance and command methods, a harmonious operational system has been created initially for public security forces from the provincial to the district, city ward and village levels, thus enabling them to grasp the situation more firmly and carry out their work more quickly and effectively.

Praising the Ho Chi Minh City and Hau Giang provincial public security forces for their efforts and training results and pointing to the tasks that require their attention, Comrade Pham Hung said: Public security forces at all levels review and evaluate the results of training in this phase accurately so that commendations and rewards can be promptly considered for units, cadres and combatants with outstanding achievements, and, at the same time, they must report the training results and plans for promoting these results to the party committee, administration and mass organizations at all levels for further guidance and suggestions.

It is also necessary firmly to maintain and develop these training results and strive to overcome all existing shortcomings and weaknesses at all costs while continuing satisfactorily to implement various resolutions of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, Directive No 92 of the party Central Committee Secretariat and the decree of the Council of Ministers on the need to make People's Security Forces pure and strong and improve their organizational, political, professional and ethical quality. This is to ensure that all tasks entrusted to them are performed outstandingly.

Comrade Pham Hung urged public security forces at all levels to pay special attention to consolidating the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union organizations among the People's Security Forces and to developing the assault role of youths in the movement to instill revolutionary ideology and ethics and in carrying out orders and organizing life as well as in fighting. On the occasion of the forthcoming Tet, Comrade Pham Hung wished the cadres and combatants of the Ho Chi Minh City and Hau Giang Provincial People's Security Forces and their families good health, happiness and many successes in the new year.

PHAM HUNG VISITS UNITS IN HO CHI MINH CITY

BK191055 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] According to a Ho Chi Minh City-based VNA correspondent, Comrade Pham Hung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, visited Production Collective No 2, Binh Chanh village, the Pham Van Hai State Farm and the marine products research subinstitute in Ho Chi Minh City on 15 January.

Comrade Pham Hung was elated at the results obtained by Production Collective No 2 in applying product contracts in the past two crop seasons, which have helped to make it firm and strong. He urged the production collective members and leadership to gradually improve this new contractual method so that they can increase their income constantly and consolidate socialist production relations, firmly and in close combination with the effort to shape a new type of man.

At the Pham Van Hai State Farm, Comrade Pham Hung stopped by to chat with the brother and sister workers and inspect export pineapples in every production unit. He was pleased at the new working strength of the state farm and urged its party committee to pay attention to the effort to develop the party among the young workers.

Comrade Pham Hung commended the marine products research subinstitute for its great efforts in the field of scientific research to support production. He expressed the hope that the brother and sister scientific and technical cadres will participate even more closely in all production activities so that advanced science and technology can be applied to support production realistically.

PHAM HUNG VISITS HO CHI MINH CITY SECURITY UNIT

OW270947 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 24 January Comrade Pham Hung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of the interior, visited the spring flowers show at the botanical-zoological garden of Ho Chi Minh City. He commended the cadres and employees of the public park and vegetation corporation for painfully building a unique poetic rocky garden with national artistic features.

On the afternoon of the same day, Comrade Pham Hung called on the public security unit of the fifth precinct of Ho Chi Minh City. He warmly acclaimed the achievements scored over the past 5 years by the people of the fifth precinct, especially by the public security unit in maintaining public security and order and protecting the compatriots' lives, thus creating favorable conditions for all families to engage in productive labor in peace.

He solicitously urged the cadres and combatants of the fifth precinct public security unit to strive to stay close to the local population as socialist public security agents.

PHAM HUNG VISITS SITES IN HAU GIANG PROVINCE

OW241131 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Pham Hung, member of the Political Bureau of the VCP Central Committee, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and concurrently minister of the interior, recently joined leaders of Hau Giang Province to visit Vinh Chau District where cabbage of various types is being produced.

He hailed the achievements of the Vinh Chau District people, who, under the leadership of the provincial party committee and directly of the district party committee, by developing their self-reliant spirit, fully utilizing their labor and land and bringing into full play their production tradition, have changed a vast subsidiary crop producing area of the district into its strong point, supporting not only domestic consumption but also exports. He stressed on applying scientific and technical progress in seed selection, cultivation and processing, stepping up water conservancy work, incessantly raising productivity on crop areas in order to fully utilize the land's great potential, produce still more goods for domestic consumption and stabilize the production of export goods.

NGUYEN VAN LINH AT HO CHI MINH CITY GATHERING

BK240707 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] According to a correspondent of the Voice of Vietnam, on 22 January the Ho Chi Minh City VFF Committee, together with the city VFF Central Committee and the Committee for Solidarity and Friendship, held a cordial Tet get-together with the participation of more than 300 delegates representing the city's sectors, branches, people of all walks of life, noted personages, intellectuals and long-standing revolutionaries. Present at the function was Comrade Nguyen Van Linh, secretary of the city party committee.

At the get-together, the delegates discussed the achievements recorded last year by the city's people in the political, economic and cultural fields to contribute toward stabilizing and improving their life and maintaining political security and social order and safety. They asserted that these achievements in effect testified to the high revolutionary spirit of the city's people on the path of socialist construction.

VFF GET-TOGETHER HELD FOR VIETNAMESE FROM JAPAN

BK150923 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] The VFF Central Committee on 13 January held a get-together in Hanoi with overseas Vietnamese from Japan who were on a visit to the fatherland. At the function, Xuan Thuy, VFF Presidium member, solicitously inquired about the health and daily life of the overseas Vietnamese. He briefed them on the situation in Vietnam and urged them to strengthen their ranks in Japan, develop their spirit of tireless learning and contribute to the reconstruction of the fatherland.

The overseas Vietnamese expressed their profound feelings in having a chance to visit their fatherland. They thanked the party, government and the VFF and their compatriots for the warm welcome and sympathy given to them.

The overseas Vietnamese expressed sympathy with the fatherland. They said they hope to contribute more to the construction of Vietnam and pledged that they will carry out Comrade Xuan Thuy's advice satisfactorily.

KHMER MINORITY SAID TO IMPROVE LIFESTYLE

OW270358 Hanoi VNA in English 0333 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 27 -- Of all the changes that have taken place in the life of the more than 300,000 people of the Khmer ethnic minority in Hau Giang Province in the Mekong River delta immediately south of Ho Chi Minh City, is their definitive break with the chronic food shortage and crippling debts of the days under the Saigon puppet regime. [sentence as received]

During the anti-U.S. resistance, as well as bleeding them white through high taxation and crushing interest rates, the Saigon regime also resorted to the traditional method of "divide and rule," sowing suspicion and enmity between Khmer and Vietnamese. Sixty percent of the Khmer peasants in Hau Giang had little or no land and depended on the "charity" of the landowners who were mostly also usurers. One hundred kilos of rice they borrowed during the pre-harvest days were repaid with double or even treble that amount after harvest.

The first concern of the revolutionary government after liberation was to solve the serious food shortage. Relief rice was sent to the Khmer communities and land was confiscated from the landlords and distributed to the landless Khmer tillers. Unaccountable debts were abolished. The Khmer were encouraged to form their own production collectives which by now account for more than half of the total in the province. One such collective of the Khmer in Long Phu township reaped more than ten tons of paddy per hectare from two crops in a year. Other collectives group both Khmer and Vietnamese. With the promulgation of the policy of allocating fixed quotas to individual farmers, many collectives of the Khmer have even reaped more than ten tons per hectare in a year.

With regard to the cultural life, Hau Giang Province now has 99 schools with 768 classes for Khmer children. Many Khmer students are attending colleges and universities in Can Tho town and Ho Chi Minh City.

Another salient feature of the improved cultural life is the presence of medical teams and stations in many villages and hamlets which have done a lot to help in the fight against superstitions and quack doctors.

LE DUAN LETTER PRAISES COAL SECTOR SUCCESSES

BK240310 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 23 Jan 82

[From review of Hanoi press for 23 January]

[Text] Today, Saturday 23 January, the newspapers published in Hanoi prominently frontpage a letter by Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of our party, praising cadres, workers and personnel of the Hon Gai coal corporation and the Mao Khe mine of the Uong Bi coal corporation for their outstanding achievements in production and life in 1981.

The comrade general secretary commended with pleasure the Hon Gai coal corporation and the Mao Khe mine of the Uong Bi coal corporation for having overcome many difficulties in production and life and scored good achievements in 1981. He said: I hope that you will make even greater efforts in management, production organization and labor -- giving special attention to improving the quality of coal, stepping up capital construction and carrying out satisfactorily the removal of dirt and rocks and the drilling of preparatory tunnels -- to create favorable conditions for fulfilling the state plan for coal production in all respects. Comrades, you should organize most satisfactorily the socialist emulation movement to create a new vigorous change right in the beginning of 1982 in order to implement successfully the historic resolutions to be adopted by the fifth party congress.

On the occasion of the new year, I cordially convey to all the workers, cadres, party members and their families my best wishes.

VIETNAMESE DEMOCRATIC PARTY HOLDS CONFERENCE

BK211403 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] The Vietnamese Democratic party [VDP] Central Committee recently held a conference to review its activities in 1981 and discuss political tasks for 1982. Nghiem Xuan Yem, secretary general of the party, briefed the conferees on the VCP Central Committee's draft political report to be presented at the Fifth VCP Congress.

The conferees warmly welcomed the historic event of the forthcoming Fifth VCP Congress and expressed their belief that the congress will open up a new development stage for the Vietnamese revolution, which is on its initial path of the transitional period toward socialism.

The conferees expressed their unanimity on the contents of various problems and ideas which the standing body of the VDP Central Committee had contributed to the VCP draft political report. They adopted and supported the lines of the socialist revolution, the economic and cultural development guidelines and basic objectives of the Vietnamese revolution for 1981-85 and VCP foreign policy as described in its draft political report. They also expressed their absolute confidence in the VCP leadership and the success of the Vietnamese revolution.

Reviewing the party activities in 1981, the conference was happy to note that despite numerous difficulties, the VDP contributed positively to the strengthening of solidarity, politically and spiritually, within the Vietnam Fatherland Front [VFF] and that the VDP mobilized all its members to develop their capabilities and intelligence to strive to contribute to the building of the new systems, new economy and culture, and to the strengthening of national defense to protect the socialist fatherland. The conference commended the VDP cadres and members for their efforts in the three resolves emulation movement in 1981 to score achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress.

The conference set forth guidelines of political tasks for the VDP in 1982 aimed at triumphantly carrying out various important tasks and main objectives of the 1982 State Plan and the 1981-85 5-Year Plan formulated by the VCP, the state and the VFF.

The conference decided to concentrate all activities of the VDP on implementing the resolutions of the Fifth VCP Congress and, in this context, to accelerate revolutionary actions by all its cadres and members in order to create new changes in the party activities so as to contribute steadily to the building and defending of the socialist fatherland in the new stage.

ANNIVERSARY OF INDIAN NATIONAL DAY MARKED

Pham Van Dong Message

OW251724 Hanoi VNA in English 1624 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 25 -- Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers, has sent a message to Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi greeting the 32nd National Day of the Republic of India. The message says:

"With industry and creativeness, the fraternal Indian people have over the past 32 years recorded many great achievements in building a prosperous country and a happy life and have greatly contributed to the cause of peace and independence in the world. The Republic of India's role and prestige in the Non-Aligned Movement and in the world have constantly been raised.

"I am glad to note that the friendly relations and multiform cooperation between our two countries have strengthened constantly and developed fruitfully. On this occasion I wish to express our heartfelt gratitude to Your Excellency and the government and fraternal people of India for their strong support to the Vietnamese people's national construction and defence.

"I wish that under your leadership the fraternal Indian people will record yet greater achievements in building a prosperous country and a happy life. May the friendly relations and multiform cooperation between our two countries strengthen and develop day after day, in the interests of our two peoples, of peace and progress in Asia and the rest of the world".

Truong Chinh Message

OW251726 Hanoi VNA in English 1620 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 25 -- President of the Council of State Truong Chinh has sent a congratualtory message to President N. Sanjiva Reddy on the 32nd National Day of the Republic of India. The message says:

"The brilliant achievements made by the Indian people in their national construction and defence over the past 32 years have enriched India and increased its international prestige, thus helping it to play a worthy role in the Non-Aligned Movement and the common struggle against imperialism, colonialism, and racism, for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress.

"I am happy to note that the friendship and multiform cooperation between the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the Republic of India have constantly been consolidated and developed in the interests of the two peoples, thereby contributing to the maintenance of peace and stability in Asia and the rest of the world. I avail myself of this opportunity to express my wish for the constant consolidation and development of friendship and close cooperation between our two countries".

VCP GREETS 11TH INDIAN COMMUNIST CONGRESS

OW251732 Hanoi VNA in English 1615 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 25 -- The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam today sent a message of greetings to the Eleventh Congress of the Communist Party of India (Marxist). The message says:

"In the past years your party has made great contributions to the struggle of the great people of India for prosperity and social progress, as well as to the common struggle of peoples in Asia and the world for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. We wish the Communist Party of India (Marxist), all the Communists, working class and people of India, new successes in their noble cause.

"The Communist Party of Vietnam and Vietnamese people sincerely thank the Communist Party of India (Marxist), the forces of peace and democracy and the people of India as a whole for their warm support to the Vietnamese people's anti-U.S. resistance for national salvation in the past and socialist construction and national defence at present. May the solidarity and friendship between our two parties and peoples be constantly consolidated and developed. Good success to your congress".

HANOI GREETS PEOPLE OF PRC ON SPRING FESTIVAL

OW270629 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1200 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Dear Chinese listeners: Happy Spring Festival! On this occasion, the Spring Festival of 1982, Voice of Vietnam would like to wish the fraternal Chinese people a happy new spring and an early restoration of Vietnamese-Chinese friendship.

Over the past 3 years, since the powerholders in Zhongnanhai launched their war of aggression against Vietnam, the once peaceful and friendly border between Vietnam and China has become a battlefield, inflicting great sufferings on the people residing in the border areas of both countries. The powerholders in Zhangnanhai have split the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, who used to be as close as brothers and traditionally friendly to one another.

For this reason, people living along the border areas of the two countries today are unable to toast each other and hail Vietnamese-Chinese amity during this auspicious occasion. This is a sad thing for the people of both countries.

However, we firmly believe that the Chinese people, who have a revolutionary tradition, will certainly not be continuously deceived by the powerholders in Beijing. The Vietnamese people will resolutely join the Chinese in exerting great efforts to make the Vietnamese-Chinese border a peaceful and friendly border, so that the flowers of goodwill between the two peoples will blossom again. This conviction of the Vietnamese people, like that of Chinese people, will certainly be realized one day. No reactionary forces can prevent us from taking the broad way towards peace and goodwill.

SRV-PRK AMITY GROUP HEAD SENDS GREETINGS

BK20845 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1455 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 18 Jan (SPK) -- On the occasion of the third anniversay of the national day (7 January), Phan Trung Tue, chairman of the Vietnam-Kampuchea Friendship Association, sent his warm congratulations to Chan Ven, chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association.

In his message Phan Trung Tue highly appreciated the historic victory of 7 January, which marks the overthrow of the bloodthirsty regimes of Pol Pot and Ieng Sary -- the ignoble lackeys of China -- the liberation of the Kampuchean people from the danger of genocide and the recovery of genuine independence.

During the past 3 years, the Kampuchean people have eliminated many difficulties and have won great successes in the defense and construction of their country.

The great victories of the Kampuchean revolution, the message stressed, have proved that the strategic alliance between Vietnam and Kampuchea and among the three Indochinese peoples contributes to peace, stability, friendship and cooperation in Southeast Asia and to the common struggle for peace, independence, democracy and socialism.

GDR LABOR DELEGATION SIGNS COOPERATION PROTOCOL

OW202303 Hanoi VNA in English 1535 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Jan 20 -- Tran Quynh, member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers, today received the visiting delegation of the G.D.R. State Commission for Labour and Wages. Tran Quynh thanked the party, the government and the people of the GDR for their assistance in professional training, which, he said, was proof of the fruitful cooperation between the two countries. Wolfgang Beyreuther, secretary of the GDR commission, said that the GDR considered assistance to Vietnam to be a noble international obligation.

On the same day, Dao Thien Thi, minister of labour, and Wolfgang Beyreuther signed a protocol on cooperation for 1982.

Delegation Concludes Visit

OW251738 Hanoi VNA in English 1618 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 25 -- The delegation of the State Commission for Labour and Wages of the German Democratic Republic led by its secretary, Wolfgang Beyreuther, member of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany Central Committee, left here today, concluding its week-long visit in Vietnam.

While here the delegation paid tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum and visited the late president's home and office. It called on the people's committee of the capital city. The delegation had working sessions with its Vietnamese counterpart. The two sides discussed and signed a protocol on increased cooperation in the field of labour and wages. It also visited a number of economic and cultural institutions in Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City and other localities.

ACHIEVEMENTS IN MENTAL HEALTH CARE REVIEWED

OW230757 Hanoi VNA in English 0711 GMT 23 Jan 82

["Protection of Mental Health in Vietnam (from VIETNAM COURIER)" -- VNA headline]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 23 -- On the occasion of the International Year of the Disabled, the Vietnamese Ministry of Health had organised in Hanoi the second conference on mental illness to review the accomplishments in the past five years and set forth the tasks for the coming five years (1981-1985). One hundred and fifty psychiatrists, researchers and teachers of psychiatry from all mental institutions, both civilian and military throughout the country attended the conference.

Vietnam now has, in addition to the Central Psychiatric Hospital in Hanoi, 37 other smaller mental establishments with 4,600 beds. In the past five years they have treated more than 50,000 in-patients. In many of the mental institutions like the ones at Bien Hoa, in Ho Chi Minh City, the Central Psychiatric Hospital, the psychiatric departments of Army Hospital No. 103 and of the Bach Mai hospital (Hanoi), the patients, after emergency treatment, are given occupational therapy through such light employment as basket-making, embroidery, leaf hat-making, cardboard box-making....

The mental service attaches special importance to out-patient treatment and the monitoring of the patients at their homes. In Hai Hung, Ha Bac, Ha Son Binh and Bac Thai Provinces, the psychiatric service has established its consulting rooms in the provincial towns as well as in each district town. In addition, 84 communes have begun treating their patients at home. The number of persons receiving out-patient treatment during the past five years totalled nearly 40,000. Thanks to close surveillance and assiduous treatment, the incidence of relapse requiring hospitalisation has dropped markedly. Nevertheless, there remain many shortcomings: The leadership of different organs and services and localities has not yet given adequate care to the detection and treatment of mental illness, and the personnel, equipment and medicines for this purpose still fall short of the needs.

In the five years to come the psychiatric service will extend further down to the district and commune level -- the network of consulting rooms and treatment centres for in-patients as well as out-patients, increase equipment and medicines to ensure that all patients are attended to.

Also in Hanoi, the Ministry of Health organised a conference to review the investigations into mental illness in the country. The conference heard the Ministry of Health report on some of the newest achievements in world psychiatry and the situation of mental illness in Vietnam. It also heard several case studies in various localities such as the Cua Nam ward (Hanoi), Tu Hiep commune (Hanoi outskirts) and Hoa Binh commune (Ha Son Binh Province).

In the coming period, in order to ensure better treatment of mental illness in the country and to take a more active part in the activities of world psychiatric organisations, particularly in the western Pacific area, the conference has decided to found a national coordinating committee for the protection of mental health. In the immediate future, the committee will step up its basic survey and research in order to work out appropriate measures for the prevention and treatment of mental illness, particularly among neurotics, the chronic depressants, longtime drug addicts in the south, and the mentally disabled people.

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 020 29 January 1982

JAPAN

Text of Sakurauchi Foreign Policy Speech to Diet C 1
Opposition Parties Criticize Suzuki Diet Speech C 6
Miyazawa Confirms 1966 Memo With U.S. on Weapons C 6
Traders Reject USSR Request for Payment Delays C 7

NORTH KOREA

DFRF Denounces Chon's Unification Proposal D 1
Officials Pay Condolence Visit on Suslov's Death D 3
KWP Delegation's Sojourn in Bangkok Reported D 3
NODONG SINMUN Observes U.S.-Japan 'Trade War' [27 Jan] D 4
Malagasy Paper Links U.S. Buildup, Kim Chong-il D 5
NODONG SINMUN Stresses Militant Power of KWP [28 Jan] D 5
Pyongyang Protests 29 Jan SR-71 Infiltration D 10

KAMPUCHEA

Hun Sen Protests to Human Rights Commission H 1
Recent Thai Territorial Violations Reported H 1
Amity Group's Tet Greeting Stresses SRV Bonds H 2
Yos Por Leads Delegation on Prey Veng Visit H 3
Hem Samin Addresses Kandal Front Conference H 4
Emulation Campaign Report H 4
Provincial Head Addresses Kompong Speu Meeting H 4
Romulo Statement on Kampuchea, ASEAN Reported [VODK] H 5
Beijing Radio Correspondents Delegation Visits [VODK] H 5
LE MONDE Interviews Sihanouk on Various Issues [22 Jan] H 6
VODK Reports LNLF Guerrillas' Battle Activities H 7
Further Report H 7

THAILAND

Sitthi Welcomes Malaysian Offer on Khmer Summit J 1
POST Reports Resumed Fighting in Kampuchea [29 Jan] J 1
Naval Chief Reports on Eastern Patrols J 1
Officials Discuss Narcotics Suppression Drive J 2
Prem's Comments J 2
Statement by Spokesman J 2
Further Statement J 3
Kriangsak Calls Press Statement 'Political Slander' [NATION REVIEW 28 Jan] J 3
Thai Forces Call on CPM Guerrillas To Surrender [NATION REVIEW 22 Jan] J 4
Indian Decision To Release Fishermen Reported J 4

VIETNAM

NHAN DAN Hits Reagan State of the Union Message [29 Jan] K 1
Party, State Leaders Pay Tribute to Suslov K 1
Do Muoi Pays Tet Visit to Southern Provinces K 2
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN on Reviewing Military Training [6 Jan] K 4
Preparations for Induction of Youth Urged K 5
[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 19 Jan]
NHAN DAN Promotes Youth in Defense Duties [21 Jan] K 6
Hanoi Units Issue Plan for Troop Recruitment K 7
SRV, USSR Sign Transport Cooperation Minutes K 8
Juridical Assistance Pact With USSR Approved K 8
SRV-Cuba Trade Protocol Signed in Havana K 8

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Ghazali Says Malaysia Ready To Host Khmer Summit O 1
Comment on Ghazali Remarks O 1

PHILIPPINES

Iraqi Vice President Ma'ruf's Official Visit P 1
Arrival Ceremony P 1
Meeting, Dinner With Marcos P 1
Virata-Ma'ruf Trade Talks P 2
INA Report on Talks P 2
Meeting With Philippine Muslims P 3
Joint Trade Commission P 3
27 Jan Press Conference [INA] P 4
Delegation's Departure P 5
27 Jan Joint Statement [INA] P 5
Ruling Party Under Fire for Batasan Performance P 6

TEXT OF SAKURAUCHI FOREIGN POLICY SPEECH TO DIET

OW260529 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0436 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Speech by Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi delivered at the resumption of the 96th Regular Diet Session on 25 January -- live]

[Text] At the resumption of the 96th Diet Session, I would like to outline our basic foreign policy. The international situation surrounding our country today is severe indeed. East-West relations centering around the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union, remain as unstable as ever. In addition to the conspicuous Soviet military buildup and the Soviet advance into the Third World, against the backdrop of this buildup, the current situation in Poland is becoming more and more critical.

Third World countries have deepened relations of mutual dependence with major industrial nations in recent years, greatly influencing the peace and development of the world. However, most Third World countries still have weak political and economic foundations, thus providing one of the causes of internal confusion and regional disputes. Last year, in Indochina, the Middle East, Africa and Latin America, much confusion and many disputes erupted, some of which remain unsettled.

The world economy, on the other hand, has not yet completed adjustment to the second oil crisis. It is beset by a multitude of such as a lower growth rate, increased unemployment, persistent inflation and imbalance in international payments. Under these circumstances, there is a growing tendency toward protectionism. The business slowdown in the major industrial nations is also affecting economic development in developing countries to a great degree. I cannot but say that great indeed is the mission assigned to our diplomacy under these circumstances.

Japan has achieved an impressive economic development in recent years, now accounting for 10 percent of the world's gross national product. Our country's international position has improved by leaps and bounds. As a result, our international responsibilities and role have markedly increased, not only in the economic field but in all other fields including the political field. Immense indeed are the world's expectations of Japan. On the other hand, keen attention is now focused on the question of whether or not Japan's behavior measures up to these expectations. In my opinion, we have to view all problems confronting our relations with other nations in this frame of mind. I firmly believe that we should not cope with these problems passively, but should contribute to world peace and prosperity positively, on our own initiative, for in this way we can build a Japan that can be trusted by the entire world, and, most of all, in this way we can insure Japan's security and prosperity.

Great indeed is the responsibilty of our diplomacy. I will now outline our policies on various foreign policy issues at hand.

First of all, in unfolding positive diplomacy, it is imperative for Japan to maintain solidarity and cooperation with the major Western industrial nations that share the common values of freedom and democracy. In positively coping with various problems facing the international community and building a framework for world peace and prosperity, nothing is more important for Western nations than to share roles suitable to their respective national potentials and situations and bring their capabilities into full play as a whole while maintaining constant consultations and liaison.

In this sense, friendly and cooperative Japan-U.S. relations based on the Japan-U.S. secuirty arrangements stand at the center of our diplomacy. It is indeed encouraging, and we note it with deep emotion, that today, 30 years after the signing of the San Francisco Peace Treaty, Japan-U.S. relations of alliance backed by mutual trust have become unshakable. Japan has stepped up cooperation with the United States in coping with various immediate international problems while holding constant consultations at all levels for satisfactory settlement of various bilateral economic and security problems.

On the security question, we regard it as necessary for Japan to promote a smoother and more effective operation of the Japan-U.S. security arrangements and build a moderate yet high-quality defense capability committed to purely defensive purposes. Japan and the United States are expected to assume ever-increasing responsibilities and roles to ensure world peace and security through mutual cooperation. From this point of view, the government will exert efforts to strengthen still more its particularly close relations with the United States.

In unfolding our diplomacy from a global point of view, the West European countries, including the EC member nations, are as important partners as the United States. Needless to say, it is important to strive for smooth settlement of our economic problems with these European nations. Still, further increasing political cooperation with Western Europe remains a major task. As a result of Prime Minister Suzuki's visit to Europe, dialogue and cooperation between Japan and Europe have been strengthened. The government will step up these efforts in the future.

On the other hand, strengthening our friendly and cooperative relations with Canada, Australia and New Zealand -- major advanced democracies in the Pacific region -- is also important. Our relations with these nations have steadily improved, particularly in the economic field, in recent years. We will strive to build cooperative relations in other fields, including in the political domain.

It is an important pillar of our diplomacy to strengthen our relations with Asian nations and to play an active political and economic role for peace and security in this part of the world. Peace and security on the Korean Peninsula are important to our own security and to the security of East Asia. It is necessary to deepen mutual understanding between Japan and the ROK, which is separated from our country by a strait, through extensive exchanges at various levels, and to build stable relations based on a broad national foundation. At present, efforts are being made in the ROK to build a new nation despite manifold economic and social difficulties. We would like to extend as much cooperation as possible to our neighbor in its national construction in accordance with Japan's basic policy on economic cooperation.

As for our relations with North Korea, we plan to gradually expand exchanges in such fields as trade, economy and culture.

China's efforts to build a stable and prosperous nation will contribute to peace and prosperity in Asia, and it is important for Japan to continue to provide as much cooperation as possible from now on. This year, which will mark the 10th anniversary of the normalization of Sino-Japanese diplomatic relations, the leaders of the two countries are scheduled to pay mutual visits. We want to consolidate our friendly and cooperative relations with China still more.

In Southeast Asia, the ASEAN countries have achieved remarkable economic development and, through increased solidarity and cooperation, have become an important stabilizing factor in that region. Japan will continue to support ASEAN efforts for the peace and prosperity of Southeast Asia and will strive to develop more cooperative relations with the ASEAN countries.

The Kampuchean question and the Indochinese refugee problem continue to be destabilizing factors in that region. As for the Kampuchean question, efforts were made to achieve a comprehensive political settlement through dialogue last year at the international conference on Kampuchea and in the United Nations. But, regrettably, Vietnam has made no response to these efforts. Japan will continue to exert its influence to bring about a settlement of this question through cooperation with the ASEAN nations and by maintaining dialogue with Vietnam. Concerning the Indochinese refugee problem, Japan plans to make further contributions to a settlement of this problem through cooperation in various fields, including monetary and food aid, and through acceptance of refugees for permanent settlement.

Meanwhile, stability in southwest Asia and the Indian Ocean region has assumed added importance for Japan in recent years. Our government will exert efforts to strengthen our relations with countries in this region.

As for our relations with the Soviet Union, one of our important neighbors, Japan will try to seize every opportunity to tenaciously carry on negotiations with the Soviet Union with a view to concluding a peace treaty through a settlement of the question of the northern territories and establishing stable relations based on genuine mutual understanding. To our regret, our relations with the Soviet Union are still in a difficult stage due to the military buildup in the northern territories, the military intervention in Afghanistan and the situation in Poland. Our government is strongly demanding the rectification of these situations. During the recent second round of the Japan-U.S. working-level consultations in Moscow, frank opinions were exchanged on Japanese-Soviet relations, which are in the state just described.

The current developments in Poland will have a serious impact on the international situation. In view of this, the government demands that the present abnormal state of affairs in Poland be corrected immediately. Our government also holds the view that the Polish question should be solved by the Poles themselves without any outside interference. Our government has directly expressed to the Soviet Union its view that the current developments in Poland have been caused by Soviet pressure and, in this sense, the Soviet Union is responsible for them. We have sought Soviet self-restraint in this regard. In coping with the developments in Poland, Japan regards it as important to maintain the unity of the West and to deal with them properly as a member of the West.

As for our overall relations with East European countries, the government will exert efforts to promote mutual understanding and develop friendly relations with these countries by taking their respective conditions into consideration.

The Middle and Near East are important as an oil-producing area and as a strategic key to East and West. The situation in this region is still fluid, as evidenced by the assassination of Egyptian President as-Sadat, the unsettled Iran-Iraq conflict, the unstable situation in Lebanon and the continued Soviet armed intervention in Afghanistan. What is very important in achieving a lasting peace and stability in that area is cooperation, above all, among the advanced democracies in the political, security and economic domains. Our government will strengthen its diplomatic efforts for peace in this region, in addition to economic and technical cooperation, while striving to promote mutual understanding through cultural exchanges and by other means.

Especially for realization of a fair, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East, the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and Israel's right to existence should be mutually recognized. Our government informed both Egypt and Israel of this position when our leaders met PLO Chairman 'Arafat during his visit here last year and when our officials met with Israeli Prime Minister Begin during the funeral of the late Egyptian President as-Sadat.

Our government will continue its efforts to contribute to the drive to realize peace in the Middle East in cooperation with Western nations and those Arab countries pursuing realistic policies.

Last December Israel unilaterally annexed the Golan Heights. This is in violation of international law and the pertinent UN resolutions. Japan is pressing Israel to annul the annexation. As for the Iran-Iraq conflict, we are concerned over the still unsettled conflict. Japan will continue to support international efforts for a peaceful settlement and press the two countries for an early settlement of their dispute.

It is indeed regrettable that the Soviet armed intervention still continues in Afghanistan. Japan will strongly press for complete withdrawal of Soviet troops, in cooperation and concert with friendly nations who share our views.

Latin American countries, expecting further development, have diversified international relations in recent years and steadily strengthened their friendly relations with Japan. Our government will step up efforts to strengthen cooperation with them, not only in the economic field, but in the international political sphere, including in the United Nations.

Our relations with African countries have become increasingly close. Utmost attention is being paid to negotiations among concerned countries for an early realization of Namibia's independence. Japan, for its part, will cooperate in the drive, centering around the United Nations, to settle the Namibia issue.

Needless to say, all countries in the world are charged with the task of achieving world peace and security. In this sense, great indeed is the role of the United Nations. Japan will step up cooperation with the United Nations in its peacekeeping activities in particular, thereby discharging its responsibilities as a member of the UN Security Council.

Unremitting efforts for disarmament and arms control are essential to place the international community on a more peaceful and stable foundation on a long-term basis. As for nuclear disarmament, the foremost issue at hand, self-restraint and responsibility on the part of the United States, the Soviet Union and other countries possessing nuclear weapons are of primary importance. Japan will continue to press these countries for nuclear disarmament. In this connection, we earnestly hope that the just-started medium-range nuclear arms talks and the strategic arms reduction talks, which are expected to open this year, will make actual progress.

At the Second UN General Assembly Special Session on Disarmament, opening in June this year, Japan, as a peaceful nation and as a signatory to the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, will stress the need for concrete disarmement measures, particularly nuclear disarmament measures, such as a total ban on nuclear tests and the maintenance and strengthening of the nuclear nonproliferation arrangements, and contribute to constructive deliberations.

Needless to say, cooperative economic management among the major industrial nations is essential to the revitalization of the world economy, one of the major problems facing the community of nations. It is also essential for these nations to make concerted efforts to promote the development of technology and the restructuring of their industries and to improve productivity.

As a nation occupying a leading position among the major industrialized nations, whose economic trend has a great impact on the world economy as a whole, Japan is required to take the initiative in implementing concrete measures to attain these objectives, thereby contributing to the development of the world economy.

The current international oil supply and demand situation is slackening. But there is basically no change in its tenuousness. It is all the more necessary at this juncture for Japan to maintain and strengthen constructive, friendly and cooperative relations with oil-producing nations in order to consolidate the foundations of a stable oil supply. At the same time, Japan has to further accelerate changes in energy economy through international cooperation.

This year, many important international conferences are to be held, including a summit meeting of the major industrialized nations in France and a GATT ministerial conference. Japan will take these opportunities to make active contributions to the smooth management of the international economy, while remaining aware of its international responsibilities and role.

As for economic and trade frictions, which have become a major issue with the United States and West European countries, it is necessary to reach a concrete settlement as soon as possible with a view to achieving expanded equilibrium through the preservation and consolidation of the principle of free trade and to making our relations with these countries still more smooth and solid. In this sense, we have to put into effect the various measures adopted by the ministerial council on economic measures as soon as possible and make utmost efforts to widen our market.

Growth of the developing countries is a major task for the community of nations. It will also play a significant role in revitalizing the world economy. In this sense, the spirit of mutual dependence and solidarity, as reaffirmed at the North-South summit, is to be evaluated as a major momentum for solutions to various outstanding problems between North and South.

As a nation that has more mutually dependent relations with developing countries, Japan is determined to exert still greater efforts to cooperate in the development of these countries, while continuing efforts to build constructive North-South relations by actively participating in North-South dialogues, including dialogues in the United Nations.

In solving the North-South question, economic cooperation is of particular importance. Japan is promoting economic cooperation on the basis of mutual dependence and humanitarian considerations -- the two keys to the North-South question. Strengthening the political, economic and social sinews of the developing countries, through this kind of economic cooperation, will contribute to peace and security in their areas and in the world as a whole.

In this sense, economic cooperation is not only Japan's responsibility to international society, but forms an important link in Japan's comprehensive security policy. From this point of view, Japan will continue to increase its aid to areas important to the maintenance of world peace and security.

After attaining the goal of doubling aid in 3 years, Japan set a new medium-term goal in January last year and is now endeavoring to increase official development assistance [ODA] and improve the quality of aid. We will continue to attach importance to aid in improvement of basic livelihood, including farm village and agricultural development, as well as to cooperate in development of human resources. Aid and cooperation in these two areas will be directly useful to the livelihood of the people in recipient countries and to the building of their countries. At the same time, we will reevaluate past aid and find ways to provide aid more effectively.

In order for Japan to play its role as an important member of the community of nations, it is particularly important to widely introduce the picture of Japan in its entirety to the world -- not only its political and economic images, but its social and cultural images as well -- and have the community of nations accurately understand Japan's basic foreign policy and the ideas that underlie that policy. From this point of view, we will expand and strengthen cultural exchanges and public relations activities to promote mutual understanding with various foreign countries.

Diplomacy is vital to insuring Japan's peace and prosperity in a comprehensive manner. It is not too much to say that our destiny depends on our diplomacy. On this occasion, I want to stress that it is urgent to consolidate the diplomatic foundations so that we can unfold diplomacy forcefully and dynamically. It is an essential requirement to strengthen, in particular, the information collection and analysis functions designed to speedily and accurately assess developments concerning our country. It is also essential to consolidate the structure for the implementation of our foreign policy.

The number of Japanese engaged in economic, cultural and various other activities overseas has markedly increased. Accordingly, it is an important mission for our diplomacy to ensure the safety and well-being of these overseas Japanese. To this end, the strengthening of the functions of our diplomatic missions overseas is urgently needed. What is required of the government at present, when manifold difficulties are in store, are efforts to blaze a new path for the country by pooling our people's wisdom. With this determination, I intend to cope with the difficult international situation. I would like to express my gratitude to each and every citizen and fellow dietmen for their cooperation and ask for their continued forceful support.

OPPOSITION PARTIES CRITICIZE SUZUKI DIET SPEECH

OW251143 Tokyo KYODO in English 1135 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 25 (KYODO) -- Opposition political parties Monday criticized Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki for neglecting a tax reduction which the parties said was the biggest concern of the Japanese people. Suzuki, in his policy speech to the Diet, stressed the need to rectify Japan's trade imbalance and also to achieve a small government.

The Japan Socialist Party, the No 1 opposition party, said Suzuki's speech contained nothing substantial on tax reduction and reconstruction of the state's financial health. Japan's organized labor has called for a yen 1 trillion (about $4.4 billion) income tax reduction in fiscal 1982 starting April.

Suzuki's speech revealed that the prime minister lacked perspective and insight into the difficult international situations surrounding Japan, said Makoto Tanabe, chairman of the JSP's Diet Policy Committee. Tanabe criticized Suzuki for failing to explain convincingly why the government increased its defense spending while curbing expenditures for social welfare and education in the fiscal 1982 budget. The fiscal 1982 budget allocates yen 2,586 billion (about $11.5 billion) for defense, up 7.75 percent from fiscal 1981; yen 9,084 billion (about $40.3 billion) for social welfare, up 2.8 percent; and yen 4,863 (about $21.6 billion) for education and science and technology, up 2.6 percent.

The No 2 opposition Komeito said Suzuki failed to state when the government expects to restore the state's financial health and when the Japanese economy might recover.

The moderate opposition Democratic Socialist Party said the prime minister could present no concrete policy on administrative reforms, which Suzuki had promised to carry out at the risk of his political life.

The Japan Communist Party said the prime minister contradicted himself, as he allowed a sharp increase in defense spending while proposing to attend the United Nations special meeting on disarmament in June.

MIYAZAWA CONFIRMS 1966 MEMO WITH U.S. ON WEAPONS

OW261123 Tokyo KYODO in English 1115 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26 (KYODO) -- A government spokesman Tuesday formally confirmed the existence of a 1966 memorandum exchanged by the Japanese Defense Agency and the U.S. Department of Defense on joint development of weapons.

The confirmation was made by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa at a press conference held at the prime minister's official residence here Tuesday evening to reply to a press report concerning such a memorandum. This was the first official comment on the memorandum revelation made by morning papers Tuesday.

Miyazawa said the 1966 memorandum was in fact a compilation of minutes of meetings on how to implement an agreement concluded in 1962 between the Defense Agency and U.S. Defense Department on exchange of information on key defense equipment and weapons development projects. Miyazawa stressed that the existence of such a memorandum did not mean that the two governments were actively promoting joint development of modern weapons.

Such a memorandum had no direct bearing on substantial moves for the joint devlopment of arms, he said. Therefore, he insisted, such a memorandum was not in contradiction with the government's three key principles, which include a prohibition on the export of weapons.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki conferred with leading officials of the Defense Agency Tuesday morning on defense issues, but did not make any comment on the memorandum stories when Defense Agency officials explained its details, according to them.

TRADERS REJECT USSR REQUEST FOR PAYMENT DELAYS

OW270601 Tokyo KYODO in English 0410 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 27 (KYODO) -- Major Japanese general trading houses have rejected a Russian request for delay in payment for its steel imports, industry sources said Tuesday. The sources said the Soviet Union had also made similar requests in regard to chemicals and other products, as well as some of the import bills involved in cross trade with Japanese general trading houses. Observers believe the Russian requests were due to a shortage of foreign exchange.

The sources said that Promsyryeimport, Russia's state-run steel export and import corporation, had asked them to delay the usance from the normal 30 days to 180 days in respect to January-March deliveries of steel, accounting for some 40 percent of Japan's exports to the Soviet Union. Japanese steelmakers are believed to have contracted to exports more than $300 million worth of steel products to Russia in the January-March period.

The sources said that Dalintorg, Russia's state-run corporation for trade with the Far East region, and other Russian state-run corporations had made sporadic requests for the deferrement in the payment of the Japanese chemicals and other goods. Likewise, Eksportlen, Russia's state-run textile import and export corporation, had asked the Japanese general trading houses to defer the repayment of outlays for wool the latter bought from Australia for sale to the Soviet Union.

Similar requests for postponement of repayment of Japanese textiles have come from such East European countries as East Germany, Romania and Czechoslovakia, the sources added.

DFRF DENOUNCES CHON'S UNIFICATION PROPOSAL

SK280948 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Talk by Yo Yon-ku, director of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland, dated 27 January -- read by announcer]

[Text] All of the Korean people are now seething with burning indignation over the fact that the South Korean military fascist clique, desperately obstructing the country's reunification -- which is the long-cherished of the nation -- recently put forward a so-called reunification proposal to deceive the people.

Its antinational and splittist nature has been already laid bare: The so-called reunification proposal recently advanced by traitor Chon Tu-hwan is an out and out scenario for two Koreas, insulting the nation's ardent desire for reunification and the sacred reunification cause of the people.

Believing that the contents of the talk issued by the vice-president of our republic and chairman of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland in connection with the South Korean ruler's reunification proposal are very just, I bitterly condemn with surging national indignation the Chon Tu-hwan ring's criminal schemes to legalize the division of the country.

The so-called reunification proposal advanced by the South Korean ruler this time is not worth considering from start to finish. It is a trick designed to fabricate two Koreas under the mask of reunification. It is also a political trick to escape isolation and rejection at home and abroad and to realize long-term power.

The so-called proposal for holding general elections which the puppet talks about is also indeed preposterous. It is only too clear that democratic general elections cannot be conducted as long as the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the military fascist dictatorial system are maintained intact in South Korea. Under the situation in which national sovereignty has been obliterated because of the foreign troops' occupation and in which all patriots and democratic figures advocating democracy and peaceful reunification have been arrested, detained or executed, how can general elections be conducted in accordance with the principle of national selfdetermination and democratic procedures? It is impossible. This is eloquently proved by all elections conducted in South Korea in the past.

It is a stern historic fact that in the situation in which the U.S. imperialist aggressors have backed the fascist dictators of South Korea with armed force and the true will of the popular masses has been mercilessly trampled by bayonets, nothing patriotic could be uttered at all, to say nothing of holding a democratic election, and the true patriots and democratic figures have been assassinated or brutally suppressed and persecuted. Without reaching for a historical example, the present situation of democratic figure Kim Tae-chung, who is suffering in prison, wearing the shackles of a life sentence, is clear evidence of this. As widely known in the world, traitor Chon Tu-hwan has completely buried Kim Tae-chung politically because he knows that if a democratic election is held while leaving intact Kim Tae-chung, who is more popular among the people, he is destined to be defeated in the election. It is preposterous for the brutal military fascist dictator, who has kept foreign aggression troops in the country and has crushed even the last leaf of democracy with bayonets to talk about a democratic general election.

The issue of conducting free general elections is one we have consistently raised in the past for the reunification of the country. As is known to the world, we have proposed on many occasions to settle the country's reunification question by establishing a unified central government through the conduct of democratic general elections, under a situation in which all foreign troops have been withdrawn from Korea and an atmosphere for free elections has been created. But, this just proposal of ours was refused every time by the successive rulers of South Korea, who were manipulated by the United States.

Considering the specific conditions of our country, where the gap between North and South is widening and the situation around our country is growing complicated -- these things a consequence of the fact that our just reunification proposals have not been realized and the nation's division continues -- we suggested the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] as a new, realistic reunification proposal.

The South Korean rulers, ignoring this most feasible and reasonable proposal for founding a confederal state based on the specific conditions of our country, have proposed holding general elections, which are impossible at present, shelving such fundamental problems as the withdrawal of foreign troops and democratization. This, in fact, means a refusal to reunify and a desire to live divided into two Koreas forever.

Such a splittist attempt of theirs becomes more obvious in that they proposed conclusion of the so-called agreement on basic relations between the North and South. How can we label as a proposal for national unity and reunification that which is designed to prolong division indefinitely through such things as non-interference in each other's internal affairs and the opening of permanent liaison missions by means of an agreement signed between the North and South as between different countries?

If the so-called proposal for general elections is a facade of reunification, the proposal for concluding an agreement on basic relations between the North and South is an open proposal for permanent division and for legalizing the country's split into two Koreas behind this facade.

Moreover, it is not their own brain child. It is an archaic idea borrowed verbatim from a foreign country, which the preceding South Korean rulers once brought to the North-South dialogue table, only to be rebuffed. It is an act of those utterly indifferent to the interests of the nation to mechanically follow a method chosen by others in view of the specific situation of their country, without taking into consideration the specific conditions of our country and the sentiments of our nation.

By attempting to legally fix the nation's division into two states, the Chon Tu-hwan clique surpasses its predecessors in the scheme for national division. In principle, the current South Korean rulers are a group of traitors who are not qualified to talk about reunification. It is they who drove the dawn of democracy and reunification, just breaking bright after the October incident in South Korea, into the dark clouds of fascism and annihilated forces for peaceful reunification. It is they who are adhering to the scheme for having South Korea admitted separately into the United Nations as the next step in their efforts to gain foreign countries' support for the idea of both North and South Korea joining the United Nations, an idea designed to internationally legalize two Koreas. And it is they who are openly raising their voices for reunification in the 2000's, an idea for permanent national division, babbling that reunification is impossible.

They speak of reunification and dialogue, but they pursue national division in deeds. That the South Korean rulers came up with the so-called reunification proposal is aimed at fooling public opinion and escaping their isolation at home and abroad and realizing long-term power by blocking the immense influence of our DCRK proposal and creating the impression that they are doing something for reunification.

However, they cannot realize their dirty purposes with whatever ideas they may come up with. It is not by accident that the so-called reunification proposal advanced by traitor Chon Tu-hwan was denounced at home and abroad for being splittist and unrealistic as soon as it was announced.

If the South Korean rulers really intend to reunify the country, they should not come out with a tricky proposal for division veiled by reunification, but should give up the two Koreas policy before it is too late, demand the withdrawal of the U.S. troops, establish democracy, renounce the anticommunist confrontation policy and, furthermore, apologize to the whole nation for the massacre in Kwangju and unconditionally release all the democratic figures and patriotic people behind bars, including Kim Tae-chung.

If they demonstrate their new start with such practical steps for real reunification, not sham reunification, we will be able to [halsu issulkosida] discuss with them, too, the question of the country's reunification. Things depend on what stand and attitude the South Korean rulers take.

I appeal to the South Korean people from every walk of life to reject the Chon Tu-hwan clique's reunification proposal, a sham one run through with fraud, deceit and tricks, and to struggle in unity to establish the DCRK, which is the road to reunification and sovereignty.

OFFICIALS PAY CONDOLENCE VISIT ON SUSLOV'S DEATH

SK290354 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0349 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 29 (KCNA) -- Cadres of our country on January 28 paid a visit to the Soviet Embassy in Pyongyang to express condolences on the death of M.A. Suslov, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

A wreath in the name of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea was placed beneath the portrait of the deceased amid the dirge.

Comrades Pak Song-chol, Kim Chung-nin, Kim Hwan and Hwang Chang-yop, and Kim Ki-nam, Kim Yong-chae, Kil Chae-kyong, Yi Song-hui and other personages concerned observed a moment's slience, mourning the death of M.A. Suslov, and signed their names on the mourners' book.

KWP DELEGATION'S SOJOURN IN BANGKOK REPORTED

SK290524 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0412 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 29 (KCNA) -- The delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the Central Committee of the KWP, on January 23 inspected an ancient urban district and a crocodile farm in the suburbs of Bangkok, according to a report.

It was accompanied by Theam Jayanandana, second deputy speaker of the House of Representatives, and K. Naramphun, Democratic member of the parliament of Thailand.

It was invited to a party arranged by Theam Jayanandana, second deputy speaker of the House of Representatives of Thailand. Present at the party were the members of the delegation and Saard Piyavan, first deputy speaker of the parliament of Thailand, the spokesman of the Democrat Party and other personages concerned.

Speeches were made at the party by the second deputy speaker of the House of Representatives and the head of the delegation. The second deputy speaker in his speech warmly welcomed the visit of the delegation to Thailand.

He said: Korea is a happy land which has the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song as its head. He is, indeed, a sagacious and outstanding man. Respected Comrade Kim Il-song is the great leader who wisely organizes and leads the entire Korean people. He is very modest and tender-hearted.

I was also honoured with an opportunity of meeting His Excellency respected Kim Chong-il. He is an outstanding leader who guides the Korean people to progress. I send messages of greetings to His Excellency Kim Chong-il, the dear leader.

The Korean people are a very intimate and disciplined people. I hope that the friendly and cooperative relations between our two countries will be further developed in the future.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I ask you to convey my wholehearted greetings to the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

I invite you to toast the good health and long life of the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song and the good health and long life of His Excellency respected Kim Chong-il.

The party proceeded in a warm and friendly atmosphere.

On January 24 the delgation visited a farm of the maize and sorghum research centre of the Kasetsart Agricultural College in Nakhonratchasima. That day the delegation was entertained to a dinner by the deputy leader of the Democratic Party of Thailand.

On January 25 the delegation met and had conversations with Banyat Bantadtan, vice-minister of interior from the Democratic Party, and Khunthong Phuphiewduen, deputy leader of the Democratic Party and vice-minister of education, in a friendly atmosphere. It was invited to a luncheon by the deputy leader of the Democratic Party.

NODONG SINMUN OBSERVES U.S.-JAPAN 'TRADE WAR'

SK271544 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1527 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 27 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today in an article titled "Growing Trade Conflicts" deals with the "trade war" between the United States and Japan which is growing fiercer.

According to a report, when a U.S. congressman expressed the hope that Japan would immediately take concrete steps to remove trade imbalance, the Japanese foreign minister on January 8 merely asked for further remarks on points at issue, refusing to comply with the U.S. demand.

On the same day, the Japanese minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries at a Cabinet meeting rejected the opening of U.S. farm produce market. Earlier, the U.S. demand for the reduction of Japan's export of automobiles was turned down at a hearing on the U.S.-Japan auto problem.

This shows that the trade conflicts between the United States and Japan over market and trade imbalance are becoming ever more serious, the article says, and goes on: The United States has lost almost all its markets and monopoly rights in the capitalist world and is internally caught up in a worst economic depression and social confusion.

The U.S. program of economic reforms aimed at the "revitalization of an economically powerful United States" became a mere scrap of paper and its economy greeted the new year with a fear of new economic depression.

Japan is also facing a serious economic crisis. For the Japanese economy chiefly depending on imported raw materials and export of goods, the problem of export is a vital one related to its destiny.

Accordingly, Japan is taking export offensive to seize better markets and get larger profits, while restricting the opening of domestic markets and extremely reducing import of goods. The dumping and export offensive by Japanese enterprises resulted in the ever increasing sway of Japanese goods in the U.S. markets.

These days the U.S. political and business circles demanded the Congress and administration to pursue a protective trade policy toward Japanese goods as a retaliatory step and the Japanese Government to increase import of U.S. goods, lower the tariff and abolish the non-tariff barrier.

The Japanese political and business circles and the press hold that the government should not yield to the unjust demand and pressures of the United States detrimental to Japan's national interests, saying that the United States had better understand the fact that the trade imbalance with Japan is attributable to the decreasing international competitive power of U.S. goods owing to the weakness of its economy.

Facts show that the trade conflicts between the United States and Japan resulting from the contradictions of their interests for the monopolization of markets and high-rate profits will go from bad to worse in the future.

It is the intrinsic character of the capitalist countries to victimize others in the scramble to grasp more favorable markets and get more profits, stresses the article.

MALAGASY PAPER LINKS U.S. BUILDUP, KIM CHONG-IL

SK291055 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1004 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Pyongyang, January 29 (KCNA) -- The Malagasy paper ATRIKA January 22 published an editorial article headlined "Danger of New War Must Be Dispelled From Korea," according to a report.

Recalling the statement of the spokesman of the Foreign Ministry of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea denouncing the U.S. imperialists buildup of aggression armed forces in South Korea and their scheme to stage massive military exercises codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" there, the paper says: The U.S. imperialists' aggression armed forces have been steadily reinforced in South Korea since Reagan took office. Along with the forces of the army, their air force and mass destruction weapons are being beefed up.

The Chon Tu-hwan "regime" is active to be admitted into the United Nations and the U.S. imperialists and Japan support this not only behind the scene but openly in the foreground.

We sharply denounce such acts and schemings of theirs, regarding them as a downright challenge to the Korean people who are struggling for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and a durable peace in Korea under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

The U.S. imperialists' manoeuvres of aggression and war, a high-handed interference in the national sovereignty and internal affairs of the Korean people, will come across stronger protest and denunciation from the world people.

The government and people of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea enjoying the wise leadership of the great leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader His Excellency Kim Chong-il will never tolerate the new aggressive acts of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique and the Japanese reactionaries should give up at once the new war provocation manoeuvres and "two Koreas" plot.

NODONG SINMUN STRESSES MILITANT POWER OF KWP

SK290724 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2230 GMT 28 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 28 January editorial: "Let Us Further Strengthen the Party's Military Power"]

[Text] Making this the most brilliant year in the history of the struggle of our party and people is a matchlessly glorious and worthwhile task assigned to us. The important work on which we should concentrate our utmost efforts in carrying out this task is strengthening the party's militant power. Increasing the party's militant power is basic in strengthening and developing our party and in achieving the revolutionary cause. Proceeding from the weighty duty of developing the party and the revolution, our party has set forth the policy of further increasing its militant power. This policy reflects the party center's intent and plan to firmly consolidate the party into an invincible militant organization which can overcome all difficulties and to more thoroughly achieve party leadership over the revolution and construction.

The future of our party, the revolution's success, and the destiny of the people totally depend on how successfully we forge ahead with the task of increasing the party's militant power. For the party to continuously increase its militant power is a basic requirement for it to accomplish its duty as the staff headquarters of the revolution. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our party is the staff headquarters of the Korean revolution and organizes and encourages all victories.

The success of the Korean revolution and the destiny of our people totally depend on our party. To successfully accomplish its duty as the staff headquarters of the revolution, the party of the working class should set forth a correct line and policy. At the same time, it should be able to thoroughly implement these. Only a powerful party which brilliantly implements the line and policy it has set forth can lead the revolution and construction to victory.

As the great political leader of our people, the KWP has taken responsibility for and solved all questions concerning the Korean revolution and the daily life and future destiny of the people. The revolutionary struggle and construction work have been organized and guided by our party, and, thanks to it, the people have won all victories. Only under the leadership of our party can our people achieve the complete victory of socialism and the fatherland's reunification, complete the Korean revolution and advance toward a bright future. Accordingly, no work is more important than strengthening the party and increasing its militant power in advancing the revolution and construction and in pioneering the future of the fatherland.

Today, the militant power of our party has increased as never before. Through the struggle to imbue the party and society with the chuche idea, the party's ranks have been organized with the quintessence of the revolution: endless loyalty to the party and the leader; the unity of the entire party has been strengthened based on the chuche idea; and the organizational and ideological foundation of the party has been firmly consolidated so as to complete the revolutionary cause. It is the proud trait of our party that the entire party breathes and acts with a single ideological will and that, going through fire and water, it struggles to implement party decisions and directives.

In the long history of our party, the leadership authority and militant power of the party has never been as great as we see today. In our country today, socialist construction has vigorously advanced with the spirit of adding speed battle to chollima, and astonishing miracles and exploits have been continuously performed. This vigorously demonstrates the invincible militant power of our party.

We have attained great and proud achievements in increasing the party's militant power. While consolidating the achievements already attained, we should continuously and vigorously forge ahead to increase the party's militant power. Increasing the party's militant power is an important task which should continue as long as the party exists and which we should further strengthen with the progress of the construction of socialism and communism.

The final goal of the party of the working class is to build communism. The cause of socialism and communism advances and is completed through the struggle against class enemies at home and abroad and through the difficult and complicated struggle to reform nature and society. Without increasing the party's militant power, we cannot firmly protect and successfully advance this cause.

Throughout the course of leading socialist and communist construction, the party of the working class should regard the work of increasing its militant power as a strategic task. Historical experiences show that, if we do not continuously increase the party's militant power, we cannot victoriously accelerate the revolution and firmly protect the socialist gains which we have won through a bloody struggle.

Our revolution and construction have entered a new, higher stage today. The weighty and vast revolutionary duty assigned us and the present situation demand that we increase the party's militant power more than ever before.

Today, our party and people are assigned the glorious task of brilliantly implementing the militant program set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his report at the historic sixth party congress and in his New Year's address. The decisive factor in successfully implementing this revolutionary task which is assigned to us is to strengthen the party and increase its militant power and leadership role in various ways. Without increasing the party's militant power, we cannot think of victory in the struggle to implement the decisions of the party congress. Nor can we hope for the endless prosperity of the fatherland and the happiness of our posterity, generation after generation.

To accelerate the movement to implement the decisions of the sixth party congress and to endlessly glorify 1982, we should make epochal progress in the work of increasing the party's militant power. The basic issue in increasing the party's militant power is to consolidate the organizational and ideological foundation of the party. The party's militant power depends on the firmness of the organizational and ideological foundation of the party. Firmly consolidating the organizational and ideological foundation of the party always constitutes a primary task in increasing the party's militant power and its leadership role. We should pay close attention to completing the work of laying the foundation of the party to meet the requirements of the unfolding situation and further develop this work. Party organizations should devote all party work to this cause.

To increase the party's militant power, we should strengthen the unity of the entire party around the party and the leader. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The unity of the entire party based onthe party's unitary ideology is the lifeline of our party. Only when we firmly guarantee the unity of party ranks based on the party's unitary ideology can we make our party a revolutionary one possessing invincible militant power and smoothly achieve its leadership over the revolutionary struggle and construction work.

The ironclad unity of party ranks is the basic source of the party's militant power. Because the ideological and voluntary unity of the entire party has been firmly consolidated, our party has developed into a powerful one which is ever-victorious, overcoming all difficulties and trials. To increase the party's militant power, we should raise the unity of party ranks to a new, higher level.

The basis of the unity of party ranks rests with the unique nature of the ideology and will of the entire party. All party organizations should regard the work of establishing the party's unitary ideological system as a general party task and continuously develop this work. Thus, they should help all party members more firmly arm themselves with the chuche idea, live and struggle in accordance with the requirements of this idea, and prevent the infiltration of all reactionary and antirevolutionary ideological factors incompatible with the chuche idea.

The unity of the revolutionary ranks, which was achieved around the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the initial stage of the Korean revolution, was a most firm, vital, ideological, volitional and moral one based on unyielding revolutionary spirit and belief. We should brilliantly inherit and embody the tradition and example of this great unity in our struggle to further strengthen the unity of the party.

Carrying deep in their hearts the firm political belief that they only know the party and the leader no matter what difficulties they may encounter anywhere at any time, all functionaries and party members should forever follow and hold the party in high esteem.

Among party members and working people, party organizations of all echelons must intensify education to familiarize them with the mission and role and the invincible might and achievements of our party. By so doing, they must see to it that party members and working people loyally struggle to the bitter end under the leadership of the party.

What is important in strengthening the militant power of the party is further solidifing the revolutionary discipline of the party. Today, in our party, the discipline and order of democratic centralization, wherein the entire party acts like one under the leadership of the party center, have been established. The discipline of our party is a consciousness one which is established on the basis of a firm belief that the party members can fully trust and depend on the party for their destiny. It prides itself on its great vitality. History has never seen such an iron-clad militant party, with such a formidable organizing power and discipline as ours.

By ceaselessly strengthening the discipline of the party, we must further strengthen the party's militant power. Party organizations, functionaries and members must consider the discipline of the party to be as precious as their lives and establish a firm revolutionary work system and order in which they carry out all work only in accordance with the guidelines and intent of the party center.

Party discipline demands work assigned by the party and the party's decisions and directives be unconditionally and thoroughly implemented. The nourishment of the party's militant power is for the purpose of implementing the party's lines, policies and directives -- the systematic ideas of the entire party -- and carrying on the revolution and construction successfully. By brilliantly implementing the decisions and directives of the party, functionaries and party members must meet the trust and expectations of the party. This is their sacred duty and supreme task. Functionaries and party members must devote themselves to implementing the party's decisions and directives under all circumstances, with lofty consciousness and firm resolve to accomplish this unconditionally and thoroughly.

For party organizations, nothing is more important today than proper organizational work to implement party policies. The party organizations must consider it as a fundamental question to unconditionally implement decisions and directives of the party and, to this end, to carry out organizational and political work aggressively. By so doing, our party must be further strengthened as a party with militant power enabling it to brilliantly implement the party center's lines and policies under all circumstances, and as a systematic iron-clad unit which acts with a single will and discipline.

It is a prerequisite to the consolidation of the party's militant power to enhance the party spirit of party members. The party is a political organization composed of the masses of party members. The militant power of the party depends on the party spirit of the party members. Party spirit is endless loyalty to the party and the leader. It is a noble revolutionary spirit with which party members devote themselves to the struggle to protect and defend the party and to implement the lines and policies, the decisions and directives of the party.

All party members should continuously make efforts to enhance party spirit. This allows no exceptions and not a moment's pause or self-conceit. Party members can remain faithful on the road of the revolution and make their lives rewarding only when they continue their efforts to enhance party spirit. Functionaries, in particular, should be ahead of others in enhancing party spirit, which is essential to their accomplishing the party and revolutionary duties.

A goal for our party members in enhancing party spirit is cherishing the unyielding revolutionary spirit displayed by young communists such as Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su. The attitude of the young Korean communists -- who, not seeking higher positions or personal fame and prompted only by their revolutionary convictions and obligations, fought with their lives, upholding Comrade General Kim Il-song -- was a culmination of loyalty to the leader and of the communist party spirit.

What is important today in enhancing the party's militant power is that each party member cherish such a lofty party spirit. Party members, young or old, should prepare themselves to be true revolutionary fighters of the party by continuously training themselves to cherish the loyalty displayed by the unyielding revolutionary fighters.

The key to enhancing party spirit lies in having a correct concept of party organizations and strengthening party organizational life. Our party is a political guide [chongchijok yongdoja] that has bestowed on its members a most precious political life and keeps it shining. A noble virtue of our party members is to regard party organizations as the mother's bosom and to abide by them. All functionaries and party members should show respect for party organizations, entrust everything to them and make conscious efforts to be under their guidance and supervision. They should also make party life a normal and spontaneous one, not allowing a moment's pause, and implement the decisions and assignments of party organizations.

When party members have a correct concept of party organizations and strengthen party life to enhance party spirit, our party will become a political unit with vitality and power and its foundation will be consolidated rockfirm.

To promote the party's militant power, we should decisively enhance the role and functions of party cells, which are the bedrock organizations and smallest combat units of the party. When the party cell is as firm as a rock, the party can be consolidated as a steel-like combat unit.

All party members lead a party life and belong to party cells. Their party life comes under the direct guidance of party cells, upon which the duty is imposed to guide party members to think and work in line with the party's policies and will. When party cells are strengthened, we can consolidate the ideological unity of party ranks, establish in the party a strong revolutionary discipline and the unconditional nature of party policies, and strengthen the party life of cadres and party members. Party cells should link the party life of party members to the implementation of the tasks of the revolution and should enhance their vanguard role in implementing party policies.

In strengthening the party's militant power, it is important to improve the work methods and styles of functionaries, who are assigned the duty of organizing and executing the work of implementing party policies and rallying the masses around the party. When they continuously improve their work methods and styles, functionaries can instill in the masses more trust in the party and ensure the party's leadership in the revolution and construction.

All functionaries should thoroughly overcome all timeworn work methods represented by bureaucratism, subjectivism and formalism; go deep into lower units; grasp the situation of these units in a detailed manner; effectively guide them; carefully listen to the masses and carry out the revolutionary task of awakening their awareness and developing their creativity. At the same time, they should take care of workers and guide them with motherly affection, take the lead in carrying out difficult work and set an example for them.

In particular, economic guidance functionaries should thoroughly implement the party's economic policy with an attitude worthy of the masters of the revolution and a lofty sense of responsibility.

When all functionaries practice the correct work method and guidance style, the militant power of our party will matchlessly increase, and our revolutionary ranks will be consolidated into an impregnable fortress.

Increasing the party's militant power in various ways is political work which is of the greatest significance in glorifying this year, during which we will greet the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has long devoted all his energy, night and day, to laying the historic foundation of our party and to founding, strengthening and developing it into the promising party we see today. His efforts at strengthening and developing our party into a most powerful one which can assume responsibility to the end for the destiny of the Korean revolution constitute the greatest achievements which the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has attained for the fatherland, the people and the revolution.

While devoting his entire lifetime to the sacred revolutionary cause, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has been deeply interested in further strengthening our party and is energetically leading this work.

Increasing the party's militant power and consolidating its foundation constitutes sacred work to glorify forever the achievements which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has attained in the struggle to strengthen and develop our party and to complete the chuche cause.

By enacting a great upsurge in socialist construction through a further increase in the party's militant power, party organizations and functionaries should do their best to glorify this year's great and significant political festival.

The future path of our people, tenaciously struggling under the banner of the great chuche idea, is a promising one of greater victory.

PYONGYANG PROTESTS 29 JAN SR-71 INFILTRATION

SK291350 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1300 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors have perpetrated an act of espionage by infiltrating an SR-71 high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane into our territorial airspace.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors again infiltrated the SR-71 high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane deep into the air above Kosong, Kangwon province at around 1215 hours 29 January and committed espionage activities against the northern half of the republic.

At the same time that the U.S. imperialists are dragging a large quantity of combat personnel and war materials into South Korea on the pretext of the aggressive war exercise codenamed Team Spirit 1982, they are more desperately perpetrating espionage activities against our country. The cases of the U.S. imperialist aggressors' infiltration of spy planes into the airspace of our country number 18 times this month alone.

The fact that the rascals are more nakedly committing espionage activities against our country in defiance of our repeated warnings and protests clearly shows that the U.S. imperialists are the ringleaders who are straining the situation in Korea and are the most shameless aggressors.

Our people will by no means [choldaero] tolerate the continuous haughty and rude criminal espionage activities of the U.S. imperialist warmongers, who are violating the sovereignty of our country.

If the U.S. imperialist aggressors do not wish to repeat the bitter lessons which resulted from the reckless provocative acts they perpetrated in Korea in the past, they should act with discretion.

HUN SEN PROTESTS TO HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

BK290622 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0400 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Jan (SPK) -- Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs, has sent a message to the chairman of the Commission on Human Rights categorically protesting the Pol Pot clique's presence in the forthcoming conference on human rights. The following is the text of the message:

First, the PRK has just celebrated the third anniversary of the 7 January victory, in which our people were liberated from the bloody regime of unprecedented genocide. The so-called Democratic Kampuchea, notorious for its genocidal crimes, was overthrown by the Kampuchean people on 7 January 1979. There now exists a criminal band operating along the Kampuchea-Thailand border, thanks to the sanctuaries in Thailand and the supply of all types of arms and ammunition by the Beijing ruling circles. The admission to your conference of representatives of the genocidal criminals, who brutally and systematically violated the most basic human rights and who were condemned by the Phnom Penh People's Court, insults international public opinion and dishonors the United Nations and the Commission on Human Rights. The PRK categorically opposes the illegal presence of these criminals at the conference on human rights -- a presence which is immoral. The so-called Democratic Kampuchea, having neither territory nor people, represents only a band of criminals manipulated by the expansionists and imperialists as well as their allies, who are trying to reinstall them so they will kill the Kampuchean people again.

Second, during the past 3 years, since liberation, at the cost of immense effort by the people and government of the PRK, the famine bequeathed by the clique of perpetrators of genocide has been eliminated. The people's life has been stabilized and improved with every passing day. Hospitals and schools have been reopened throughout the country for the health and education of the people. Agricultural and industrial production has been stimulated and boosted year by year to meet our people's daily needs. General elections by universal suffrage and secret vote took place democratically in 1981 to elect a National Assembly, which has adopted a Constitution and nominated a Council of State and a Council of Ministers. Our government, enjoying the support of the Kampuchean people, now effectively controls the PRK territory and handles all internal and international affairs of the country. Therefore, only the PRK Government is empowered to represent the Kampuchean nation in all international meetings and is capable of ensuring all obligations set forth by these meetings.

RECENT THAI TERRITORIAL VIOLATIONS REPORTED

BK290356 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1432 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 27 Jan (SPK) -- During the week ending 16 January, Thai aircraft overflew Kampuchean territory 11 times and heavy artillery from Thailand bombarded 95 times; 10 of the bombardments were intended to support infiltrations by Pol Pot's men, military sources reported. Flights of Thai aircraft were reported over the Preah Vihear ruins, Chong Chom, Ampil and west of Smat Deng. On 15 and 16 January, two L-19's and four A-37's of the Thai Air Force overflew Hill 547, west of the Preah Vihear ruins.

On 19 January more than 100 shells fired from 155-mm and 105-mm guns from Thailand fell on areas east and west of Poipet.

In the Koh Kong-Pursat region, 31 artillery bombardments were reported in the region. Hills 322 and 336 and Smat Deng were hit by these bombardments.

In Battambang, heavy artillery from Thailand pounded the region 29 times; 18 bombardments were reported in Nimit, Poipet and Pailin. In the Siem Reap-Preah Vihear region, 105-mm guns and 120-mm and 82-mm mortars from Thailand shelled the region some 35 times with the help of reconnaissance aircraft. On 15 January Pol Pot's men infiltrated an area some 19 km northwest of Bek Anlung. The Kampuchean combatants killed 47 of them and seized 31 rifles and personal belongings. The remainder fled toward Thailand.

During the week, 107 armed Thai vessels and boats entered PRK territorial waters in the vicinity of the Koh Tang and Koh Kong Islands.

AMITY GROUP'S TET GREETING STRESSES SRV BONDS

BK281023 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Statement to station correspondent by Chan Ven, chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association, on Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity -- date not given; recorded]

[Text] As you well know, what our Vietnamese friends have done for our Kampuchean people is most precious and invaluable. Our Vietnamese friends fed more than 30,000 Kampucheans who were fleeing the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphen regime and taking refuge in Vietnam. They gave us rice, medicine, cloth and money, and even set aside land for our people to cultivate and live on. Moreover, we have seen that our Vietnamese friends wholeheartedly helped us in the establishment of our Kampuchean National United Front for National Salvation [KNUFNS], which officially came into existence on 2 December 1978. In this case, as you know, our Vietnamese friends assembled Kampuchean nationals, including those comrades and elder brothers who were studying in northern Vietnam and those veteran fighters who defected from the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. They rallied our intellectuals, Buddhist monks and people and encouraged them to join and support the front. Furthermore, as you and our Kampuchean people know, the Vietnamese friends helped our KNUFNS both morally and materially. They helped us, with their flesh and blood, to liberate and save our Kampuchean people on 7 January 1979.

Our Kampuchean people were thus saved and our beautiful Angkor land gained its independence. The people of all nationalities, both the majority and minority nationals, have enjoyed democratic rights and freedoms and become genuine masters of their own destinies. As President Ho Chi Minh's statement proved, nothing is more precious than independence, rights and freedom. Thus, since 7 January 1979 our Angkor land has enjoyed genuine independence and our Kampuchean people have enjoyed genuine rights and freedom. This is what we call the most precious, splendid and invaluable things. Moreover, as you are well aware, the Vietnamese party, government and people have continued to support and assist our Kampuchean people for more than 3 years, both materially and morally, thus enabling us to continue to firmly defend our national independence and to succeed in all fields in the restoration and reconstruction of our land, which was almost ruined. Of special note is the fact that our people have become masters in the political field. Both the party and the new revolutionary power are from the people and rally and work for the people. Our people have become masters in the economic field, that is, workers have become masters of the factories and enterprises that formerly belonged to the capitalists, and all the peasants have become genuine masters of the land and ricefields that formerly belonged to the landlords, feudalists and certain big bosses. The new state power has provided the peasants with seed, fertilizer and all available tools.

Furthermore, we have seen that the Kampuchean people have become the owners of their nation's culture. This means that the children of the people of all nationalities have been able to learn the alphabet, arithmetic, technical subjects and science, and our fine Angkor traditions have been restored, improved and vigorously expanded. The people of all strata and nationalities have once again been able to learn about their own traditions and customs, and music and songs can be heard everywhere.

In summary, during the past 3 years our people, including workers, peasants and intellectuals, have been able to take over all the major means of production such as factories, enterprises, ore mines and communication routes, which belong to the people. Our people have led and controlled the production work. Thus, in the distribution of the production gains the people, who are the producers, receive the benefits of production themselves. This is why we affirm that the people are the genuine masters of their destinies. This is unprecedented in the feudalist regimes, particularly in the Sihanouk regime, the capitalist regime represented by Lon Nol or the genocidal regime of the maniac Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan, who are cheap lackeys of the Beijing expansionists.

Who brought about all the above-mentioned achievements? They were brought about by the KPRP, the arduous struggle of all our people and the wholehearted support of socialist friends and all our other friends, near or far, particularly the Vietnamese friends who are our neighbors. Availing themselves of this occasion, the Kampuchean people would like to express thanks and gratitude to the VCP, the SRV Government and the Vietnamese people who have helped and are helping the Kampuchean people regardless of how much they have to sacrifice.

On this same occasion, all the Kampuchean people, under the leadership of the KPRP and the front, pledge to protect the special bonds of Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity and friendship, in addition to the bonds of Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos solidarity, friendship and cooperation, making them everlasting, firm and forever flourishing. As defined in our Constitution, Chapter 1, Article 10, the PRK is strengthening the bonds of solidarity and cooperation with the friendly socialist countries, particularly with Vietnam and Laos, on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, and -- as stated in the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress -- the bonds of Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos solidarity, friendship and cooperation constitute a strategy in the Southeast Asian region.

On this solemn occasion of the Vietnamese people's New Year, all the Kampuchean people once again express profound thanks to the VCP, the SRV Government and the Vietnamese people who are our brothers and neighbors. We wish the VCP and the Vietnamese Government and heroic people new and greater achievements in the socialist revolution.

YOS POR LEADS DELEGATION ON PREY VENG VISIT

BK221016 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] On 14 January 1982 a delegation of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Council led by Comrade Yos Por, general secretary of the KUFNCD, including the comrade chairman of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Committee, the female comrade chairman of the Kampuchean Women's Association and many front cadres, visited cadres, employees, workers and our people in Prey Veng Province. The delegation visited Khsaok commune in Prey Veng District and Rumchek commune in Preah Sdech District.

When it arrived, the delegation was warmly welcomed by provincial cadres, workers of various provincial offices and people of each locality. Meetings were organized to welcome it, such as the one arranged by the provincial people's revolutionary committee at the provincial festival theater. On that occasion, Comrade (Nhien Phoeurn), permanent member of the provincial party affairs control committee, welcomed our delegation. He noted that this visit clearly showed that the relations between the state and the people in various localities are strengthening steadily.

Also speaking on the occasion, Comrade Yos Por highly praised the great achievements scored by our people in Prey Veng Province from the 7 January 1979 liberation to the present under the correct leadership of the KPRP. The comrade added that although we have realized great achievements, they are not yet sufficient for our people's demands.

Therefore, we must heighten our spirit in making efforts to fulfill all duties, in particular the production movements, in order to contribute to the nation's recovery and reconstruction. In conclusion, the comrade stressed the close militant solidarity among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, which is a vital factor in the revolutions of the three Indochinese countries.

Later, Comrade (Cheam Yeap), chairman of the provincial people's revolutionary committee, gave a speech in which he said that the provincial authorities are determined to follow the guidance of the presidium in order to fulfill their duties of constructing and defending the province, districts, communes and villages.

HEM SAMIN ADDRESSES KANDAL FRONT CONFRERENCE

BK240204 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] On the norming of 21 January 1982 a Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] conference for Kandal Province was solemnly opened at the Takhmau movie theater. Speaking at the opening ceremony, Comrade Hem Samin, secretary of the provincial party affairs control committee and member of the front, deeply thanked the members and those attending the conference, which was organized to review and sum up the Kandal provincial front's achievements during the past 3 years and to formulate directives to be implemented successfully in 1982. The comrade added that those 3 years of revival were years of struggle with a lofty sense of self-abnegation. During those 3 years we gained much good experience from our people's revolutionary movement in scoring many great achievements, even surpassing expectations on the national and international scene.

Emulation Campaign Report

BK270655 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1430 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Jan (SPK) -- Hem Samin, secretary of the Kandal Party and Provincial People's Revolutionary Committees, speaking at a meeting recently held in Takhmau, highly praised the results realized during the monthlong emulation campaign that ended on 8 January.

During the campaign, cadres, civil servants, combatants and peasants plowed more than 5,500 hectares, sowed nearly 750 hectares, planted more than 10,200 hectares of dry season rice and more than 1,500 hectares of subsidiary crops and irrigated more than 350 hectares of land. They also restored 880 small dams, 15,250 meters of canals and 18,700 meters of road and built 6 schools. During this emulation month, the people in Kandal acieved 26 percent of the dry season production plan. So far, the peasants in Kandal have opened up 1,290 hectares of new land. Of this, more than 400 hectares have been planted with rice and 350 hectares with subsidiary crops. They have also harvested more than 11,500 hectares of rice. Peasants in Khsach Kandal, Ponhea Loe and Kandal Stoeng Districts have sold more than 900 tons of paddy to the state. The emulation campaign also yielded satisfactory results in handicrafts, weaving and the fabrication of cooking pots.

PROVINCIAL HEAD ADDRESSES KOMPONG SPEU MEETING

BK250540 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] On 6 January 1982 almost 5,000 cadres, personnel, workers, combatants and people in Kompong Speu Province attended a grand meeting to mark the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day organized by the provincial party committee and the provincial people's revolutionary committee.

On that occasion Comrade Uddam Meanchey, chairman of the provincial people's revolutionary committee, spoke on our people's traditional heroic struggle against the enemies of all stripes. The comrade cited proletarian international solidarity, particularly the militant solidarity of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, and the successive victories that have been won over the enemy, such as in the struggle against the U.S. imperialist aggressors. The great sacrifices of flesh and blood contributed by the Kampuchean people in the just cause of liberating the nation and fatherland from the aggressors brought about the 17 April 1975 great victory. The great victory on 17 April 1975 should have given our people numerous rights and freedoms and enabled them to build the country and live their lives in peace. But the traitorous Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique plundered this great revolutionary achievement, killed over 3 million Kampuchean people and turned the Kampuchean territory into heaps of ashes and bones.

Under the leadership of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] our people, closely united with the fraternal Vietnamese people and army, toppled the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique on 7 January 1979. At present, the people's living conditions have improved. Literacy has spread gradually from the provincial area to the countryside. These great victories are a clear proof of the genuine spirit of patriotism and lofty proletarian international solidarity, and clearly attest that the Kampuchean revolutionary situation is irreversible.

In conclusion, the comrade exhorted the people and cadres of all levels to make every effort to strengthen and broaden the bond of national unity in order to contribute to successfully implementing the resolutions of the fourth party congress, to building our national economy and to improving our people's living conditions for progress toward glorious socialism.

ROMULO STATEMENT ON KAMPUCHEA, ASEAN REPORTED

BK290240 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] On 25 January, during his talks with Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf, Iraqi vice president, currently visiting the Philippines, Carlos Romulo, Philippine foreign minister, stated that the Kampuchean issue must not set a precedent for big countries to interfere in the internal affairs of small countries.

Foreign Minister Romulo indicated to the Iraqi vice president that ASEAN countries will continue to work for the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and for international guarantees for an independent, neutral and nonaligned Kampuchea. We will continue to rally world opinion on the Kampuchean issue until the situation in that country is normalized.

BEIJING RADIO CORRESPONDENTS DELEGATION VISITS

BK290419 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] On 6 January 1982 a delegation of Beijing radio correspondents led by (Zhong Yimin) arrived in the Sisophon-south of Route 5 region for a friendly visit. The friendly Chinese guests sincerely met and conversed with responsible regional officials at a Democratic Kampuchean Government office.

On 8 and 9 January 1982 the Chinese friends met and interviewed military commanders and combatants of the Sisophon-south of Route 5 battlefield. Commanders, male and female combatants of the Democratic Kampuchean Army and guerrillas happily expressed their deep feelings on the friendship between the Kampuchean and Chinese peoples. They said: "This visit by Chinese friends greatly encourages us that motivates us to make further efforts to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, swallowers of territory and race exterminators until they are all driven out of our beloved Kampuchean territory."

On 10 January 1982 Ieng Sary, deputy prime minister in charge of foreign affairs, sincerely met and held talks with the friendly Chinese delegation. In the afternoon of the same day, they visited a landmine workshop of Brigade 320. On 11, 12, 13 and 14 January 1982, they visited a number of villages in the Sisophon-south of Route 5 region and met and conversed with responsible village officials and representatives of the women's groups. On 14 and 15 January 1982 the delegation met and held talks with Thiounn Thioeunn, minister of health; Thiounn Mumm, chairman of the State Scientific and Technical Commission; and the commander of the brigade in the Phnum Malai zone. The friendly guests were very impressed with health and military conditions in this region.

On 16 and 17 January 1982 the guests visited hospitals, schools and laboratories, and interviewed disabled combatants and the Venerable Preah Moha [ecclesiastical rank] The (Bel Long), who traveled from the U.S. to visit our Democratic Kampuchea. The Chinese friends were impressed with the Venerable Preah Moha The's patriotic spirit. Although he is more than 90 years old, he made the effort to visit his fatherland during this period of war. They were also very amazed at our disabled combatants who sacrifice their youth for their nation and race. On 18 January 1982 the friendly Chinese guests returned to their country.

LE MONDE INTERVIEWS SIHANOUK ON VARIOUS ISSUES

PM271225 Paris LE MONDE in French 22 Jan 82 p 5

[Correspondent Manuel Lucbert report: "France's Generous Policy Unlikely To Influence Vietnamese Leaders, Prince Sihanouk Tells Us"]

[Text] Beijing -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk thinks that, in the present circumstances, it is unlikely that Vietnam will be persuaded to seek a negotiated solution to the Kampuchean problem. Without wishing to criticize France's resumption of financial aid to Hanoi announced last month, the former sovereign said he is "pessimistic about the chances of this generous policy influencing the Vietnamese leaders."

During a recent interview with us, the prince said he thought the French Government's decision would certainly have a "beneficial effect" on bilateral relations between Paris and Hanoi. But "it would be wrong to attribute any greater importance to it," since "the Vietnamese understand only the language of force." He added, with great animation: "If we offer them carrots, they eat them greedily and do not even say thank you." The analysis of the prince, who has been in Beijing again since 4 January, having spent the greater part of 7 months on his proprty at Mougins, coincides with that of his Chinese hosts.

The improvement in Franco-Vietnamese relations has not pleased the Chinese at all. China has made it known on two occasions that it greatly deplores the gesture of Paris. XINHUA even went as far as to write, on 14 January, that "the socialist government's reputation will be tarnished" if France tries "by covert maneuvers" to "come to an arrangement" with Vietnam while that country turns a deaf ear to the UN resolutions demanding its withdrawal from Kampuchea.

The convergence of views between China and Prince Sihanouk does not mean that there are no clouds over relations between the two parties. Annoyed by the attitude of Hanoi, which has been doing nothing but "snubbing him" for the past 3 years, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk is not, for that matter, completely satisfied with China's behavior toward him. Beijing has still not delivered to his supporters grouped on the Thai border the light arms it had promised them. An agreement providing for the arming of 3,000 men was concluded, the prince said, during his last visit here in May 1981. According to the former Kampuchean head of state, China is allegedly hesitating because it would like to see him cease his shilly-shallying. In this context, Prince Sihanouk's tougher tone toward Hanoi should be well received by Beijing.

In reality, things are a little more complex. In its relations with the prince the Chinese Government has to take into account the feelings of the Khmer Rouge, who, politically, remains its best ally and is the only one capable of dealing blows to the Vietnamese occupier. During the last few months relations between Mr Khieu Samphan and Prince Sihanouk have turned sour again.

Singapore's recent proposal that a "flexible coalition" be formed has left the resistance movement more divided than ever. The Khmer Rouge has rejected this formula, which it fears would lead to a dilution of Democratic Kampuchea. On the other hand, the two other constituents -- Mr Son Sann's nationalist movement and Prince Sihanouk -- are in favor of the proposal, since it would give them more guarantees against the Khmer Rouge. The prince, who 6 months ago was anxious to stand aside, now says he is ready to head a coalition of this sort. How does China see these developments? Its position has been ambiguous until now. During the only talks he has been able to have with Chinese leaders since his arrival, Prince Sihanouk was told by Vice Premier Ji Pengfei that Beijing "would like to see him playing a greater role than hitherto." But Mr Ji did not repeat the wish expressed in the past by Mr Deng Xiaoping, who had told the prince that China wanted to see him become the head of the Kampuchean state once again. Mr Ji also gave his support to the efforts to form an anti-Vietnamese coalition, but he was careful not to specify what form it should take. In these conditions the chances of new tripartite discussions being held in Beijing in the coming weeks seem rather slim. Prince Sihanouk, who intends to stay in the Chinese capital until the middle of March, does not think that Mr Khieu Samphan is prepared to meet him at present. However, he has invited Mr Son Sann to visit him and the latter, with whom the Chinese would, moreover, like to talk, might go to Beijing in the near future on a private visit.

VODK REPORTS LNLF GUERRILLAS' BATTLE ACTIVITIES

BK230658 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Here is report on the battle activities of the LNLF guerrillas: On 13 January 1982 the Vietnamese enemy moving from (Khlem) village to (O Vien) stepped on landmines planted by LNLF guerrillas. Two of them were killed and two others were wounded. On 15 January 1982 the LNLF guerrillas attacked the Vietnamese enemy in (Trapeang Toek) position, east of (Khlem) village. The Vietnamese were ambushed north of (Khlem) position and in (Padevat) village. Nine Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 13 others were wounded. The guerrillas destroyed a C-25 radio and two military barracks. In sum, during these 2 days the LNLF guerrillas inflicted 26 casualties on the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. They destroyed a C-25 radio and two military barracks.

Further Report

BK260800 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Here is a combat report from Laos: On 1 January 1982 the guerrillas of the Lao National Liberation Front [LNLF] attacked the Vietnamese enemy at (O Khlem), killing six enemy troops and wounding six others. On 19 January 1982 the LNLF guerrillas ambushed six Vietnamese troops trucks moving from (Preal) to (Khlem) village. They set a truck ablaze, damaged another, killed 10 Vietnamese troops and wounded 18 others. They also ambushed the Vietnamese troops moving from (Khlem) village to rescue their colleagues, killing five enemy troops and wounding two others. In sum, in these 2 days the LNLF guerrillas put 47 Vietnamese troops out of action and destroyed 2 trucks.

SITTHI WELCOMES MALAYSIAN OFFER ON KHMER SUMMIT

BK290736 Hong Kong AFP in English 0713 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 29 Jan (AFP) -- Thailand today welcomed Malaysia's offer to host a proposed summit of three Cambodian resistance groups striving to forge an anti-Vietnamese coalition. Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila said he was glad Malaysia had made the offer, as a tri-partite coalition linking the ousted Khmer Rouge leadership with two non-communist groups was vital to a political solution to Cambodia.

The Khmer Rouge proposed the summit in their rejection of a call, put forward by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), for a "loose coalition" of the three groups. It would be the second summit for the anti-Vietnamese groups. Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, ex-head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his one-time premier [Son Sann] first met in Singapore on Sept 4, 1981, when they agreed to set up a coalition to end Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia. The Khmer Rouge summit proposal comes after a similar call from Prince Sihanouk for the three leaders to meet in Beijing. Thailand, which was the venue for two months of tri-partite talks following the Singapore summit, has said it would not host the second such meeting.

Questioned on this, a Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman said "there are already proposals for a summit in Beijing and Kuala Lumpur." The non-communist ASEAN states of Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines would wait for the outcome of the upcoming summit before deciding on the next move, the spokesman added.

POST REPORTS RESUMED FIGHTING IN KAMPUCHEA

BK290108 Bangkok POST in English 29 Jan 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Aranyaprathet -- Heavy fighting between Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin troops and Khmer Rouge guerrillas resumed yesterday morning after a lull during the Chinese New Year period. Rockets, artillery and mortars were used in the hour-long battle. The fighting in Po Samton village, 3 kilometers from the Thai border, caused some damage to houses in the Thai village of Khok Sabaeng and forced the 191 students in a village school there to seek shelter in bunkers as about 32 shells strayed into the village areas.

Before the New Year, the Thai Supreme Command predicted that the fighting would escalate as the Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin forces would take advantage of the dry season and step up their operations against the rebels. They predicted that this would set off a new spillover of Kampuchean refugees and bring more stray shells into Thai territory. [passage omitted]

NAVAL CHIEF REPORTS ON EASTERN PATROLS

BK281458 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Adm Samak Saiwong, Royal Thai Navy chief of staff, has reported that, according to a report which reached him at 1000 yesterday, nine unidentified vessels were operating in the vicinity of Koh Kong Island near the Thai border in Trat Province. The RTN chief of staff said he believes these vessels were giving support to ground operations against the Khmer Rouge forces in Kampuchea. The navy has been closely watching the movement of these vessels and will take appropriate counteraction if they intrude into Thai waters, he said. Concerning patrol operations in Thai waters off Chanthaburi and Trat Provinces, Admiral Samak said that following the incident which took place in late December, in which Thai vessels engaged in firefights with the vessels of the other side, the navy has stepped up patrols and intelligence gathering in order to gain advance knowledge of any retaliation planned by the other side.

Regular patrols have been conducted and two units have been placed in reserve to provide reinforcement in case of emergency. Reconnaissance planes have also been operating on a daily basis. Admiral Samak said that Thai fishing trawlers operating near the border in Chanthaburi and Trat Provinces have been told to supply intelligence reports to the navy.

OFFICIALS DISCUSS NARCOTICS SUPPRESSION DRIVE

Prem's Comments

BK281553 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Interview with Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon on 28 January regarding the Thai Government's suppression operation against drug kingpin Khun Sa's stronghold in the northern province of Chiang Rai]

[Excerpt] [Begin Prem recording] The case of Khun Sa is very important because it pertains to our national security. We all know that Khun Sa formerly sought political asylum in our country. However, he later disregarded the refugee law and engaged in many wrongdoings, particularly by establishing his own armed forces and engaging in the worldwide narcotics trade. Therefore, it is necessary for us to take action against him. He was violating our country's sovereignty. He is dangerous to most of the countries in the world because he is a major heroin trader on the government's wanted list. [end recording]

[Announcer] Asked about the government's timing for the suppression operation against Khun Sa and his men, the prime minister said:

[Begin recording] As a matter of fact, the government has been planning to suppress them for a long time and has been trying to avoid causing trouble for all parties in order to maintain peace and order. We appealed to him and even dropped leaflets to try to stop such illegal activities. We asked him to live like an ordinary refugee. Later, we put a bounty on him, but all our efforts failed. We are also concerned about the safety of the other minority groups who have not violated the law.

[Question] Many people are suspicious that this operation was the result of pressure from other countries. Is this true?

[Answer] Our country has been an independent country for many centuries. We must use our common sense to do the right thing for our country. We are a member of the United Nations, so we must honor the narcotics suppression and prevention agreement. We act by what we feel is right, according to our legitimate rights. There is no country in the world that can force us or prevent us from doing the right thing. [end recording]

Statement by Spokesman

BK290812 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0500 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] According to deputy Government House spokesman Wanida Chitman, a report reaching her yesterday said that fighting with the Khun Sa force was continuing sporadically in certain areas of Chiang Rai Province. Wanida cites a report from Highway [as heard] Department sources as saying that the Khun Sa force is suffering from battle fatigue.

Meanwhile, Deputy Prime Minister Prachuap Suntharangkun said today that most units of the Khun Sa force which were deployed near the fighting zone have been withdrawn, but noted that there is still sporadic fighting and that the situation is relatively calm.

Prachuap disclosed that Thai Ambassador to Burma Phirat Itsarasena called on him this morning and reported that the Burmese Government is elated with the Thai Government's suppression of the Khun Sa force, which is the major narcotics trader on the Thai-Burmese border. The Burmese Government also expressed willingness to fully cooperate with the government. Prachuap said he will visit Burma in March to discuss this matter.

Further Statement

BK290816 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Statement to newsmen by deputy Government House spokesman Wanida Chitman; given on 29 January -- recorded]

[Excerpt] A report from Chiang Rai Province this morning said that on 25 January the border patrol police picked up leaflets produced by the Khun Sa group and circulated in Ban Hin Taek. The leaflets were in Chinese and said that the Thai Government must be held responsible for the attack on and damage to the Shan State Army headquarters and that the fighting will continue if the government does not accept responsibility. The leaflets said the Shan State Army did not traffic in narcotics. The weapons in its possession were for use in the struggle against the Burmese Government for independence of the Shan State, not for use against the Thai Government. The leaflets were dated 23 January and produced in Ban Mae Mo, Village Group 24, Tambon Mae Kham, Mae Chan District, Chiang Rai Province.

KRIANGSAK CALLS PRESS REPORT 'POLITICAL SLANDER'

BK280238 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 28 Jan 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] Former Premier Gen Kriangsak Chamanan yesterday attacked a press report which implicated him in the drug trafficking network of Khun Sa.

Speaking to reporters at his residence, Gen Kriangsak described the report as a "political slander." He said he will have legal action taken against the person who made the accusation. Kriangsak claimed that while he was in power his government had earnestly suppressed drug trafficking, and stated that he had never had any links with the notorious drug kingpin.

Kriangsak, who was a former supreme commander, also denied a report that Khun Sa once built a house for him while he was on inspection tour to the Thai-Burmese border. The house, he explained, was constructed by soldiers of the former 93rd Regiment of the Kuomintang "to show their gratitude" to the Thai Army for helping them plant substitute crops after they were stopped from trading in opium. "And that happened about 20 years ago, and I only stayed once in the house," he said.

Meanwhile, Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon said yesterday the Thai Government had to use military force against the Shan United Army (SUA) and Khun Sa because they allegedly planned to overthrow the state power in Burma. When asked why the government decided to deal with Khun Sa at this particular time when he had been seeking refuge on the Thai border for so long, he said: "The previous governments may have had different policies. But the present government has made it clear that it will not allow any foreign forces to use Thailand as a springboard to conduct subversive acts in other countries."

Messages praising the Thai Government for the battle against Khun Sa have, meanwhile, poured in. U.S. Ambassador to Thailand John Gunther Dean described it as "a courageous and forceful action."

"We greatly appreciate this important blow against heroin production and trafficking," he said in a statement issued yesterday. He added: "I wish to express my own admiration for the courage and determination displayed by the Thai Government in undertaking this difficult campaign..." Australian Ambassador G.A. Jockel said Tuesday night of the on-going campaign during the toast at the reception of the Australian National Day: "My country is one of those affected by narcotics. In taking this action, Thailand is suffering grievous losses and casualties, for the sake of the future of the international community. Many Thais here tonight have helped take that difficult decision. It is with special feeling that we will be listening to the royal Thai anthem on this occasion.

THAI FORCES CALL ON CPM GUERRILLAS TO SURRENDER

BK220147 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 22 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] Yala -- Thai security forces have air-dropped thousands of propaganda leaflets in areas infested by Malaysian communist guerrillas near the Malaysian border in campaigns to persuade them to surrender, a senior army official said yesterday. The appeal to the guerrillas, printed in Chinese, Malay and Thai, said the authorities would ensure the safety of those who surrendered, said Maj Gen Panya Singakda, commander of the Civilian-Police-Military Unit 43 (CPM-43). He said since Thai police and army forces had stepped up their operations against the guerrillas last October, 14 guerrillas had been killed and 3 had given themselves up. There are an officially estimated 3,000 guerrillas of the outlawed Communist Party of Malaya (CPM) still fighting an underground war in southern Thai jungles along the border with Malaysia.

The major general added that the situation in the border areas was still serious, with reports of ambushes, looting and harassment of local people for food and "protection money." He said one reason for the recent increase in CPM guerrillas' activities was that they were not getting the support from the local people they had obtained in the past.

A military spokesman said yesterday that CPM insurgents recently stepped up their campaigns to acquire material support from the local people in southern Thailand in the past month. Speaking at the news conference at the Supreme Command, Col Thawisak Suwantat said CPM insurgents in Songkhla also distributed leaflets, seeking a truce with security forces. "The leaflets said that the CPM's purpose was to overthrow the Malaysian Government and its activities would not undermine the stability of Thailand in any way," he said. However, he added that the Thai forces would continue their campaigns against CPM elements. "The leaflet is only an old tactic which would produce nothing," he said.

Meanwhile, an informed source in CPM-43, which is responsible for the security in southern Thailand, said that four clashes with CPM guerrillas were recorded in Betong and Tharnto Districts in Yala in the past week. He described the clashes as only small skirmishes.

INDIAN DECISION TO RELEASE FISHERMEN REPORTED

BK281011 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Excerpt] According to Chet Sutcharitkun, director general of the Foreign Ministry Information Department, the Thai Embassy in India reported that the Indian authorities, out of regard for good Thai-Indian relations, have decided to release the 129 crewmen of the 5 Thai fishing trawlers seized earlier in Indian territorial waters. The fishermen in question are now being detained aboard the captured trawlers in (?Andhra). The Indian authorities concerned have indicated that the Thai fishermen will be released first before the trawlers. The Thai offices concerned are contacting the owners of the trawlers so that they may assist in the return of the fishermen.

NHAN DAN HITS REAGAN STATE OF THE UNION MESSAGE

OW290747 Hanoi VNA in English 0715 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 29 -- Under the title "Awkward Explanations" NHAN DAN today points to the difficulties and contradictions of the U.S. Government as shown in the State Union Message of President Ronald Reagan.

The paper writes: "Reagan's State Union Message chiefly concerns internal affairs, and only a few lines are devoted to the external policy. However, it is enough to reveal Reagan's warmongering nature. Again he threatened Cuba and Libya, and again he has blatantly put his nose in the internal affairs of Poland, distorted the situation in that country and tried to justify the 'sanctions' against Poland and the Soviet Union... The Reagan administration continues to dream of 'negotiating from a position of strength,' while continuing to step up the arms race."

The paper goes on: "Through the State Union Message one can see the impotence and dilemma of the U.S. ruling circles faced with a series of tough problems of this country. The Reagan administration still labours under the illusion of regaining its military supremacy and applying an external policy from a position of strength while the balance of forces in the world is evolving in a way more and more unfavourable to the United States. The policy of the Reagan administration remains basically one of guns and butter," the paper concludes.

PARTY, STATE LEADERS PAY TRIBUTE TO SUSLOV

OW290749 Hanoi VNA in English 0720 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 29 -- A delegation of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam today paid a floral tribute at the Soviet Embassy in Hanoi to the memory of M.A. Suslov, Political Bureau member and secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Central Committee.

The delegation includes Truong Chinh, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and president of the Council of State; Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly; Le Duc Tho, Political Bureau member and secretary of the party Central Committee; Nguyen Duy Trinh, Political Bureau member and secretary of the party Central Committee; Le Thanh Nghi, Political Bureau member and secretary of the party Central Committee and vice president of the Council of State; To Huu, Political Bureau member of the party Central Committee and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers; Nguyen Co Thach, member of the party Central Committee and minister for foreign affairs; Nguyen Thanh Le, member of the party Central Committee and head of its commission for foreign relations. The delegation's wreath bears the description "Respectful Homage to Comrade M.A. Suslov."

After observing a minute of silent respect for the deceased Soviet leader, the Vietnamese leaders made this entry in the mourners' book: "Deep mourning for Comrade M.A. Suslov, an eminent activist of the Communist Party and state of the Soviet Union, an outstanding militant of the international communist and workers' movement and a great friend of the Vietnamese people."

Also today delegations from the party Commission for Foreign Relations, the Foreign Ministry, the Defence Ministry, the Vietnam-U.S.S.R. Friendship Association, the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee and the Hanoi Committee of the Communist Party paid floral tribute at the Soviet Embassy.

DO MUOI PAYS TET VISIT TO SOUTHERN PROVINCES

OW290015 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Do Muoi, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers paid a Tet visit to the people, cadres and combatants of the armed forces and Soviet experts in the Vung Tau-Con Dao Special Zone and to Minh Hai and Cuu Long Provinces on 23, 24 and 25 January.

In the Vung Tau-Con Dao Special Zone, Comrade Do Muoi called on and conveyed Tet greetings to the special zone party committee and people's council, to the Vietnamese workers and cadres and Soviet experts working at the Soviet-Vietnamese oil and gas joint enterprise, to the workers and employees of the tourist corporation serving the oil and gas sector, to the cadres and combatants of Army Corps 318 engaged in economic construction and to the family of Mrs Ho Thi Quy at the Thang Nhi ward of Vung Tau City, whose two sons are dead heroes.

In his meeting with the cadres of various sectors in the special zone, Comrade Do Muoi conveyed Tet greetings and commendations from the party Central Committee and Council of Ministers to local compatriots, cadres and combatants who scored achievements in implementing the 1981 State Plan and particularly in serving oil and gas exploration. He pointed out the importance of 1982 in the implementation of the 1981-85 5-Year State Plan and the special zone's responsibility in oil and gas exploration and stressed the need for the local party committee, administration and sectors to be aware of this great responsibility in order to cooperate with the oil and gas joint enterprise in reaching the targets set by the state for 1982 and subsequent years. Thus, 1982 must be marked by the special zone's comprehensive success in the specific tasks of building the economy, stabilizing the people's livelihood, consolidating national defense and maintaining political security to greet the fifth national party congress.

Comrade Do Muoi urged the local party committee and administration to pay greater attention to achieving solidarity and singlemindedness within the party and among the people, army-people solidarity and solidarity with the Soviet experts; heightening revolutionary vigilance, keeping national secrets; strictly practicing thrift and striving to overcome all difficulties in comprehensively developing the special zone, so that it will remain worthy of its important position.

Comrade Do Muoi held a work session with Comrade (Mamendov) and other Soviet experts on the implementation of the minutes of the first session of the Soviet-Vietnamese oil and gas joint enterprise. He gladly noted that many points in the minutes had been carried out speedily and fruitfully. On the occasion of Vietnam's traditional Tet festival, he wished the comrade director and other Soviet experts good health and happiness and expressed the hope that Vietnamese-Soviet cooperation would develop even more finely in all fields and that 1982 would see outstanding progress in the joint enterprise.

During his visit to Army Corps 318 cadres and combatants engaged in economic construction, Comrade Do Muoi warmly acclaimed their achievements in building their forces, organizing their lives and fulfilling assigned tasks. He urged them to exert greater efforts in the new year to rapidly and comprehensively develop their army corps and satisfactorily carry out the tasks related to oil and gas exploration while positively contributing to maintaining security in the territorial waters of the fatherland's southern part.

During the ceremony welcoming the Lunar New Year, Comrade Do Muoi commended the cadres and employees of the tourist corporation for their achievements in 1981 and their contributions to effectively implementing the objectives set for the oil and gas sector. He urged the corporation to strive in 1982 to further enjoy the leadership and assistance of the special zone's party committee echelons and administration, effect a new change in business organization and management, achieve solidarity and improve professional skills in order to better serve the oil and gas exploration work and tourists.

On behalf of the local people of all strata, cadres and combatants, Comrades Le Quang Thanh and Nguyen Hoa and the comrade colonel deputy commander of Army Corps 318 expressed wishes for good health to Comrade Do Muoi and other party and state leaders and pledged to scrupulously implement his instructions and score specific achievements to greet the fifth national party congress.

In Minh Hai Province, Comrade Do Muoi laid a wreath at the cemetery of the combatants who laid down their lives in protection of the fatherland's southernmost part. He paid a Tet visit to the cadres of various sectors in the province, to the members of the party committee and people's committee of Vinh Loi District, which has been rated fair in production and in fulfilling its grain obligation to the state, to the Dong Hai state farm in the new economic zone of Minh Hai City and to a number of families of wounded soldiers, dead heroes and troops. He held a work session with Comrade Phan Ngoc Xuyen, member of the party Central Committee and secretary of the provincial party committee and Comrade Nguyen Minh Duc, chairman of the provincial people's committee and then visited a number of installations.

At the Dong Hai state farm, where nearly 2,000 natives of Hai Hau District, Ha Nam Ninh Province are settled and participating in building a new economic zone, Comrade Do Muoi held a year-end meeting with the cadres and employees of the state farm, called on the Catholic family of Mr Le Van Huynh at Hai Phuc village and presented gifts to teenagers and children.

Comrade Duong Van Xep, director of the Dong Hai state farm, reported to Comrade Do Muoi that, since its founding, the state farm, with the assistance of the party, administration and people of Minh Hai Province, has overcome many difficulties to gradually build a number of material bases and put into cultivation some 1,600 out of the 3,350 hectares of wasteland over the past 4 years, and has achieved an output of 2 tons of paddy per hectare in a certain year. The state farm has also paid adequate attention to educational and public health work. More than 700 children of school age have been sent to kindergartens and general education classes organized by the state farm. The administration and state farm have made early material and spiritual preparations for welcoming the Nham Tuat Lunar New Year so that everyone can enjoy the Tet festival in peace in their new homeland.

During his visit to Mrs Nguyen Thi Hai's family in the fifth ward of Minh Hai City, Comrade Do Muoi heard, with great emotion, that five of her sons had joined the armed forces and four of them had laid down their lives in the anti-U.S. national salvation struggle. This year, although she has reached the age of 70, Mrs Hai is still continuing to positively participate in local activities as a member of the city's Fatherland Front Committee.

Comrade Do Muoi expressed the gratitude of our state and people to the families and mothers who had worthily contributed to the great success of the nation's sacred resistance in the past 50 years. He urged the families of combatants, disabled soldiers and dead heroes to continue to develop their patriotic and revolutionary traditions and make positive contributions to national construction and defense.

On this occasion, Comrade Do Muoi also urged the local party committee echelons and administration to take better care of the families of combatants, disabled soldiers and dead heroes who need help, and to properly implement the party and state policies towards the armed forces out of the frontline.

In Cuu Long Province, which has recorded many achievements in agricultural production, small industries and handicrafts and in fulfilling its grain obligation to the state, Comrade Do Muoi held a work session with Comrade Nguyen Dan, alternate member of the party Central Committee and secretary of the provincial party committee and Comrade Trinh Van Lan, chairman of the provincial people's committee.

He conveyed Tet greetings to the cadres of various sectors, praised the provincial party organization and local people for their comprehensive achievements, especially those in agricultural production and in implementing the grain obligation to the state, and extended wishes for new successes in economic and cultural development and in the maintenance of political security.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN ON REVIEWING MILITARY TRAINING

OW071055 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1200 GMT 6 Jan 82

[Text] Dear comrades and friends: All our armed forces units are now reviewing their 1981 military training achievements, an important task that all armed units must scrupulously carry out. In this connection today's QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial points out:

Military training was fairly stabilized last year, with all armed units from the infantry to technical units of all armed branches and services striving to overcome difficulties and devoting much time and effort to military training. Noticeable progress was achieved in military training last year compared with previous years. According to plan, troops were given basic training, overall training, and training on combat realities. New progress was also made in planning and in promoting standardization levels and training procedures and methods, which directly contributed to enhancing our troops' combat ability and combat readiness.

However, although many units correctly observed the military training instructions from higher levels, organized training according to plan, devoted sufficient time to training and achieved satisfactory results, some units' military training results remained poor because of their rather lax management of training schedules and of the troops involved in training and because of their failure to properly follow the regular army training system.

Direct checks by the National Defense Ministry and by military region and military corps commands still show instances of inaccurate reporting in some units, with discrepancies between the actual and reported data. The purpose of reviewing military training achievements is to properly assess the efforts of all cadres and combatants and the results and quality of military training in each unit so as to gain practical and useful lessons for training in the new year. Therefore, reviewing military training activities does not merely mean reviewing achievements or reporting these achievements to higher levels. What really matters is that combatants and cadres, primarily leaders at all levels, should uphold the spirit of criticism and self-criticism and conduct reviews to suit the actual situation in their units. They should correctly assess their units' strengths and weaknesses as well as the causes of such weaknesses, determine the responsibilities of each individual and each level and devise efficient measures for further enhancing the quality of training.

In fact, many objective difficulties existed in 1981, adversely affecting military training. However, what is important in reviewing achievements is that efforts should be made to detect subjective shortcomings and to avoid blaming failure on objective difficulties in order to develop strengths and overcome weaknesses and help achieve better results in military training in 1982.

The defense minister's instructions on military training and the directives from higher levels on this subject serve as a basis for the armed forces units' military training reviews. In order to rapidly and satisfactorily conduct military training reviews, it is necessary that careful and detailed preparations be made, that sufficient documents with accurate data be secured and that assessments by unit leaders be clear and specific.

While fulfilling their political responsibilities, cadres making reviews must adopt a scientific work method, tackling problems in a comprehensive manner while attaching particular attention to the main points, in order to draw practical lessons. Reviews must be concise and clear cut.

Unnecessarily lengthy reports must be avoided. All armed forces units, including combat and combat support units, both on the frontline and in the rear areas, must correctly review their 1981 military training achievements. Reviews of military region, armed service, armed branch and military corps levels are of particular importance because the experience gained from such reviews will serve as a guide for the entire army and will contribute to further enhancing that quality of military training in 1982.

PREPARATIONS FOR INDUCTION OF YOUTH URGED

OW200621 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1200 GMT 19 Jan 82

["Recent" QUAN DOI NHAN DAN editorial: "Satisfactorily Implement the Task of Making Preparations for the First Round of Induction of Youths in 1982"]

[Text] Implementing the military service law recently promulgated by our state, the regions throughout the country are actively and satisfactorily completing the preparations for calling up the youths for the first phase of induction in 1982. Dealing with this matter, the editorial of a recent issue of QUAN DOI NHAN DAN stresses:

At a time when the various regions were actively and urgently preparing to call up the youths for the first phase of induction in 1982, the Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly on 30 December 1981 passed the military service law, which was promulgated on 10 January 1982 and took effect on the day of its promulgation.

This is an extremely important legal base for our people to develop their right of collective mastery and for each of our citizens to fulfill his military obligation. The regions will have more favorable conditions for satisfactorily performing the task of calling up the youths for the first phase of induction in 1982 -- the first phase will be implemented in accordance with the recently promulgated military service law.

Military service is a glorious obligation of citizens to serve in the VPA. Except those who are barred from this service as stipulated in Article 5, are in the period during which their right to serve in the armed forces is removed or are under detention, all citizens have the right and duty to discharge their military obligation. Male citizens from 18 to 27 years old, who have not served and who are in any region, rural area, street, trade school, vocational or higher education school, university, agency, enterprise or any other grassroots unit, must be prepared to enlist. Specifically, every youth must correctly carry out the following procedures in accordance with the law:

-- To go and register;

-- To undergo a physical checkup; and

-- To join the armed forces upon receiving an order from the military commander of his district, sector, city or the municipality subordinate to his province.

Draft deferment and exemption must be carried out in accordance with provisions of Articles 29, 30 and 31 of Section 3, Chapter IV of the military service law. Provisions for deferment and exemption in accordance with Decision No 61-CP of 19 February 1981, Decision No 333-CP of 1 October 1980 and previous documents are now no longer applicable.

This is a law that reflects the citizens' sacred obligation and noble right and is compatible with objective reality; namely, that over the past 2 years or so the state agencies, enterprises and installations have had time to train and assign personnel to replace the male citizens who, one after the other have been called upon to discharge their sacred obligation. The state agencies, the VFF, the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, the Vietnam Women's Union, the Vietnam Collective Peasants' Union, other organizations, schools and families have joined forces in motivating, educating and organizing their cadres, workers, personnel, members and sons in creating conditions for them to join the armed forces in the first phase of induction in 1982 in accordance with the military service law recently passed by the National Assembly and in forming a good basis for subsequent induction callups.

The open induction callup of youths has been accompanied by a list of those who are deferred from induction or exempted from military service. Announcing the results of physical checkups is a very correct decision that ensures a fair and rational induction callup. The correct and full implementation of this provision is a manifestation of the respect for the people's right of collective mastery.

The implementation of the military service law in our country is based on our people's patriotism and love for socialism. Every citizen has a military obligation and should voluntarily and with full awareness fulfill this sacred obligation. This is a broad masses campaign. The party and administration organizations, groups, armed forces, schools and families should coordinate their actions and form an amalgamated strength to motivate, educate and organize the citizens and create conditions for them to fulfill their tasks. The regional military agencies and members of military service councils at various levels should accurately and fully prepare all procedures and documents for every citizen before calling him up, should properly organize his sendoff and should create conditions for him to reach his induction center in good time. They should correctly implement the policy regarding soldiers' families and organize practical activities to motivate the inductees, ease their mind and make them enthusiastic in discharging their duties.

The village and ward people's committees and the agency, enterprise and grassroots unit chiefs should pay special attention to implementing the recently promulgated military service law. The regions should resolutely and satisfactorily carry out the callup of youths for the first phase of induction in 1982 with high quality, in accordance with the targeted number and in good time, thus actively contributing to building up the armed forces and firmly consolidating national defense.

NHAN DAN PROMOTES YOUTH IN DEFENSE DUTIES

BK211535 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 20 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 21 January editorial: "Satisfactorily Prepare the Younger Generation for Fulfillment of National Defense Duties"]

[Text] Every independent and sovereign country must pay attention to building national defense and the armed forces in order to defend the fatherland. With tens of centuries of fighting against the northern expansionists and against various aggressive imperialist forces, national construction and defense have become a law of existence and development for our nation. Now that total independence and freedom have been regained and national unification has been achieved, our party, state and people, while building socialism and a new life, are again compelled to cope with a new, direct and dangerous enemy -- the big-nation Beijing expansionists and hegemonists. In collusion with the U.S. imperialists, they are waging a war in many fields and are preparing conditions for a large-scale war of aggression in order to annex our country and the three Indochinese countries as a whole.

Defending the fatherland is the sacred duty and the noble right of every citizen, especially youths. The newly enacted law on military service was welcomed with great joy by our youths and people, for it reflects their rights to be masters and responds to their aspirations. The new law -- which institutionalizes the military service obligation and stipulates the preparation of youths for military service -- will have an important effect on the building of a powerful, standardized and modern People's Army capable of defeating the enemy in any type of war.

Beginning this spring, our youths will carry out their military service under the new law. Satisfactorily preparing the younger generation for fulfillment of their duties toward the fatherland and toward the international obligations will become not only a large-scale mass motivation drive but also a scientific and detailed organizational task. It is the duty and responsibility of the entire party and society.

Experience obtained from those localities with good records in drafting youths into the army -- such as Tu Loc District in Hai Hung, Yen Lang District in Haiphong, Hoa Lu District in Ha Nam Ninh, Tam Binh District in Cuu Long, Dien Ban District in Quang Nam-Danang, the 3d precinct of Ho Chi Minh City, the Ba Din precinct of Hanoi and so forth -- shows that political and ideological indoctrination of the younger generation, from children to teenagers and youths, by families and society is very important. The patriotic tradition and revolutionary heroism of various heroes, fallen combatants, and emulation fighters of our party and our people as a whole are an invaluable spiritual asset and a great source of encouragement for the younger generation.

All youths must be systematically given military training by the self-defense militia forces or must receive compulsory military traning from various general schools, vocational training from various general schools, vocational training schools, vocational middle schools, universities and colleges. The popular military training is designed to make every youth familiar with the use of various types of commonly-used infantry weapons, ensuring that he can fight the enemy with either booby traps, spikes, mines or grenades and if necessary, can handle antiaircraft guns, artillery pieces and mortars. Youths must also be trained on how to satisfactorily carry out patrol and guard missions, to capture commandos and scouts and to satisfactorily carry out combat-support activities, such as first-aid, the evucation of wounded soldiers, communications, liaison and so forth.

The task of improving the military knowledge of youths requires us to develop the various national defense clubs and military sport games and to satisfactorily prepare replenishment forces for various armed services and technical combat branches.

The people's war for national defense under today's new conditions requires youths to have the good health, stamina, dynamicism, intelligence, resourcefulness and accuracy needed for a high combat spirit and for complex and urgent combat situations. It is necessary to launch a movement to maintain physical fitness among youths in order to make them strong enough to engage in labor activities and remain combat ready for national defense.

Cultivating a sense of organization and discipline on a daily and permanent basis is also a demand to be met by the younger generation. This is designed to prepare them not only for military service but also for labor activities to build the fatherland.

Satisfactorily preparing youths for the fulfillment of military service is tantamount to actively contributing to strengthening national defense and building our army into a powerful revolutionary people's army with an even higher level of standardization and modernization capable of maintaining combat readiness and fighting victoriously under all circumstances.

HANOI UNITS ISSUE PLAN FOR TROOP RECRUITMENT

BK250956 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Executing an order from the chairman of the Council of Ministers, all precincts, districts and cities in Hanoi, since the beginning of 1982, have intensively developed diverse activities in support of the first phase of troop recruitment for 1982.

The municipal military draft council has disseminated a plan for recruitment of youths into the army to the various precincts, districts and cities, and coordinated the activities of the various sectors, mass organizations and the VFF to study thoroughly the law on military service adopted recently by the Natonal Assembly.

SRV, USSR SIGN TRANSPORT COOPERATION MINUTES

OW231327 Hanoi VNA in English 1532 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi VNA, Jan 20 -- Transport cooperation teams in the Vietnamese-Soviet Intergovernmental Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technical Cooperation held its eighth session here from January 11-19. They reviewed transport of goods between the two countries and other matters since their sixth meeting.

In furtherance of resolutions of the seventh session of the intergovernmental committee, the teams decided on measures to fulfil the programme for this year, which provides for improvement of loading at seaports, the transport of goods to reception points, and other matters. The minutes of the session were signed by Duong Bach Lien, Vietnamese vice-minister of transport and communications, and L.P. Nedyank, Soviet vice-minister of merchant marine.

JURIDICAL ASSISTANCE PACT WITH USSR APPROVED

OW222120 Hanoi VNA in English 1538 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 22 -- The Vietnamese Council of State has ratified the agreement on juridical assistance between Vietnam and the Soviet Union signed on December 10, 1981. This was announced in a communique released here today following a one-day meeting of the Council of State.

SRV-CUBA TRADE PROTOCOL SIGNED IN HAVANA

OW141758 Hanoi VNA in English 1555 GMT 14 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 14 -- A protocol on goods exchange between Vietnam and Cuba in 1982 was signed in Havana on January 12.

Signatories were Vietnamese Deputy Minister for Foreign Trade Dinh Van Tram and his Cuban counterpart, Fuente Menendez.

MALAYSIA

GHAZALI SAYS MALAYSIA READY TO HOST KHMER SUMMIT

BK270957 Hongkong AFP in English 0942 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Kuala Lumpur, 27 Jan (AFP) -- Leaders of the three Kampuchean resistance groups would "certainly get together again" to pursue the idea of a coalition, the Malysian foreign minister, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, said today. Speaking to newsmen on his talks with the Indonesian foreign minister, Prof Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, Tan Sri Ghazali said Malaysia and other ASEAN countries would be ready to provide facilities for another summitry of the three resistance leaders -- Prince Sihanouk, Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan.

Malaysia, he said, had not received any formal letter from the Khmer Rouge rejecting the proposal for a loose anti-Vietnamese coalition as proposed by Singapore. He noted, however, that according to press reports the letter had been sent by the Khmer Rouge deputy prime minister, Ieng Sary, to all the ASEAN foreign ministers.

Tan Sri Ghazali had extensive discussions on the Kampuchean situation and other regional developments with Prof Mokhtar, who flew in here last night on a one-day visit. "We will be in close touch with the rest of our ASEAN friends watching these developments and to see how we can be helpful in bringing about a political solution of the whole problem of Kampuchea, "Tan Sri Ghazali said. The Malaysian foreign minister was addressing his first news conference after his miraculous escape from a plane crash 17 days ago.

Asked whether he was disappointed by the Khmer Rouge's rejection of the proposal for a loose coalition, the foreign minister said he was sorry that an agreement, which looked so near, had not come about. But he was not disappointed in the sense that they had not rejected the principle of a coalition. "I am certain the three will get together again, and begin (the efforts for a coalition) once more," he said.

Comment on Ghazali Remarks

BK281609 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The Malaysian foreign minister yesterday expressed Malaysia's willingness to help in whatever way possible and bring about a political solution to the Kampuchean problem. This included the possibility of hosting talks between the three main resistance groups.

The rejection of Singapore's proposal for a loose coalition between the Khmer Rouge, the KPNLF and the Moulinaka was disappointing, but it is useful to note that the Khmer Rouge have not closed the door completely. The idea of a loose coalition was rejected by the Khmer Rouge on the grounds that such a coalition would be weak and unworkable. What they want is a stronger coalition where each group may have to give up some of its identity and independence and merge into a stronger, single entity. There have been various proposals regarding this single unified resistance grouping, but all of them have as their central thesis the need for the Khmer Rouge to give up their ideology, acknowledge and [words indistinct] their past sins, as when they killed hundreds of thousands of their own people, and finally giving over the leadership to Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk. These are tough positons, and the Khmer Rouge are not expected to accept them.

But, the Khmer Rouge must remember that they have discredited themselves in the eyes of their own people. The Kampuchean people fear them even more than they fear the Vietnamese. Though they will never accept the puppet Heng Samrin regime, they will prefer him and the consequent Vietnamese domination to rule by the Khmer Rouge.

Through their own genocidal policies, the Khmer Rouge are today hated by their own people. There is thus a vital need for the Khmer Rouge to submerge themselves in a coalition that would make them more presentable to their own people.

Malaysia has offered its services as a host to all the three factions, if they want to have further talks on this issue. It is to be hoped that there would be some solution to the problem, because the longer it takes, the more difficult it will become to retain the present support given to the ASEAN's stand.

Meanwhile, Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr stated yesterday that Vietnam might participate in negotiations for a political solution to the Indochinese state, if careful steps were adopted by negotiators. There can be no dispute over the fact there can be no solution to the Kampuchean problem without the active support of Vietnam. Vietnam has not been too cooperative thus far, as evidenced by its rejection of the peace proposal by the General Assembly of the United Nations. Vietnam has everything going in its favor in Indochina at the present moment, but it must be remembered the situation was created by the force of military arms, and Vietnam's recent history is testimony of the fact that the world's most powerful weapon and power cannot suppress the freedom of the people and nation.

The ASEAN group of nations, especially Indonesia, have actively exerted efforts to allow Vietnam to get off the hook in Kampuchea. Indonesia has proposed that there should be a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese forces in return for a UN-supervised free and fair general elections. This proposal may well provide a long-term solution to Kampuchea, which is today the main destabilizing factor towards peace in Southeest Asia.

IRAQI VICE PRESIDENT MA'RUF'S OFFICIAL VISIT

Arrival Ceremony

OW221325 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf planed into a red [carpet] welcome today at the Manila International Airport. For details, here is Jose Carlos of KBS news: [Begin recording] It was an elaborate welcome for Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf, whose country has growingly become important to the Philippines, not only for its oil, but also for its labor imports of Filipino workers. The first lady and Prime Minister Cesar Virata led welcomers this morning for the visiting Ma'ruf, who was accorded military honors at the new Manila Internatonal Airport. With the Iraqi official is a 30-man mission that will assist him in furthering Philippine-Iraqi relations.

Tonight the Iraqi vice president meets with the president at Malacanang. The 7-day visit of the Iraqi dignitary will afford him a better perspective of Philippine development, including the status of Muslim Filipinos in the country.

Meeting, Dinner With Marcos

JN231144 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic 0800 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Manila -- Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf conveyed President Saddam Husayn's greetings to Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his wishes for the continued properity development of the Philippines. This occurred when the Philippine president received Ma'ruf at the presidential palace yesterday.

The Philippine president asked the Iraqi vice president to convey his greetings to President leader Saddam Husayn and his wishes for the continued prosperity and development of Iraq, under the wise leadership of President Saddam Husayn.

During the meeting Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf reviewed the racist Persian enemy's aggression against Iraq and how Iraq was compelled to reply to defend its territory and independence. He also explained Iraq's response from a strong position to the international initiatives to stop the war, the insistence of the racist Persian enemy to prolong the war and the arms cooperation between the Iranian regime and the Zionist enemy who attacked the Iraqi nuclear reactor to weaken the Arab nation's ability to confront its enemies and to eliminate the achievements of the Ba'th Party and revolution in Iraq.

The Iraqi vice president asserted the importance of developing the Nonaligned Movement to create international balance, solve economic issues and safeguard the independence of the movement's countries. The Philippine president showed full understanding of Iraq's viewpoint on its just war against the racist Persian enemy. Iraqi-Philippine relations and ways of developing them in the interest of the two countries were reviewed, and current Arab and international issues were discussed.

The meeting was attended by Hasan 'Ali, Revolution Command Council [RCC] member and trade minister, and Nabil Najim, director of protocol in the Foreign Ministry, Iraq's ambassador to the Philippines and the Philippine ambassador in Baghdad.

Ferdinand Marcos hosted a dinner in the presidential palace last night in honor of Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his accompanying delegation. President Marcos delivered a speech on this occasion in which he praised Iraq's policy under the leadership of President Saddam Husayn and its support for developing of countries to safeguard their independence. He stressed that the Iraqi vice president's visit to the Philippines reflects the advanced relations between the two countries and their common understanding of international issues. He also praised Iraq's ancient culture and the enlightened ideology which Iraq has given to mankind.

In his reply speech, the vice president expressed his appreciation to President Marcos for his growing interest in developing the relations between the two countries, stressing that these relations were built on bases that serve their interests and their people. The Iraqi vice president discussed the Iraqi-Iranian war, stressing that Iraq was forced to enter the war to defend its sovereignty when the Persian enemy tried to interfere in Iraq's domestic affairs and to export the revolution from Iran to Iraq.

The dinner was attended by the Philippine prime minister, Mrs Imelda Marcos, the wife of the Philippine president, ministers, high-ranking officials and heads of diplomatic missions in Manila.

In a special ceremony, President Marcos bestowed on Taha Muhyi an-Din Ma'ruf and Hasan 'Ali, RCC member and trade minister, the Philippine Medal of the First Class. The ceremony was attended by the Philippine prime minister and high-ranking officials.

Virata-Ma'ruf Trade Talks

HK260033 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] The Philippines and Iraq began closed-door talks yesterday on improving and strengthening economic and trade relations. The meeting was between Prime Minister Cesar Virata and Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf. They discussed matters on improving trade between Iraq and the Philippines. Virata said a communique on the talks will be issued tomorrow at the completion of the discussions. The Iraqi vice president is also scheduled to hold meetings with Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo, Industry Minister Roberto Ongpin and Labor Minister Blas Ople.

The Iraqi vice president was conferred the honorary degree of doctor of laws by the University of the East. The ceremony was attended by the first lady, Mrs Marcos, and other Cabinet officials. Vice President Ma'ruf cited the stability of the Philippine society. He attributed this to the great improvements in the field of education and culture in the country.

INA Report on Talks

JN251403 Baghdad in Arabic 0955 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Manila, 25 Jan (INA) -- Official talks began here today between Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and Philippine Prime Minister Cesar Virata. Means of consolidating bilateral relations and the developments in the Arab and international situation were discussed during the meeting.

At the beginning of the meeting, Virata welcomed the Iraqi vice president and his accompanying delegation, stressing that this visit would consolidate and strengthen relations between the two countries. The Iraqi vice president expressed his thanks for the hospitality accorded him and his delegation by President and Mrs Marcos, the prime minister and other Philippines officials, saying that this reflects the true friendship between the two countries and their desire to develop their relations.

The Iraqi vice president said: Our visit to the Philippines, which we made despite the war Iraq is waging against the aggressors, shows under the leadership of President Saddam Husayn, the importance Iraq attaches to building equitable relations with the Third World countries based on respecting sovereignty and mutual benefits.

Ma'ruf reviewed the huge developments which Iraq had achieved under the leadership of the Ba'th party, and which aim at building a unique experiment which will provide justice and equality to the sons of our people in Iraq and equal chances for them to build a progressive and strong Iraq. He said that Iraq is keen to play an active and positive role on Arab and international issues, particularly the Nonaligned Movement and to preserve its principles which guarantee independence for its countries and free them from international interference and facts.

Ma'ruf touched on the war with Iran. He said that the Iranians began the war when they bombed Iraqi cities and regions on 4 September 1980 which promptedus to defend our sovereignty and drive evil away from Iraq. He pointed out that from the beginning of the war Iraq has welcomed international efforts to reach a peaceful solution but the Iranian regime rejected these efforts due to its expansionist and racist policy which is backed by imperialist and Zionist quarters. He also pointed to the conspiracy revealed in Bahrain behind which the Iranian regime sought to threaten the security and safety of the Arab Gulf.

Ma'ruf then spoke about the continuous Zionist aggression against Lebanon and the Arab Palestinian people, stressing that this policy which is backed by U.S. imperialism endangers the region's security, especially the treacherous aggression on Iraqi nuclear installations and the annexation of the Syrian Heights. He hoped that our visit to the Philippines would open new doors within the process of bilateral relations for serving the two countries, referring to the proposal of President Saddam Husayn at the Havana conference for nonaligned countries which called for establishing a world fund for helping the developing countries which suffer from inflation. This inflation will be discussed at the meeting of the Group of 77 next month in Baghdad in which the Philippines will participate.

The Philippines' prime minister stressed his country's true desire to consolidate and develop relations with Iraq in all fields, praising Iraq's policy and the leadership of President Saddam Husayn and his assistance to the developing countries. He showed understanding of the viewpoints that were expressed by the Iraqi vice president during his talks.

Meeting With Philippine Muslims

JN261913 Baghdad Domestic Service in Arabic 1700 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Manila -- Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf received at his place of residence this morning a delegation representing Muslims in the Philippines.

During the visit, the vice president explained that the party and revolution commands, led by President Saddam Husayn, attach importance to Muslims in the world at large and show concern for their holy places. He also reviewed Iraq's financial assistance to Islamic schools and institutions.

Ma'ruf reviewed the Persian enemy's aggression, its background and motives and the Khomeyni clique's policy, which is hostile to the spirit of Islam and to divine teachings. He referred to Iraq's response to the efforts exerted by the Islamic Conference Organization and other organizations to stop the war despite the victories that Iraq is achieving along the battle fronts from the premise of the humane principles which constitute the basis of Iraq's policy and to avoid shedding the blood of Muslims as Islamic teachings dictate.

On the problems of the Muslims in the Philippines, the vice president said: Proceeding from our principles of respect for the sovereignty of other states, noninterference in domestic affairs and respect for territorial integrity, Iraq considers this issue to be a domestic one, concerning the Philippines government and people alone, and hopes that the concerned parties will seek peaceful solutions to achieve unity in the Philippines.

The delegation representing Muslims in the Philippines expressed understanding of Iraq's viewpoint on the war against Iran and expressed support for Iraq's sound stand on settling the dispute.

Joint Trade Commission

OW261305 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] The government's Muslim Filipino development and assistance program has impressed Iraq's vice president. After a briefing on the Republic of the Philippines [RP] Government's Muslim Filipino policies, Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf praised the effort to improve the lot of Muslim Filipinos. Muslim Affairs Minister Romulo M. Espaldon gave the briefing at Malacanang. The Iraqi official was informed it was the government's policy to protect the interests of the Filipinos regardless of faith and belief.

Meanwhile, the Iraq-RP Joint Trade Commission was organized today to highlight the visit here of the Iraq trade mission. David Nye covered the story at the old Congress Building. [Begin David Nye recording] A cultural and scientific agreement and [an agreement on] a joint Iraq-Philippines trade commission were signed this afternoon at the executive house in Manila. Signing on behalf of the Iraqi Government was Trade Minister Hasan 'Ali. Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo and Trade Minister Roberto Ongpin signed for the Philippines.

In his remarks, Romulo praised the agreements as memorable and historic in the relationship of the two countries. He added these pacts not only affected the two countries intellectually, but also emotionally. For his part, Minister 'Ali said that this is a right start for RP-Iraq relations. He also said he was very much convinced cooperation between the two countries will be strengthened.

The joint Iraq-Philippine trade commission is a body which will monitor trade between the two countries. This was first conceived during the first lady's visit to Iraq last year. This trade body will meet annually with the site of the meeting alternating between Manila and Baghdad. For KBS News, this is David Nye. [end recording]

27 Jan Press Conference

JN271533 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1410 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Manila -- Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf has stated that Iraq's foreign policy is based on constant principles, foremost of which is respect for the sovereignty and independence of other states and noninterference in their domestic affairs. Ma'ruf added: proceeding from this stand, and after failing in convincing officials in Iran to suspend their aggressions, recurrent provocations and blatant interference in Iraq's domestic affairs, the latter found itself compelled to defend itself and use force to halt this aggression.

At a press conference here this morning before leaving for Singapore, Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf said that, despite its victories and military superiority, Iraq had repeatedly announced, through its president, that it is ready to halt the fighting and hold negotiations to a solution to the dispute that will safeguard the two countries' legitimate rights. Ma'ruf added that Iraq has responded to the peace initiatives by Islamic and international organizations while Iran had rejected them.

Ma'ruf stressed that Iraq considers the Palestinian cause a central one and that the expelling of the Palestinians from their lands, replacing them by aliens, confiscating their properties, depriving them of their minimum rights and trying to liquidate them are things that cannot be condoned by mankind. Ma'ruf added that the persistence of the Zionist entity in its policy of aggression against the Arabs backed by the United States contravenes all international norms and conventions. The forcible annexation of more Arab land by Israel is something on which we cannot remain silent. Ma'ruf said: We shall work with all our ability to put an end to the Zionists' aggressions.

Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf explained that the Zionist entity continuously seeks to halt our scientific, technological and economic development and that the Israeli raid against our nuclear installations clearly demonstrate this hostile spirit toward the Arabs.

On Iraq's role in the Nonaligned Movement, Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf said that Iraq is a founding member of this movement, has been and continues to be committed to its principles, has actively participated in all its conferences and has contributed to the movement's efforts to safeguard security, peace and stability in the world and to keep away from all blocs and alliances.

Delegation's Departure

OW271225 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] The Philippines appreciates Iraq's effort toward the setting up of a world fund to fight inflation. This was expressed today before the conclusion of the Iraq trade mission. The mission, led by Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf, left this morning after a 6-day visit. The first lady led government officials in giving the Iraqi mission a warm sendoff at the MIA [Manila International Airport]. The Iraqi vice president was accorded military honors before enplaning for Singapore. Also at the airport were Prime Minister Cesar Virata and Deputy Foreign Minister Manuel Collantes.

Before leaving, Vice President Ma'ruf and his party paid a farewell call on President Marcos at Malacanang. The vice president expressed his deep gratitude for the warm reception and hospitality accorded him and his delegation by the government and people of the Philippines the past 6 days.

The Iraqi vice president's visit here, in return for Madame Marcos' visit to Iraq last year, further strengthened the ties of friendship and cooperation between Manila and Baghdad.

27 Jan Joint Statement

JN272021 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1735 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Baghdad, 27 Jan (INA) -- The Philippines has expressed appreciation for Iraq's response to the efforts that are being exerted at the international level to achieve a cease-fire between Iraq and Iran and to reach a peaceful settlement on the basis of UN and Nonaligned Movement principles.

The Philippines also expressed support for the efforts of the United Nations and the other parties, including the Islamic Conference Organization, to achieve a peaceful settlement of the dispute. It also expressed the hope that the two parties to the dispute would seek a peaceful and satisfactory solution that will develop and promote the nations in the region.

This was contained in the joint statement issued in Manila and Baghdad this evening at the end of the visit Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf paid to the Philippines and his talks with the Philippine prime minister, Cesar Virata.

The statement notes that the two sides had stressed the need to safeguard peace and security in the Arab Gulf region and to avoid the interference of the big powers in the domestic affairs of the countries in the region to guarantee their independence and development. They also agreed that security in the Arab Gulf region is the sole responsibility of the countries in the region, without the interference of any foreign party.

The Philippine side reiterated its denunciation of the Israel air raid against the Iraqi nuclear installations, given that it seriously violates the UN Charter and international law. The Philippine side described the aggression as a vilification of the developing countries' right to achieve scientific progress through the use of technology for peaceful purpose and social development.

The Iraqi and Philippine sides expressed satisfaction with the development of relations between their two countries and stressed that there are new scopes for cooperation between them. The two sides stressed their desire to expand cooperation in the spheres of industry, trade, economic ventures, science, technology, energy and culture on the basis of mutual interests and equality.

On reviewing the situation in the Arab region, the two sides reiterated support for the Palestinian people's right to determine their fate and establish their own independent state in Palestine. They also reiterated their recognition of the PLO as the Palestinian people's legitimate representative and condemned Israel's decisions to annex Jerusalem and the Golan Heights, considering them a violation of international norms and laws and of the United Nations. They called on the international community to disregard these decisions and consider them null and void. They also condemned [word indistinct] recurrent aggressions against Lebanon and the violation of its territorial integrity and independence.

The two sides agreed to work to halt the arms race [words indistinct] under effective international supervision. They welcomed current efforts for reducing the arms race and banning nuclear weapons. They pointed out that any progress achieved on this road will contribute to consolidating world peace and security.

The Iraqi and Philippine sides expressed support for the policy of peaceful coexistence among the members of the international community, regardless of the nature of their economic and social regimes. They appealed to the countries and peoples of the world, including the big powers, to act in a responsible manner on issues which affect world peace and security.

On the international situation, ITU developments and the situation in their two regions, the two sides expressed full support for the United Nations and the basic principles acknowledged in its charter, particularly those that call for respect for the independence and territorial integrity of countries, the inadmissibility of using force or threats in international relations and the principle of noninterference in the domestic affairs of others. The two sides also expressed concern over the escalation of tension between the big powers and the possibilities of war by proxy which pose a threat to the peoples' sovereignty and independence. They stressed the need to strengthen the United Nations in an effective manner, so that it may deal with the various problems which expose world stability to danger, to safeguard peace, which may evaporate as a result of disputes that escalate into comprehensive international confrontations and a war between the big powers.

The two sides expressed concern over the continued tension and disputes in Southeast Asia, which creates an atmosphere of instability and hampers the region's economic progress and development. They expressed hope that constructive efforts might be exerted to reach a comprehensive settlement to all the disputes among all the countries in the region and the other countries concerned. They also expressed anxiety over the exacerbation of tension in Africa, which may encourage foreign intervention, and expressed the need to settle the continent's problems through a dialogue among its countries.

The statement says that the Philippine prime minister, Cesar Virata, accepted Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'Ruf's invitation to visit Iraq.

RULING PARTY UNDER FIRE FOR BATASAN PERFORMANCE

HK240606 Baguio Mountain Province Broadcasting Corporation in English 0400 GMT 24 Jan 82

[Text] Stung by criticisms from the opposition and a threat by President Marcos that he will resort to his decree-making powers if they do not act fast enough to meet contingencies, KBL members of the Batasan have finally decided to put their act together. They will meet at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in what Batasan insiders describe as attempts to crack the party whip in the face of mounting criticism from the opposition on the Batasan's poor performances. The Batasan leadership, through Speaker Querube Makalintal and Deputy Prime Minister Jose Rono, is expected to appeal to KBL members to perform their legislative duties as expected of them by their constituents.

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 021 1 February 1982

JAPAN

Text of Komoto Economic Policy Speech to Diet C 1
Government Announces Foreign Trade Package C 3
Hegg Crewman Says Ship Was Signaled To Stop C 5

NORTH KOREA

VRPR: South's 20-Point Proposal 'Preposterous' D 1
U.S. Withdrawal Called 'Essential' Prerequisite D 1
[NODONG SINMUN 1 Feb]
Further Criticism of 22 Jan Unification Proposal D 2
NODONG SINMUN Commentary [29 Jan] D 2
LSWYK Chairman Comments D 3
VRPR Scores Suzuki for Supporting Chon Proposal D 5
Hitler Brutalities in Auschwitz Condemned D 5
Conference on Reunification Held in Helsinki D 6
Kim Il-song Greetings D 6
Conference Opens D 6
Kim Yong-nam Conveys Greetings to Kriangsak D 8
DPRK To Host Nonaligned News Agencies Meeting D 8

SOUTH KOREA

Unification Minister Issues Policy Statement E 1
PRC Has No Comment on UNC Proposal on Observers E 2
[TONG-A ILBO 30 Jan]

KAMPUCHEA

Hun Sen: Thai-PRK Negotiations Are 'Necessary' H 1
Party Central Committee Plenum Issues Communique H 1
Further Materials on SRV New Year Celebration H 1
Chea Sim Greeting H 1
Yos Por Message H 2
Visit to SRV Embassy H 2
Condolences Expressed Over Death of Suslov H 3
Leaders' Condolence Message H 3
Wreath-Laying Ceremony H 3
Call at Soviet Embassy H 3
Editorial Urges Expanded Production, Trade [KAMPUCHEA] H 4
Philippine Foreign Minister's Statements Viewed [VODK] H 6
Malaysian Offer To Host Meeting Reported [VODK] H 6
Unity in Struggle Against SRV 'Aggressors' Urged [VODK] H 7
VODK Reports Successful Cutting of Railway Track H 8
AFP: Son Sann Calls Sihanouk 'Pessimist' H 8

LAOS

Souphanouvong Sends Tet Greetings to SRV Leaders I 1
Expressions of Condolence on Death of Suslov I 1
Central Committee Message I 1
Wreath Laying at Embassy I 2
Indian Scientific, Technical Delegation Visits I 2
Arrival of Delegation I 2
Meeting With Sali Vongkhamsao I 2
Meeting With Kaysone Phomvihan I 2
MPR State Bank Delegation Pays Official Visit I 3
Arrival of Group I 3
Signing of Cooperation Memo I 3
Departure of Group I 3
Soviet Building Delegation Pays Official Visit I 4
Nouhak Phoumsavan Meets MPR, Soviet Delegations I 4

THAILAND

Fighting in Area of Kampuchean Border Reported J 1
AFP Report J 1
Further AFP Report J 1
Assessment of Damage J 2
Sitthi on Malaysian Kampuchean Talks Proposal J 2
SRV 'Propaganda,' 'Military Adventurism' Scored J 3
POST: Two Trawlers Seized by Vietnamese Pirates [1 Feb] J 4
Further Reports on Narcotics Suppression Drive J 4
Spokesman's Report [POST 30 Jan] J 4
Further Report [NATION REVIEW 31 Jan] J 5
Interior Minister's Remarks J 6
Army Commander's Comments J 6

VIETNAM

VNA Denies PRC Report on Border Provocations K 1
SRV Proposes Resumption of Talks With PRC K 1
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Commentary [31 Jan] K 2
UN Secretary General's Note on SRV-PRC Border K 3
Pham Van Dong's Response K 3
NHAN DAN 1 Feb Commentary K 4
USSR's Ogarkov To Visit Early in February K 5
NHAN DAN Hits Reagan State of the Union Speech [29 Jan] K 5
Report on U.S. 'Infiltration' Into Laos Cited K 6
Nguyen Van Linh Attends Ceremony for Suslov K 6
Thai Binh Holds Party Congress 8-15 Jan K 6
Review of January Issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN K 9
West Europe Culture, Science Cooperation Noted K 10
Nguyen Duy Trinh Leaves for PCF Congress K 11
Officials Attend Indian Embassy Reception K 11

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 022 2 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Text of Watanabe Fiscal Policy Speech to Diet C 1
Suzuki Calls for International Economic Study C 7

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Denounces U.S. Envoy's Speech [31 Jan] D 1
Further Comment on Chon's Reunification Plan D 2
GFTUK Leader's Statement D 2
NODONG SINMUN Commentary [1 Feb] D 4
VRPR Calls 20-Point Plan 'Trick,' 'Clumsy Drama' D 5
Coverage of Kim Yong-nam Visit to Bangladesh D 7
Arrives 29 Jan D 7
Meets Prime Minister D 8
Signing of Cultural Accord D 8
Yun Ki-pok, KWP Delegation Return From Africa D 8

KAMPUCHEA

Scientific Delegation From USSR Pays Visit H 1
Meeting With Heng Samrin H 1
Signing of Protocol H 1
USSR Economic Relations Delegation Visits H 1
Signing of Cooperation Report H 1
Conclusion of Visit H 1
Soviet Komsomol Delegation Visits Phnom Penh H 2
Arrival of Group H 2
Meeting of Youth Groups H 2
Departure of Delegation H 2
Further Reports on Indian Delegation's Visit H 3
Visit to Battambang H 3
Meeting With Khun Chhy H 3
Meeting With Tang Saroem H 3
Conclusion of Visit H 4
Khieu Samphan Meets With Visiting Buddhist Monk [VODK] H 4
AFP: Sihanouk on Summit Meeting, Coalition H 5
Call for Early Summit H 5
View of Coalition Prospects H 5

THAILAND

Supreme Commander Gives Armed Forces Day Speech J 1
NATION REVIEW on Speech [27 Jan] J 4
Aid for Villagers Affected by Refugee Influx J 5
[NATION REVIEW 28 Jan]

VIETNAM

Leaders Pay Tet Visits to Various Areas	K 1
Pham Van Dong in Ha Bac	K 1
Pham Van Dong in Cao Bang	K 1
Pham Hung in Ho Chi Minh City	K 3
Pham Hung's Other Visits	K 3
Indonesia's Mokhtar Cited on Kampuchea, PRC, SRV	K 6
Role of Mass Motivation Work Emphasized [TAP CHI CONG SAN December]	K 6
Preparations for Army Induction of Youth Urged [NHAN DAN 1 Feb]	K 19

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 023 3 February 1982

JAPAN

Suzuki Modifies Stance on Defense Spending C 1
Abe Discusses Joint Arms Research in Diet C 1
Reiteration of Statement C 1

NORTH KOREA

Democratization of South Seen as 'Fundamental' D 1
[NODONG SINMUN 31 Jan]
NODONG SINMUN Hits Chon's 'Confrontation Policy' [2 Feb] D 1
CPRF Scores Sentencing of Students in South D 2
Thai Paper Reports Interview with Kim Yong-nam D 3
[NATION REVIEW 2 Feb]
VRPR: Succession Issue Solved by Kim Chong-il D 4
GFTUK Holds Second Plenary Session 31 Jan-1 Feb D 5
Polish Trade Delegation Arrives for Talks 2 Feb D 5

SOUTH KOREA

Major Parties Urge North To Accept New Proposals E 1
[KOREA HERALD 2 Feb]
KOREA TIMES Views Unification Minister's Plan [2 Feb] E 1
Austrian Foreign Minister Gives Press Conference E 2
Prime Minister Addresses National Issues on TV E 3
[KOREA HERALD 3 Feb]
Deficit With 10 Major Trade Partners Worsening E 3
Seoul Reports Kim Chong-il, Kim Song-ae Discord E 4

KAMPUCHEA

Hun Sen Arrives in Paris for PCF Congress H 1
Hun Sen Protests Pol Pot Group's Presence at UN H 1
Chan Si, Nuon Sareth Address Industry Conference H 1
Keo Chanda Addresses Phnom Penh Trade Meeting H 2
Remarks at Closing H 2
Keo Chanda Addresses Phnom Penh Police Meeting H 3
Yos Por Receives Islamic Development Bank Group H 3
Yos Por Attends Peace in Europe Meeting H 3
USSR Leaders Thanked for Anniversary Greetings H 4
SRV Leaders Thanked for Anniversary Greetings H 4
Leaders' Messages H 4
Hun Sen Message H 5
Agricultural Reportage for 25-31 Jan Period H 5
VODK Notes Cutting of Rail Track in Kaos Kralor H 6

LAOS

PRC Foreign Policy, 'Interference' Condemned I 1
SIANG PASASON Notes Support for Peace Policy [30 Jan] I 1
Strengthening of All-People's Defense Urged I 3
[SIANG PASASON 29 Jan]
PRK Delegation Meets Sali Vongkhamsao, Departs I 4
Kaysone Phomvihan Meets Australian Envoy I 4

THAILAND

Official Sees No Change in ASEAN Policy on DK J 1
[POST 3 Feb]
POST Reports Firing at Kampuchean Border [3 Feb] J 1
Border Crossings Noted J 2
Official on 'Voluntary Relocation' of Refugees J 2
[NATION REVIEW 28 Jan]
Talks Regarding Vietnamese 'Land People' Continue J 3
[NATION REVIEW 28 Jan]
POST: SRV 'Pirates' Release Fishing Trawlers [2 Feb] J 4
High-Level Committee Set Up To Tackle Opium J 5
Seven SAP Members Resign From Parliament J 5

VIETNAM

Press Marks 53d Anniversary of Communist Party K 1
NHAN DAN Editorial [3 Feb] K 1
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial [3 Feb] K 2
Army Paper Welcomes Soviet Marshal's Visit K 3
[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 3 Feb]
Vo Van Kiet 28 Dec Speech on Assault Youth K 4
[NHAN DAN 6 Jan]
French Communist Party Congress Greeted K 12
VCP Greetings Message K 12
3 Feb NHAN DAN Editorial K 13
Nguyen Duy Trinh Arrives in Paris 1 Feb K 14
U.S. 'Propaganda Campaign' Against Poland Hit K 14
[NHAN DAN 3 Feb]

INDONESIA

Singapore Foreign Minister Meets With Suharto N 1
Mokhtar Comments on Khmer Rouge Rejection N 1
Prawiro Message to Regional Group of 77 Meeting N 2

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Mahathir: Malaysia May Change Stand on DK O 1
STRAITS TIMES Views ASEAN Kampuchean Efforts [30 Jan] O 1
Joint Communique Signed With Saudi Arabia O 2

SINGAPORE

Iraqi Vice President Leads Delegation on Visit O 3
Meeting With Rajaratnam O 3
Meeting With Nair O 3

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 024 4 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Suzuki Rejects Socialist Leader's Allegations C 1
JSP Chairman Raps Suzuki for Militaristic Stance C 1
Suzuki Discusses Fiscal Reconstruction Policy C 2
Further on Financial Reform C 3
EC's Denman 'Dissatisfied' With Trade Talks C 3
Abe Urges More Imports, Overseas Investments C 4
Trade Group Forms Foreign Complaints Task Force C 4
Bill Proposes 3-Year Tariff Cuts on 1,653 Items C 5
UK Plans To Sell Aircraft, Missiles to Japan C 5
Government Approves SDF Personnel Increase C 6
MSDF To Take Part in Pacific Naval Maneuvers C 6

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Continues To Score Chon Proposal [4 Feb] D 1
KWP Greets Japan Socialist Party Congress D 2
Preparations for SPA Elections Progressing D 2
Premier Yi Chong-ok Leaves for Indonesia 2 Feb D 3
Public Health Group Leaves for PRC 2 Feb D 3
Visiting Polish Trade Delegation Signs Protocol D 3
Briefs: Romanian Envoy Leaves D 3

SOUTH KOREA

Navy Studies Strategy Against North Provocations E 1
[KOREA TIMES 4 Feb]
Government's Rice Import Policy Criticized E 1
[CHOSON ILBO 4 Feb]
Government To Cut Energy Consumption 10 Percent E 2
[KOREA TIMES 4 Feb]

BURMA

DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok Arrives 2 Feb G 1
Leaves for Indonesia G 1
Minister Signs Book of Condolences for Suslov G 1
Cooperatives Minister Returns From Foreign Tour G 1

KAMPUCHEA

Soviet Marshal Ogarkov's Visit Announced H 1
AFP: Hun Sen Interviewed on Various Issues H 1
National Assembly To Hold Second Session 5 Feb H 1
KAMPUCHEA Hails Session H 2
Hor Nam Hong Expresses Support for SRV Proposals H 2
Agreement With USSR on Agricultural Cooperation H 3
Keo Chanda Addresses Military Course Closing H 3
Prey Veng Military Command Organizes Meeting H 3
Yugoslav Editor Pays Visit to DK Areas [VODK] H 4
VODK Reports LNLF Guerrillas' Battle Activities H 4

THAILAND

Sitthi Discusses Khmer Coalition in Interview J 1
Further on Remarks [POST 4 Feb] J 1
Thailand Reportedly Not To Host Khmer Meetings J 2
SIAM RAT Views China's Role in Khmer Coalition [29 Jan] J 2
Attack by Lao Troops on 2 Feb Reported J 3
Statement by Officer J 3
NATION REVIEW on Attack [4 Feb] J 3
Further Materials on Narcotics Suppression Drive J 3
Interview With Prayut J 3
Talks With Army Officers [POST 3 Feb] J 4
Government Press Conference J 5
Further on Press Conference [POST 4 Feb] J 5
Provincial Officials Report Communist Defections J 6
NATION: CPT Kills 13 Soldiers in Road Ambush [2 Feb] J 6
Briefs: Lignite Deposits; Deep Sea Port Project J 7

VIETNAM

Soviet Marshal Ogarkov Begins Official Visit K 1
Arrival Ceremony K 1
VPA General Staff Banquet K 1
Van Tien Dung Reception K 2
UN Envoy Blames U.S. for Israeli Actions K 2
Ceremony Held at Soviet-Built Cement Plant K 3
SRV, Albania Sign Goods Exchange Protocol K 4
VCP Greets Mozambique Party on Anniversary K 4
Vo Chi Cong Speaks at Contract Wages Conference K 5
[NHAN DAN 10 Jan]
Addition to Thai Binh Party Congress Report [cross-reference] K 7
Pham Van Dong Speaks at Conference on Labor K 8
Linking Raw Material Areas, Processing Urged K 9
[NHAN DAN 2 Feb]
Third Military Region Holds Review Conference K 10
Norwegian Ambassador Pays Farewell Calls K 11
With Pham Van Dong K 11
With Truong Chinh K 11
Hanoi Ceremony Marks Dong Da Victory Over Qing K 11
TU Delegation Leaves for Visit to Soviet Union K 11

INDONESIA

UK Foreign Secretary Carrington Pays Visit N 1
Talks With Mokhtar N 1
Meeting With Subroto N 1
Carrington Dinner Speech N 1
Support for ASEAN on Kampuchea N 2
Mokhtar's Comments on Visit N 3
DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok Pays Official Visit N 3
Arrival of Delegation N 3
Banquet for Premier N 4
Yi Chong-ok Banquet Remarks N 4
Calls on Suharto N 5
MP's Score Moscow Radio Report Over PKI Message N 5

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Malaysian Envoy Interviewed on Kampuchea 0 1
[Bangkok NATION REVIEW 4 Feb]
Kuala Lumpur Discusses Khmer Rouge Stance 0 1

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 025 5 February 1982

JAPAN

Miyazawa Comments on Trade Bills in U.S. Congress C 1
Suzuki Reacts Favorably to U.S. Technical Trade C 1
JSP Official Questions C-1 Technology Transfer C 2
Talks Ended on Japan-U.S. Foreign Aid Policies C 3

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Hits South's Anticommunist Policy [5 Feb] D 1
VRPR Scores 'Team Spirit 1982' Military Exercise D 1
VRPR: Kim Chong-il Acts as 'Aide' to Kim Il-song D 2
Yi Chong-ok Speaks at Banquet in Indonesia D 4
NODONG SINMUN Stresses Role of Light Industry [4 Feb] D 5

SOUTH KOREA

Plans for North-South Communication Reported E 1
[CHUNGANG ILBO 5 Feb]
Daily Views Importance of 'Team Spirit 1982' E 1
[KOREA HERALD 5 Feb]
More Problems Foreseen in Loan Talks With Japan E 2
TONG-A ILBO Advocates Revision of Criminal Code E 2
[TONG-A ILBO 4 Feb]

KAMPUCHEA

National Assembly Second Session Opens 5 Feb H 1
Pot Pot 'Clique's' Refusal of Coalition Viewed H 1
Recent Thai Military Provocations Reported H 2
Heng Samrin Hails VCP on Founding Anniversary H 2
Lao Delegation Arrives for Bank Summit Meeting H 3
Heng Samrin Sends Greeting to PCF Congress H 3
Leaders Attend Function Honoring Fallen Combatants H 4
My Samedi Addresses 30 Jan KAMPUCHEA Meeting H 4
Khun Chhy Opens Bridge, Worksite in Prey Veng H 4
French Medical Group Gives Aid During Visit [VODK] H 5
Swedish Doctor Presents Aid While Visiting DK [VODK] H 5

LAOS

52d Founding Anniversary of VCP Marked I 1
LPRP Greetings Message I 1
SIANG PASASON Editorial [3 Feb] I 1
State Bank Delegation Leaves for Kampuchea I 2
Laos, USSR, SRV Sign Economic, Trade Document I 3
Sisavat Keobounphan Receives Komsomol Delegation I 3
Soviet Construction Delegation Leaves Vientiane I 3
Deputy Minister Receives Military Attaches I 3
Phoumi Vongvichit Leads Group to PCF Congress I 4
Greetings Message to Congress I 4

THAILAND

Border Shelling in Prachin Buri Reported J 1
Further Report J 1
SRV Seen as Seeking 'Pretext' for Violations J 1
SRV Scored for Border Violations, 'Slandering' J 2
SRV Policy Regarding Kampuchea Condemned J 3
Thanat Discusses ASEAN Policy on SRV, Kampuchea J 4
[NATION REVIEW 27 Jan]

VIETNAM

USSR's Ogarkov Continues Official Visit K 1
Pham Van Dong Reception K 1
Speeches at Hanoi Meeting K 1
Wreath Laying Ceremony 4 Feb K 2
SRV, USSR Trade Unions Sign Cooperation Pact K 2
SRV Envoy Informs PRK Official of Note to PRC K 3
Do Muoi Urges Provinces To Meet Plan Norms K 3

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 026 8 February 1982

CONTENTS

NORTH KOREA

Protest Lodged on 5 Feb SR-71 'Infiltration' D 1
NODONG SINMUN Raps U.S. 'Belligerency' in Korea [8 Feb] D 1
KCNA Denounces 'Team Spirit 1982' Exercise D 2
RENMIN RIBAO Cited on 'Team Spirit 1982' D 3
KCNA Cites Soviet Media on 'Team Spirit 1982' D 3
South Reported To Stage Naval Firing Exercise D 3
South Military Plane Crash 5 Feb Reported D 3
Proposed Agreement on Basic Relations Scored D 3
[NODONG SINMUN 6 Feb]
SPA Election Propaganda 'Brisk' Throughout DPRK D 5
Helsinki Reunification Meeting Adopts Document D 5
Letter to Kim Il-song D 6

SOUTH KOREA

President Says Unification Possible in 1980's E 1
Minister on North Response to 20-Point Proposal E 1
[CHOSON ILBO 6 Feb]
CHUNGANG ILBO Opposes Ocean Resources Pact [6 Feb] E 1
DPRK Premier Said To Cancel Singpoare Visit E 2
[CHUNGANG ILBO 6 Feb]

MONGOLIA

Brezhnev Address on Disarmament Hailed F 1
UNEN Analyzes 'Crisis' Among Chinese Communists F 1
Japanese 'Military Buildup' Denounced F 2

KAMPUCHEA

Ogarkov Leads Military Delegation on Visit H 1
Arrival of Group H 1
Wreath-Laying Ceremony H 1
Visit to Defense Ministry H 1
Defense Ministry Reception H 1
7 Feb Activities H 2
Meeting With Heng Samrin H 3
National Assembly Second Session Continues H 4
Chea Sim Opening Speech H 4
Chea Soth 5 Feb Report H 5
Further on 5 Feb Session H 8
SRV Proposal To Resume Talks With PRC Lauded H 8
VODK Views Reasons for Ogarkov PRK, SRV Visit H 9
VODK Urges Union of Forces To Oppose SRV H 10
VODK Lauds ASRAN Policy Stand, Efforts H 12
VODK Reports LNLF Guerrillas' Battle Activities H 13

THAILAND

POST Reports Army Firing on Kampuchean Bases [5 Feb]	J 1
Question of Khmer Meeting in Beijing Viewed	J 1
Official's Remarks	J 1
PRC Response	J 1
Bangkok Urges Unity Against Vietnamese Threat	J 2
UN Official Discusses Refugees, Other Issues	J 3
Meeting With Sitthi	J 3
Meeting With Prem	J 3
Refugee, Antipiracy Aid Pledge	J 3
Thai-Burmese Border Policy Committee Meets	J 4

VIETNAM

Soviet Marshal Ogarkov Pays Official Visit	K 1
Talks With Gen Le Trong Tan	K 1
Visits VPA Military Institute	K 1
Visits VPA Army Unit	K 1
VNA Rejects Thai 'Fabrication' About Shelling	K 2
Thai Charge of 'Superpower' Meddling Cited	K 2
NHAN DAN Scores PRC for Tension Along Border [6 Feb]	K 2
Nguyen Duy Trinh Attends Paris Ceremony	K 3
Nguyen Duy Trinh Addresses Paris Rally	K 3
Tax, Market-Management Shortcomings Noted [TAP CHI CONG SAN January]	K 5
Vo Ngyuen Giap Pays Tet Visit to Geology Cadres	K 8

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 027 9 February 1982

JAPAN

Sunobe Discusses Sanctions Against USSR, Poland C 1
Japanese Fishing Boat Seized by USSR Patrol Boat C 1
ROK Agrees to Second Round of Loan Talks C 1
NIHON KEIZAI on Aid Plans to South Korea [8 Feb] C 1
Ways To 'Mollify' U.S. Market Complaints Sought C 2
Esaki To Explain Tariff Measures to U.S., Europe C 3
Miyazawa Discusses Military Technology Transfer C 3
Miyazawa Says Japan Not To Change Defense Policy C 3

NORTH KOREA

VRPR Scores Weinberger's Remarks on North D 1
VRPR Hits Reagan's Proposed 1983 Defense Budget D 2
Kim Il-song Greets Vietnamese State Council Head D 2
Premier Yi Chong-ok To Visit Malaysia 'Shortly' D 2
Kim Yong-nam Leads KWP Delegation to Bangladesh D 2
Returns to Pyongyang D 3
Trade Delegation Leaves for Hungary 8 Feb D 3

SOUTH KOREA

Foreign Minister To Tour Asia, Europe, Africa E 1
1983 Budget To Be Frozen at 1982 Level E 1
[KOREA HERALD 6 Feb]
Government Reports Decrease in Unemployment Rate E 2

KAMPUCHEA

Further Reports on National Assembly Session H 1
Third Day's Activities H 1
Fourth Day's Activities H 1
Further Materials on Visit of USSR's Ogarkov H 2
Meeting With Chan Si H 2
Editorial Welcoming Visit H 3
U.S. Assistance to 'Reactionary Groups' Scored H 4
Thai Shellings in January Termed 'Threat' H 4
KPRP Delegation's Activities in France Reported H 5
Cha Rieng Receives Lao Banking Delegation 3 Feb H 5
Agricultural Reportage for 1-7 Feb Period H 6

LAOS

Front for National Construction Holds Plenum I 1
Opening of Plenum I 1
Souphanouvong Opening Speech I 1
Closing of Plenum I 2
Souphanouvong Closing Speech I 3

THAILAND

Continued Fighting in Kampuchea Reported J 1
Press Views Mahathir's Remarks on Kampuchea J 1
NATION REVIEW Editorial [4 Feb] J 1
POST Editorial [5 Feb] J 2
British Foreign Secretary Carrington Visits J 3
Carrington Dinner Speech [POST 4 Feb] J 3
Sitthi Speech at Dinner J 3
Meeting With Prem J 4
Remarks on Khmer Coalition J 5
Official Confirms Thanat Khoman Retains Post J 5

VIETNAM

Truong Chinh Receives Soviet Ambassador 8 Feb K 1
Brezhnev Message K 1
Hanoi: Thailand in Service of U.S., China K 1
Party Journal on Implementing 1982 State Plan K 2
[TAP CHI CONG SAN January]

INDONESIA

Soviet Diplomat Expelled; Consulate Closed N 1
Release on Attache's 'Spying' N 1
AFP on Envoy's Expulsion N 2
Closing of Soviet Consulate N 2
Arrest of Indonesian Officer N 3
Mokhtar's Remarks N 3

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 028 10 February 1982

JAPAN

Suzuki, Ito Laud Reagan Defense Spending Remarks C 1
Inayama Favors Supplying Arms Technology to U.S. C 1
Suzuki on Partnership With West, Aid to ROK C 1
Suzuki Addresses Northern Territories Day Rally C 2
MITI's Abe Says Japan Will Not Join Seabed Pact C 2
UK Minister Biffen Discusses Trade Issues C 2
Meeting With Abe C 2
Meeting With LDP Leader C 3
Economic Cooperation Talks With Canada Ended C 3
Canada To Ease Nuclear-Fuel-Reprocessing Limits C 4
Poland Scraps Contract for Fiber Plant C 4

NORTH KOREA

Text of 10 Feb CPRF Statement on N-S Talks D 1
U.S. Actions in Joint Security Area Protested D 5
South Korean Soldier Defects to North 8 Feb D 6
Tokchon Meeting Nominates Kim Il-song to SPA D 6
Letter Praising Kim Il-song D 8

SOUTH KOREA

Minister Testifies on Pyongyang N-S Stand E 1
Further Report E 1
Ties With European Socialists To Be Strengthened E 1
[KOREA TIMES 10 Feb]
Ministry Not To Raise Prices of Oil, Electricity E 2
[KOREA TIMES 10 Feb]
Iran Notifies Government of Oil Price Cut E 2
TONG-A ILBO: More North Koreans Defecting to PRC [8 Feb] E 3

MONGOLIA

UNEN Hails Brezhnev Nuclear Arms Proposal F 1
Trade Union Leader Discusses Havana Congress F 1

KAMPUCHEA

Continuation of National Assembly Second Session H 1
Passing of Organization Bill H 1
Election of Chan Si, Bou Thang H 1
Chea Sim Closing Remarks H 1
Battambang Course on Party Resolutions Opens H 2
Chan Si Thanks Soviet General for Message H 2
Students in Japan Send Letter on Coalition [VODK] H 2
VODK Reports on Dega-FULRO Battle Activities H 3
Kontum Battlefield H 3
Pleiku Battlefield H 4

Dac Lac, Phan Rang Reports H 4
Plei Kon Battlefield H 5
Ban Me Thuot Battlefield H 5
Dalat Battlefield H 6
Briefs: Red Cross Aid in Prey Veng; Aid Distribution in Takeo; Relief to Svay Rieng H 6

THAILAND

POST Reports Killing of 2 Villagers at Border [10 Feb] J 1
Officials on Malaysian 'Threat' to Khmer Rouge [NATION REVIEW 10 Feb] J 1
POST Reports Sihanouk Offer on Beijing Summit [10 Feb] J 2
SIAM RAT Urges Pressuring PRC on Coalition Issue [5 Feb] J 2
DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok Visits for Talks J 3
Arrival Greeting by Prem J 3
Prem-Yi Chong-ok Meeting J 4
Talks With Leaders [NATION REVIEW 9 Feb] J 4
Briefs: Rice Contract With CSSR; Rice Sale to Malaysia; Natural Gas Discovery J 5

VIETNAM

Ogarkov Hosts Reception, Concludes Visits K 1
Air Force, Navy Units Receive Soviet Guests K 1
U.S. 'Propaganda' on Toxic Chemicals Scored [QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 9 Feb] K 2
NHAN DAN Analyzes Reagan's 'War Budget' [10 Feb] K 2
Bangkok's 'Hostile Policy' Toward SRV Assailed [QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 8 Feb] K 3
DK Seat in UN Protested at UN Meeting in Geneva K 4
Vo Chi Cong Meets With Bulgarian Delegation K 4
Economic Talks Held 10 Feb K 4
Haiphong Congress Views Product-Contract System K 5
People's Control Conference Discusses 1982 Tasks [NHAN DAN 15 Jan] K 7
VCTU Conference Urges Union Consolidation [NHAN DAN 13 Jan] K 8
Pham Van Dong Speaks at Economic Conference K 9
Nguyen Duy Trinh Meets With PCF Leaders K 10
Le Duan Sends Congratulations to PCF's Marchais K 10
Trade Union Delegation Leaves USSR for Cuba K 10
Vo Nguyen Giap Visits Hanoi Engineering Plant K 10

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Ghazali Discusses Kampuchea With Dhanabalan O 1
UK Foreign Affairs Secretary Carrington Visits O 1
Meeting With Ghazali O 1
Talks With Mahathir O 1
Departure for Singapore O 2
MNLA Founding Message Urges Continued Struggle [VODK] O 2

SINGAPORE

Lee Kuan Yew Calls for U.S. Naval, Air Presence O 4
UK Foreign Affairs Secretary Arrives on Visit O 5
Meeting With Lee Kuan Yew O 5
Remarks on Kampuchea O 5
Mahathir's 'Warning' to Khmer Rouge Viewed [STRAITS TIMES 6 Feb] O 6

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 029 11 February 1982

JAPAN

Economic Talks With ROK To Be Held 18-19 Feb C 1
U.S. Official: Japan Should Aid ROK Militarily C 1
Okinawa Governor Visits Tokyo For Talks on Bases C 1
Steel Plate Talks With USSR To Open in March C 1
PRC Seeks First Import of Small Steel Bars C 2
Petrochemical Firm Rejects Iran Plant Investment C 2
JSP Elects New Secretary General at Congress C 3

NORTH KOREA

Supplement to 10 Feb CPRF Statement on N-S Talks D 1
Kim Il-song Greets Iranian President Khamene'i D 4
NODONG SINMUN on Kim Il-song SPA Nomination [9 Feb] D 4
Yi Chong-ok Concludes Visit to Indonesia 8 Feb D 9
Yi Chong-ok Pays Official Visit to Thailand D 9
Arrival in Thailand D 9
Calls on Thai Prime Minister D 10
Further on Talks D 10
Polish Trade Delegation Departs Pyongyang 4 Feb D 10
Chinese Ambassador to North Korea Departs 10 Feb D 10

SOUTH KOREA

Talks With Japan To Focus on Aid Request E 1
U.S. Strategy Toward Northeast Asia Applauded [KYONGHYANG SINMUN 9 Feb] E 1
Minister Stresses Priority of Heavy Industry E 2

KAMPUCHEA

Further Reports on National Assembly Session H 1
Closing of Session H 1
Signing of Documents H 3
Phnom Penh Reception H 3
KAMPUCHEA Editorial H 3
AFP: Hun Sen Denies SRV Troops Threaten Thailand H 4
Hun Sen Speaks at 7 Feb Reception in Paris H 4
GDR Party Cultural Delegation Pays Visit H 5
Group's Arrival Reported H 5
Heng Samrin Receives Film H 5
Heng Samrin Meets Delegation H 6
Delegation Departs H 6
CSSR Deputy Health Minister, Delegation Visit H 6
Arrival of Delegation H 6
Signing of Health Agreement H 7
Departure of Group H 7
Briefs: Soviet Sports Equipment Donation H 7

LAOS

USSR Deputy Defense Minister Ogarkov Visits I 1
Talks With Khamtai Siphandon I 1
SIANG PASASON Editorial I 1
Sali Vongkhamsao Receives Austrian Envoy I 2

THAILAND

Crash of SRV Aircraft Near Border Reported J 1
AFP Report J 1
Supreme Command Raps SRV Border Provocations J 1
Supreme Command Reports on Border Fighting J 2
General Notes Two New SRV Divisions Near Border J 2
[POST 11 Feb]
Prem, Yi Chong-ok Banquet Speeches Reported J 3
NATION: DPRK Proposal To Upgrade Ties Rejected [11 Feb] J 3
J 3

VIETNAM

Soviet Marshal Ogarkov Concludes Official Visit K 1
Pham Van Dong Congratulates New PRK Premier K 1
PRC Said To Be Whipping Up Anti-SRV Propaganda K 1
Ha Nam Ninh Party Organization Congress Held K 2
Directive Issued on Wage, Bonus Systems K 5
10 Feb NHAN DAN Editorial K 7
NHAN DAN Discusses Norms on Production Wastage [9 Feb] K 7
Army Action To Solve Food Problem Advocated K 8
[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 10 Feb]
Education of Soldiers in Law Emphasized K 10
[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 8 Feb]
Pham Van Dong Attends Maritime Sector Conference K 11
Le Duan Greets CPI-Marxist Head on Reelection K 11
Le Duan Greets Peru's Del Prado on Reelection K 12
Nguyen Van Linh Meets Leipzig Delegation K 12
52d Anniversary of Founding of VCP Marked K 12
Socialist Party Greetings K 12
Democratic Party Meeting K 13
Fish Catch in 1981 Increases Over 1980 K 13
Truong Chinh Receives New French Ambassador K 13

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 030 12 February 1982

JAPAN

USSR Patolichev Blames Japan for 'Cooled' Ties C 1
'White Paper on Economic Cooperation' Released C 1
Briefs: Malaysia Urea Factory Loan C 2

NORTH KOREA

Protest Lodged on 12 Feb SR-71 'Infiltration' D 1
KCNA Reveals 'Chon's Bribery of U.S. Officials' D 1
Kim Il-song Receives Iranian Delegation 11 Feb D 2
Voters Nominate Kim Il, Others as SPA Candidates D 2
DFRF Holds Meeting on SPA Elections 11 Feb D 3
Kim Chong-il Lauded at Diplomatic Function D 3
Yi Chong-ok Feted by Thai Prime Minister 9 Feb D 4
Yi Chong-ok Speech D 5
KWP Delegation Attends 24th PCF Congress D 6

SOUTH KOREA

Security Agency Arrests North Korean Spy Ring E 1
ROK, Japan To Discuss Date for Ministers' Talk E 1
TONG-A ILBO Interviews Japan's Sakurauchi [10 Feb] E 1
Chon Urges Reorganization of Military Structure [KOREA TIMES 12 Feb] E 4
46-50 Age Group To Rejoin Civil Defense Corps [KOREA TIMES 11 Feb] E 4
Cardinal Kim Su-hwan Views Human Rights Issue [HANGUK ILBO 11 Feb] E 5
Steel Exports Reported Up 20.8 Percent in 1981 E 5

MONGOLIA

MPRP Central Committee Holds Plenum 10 Feb F 1
Personnel Changes F 1

KAMPUCHEA

Chea Sim Addresses Banquet Honoring Assembly H 1
Hun Sen's Activities in France Reported H 1
KAMPUCHEA Says PRK's Prestige 'Soaring' H 1
Soviet Scientific Delegation Concludes Visit H 2
Tadzhik Press Delegation Visits Phnom Penh H 3
Arrival of Delegation H 3
Departure of Group H 3
Indochinese Banking Summit Conference Held H 3
Arrival of SRV Delegation H 3
Chea Soth Opening Speech H 3
Meas Samnang Addresses Local Trade Union H 4
VODK Views Reasons for Ogarkov Indochina Visits H 4
VODK Reports LNLF Guerrillas' Battle Activities H 5

LAOS

USSR Deputy Defense Minister Ogarkov Ends Visit I 1
Banquet Honoring Delegation I 1
Meeting With Souphanouvong I 1
VNA Report on Meeting I 2
Departure of Delegation I 2
Indochinese Ministers To Meet in Vientiane I 3
Phoumi Vongvichit Attends 24th PCF Congress I 3
VNA on Phoumi Vongvichit Paris Press Conference I 3
Sisana Sisan Receives SRV Cultural Delegation I 4
Cooperation Commission Leaves for Hanoi Meeting I 4

THAILAND

Crash of Vietnamese Plane in Prachin Buri Viewed J 1
Athit Interview J 1
Officials' Comments J 2
Spokesman's Statement J 2
Official Says PRC To Host Khmer 'Summit' J 3
Fishing Boat Seized by USSR Trawler off Vietnam J 4
[POST 12 Feb]
POST Opposes Reagan Proposal on Chemical Weapons [12 Feb] J 4
POST Reports Establishment of CPT-BCP Link [12 Feb] J 5
Deputy Prime Minister Addresses Pacific Forum J 5
[POST 9 Feb]

VIETNAM

Thai Embassy Contacted on 'Lost' AN-26 Plane K 1
AFP Cites Envoy in Bangkok K 1
NHAN DAN Hits U.S. Chemical Warfare Efforts [11 Feb] K 1
Report on U.S. Covert Spraying in Laos Cited K 2
Southeast Asia Seen as World 'Hotspot' K 3
Carrington Stance on SRV Aid, Kampuchea Assailed K 5
Text of Pham Van Dong Message to PRK Premier K 5
Vietnam, USSR Sign Goods Exchange Protocol K 5
Soviet Union To Supply Free Consumer Goods K 6
Agreement on GDR Aid to SRV Signed in Berlin K 6
Nguyen Lam Attends CEMA Conference in Havana K 6
Lao Delegation Arrives for Cooperation Meeting K 6
VCP Delegation to PCF Congress Leaves Paris K 6
Quang Nam-Da Nang Province Holds Party Congress K 7

INDONESIA

Further Reports on Charges of Soviet Espionage N 1
Admiral Sudomo's Comments N 1
AFP Report N 1
Denial on Further Expulsions N 2
Malik Warning on Spying N 2
Mokhtar Speaks to Press on Khmer Coalition N 3
Statement on Khmer Rouge N 3
View on Role of PRC N 3

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 031 16 February 1982

JAPAN

Suzuki Not To Meet Reagan Prior to June Summit C 1
Sakurauchi Plans To Visit U.S. in Late March C 1
Dietmen To Visit U.S. For Trade Talks 20-27 Feb C 1

NORTH KOREA

Foreign Ministry Statement Condemns 'Team Spirit' D 1
NODONG SINMUN Scores 'Team Spirit 1982' Exercise [16 Feb] D 3
KWP Supports Proposal for 100-Man Conference D 5
NODONG SINMUN Supports CPRF Conference Proposal [14 Feb] D 7
Kim Chong-il Receives CPC Award on 40th Birthday D 10
Nomination of Candidates to 7th SPA Continues D 11
Kim Chong-il, Others Nominated D 11
Yi Chong-ok, Others Nominated D 12
Corrections to Text of 10 Feb CPRF Statement D 12

SOUTH KOREA

TONG-A ILBO Criticizes North Unification Policy [13 Feb] E 1
KOREA TIMES Scores North's Suppression of People [16 Feb] E 1
Chon Comments on Economic Cooperation With Japan E 2
Foreign Minister No's Itinerary Reviewed E 3
Government To Establish Sports Ministry in March E 3
Nuclear Plant Accord Signed With French Company [KOREA HERALD 16 Feb] E 3
Chon Says Education Policies Need Consistency [KOREA HERALD 13 Feb] E 4
Seoul Says Kim Chong-il Birthday Fete Canceled E 4

KAMPUCHEA

PRC Called Instigator in PRK, SRV 'Aggression' H 1
National Assembly Approves Economic-Culture Plan H 1
Phnom Penh Radio Commentary H 1
KAMPUCHEA Editorial H 2
Indochinese Foreign Ministers Conference Analyzed H 3
Heng Samrin Congratulates Marchais on Reelection H 5
Heng Samrin Sends Birthday Note to Truong Chinh H 5
AFP Reports Khieu Samphan To Meet Sihanouk in PRC H 5

LAOS

Vientiane Rally Held for USSR Military Delegation I 1
Lao-Soviet Satellite Station Basically Completed I 5

THAILAND

SRV Plane Crash Continues To Draw Attention J 1
Command Spokesman's Comments J 1
Plane To Be Returned J 1
MATICHON Editorial [13 Feb] J 1
NATION REVIEW Notes SRV Softening on Khmer Rouge [14 Feb] J 2
VOFA Criticizes SRV Policy Toward Thailand J 3

VIETNAM

Indian External Affairs Minister Rao Visits	K 1
Arrival, 12 Feb Reception	K 1
Delhi Reports Rao Speech	K 2
Further Delhi Report	K 2
Calls on Pham Van Dong	K 2
Delhi Report on Meeting	K 3
Calls on Truong Chinh	K 3
Reception Hosted by Rao	K 4
13 Feb Press Conference	K 4
Delhi Reports Comment on PRC	K 5
Wrap-Up Report on Visit	K 6
Text of Joint Statement	K 6
Delhi Reports Hun Sen Meeting	K 7
Hun Sen Stops in Hanoi En Route to Vientiane	K 7
PRC Seen Trying To Rally Khmer 'Reactionaries'	K 7
Chinese Visit to Paracel Island Condemned	K 8
NHAN DAN Comment [14 Feb]	K 8
VNA Reaction	K 9
Culture Minister Marks USSR Pact Anniversary	K 9
Lao-SRV Cooperation Discussions Held in Hanoi	K 10
Cooperation Documents Signed	K 10
Hanoi Meeting Marks SRV-CSSR Treaty Anniversary	K 10

INDONESIA

Aeroflot Chief Finenko Deported; Office Closed	N 1
Security Forces Protect USSR Consulate in Medan	N 1
Defense Minister Discusses 1982 Defense Budget	N 2

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Coverage of DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok's Visit	O 1
Arrives 11 Feb	O 1
Holds Talks With Mahathir	O 1
Sign Air Transportation Pact	O 1
Leaves for Singapore 15 Feb	O 2
Briefs: Palm Oil to USSR; Saudi Aid to Malaysia; French Ambassador to Malaysia	O 2

SINGAPORE

Naval Base Used by Malaysia Returned to Singapore	O 2

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 032 17 February 1982

JAPAN

Travel Restrictions Enforced on Polish Diplomats C 1
Four Polish Freighter Crewmen Seek Asylum C 1
Sakurauchi on U.S. Chemical Weapons Production C 2
Japan To Offer ROK Financial Aid for Development C 2
Coal Projects Agreement Signed With PRC Bank C 2

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Scores Weinberger's Defense Report [13 Feb] D 1
Communist Media Cited on 'Team Spirit' Exercise D 2
NODONG SINMUN Denounces South's Naval Exercises [13 Feb] D 2
RPR Sends Greetings to Kim Chong-il on Birthday [VRPR] D 3
Kim Chong-il Inspects Construction Site 16 Feb D 6
PRC, USSR Guests Speak on Kim Chong-il Birthday D 6
Coverage of Yi Chong-ok Visit to Malaysia D 8
Arrives in Kuala Lumpur D 8
Calls on Prime Minister D 8
Attends Banquet 11 Feb D 9
Speaks at Banquet D 9
Calls on Malaysian King D 11
Concludes Visit 15 Feb D 11

KAMPUCHEA

Heng Samrin, Pen Navouth Address Education Forum H 1
Heng Samrin Receives Lao, SRV Bank Officials H 3
PRK-SRV-Lao Banking Conference Concludes H 3
Yos Por at Phnom Penh KUFNCD Committee Meeting H 4
Agriculture Statistics for 8-14 Feb Released H 4
KAMPUCHEA Reviews Failure of Opposition Coalition H 6

LAOS

Indochinese Foreign Ministers Conference Opens I 1
Nouhak Phoumsavan Meets Hun Sen, Nguyen Co Thach I 2
Worldwide Support for Foreign Policy Claimed I 2
Army, People Urged To Smash Enemy Schemes I 3
Delegation Returns 16 Feb From PCF Congress I 4

THAILAND

Coverage of Indian Foreign Minister Rao's Visit J 1
Arrival 15 Feb J 1
Meeting With Sawetsila J 1
Meeting With Thanat J 1
News Conference [NATION REVIEW 17 Feb] J 2
Delhi Report on Conference J 3
NATION REVIEW Editorial [17 Feb] J 3
Foreign Ministry Rebuts BBC on Phanuphong Views J 4
Troops Withdrawn From Khun Sa's Former Stronghold [POST 12 Feb] J 4

VIETNAM

Text of Foreign Ministry Note Rejecting PRC Note	K 1
PRC Policy Reviewed on Anniversary of Conflict	K 1
17 Feb NHAN DAN Comment	K 1
Hanoi Radio Comment	K 3
NHAN DAN Hits PRC Officials' Visit to Paracels [16 Feb]	K 4
Ngueyn Co Thach Leaves for Vientiane Conference	K 4
Hun Sen Leaves for Vientiane After Stopover	K 4
U.S. Accused of Deceit on Toxic Chemicals	K 4
Aims of Carrington's Asian Tour Questioned [QUAN DOI NHAN DAN]	K 6
Anniversary of Cultural Pact With USSR Marked	K 8
Ministry Hosts Meeting	K 8
Meeting in Moscow	K 9
Vo Van Kiet Attends Lai Chau Security Conference	K 9
Hai Hung Holds Party Organization Congress	K 9
Ha Son Binh Holds Party Organization Congress	K 13
Pham Van Dong Speaks at Information Conference	K 15
Pham Hung Attends People's Court Conference	K 15

PHILIPPINES

Marcos Meets With Singapore Foreign Minister	P 1
Further on Talks	P 1
Ruling on Opposition Trials in Absentia	P 1
Former Officials Arrested for Subversion	P 2
Local Communities To Benefit From Resources	P 2
Mayors Request Arms for Self-Defense	P 2
Plans Made To Combat Gun, Bomb Smuggling	P 2

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 033 18 February 1982

JAPAN

Second Round of Economic Talks With ROK Open C 1
Sakurauchi on Aid Request C 1
Sakurauchi To Attend ASEAN Meeting in Singapore C 1
Suzuki Urges Study on Revitalizing World Economy C 1
Suzuki Agrees With F-4 Phantom Remodeling Plan C 2
Okinawa 'Action Committee' Protests U.S. Drill C 3
PRC Oil Delegation Arrives in Tokyo for Talks C 3
Accord Signed With PRC for Anhui Mine Exploration C 3

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Lauds CPRF Reunification Proposal [17 Feb] D 1
KSDP Backs 100-Man Joint Reunification Meeting D 2
NODONG SINMUN Notes Anti-Chon Student Struggle [18 Feb] D 3
KCNA Cites CSSR Paper on 1988 Seoul Olympiad D 4
VRPR Notes Significance of Kim Chong-il Birthday D 5
RPR Greets Kim Chong-il on Award of Hero Title [VRPR] D 7
Yi Chong-ok Returns From Southeast Asia 16 Feb D 8
Meetings Support Nominations for SPA Deputies D 8
11 Feb DFRF Letter of Appeal on SPA Elections D 9
1982 Film Exchange Plan Signed With USSR D 16

SOUTH KOREA

Court Sentences North Korean Spy To Death E 1
[KOREA HERALD 18 Feb]
ROK, Japan Agree on Foreign Ministers Meeting E 1
Japan's Sakurauchi Expected To Visit in March E 1
Report Says 'No Sudden Business Upsurge' in 1982 E 2

KAMPUCHEA

KAMPUCHEA Discusses Foreign Ministers Conference H 1
L'HUMANITE Interviews Hun Sen on Regional Issues [Paris 10 Feb] H 1

LAOS

Further on Foreign Ministers Conference I 1
Conference Closes 17 Feb [VNA] I 1
Text of Communique [VNA] I 1
Kaysone Phomvihan Congratulatory Note to Chan Si I 4

THAILAND

Fighting Along Border Forces Evacuations [POST 15 Feb] J 1
SRV-PRK Forces Said To Encircle Border Patrol J 1
Khmer Resistance Commanders Hold Talks J 1
[NATION REVIEW 13 Feb]
General Confirms SRV Plane Intrusion Accidental J 3
[NATION REVIEW 17 Feb]

VIETNAM

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Reviews PRC Hostile Attitude [17 Feb] K 1
NHAN DAN Praises Indochinese Ministers Meeting [18 Feb] K 3
Anniversary of PRK-SRV Treaty Commemorated K 4
Solidarity Day With PRK K 5
NHAN DAN Hails Indian Minister Rao's Visit [16 Feb] K 5
Exile Group Says USSR To Build Base in South [AFP] K 5
UNHCR Reports Increases in Boat Refugees [AFP] K 6
Coverage of Bulgarian Economic Delegation K 6
Pham Van Dong Meeting K 6
Trade, Other Accords Signed K 6
NHAN DAN Hails Visit [14 Feb] K 7
Pham Van Dong visits Ha Bac Cooperative K 7
To Huu Visits Vinh Phu, Comments on Conditions K 8
Nguyen Van Linh Attends Mothers Congress K 9
NHAN DAN Praises Results of Local Congresses [23 Jan] K 9
Hanoi People's Council Reviews 1982 Tasks, Budget K 10
[NHAN DAN 1 Feb]
Council of Ministers Issues Resolution on Thrift K 11
16 Feb NHAN DAN Editorial K 11
Commission Assesses Weaknesses in Control Work K 12

PHILIPPINES

Marcos Addresses Military Alumni on Security P 1
Marcos To Make March Visit to Saudi Arabia P 1

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 034 19 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Japan To Make 'Independent Judgment' on Defense C 1
First Day of Economic Talks With ROK Ends C 1
Further on Aid Request C 1
Sakurauchi Urges UN Law of Sea Package Agreement C 2
Suzuki 'Passive' Toward 1968 Pledge on F-4 C 2
OTO Holds First Meeting, Decides on management C 2
Official Views Natural Gas Project With USSR C 3
Investment Protection Talks To Be Held With PRC C 3

NORTH KOREA

U.S. Deployment of A-10 in South Scored D 1
DFRF Supports 100-Man Reunification Meeting D 1
VRPR Mentions Use of Term 'Kimchongilism' D 3
Meetings for Nominating SPA Candidates End D 3
Text of Kim Il-song's Open Letter to Voters D 4
NODONG SINMUN Article Hails Leadership of KWP [16 Feb] D 5
Public Health Cooperation Accord Signed With GDR D 9
Trade-Payments Accord Signed With Hungary 12 Feb D 9
Kim Il-song Sends Educational Aid to Chongnyon D 9

SOUTH KOREA

SOSC To Propose 'Sports Talks' to North Korea E 1
[KOREA HERALD 19 Feb]
Hong Kong Weekly Cited on New Kim Chong-il Post E 1
Nuclear-Fuel-Processing Firm To Be Set Up in 1982 E 2

KAMPUCHEA

AFP: Son Sann Rejects Sihanouk Summit Proposal H 1
Excerpt of National Assembly, State Council Law H 1
Part 1 H 1
Part 2 H 3
Part 3 H 7
Part One of Council of Ministers Organization Law H 9
Coverage of Visit by Lao Front Delegation H 12
Arrives 16 Feb H 12
Talks With Chan Ven H 12

LAOS

Coverage of Ministers Activities After Conference I 1
PRK Embassy Hosts Reception I 1
VNA Reports Premier's Meeting I 1
Nouhak Phoumsavan Hosts Banquet I 1
Departures 18 Feb I 2
Souphanouvong Message to Truong Chinh on Birthday I 2
Soviet Ministry Delegation Arrives 16 Feb I 2

THAILAND

Further Reports on SRV-Encircled Border Patrol J 1
Clash Ends; Five Missing J 1
AFP Reports UN To Be Notified J 1
AFP Reports Indochinese Peace Proposal Rejected J 1
Spokesman Gives Views on Vientiane Communique J 2
NATION REVIEW Discusses Regional Conference Issue [19 Feb] J 3
Postal, Telecommunications Pact Signed With DPRK J 3

VIETNAM

Truong Chinh Article on PRC Expansionism K 1
[NHAN DAN, QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 17 Feb]
Parts 1, 2, 3 K 1
Parts 4, 5 K 7
SRV, PRK Foreign Ministers Leave Vientiane K 10
Nguyen Co Thach Comments on PRC, ASEAN Relations K 10
NHAN DAN Marks SRV-PRK Treaty Anniversary [18 Feb] K 12
AFP: SRV Source Denies Pen Sovan in Hanoi K 14
Baybakov Leads Economic Delegation on Visit K 14
Soviet Group Holds Vegetable Trade Talks K 14
AFP: VCP Congress 'Probably' To Meet 27-31 Mar K 15
Further Report on Hai Hung Party Congress K 15
NHAN DAN Critical of U.S., Central American Policy [19 Feb] K 18
Ngueyn Duy Trinh Returns From PCF Congress K 18

INDONESIA

Unity Called For in Wake of Soviet Spy Case N 1
AFP: Spy Wanted Information on Sea Lanes N 1
Adam Malik Discusses Kampuchea on Bangkok Tour N 2
BAKIN Chief Discusses Corruption, Kampuchea N 2
Subroto Discusses Moves to Form Tin Cartel N 2

PHILIPPINES

Enrile Assesses Mindanao Rebel Campaign P 1
AFP Reports Tanada Assumes PDP Leadership P 1
Financial, Technical Agreements Signed With FRG P 2

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 035 22 February 1982

JAPAN

New Sanctions To Be Enforced Against USSR, Poland C 1
Official on Sale of Pipe-Laying Machines to USSR C 1
Minister Says USSR Was Asked To Remove Missiles C 1
LDP's Esaki Leaves for Trade Talks in U.S. C 2
Ito Views Defense Program Estimate, USSR Buildup C 2
Ito Discusses Easing of Arms Export Restrictions C 3
Agrotechnology Talks With PRC End in Beijing C 3
State-Run Firm To Bid for PRC Oil Contract C 3

NORTH KOREA

Protest Lodged on 20 Feb SR-71 'Infiltration' D 1
NODONG SINMUN Denounces U.S. 'War Maneuvers' [20 Feb] D 1
NODONG SINMUN Hits U.S. Overseas Military Bases [20 Feb] D 2
U.S. Units Participating in 'Team Spirit' Noted D 3
RENMIN RIBAO Cited on U.S. Ambassador's Remarks D 4
CPRF Denounces Spy Trial in South Korea D 4
NODONG SINMUN Supports CPRF Conference Proposal [22 Feb] D 5
Anniversary of North's First Government Marked D 5
[NODONG SINMUN 21 Feb]
Election Committee Reports Kim Il-song Candidacy D 6
SPA Candidacies of KWP Leaders Registered D 7
Pak Song-chol Leaves for Mozambique 20 Feb D 8
Kim Il-song Greets Support of 8 Jan Statement D 8
Pyongyang Photo Exhibit Marks USSR Army Day D 8

SOUTH KOREA

Official Calls Loan Talks in Tokyo 'Fruitful' E 1
KOREA HERALD Report [20 Feb] E 1
Prime Minister Urges Stronger Security Measures E 2
Chon Reassures Foreign Investors on Economy E 2

KAMPUCHEA

SPK: Thailand Attacks With Toxic Chemicals H 1
'Acts of War' Protested H 1
Hun Sen Interviewed on Indochinese Relations H 2
Coverage of DK Delegation Trip to PRC for Talks H 4
19 Feb Departure H 4
20 Feb Arrival H 4
Phnom Penh Commentary H 5
Part 2 of Council of Ministers Organization Law H 6
Castro Thanks Heng Samrin for Greetings H 10

LAOS

Central Committee Statement on Third Congress I 1
Phoumi Vongvichit Addresses PCF Congress I 2
L'HUMANITE Phoumi Vongvichit Interview on Aid [Paris 11 Feb] I 5
USSR Officially Presents Satellite Relay Station I 5
Cooperation Committee Group Returns From SRV I 6
LFNC Delegation Departs for PRK Visit 16 Feb I 6

THAILAND

Reportage on Suspected SRV Toxic Use Near Border J 1
AFP Report J 1
Samples To Be Tested [NATION REVIEW 21 Feb] J 1
Use of Mycotoxins Doubted [NATION REVIEW 22 Feb] J 2
Further on Alleged SRV Airspace Violation J 2
Military Investigation [NATION REVIEW 19 Feb] J 2
Supreme Command Statement J 3

VIETNAM

VNA Rejects Report on Clash at Thai Border K 1
Spokesman Condemns Taiwan Spratly Decision K 1
VNA Interviews PRK's Hun Sen on Regional Issues K 1
Thai, Singapore Stance on Vientiane Offer Hit K 2
Khmer Coalition Attempt Called 'Blind Alley' K 2
[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 21 Feb]
Haig Allegations on Toxic Chemicals Rejected K 3
Xuan Thuy Writes on PRC Expansionist Plans K 3
[NHAN DAN 20 Feb]
Pham Van Dong Receives USSR's Baybakov K 4
Military Command Celebrates USSR Army, Navy Day K 4
USSR Academy of Sciences Delegation Ends Visit K 5
NHAN DAN Supports 'Socialist' State in Poland [20 Feb] K 5
MPR Hural Confers Order on Le Duan, Others K 6
Syrian President Thanks SRV for UN Support K 6
Improving District Agriculture-Industry Analyzed K 7
Delegation Attends Aden Conference on Mideast K 10
Envoy Condemns U.S. for Human Rights Violations K 10
VCP Greets Canadian Communist Party Congress K 10

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

SINGAPORE

AFP: 2 Soviets Expelled on Espionage Charges O 1
Five-Nation Air Defense Exercise To Begin 22 Feb O 1

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 036 23 February 1982

JAPAN

Sanctions Announced Against Soviet Union, Poland C 1
Suzuki Plans To Ban Soviet Ministers' Visit C 1
Suzuki Views Economic Summit, Mitterrand Visit C 2
Sakurauchi Denies Pledge to U.S. on Sealanes C 3

NORTH KOREA

SR-71 Flight Prompts 'Vigilance of People's Army' D 1
KCNA Reports U.S. Naval Exercise Near South Korea D 1
NODONG SINMUN Hits 'Fishermen Spy Case' in South [23 Feb] D 2
VRPR Urges Popular Struggle Through Unity D 2
KCNA Cites Communist Media on Kim Chong-il Title D 4
O Chin-u Greets Soviet Defense Minister Ustinov D 4

SOUTH KOREA

France, ROK Agree To Expand Cooperative Ties E 1
[KOREA TIMES 22 Feb]
KOREA HERALD Calls for Inter-Korean Sports Thaw [20 Feb] E 1
Censorship Eased, Books on Communism To Appear E 2

MONGOLIA

Suren To Head State Building Committee F 1
Tseren Appointed Academy of Sciences President F 1
Jalan-Aajab Meets North Korean Ambassador F 1
Altangeral Receives CSSR Ambassador 19 Feb F 1

BURMA

Aye Ko Delivers Union Day Seminar Speech G 1
Bangladesh President Sattar Arrives 23 Feb G 3
Briefs: OPEC Loan; Japanese Grant for TV Equipment G 3

KAMPUCHEA

Further on DK Delegation Trip to PRC for Talks H 1
Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk Meet [VODK] H 1
AFP Reports News Conference H 1
Beijing Reports on Activities [cross-reference] H 2
Reaction to Alleged SRV Toxic Chemical Use H 2
Phnom Penh Commentary H 2
DK Health Ministry Advice [VODK] H 3
Hun Sen Interviewed on PCF Congress Participation H 3
SPK Discusses Indochinese Relations With ASEAN H 7
DK Foreign Ministry Denounces Vientiane Forum [VODK] H 8
Agricultural Statistics for 15-21 Feb Released H 9

LAOS

Khamtai Siphandon Greetings on USSR Army Day I 1

THAILAND

VNA Report on Chemicals Fired Into PRK Denied J 1
SRV Envoy Informed of Impoundment of AN-26 J 1
Newspapers Comment on SRV Plane Intrusion J 1
NATION REVIEW Analyzes SRV 'Aggressive Acts' [22 Feb] J 3
Contradictions of SRV Statement at Vientiane Noted J 3
Discrepancies on Pol Pot's Health Reported J 4
AFP Reports Hospitalization J 4
Khieu Samphan Denies Reports [KYODO] J 4
Communist Strongholds in South Captured J 5
Khun Sa Reported To Be Hiding in Burma Near Border J 5
[NATION REVIEW 19 Feb]

VIETNAM

Thai Fishing Boat Allowed To Leave Country K 1
USSR's Baybakov Holds Talks With Nguyen Lam K 1
Van Tien Dung Greets USSR Army, Navy Day K 1
Leaders Thank Tsedenbal for Sukhe Bator Order K 2
'Socialist Community' Called Mainstay of Poland [22 Feb] K 2
Leaders Greet SRV President on Birthday K 5
Further Messages K 5
AFP Reports IMF Team's Visit to Vietnam 5-17 Feb K 6
SRV Envoy to France Condemns PRC Hostility K 6
Afghan Military Leaders Receive SRV Envoy K 7
SRV Envoy Speaks to UN Human Rights Commission K 7
Conference Discusses Labor Distribution K 7
[NHAN DAN 4 Feb]
Review of February Issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN K 11
Directive on Agricultural Seed Production K 13

PHILIPPINES

Marcos Expresses Need for ASEAN Economic Meeting P 1
Marcos Repeats Hopes for Strong Opposition Party P 1
Enrile Discusses Mindanao Peace, Order Situation P 1
Mindanao Party Chief Discusses MNLF, NPA Ties P 1
Leading MNLF Commander, Others Surrender P 2
Organized Labor Urges Police Expulsions P 2

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 037 24 February 1982

JAPAN

Sakurauchi's U.S. Visit in March Previewed C 1
Ito, Sakurauchi View Defense Issue in Lower House C 1
Minister Predicts Firm Stance in U.S. Air Talks C 2
Electronics Association Counters U.S. Criticism C 2
EC Concern Over Low Interest Rates Analyzed C 3
Concern About French Trade Imbalance Expressed C 4
Laos To Be Granted Economic Development Aid C 4

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Flays 'Team Spirit 1982' Exercise [24 Feb] D 1
Yugoslav Paper Cites Leadership of Kim Chong-il [VRPR] D 2
Party Center's Leadership in Construction Hailed D 3
NODONG SINMUN Discusses Revolutionary Spirit [22 Feb] D 4
Meetings Mark USSR Army Founding Anniversary D 10
USSR Embassy Reception D 10
Soldiers' Meeting D 10

SOUTH KOREA

French Minister Backs Seoul on Korean Situation E 1
[KOREA HERALD 24 Feb]
KOREA HERALD Reviews Chon's Economic Policies [24 Feb] E 1
Special Assembly Session To Be Convened 26 Feb E 2
[KOREA TIMES 24 Feb]
Iran Notifies South Korea of Oil Price Cut E 3
[KOREA TIMES 24 Feb]
Seoul Cites Report on N. Korean Officer's Purge E 3
Briefs: Exports in 1982 E 3

MONGOLIA

Ministries of State Farms, Agriculture Merged [UNEN 16 Feb] F 1
Gombojab Interviewed on Peace in Asian Region F 1

KAMPUCHEA

Chan Ven States Support for PRK-SRV Solidarity H 1
KAMPUCHEA Lauds PRK-SRV Solidarity Ties H 3
Heng Samrin Greetings to Guyanese President H 4
Heng Samrin Message on Anniversary Greetings H 5
Hun Sen Returns From Vientiane Conference 18 Feb H 5
Chan Si Messages of Thanks to LPDR, USSR Leaders H 5
Kaysone Phomvihan H 5
Nikolay Tikhonov H 6
Bou Thang Greets Ustinov on USSR Army Day H 6
Coverage of Lao Front Delegation's Visit H 6
KUFNCD Meeting H 6
Chan Ven Attends Reception H 7
Briefs: Delegation Returns From Prague, Moscow H 7

LAOS

Decree Issued on Implementing Regulations I 1
Souphanouvong Meets Three New Ambassadors I 3

THAILAND

Reactions to SRV Border Incursion, AN-26 Crash J 1
Prem Statement J 1
Report on Border Situation [POST 24 Feb] J 1
Minister: Mycotoxin Not Found [POST 24 Feb] J 2 Protest Lodged With UN J 2
POST Analysis [24 Feb] J 2
Sitthi Discusses Dhanabalan Visit, Son Sann J 4
Prasong Discusses Security Threats, Armed Forces J 4
Army Club Speech J 4
NATION REVIEW Report [23 Feb] J 5

VIETNAM

U.S. Delegation Visits Hanoi To Discuss MIA's K 1
SRV Requests Access to Crashed AN-26 Crew K 1
Council of State Meets, Issues Communique K 1
USSR Army, Navy Day Anniversary Commemorated K 2
Attache Hosts Banquet K 2
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial [23 Feb] K 2
NHAN DAN Marks 26th CPSU Congress Anniversary [23 Feb] K 3
Pham Van Dong Meets With Mitterrand's Adviser K 4
NHAN DAN Hails Vietnamese-Mongolian Friendship [23 Feb] K 4
Delegation Attends Developing Countries Meeting K 4
Problems Noted in 10th-Month Grain Procurement K 5
NHAN DAN Assesses Nam Bo Agricultural Changes [31 Jan] K 6
Vo Nguyen Giap Chairs Science Conference K 7
Correction to Labor Distribution Conference [cross-reference] K 7
Correction to Nguyen Co Thach VNA Interview [cross-reference] K 7

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 038 25 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Suzuki, Miyazawa Hit New U.S. T[illegible]e Pressures C 1
NHK Television Interviews Suzuki on U.S. Ties C 1
Abe, Sakurauchi, Komoto on U.S. Trade Demands C 9

NORTH KOREA

KCNA: SR-71 Arouses 'Indignation and Resentment' D 1
RPR Statement Supports 100-Man Joint Conference [VRPR] D 1
Importance of 28 Feb SPA Elections Stressed D 3
Tikhonov, Others Greet Kim Il-song on New Year D 4
NODONG SINMUN Article Stresses Party Leadership [23 Feb] D 4
Coverage of Pak Song-chol Visit to Mozambique D 7
Arrives in Maputo D 7
Meets Mozambique President D 8

SOUTH KOREA

Minister Proposes Unification Talks for March E 1
Government Willing To 'Consider' N-S Railway E 2
CHUNGANG ILBO Views U.S. Call for Reciprocity [22 Feb] E 2

MONGOLIA

UNEN Supports MPRP Foreign Policy Initiative F 1
Briefs: Health Service Improvements; Women's Committee Meeting F 1

KAMPUCHEA

Further Coverage of LFNC Delegation Visit H 1
Tours Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey H 1
Meets Heng Samrin H 1
Issues Joint Communique H 2
Acceptance of Indochinese Proposals Urged H 5
Defense Ministry Marks Soviet Army Anniversary H 6
Chea Sim, USSR Envoy Discuss Assembly Session H 7
Yos Por Receives Christian Delegation 19 Feb H 7
VODK Reports on Khieu Samphan Beijing Visit H 8
Khieu Samphan Statement H 8
Meets Huang Hua H 9
VODK: No Peace in Region Until SRV Withdraws H 9
VODK Reports Railways Cut in Battlefield Clashes H 10
Moung-Kaos Kralar H 10
Western Region H 11
Southwestern Region H 11
VODK Reports SRV Colonel Killed in Kompong Thom H 12
Briefs: SRV-Aided Radio Station; Youth Delegation's Delhi Activities H 12

LAOS

Army Supports Convening of Third LPRP Congress I 1
Editorial Urges Support for Third LPRP Congress I 2
LFNC Delegation Returns After PRK Visit I 3
Briefs: CPSU Congress Anniversary I 3

THAILAND

Sitthi Says Indochinese Plans Counter UN Proposal J 1
SIAM RAT Calls Indochinese Proposal 'Selfish' [19 Feb] J 1
NATION REVIEW Urges SRV Foreign Policy Change [25 Feb] J 2
Arun Describes Discussions With UN Envoy J 3
SRV Ambassador To See Crewmen From AN-26 [POST 25 Feb] J 4
Clash With 'Unknown' Kampuchean Forces Reported J 4

VIETNAM

USSR Planning Chief Baybakov Concludes Visit K 1
NHAN DAN Assails Khmer 3-Point Beijing Accord [25 Feb] K 1
Nguyen Co Thach Comments on Indochina Summit K 2
General Reviews Recent Indochina History K 2
[TAP CHI CONG SAN January]
Addition to Hanoi Journal on Market Management K 9
Additions to Party Journal on 1982 State Plan K 10
Ha Bac Congress Discusses VCP Documents K 11
Vo Van Kiet Helps Launch Hydroelectric Project K 13
Mai Chi Tho Speaks at Ho Chi Minh City Ceremony K 13

PHILIPPINES

Marcos Discusses Subversives, Coming Saudi Trip P 1
More on Subversives P 1
MNLF, NPA Power Struggle P 1
Former MNLF Leaders Endorse Marcos Saudi Trip P 2
MNLF in Middle East Reported 'Badly Splintered' P 2
Military Identifies New Urban Guerrilla Group P 2

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 039 26 February 1982

JAPAN

Ministers To Meet To Discuss U.S. Trade Demands C 1
Tazawa, Abe Differ on Farm Products Import Curbs C 1
Japan To Advance Date of U.S. Food Imports Talks C 2
Government To Present Issues for Economic Summit C 3

NORTH KOREA

SR-71 Flight Prompts 'Vigilance of People's Army' D 1
VRPR Denounces Seoul High-Level-Talks Proposal D 1
S. Korean Army Defector Gives Press Conference D 3
Coverage of Pak Song-chol Visit to Mozambique D 4
Defense Minister's Reception D 4
Leaves Maputo 24 Feb D 5
Foreign Minister Ho Tam Visits Algeria D 5
Arrives 23 Feb D 5
Meets Algerian Foreign Minister D 6
Received by President Bendjedid D 6

SOUTH KOREA

Canadian Police Foil Plot To Kill Chon Tu-hwan E 1
YONHAP Report E 1
North Korea Blamed E 1
Further Details E 2
Parties Urge North To Accept Unification Proposal E 3
[KOREA TIMES 26 Feb]
Lifting of Ban on Fishing Near N. Korea Demanded E 3
[KOREA TIMES 25 Feb]

BURMA

Coverage of Visit by Bangladesh President G 1
Meets San Yu, Attends Banquet G 1
Hosts Return Banquet G 1
Joint Communique G 2
PRC To Extend Loan for Bridge Construction G 3

KAMPUCHEA

Further on USSR Army, Navy Anniversary H 1
Soy Keo Greetings to Ogarkov H 1
Cultural Center Meeting H 1
PRK-USSR Amity Group Discusses CPSU Congress H 1
Chan Ven Addresses Lao Front Delegation Banquet H 2
Hun Sen Talks With India's Rao in Hanoi 13 Feb H 3
Bou Thang Addresses Ideological Work Congress H 3
Reports on Activities Surrounding Talks in PRC H 4
VODK: Khieu Samphan, Deng Meet H 4
AFP: Son Sann To Visit PRC H 4

LAOS

Reception Marks USSR Army, Navy Anniversary I 1
Envoy to Thailand Rejects Talks With Khmer Groups I 1
Briefs: FRG Ferry Boat Transfer; Document on Japanese Aid Signed I 1

THAILAND

Ministry Calls SRV 'Insincere' Over Indochina J 1
Sitthi Sawetsila Comments on AN-26, Kampuchea J 2
MATICHON Urges Caution Over Kampuchean Solution [25 Feb] J 2
Prem Discusses Invitation to ASEAN Leaders J 3
NATION REVIEW Comments on U.S. MIA Search in SRV [24 Feb] J 4
Supreme Commander Views Military's Political Role [POST 25 Feb] J 4
Briefs: 1981 Government Rice Sale; Rice to Indonesia, Malaysia; Rice Sale to Singapore J 5

VIETNAM

VNA Denies Report of SRV Anti-Thai Actions K 1
Nguyen Co Thach Comments on Vientiane Meeting K 1
UNHCR Official Visits, Meets Nguyen Co Thach K 2
UN Ambassador Holds Press Conference 23 Feb K 3
U.S. Press Disputes Reagan Remarks on Vietnam K 3
French Presidential Adviser Concludes Visit K 3
Algerian Economic Delegation Pays Official Visit K 4
Arrival Ceremony K 4
Meeting With Pham Van Dong K 4
Delegation Concludes Visit K 5
Vo Nguyen Giap Receives Bulgarian Science Group K 5
Le Thanh Nghi Receives Vientiane Delegation K 5
Finance Minister Receives CEMA Official K 6
Interview With Minister of Culture, Information K 6
NHAN DAN Editorial Urges Energy Conservation [25 Feb] K 8
NHAN DAN Stresses Task of Market Management [19 Feb] K 9
Decision Issued on Military Academies, Schools K 10
Ministry of Agriculture Holds Conference K 11
Further Details K 13
Troops Urged To Participate in Grain Production [QUAN DOI NHAN DAN] K 14
Nguyen Van Linh Attends Health Conference K 15
VCTU Executive Committee Holds Conference K 15
Hoang Bich Son Addresses New Delhi Conference K 16
VNA Account K 16

AUSTRALASIA

AUSTRALIA

Officials View Palestinian Issue, Sinai Force M 1
Fraser on Palestinian Issue M 1
AFP Reports Muldoon on Forces M 1
Officials View Effects of Reagan's Economic Plan M 1
Further $3 Million Aid Granted to Kampuchea M 1

INDONESIA

Ministers Laud Sea Treaty Signed With Malaysia N 1
Jakarta Commentary N 2

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 021 1 February 1982

JAPAN

Text of Komoto Economic Policy Speech to Diet C 1
Government Announces Foreign Trade Package C 3
Hegg Crewman Says Ship Was Signaled To Stop C 5

NORTH KOREA

VRPR: South's 20-Point Proposal 'Preposterous' D 1
U.S. Withdrawal Called 'Essential' Prerequisite [NODONG SINMUN 1 Feb] D 1
Further Criticism of 22 Jan Unification Proposal D 2
NODONG SINMUN Commentary [29 Jan] D 2
LSWYK Chairman Comments D 3
VRPR Scores Suzuki for Supporting Chon Proposal D 5
Hitler Brutalities in Auschwitz Condemned D 5
Conference on Reunification Held in Helsinki D 6
Kim Il-song Greetings D 6
Conference Opens D 6
Kim Yong-nam Conveys Greetings to Kriangsak D 8
DPRK To Host Nonaligned News Agencies Meeting D 8

SOUTH KOREA

Unification Minister Issues Policy Statement E 1
PRC Has No Comment on UNC Proposal on Observers [TONG-A ILBO 30 Jan] E 2

KAMPUCHEA

Hun Sen: Thai-PRK Negotiations Are 'Necessary' H 1
Party Central Committee Plenum Issues Communique H 1
Further Materials on SRV New Year Celebration H 1
Chea Sim Greeting H 1
Yos Por Message H 2
Visit to SRV Embassy H 2
Condolences Expressed Over Death of Suslov H 3
Leaders' Condolence Message H 3
Wreath-Laying Ceremony H 3
Call at Soviet Embassy H 3
Editorial Urges Expanded Production, Trade [KAMPUCHEA] H 4
Philippine Foreign Minister's Statements Viewed [VODK] H 6
Malaysian Offer To Host Meeting Reported [VODK] H 6
Unity in Struggle Against SRV 'Aggressors' Urged [VODK] H 7
VODK Reports Successful Cutting of Railway Track H 8
AFP: Son Sann Calls Sihanouk 'Pessimist' H 8

LAOS

Souphanouvong Sends Tet Greetings to SRV Leaders I 1
Expressions of Condolence on Death of Suslov I 1
Central Committee Message I 1
Wreath Laying at Embassy I 2
Indian Scientific, Technical Delegation Visits I 2
Arrival of Delegation I 2
Meeting With Sali Vongkhamsao I 2
Meeting With Kaysone Phomvihan I 2
MPR State Bank Delegation Pays Official Visit I 3
Arrival of Group I 3
Signing of Cooperation Memo I 3
Departure of Group I 3
Soviet Building Delegation Pays Official Visit I 4
Nouhak Phoumsavan Meets MPR, Soviet Delegations I 4

THAILAND

Fighting in Area of Kampuchean Border Reported J 1
AFP Report J 1
Further AFP Report J 1
Assessment of Damage J 2
Sitthi on Malaysian Kampuchean Talks Proposal J 2
SRV 'Propaganda,' 'Military Adventurism' Scored J 3
POST: Two Trawlers Seized by Vietnamese Pirates [1 Feb] J 4
Further Reports on Narcotics Suppression Drive J 4
Spokesman's Report [POST 30 Jan] J 4
Further Report [NATION REVIEW 31 Jan] J 5
Interior Minister's Remarks J 6
Army Commander's Comments J 6

VIETNAM

VNA Denies PRC Report on Border Provocations K 1
SRV Proposes Resumption of Talks With PRC K 1
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Commentary [31 Jan] K 2
UN Secretary General's Note on SRV-PRC Border K 3
Pham Van Dong's Response K 3
NHAN DAN 1 Feb Commentary K 4
USSR's Ogarkov To Visit Early in February K 5
NHAN DAN Hits Reagan State of the Union Speech [29 Jan] K 5
Report on U.S. 'Infiltration' Into Laos Cited K 6
Nguyen Van Linh Attends Ceremony for Suslov K 6
Thai Binh Holds Party Congress 8-15 Jan K 6
Review of January Issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN K 9
West Europe Culture, Science Cooperation Noted K 10
Nguyen Duy Trinh Leaves for PCF Congress K 11
Officials Attend Indian Embassy Reception K 11

TEXT OF KOMOTO ECONOMIC POLICY SPEECH TO DIET

OW300157 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0535 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Speech by Economic Planning Agency Director General Toshio Komoto at the resumption of the 96th Regular Diet Session on 25 January -- live]

[Text] I would like to state my views on the immediate tasks facing our economy and the basic policy towards economic management. First, I would like to discuss the present situation of the world economy. The second oil crisis brought tremendous difficulties to the world economy. Although the worst is said to have finally passed, upheavals are still continuing.

Countries exerted strenuous efforts to overcome its influence and, as a result, the worldwide upward inflationary trend has slowed down a little and the situation in the supply and demand of oil has reached a lull. However, as a result of the tight-money policies pursued to arrest inflation, an unusual situation has been generated worldwide, in which interest rates are set high. Along with the effect of rises in the oil price, this is putting a great deflationary pressure on the world economy.

Because of this, business activities in the Euro-American countries still remain sluggish and unemployment is increasing in all countries. With some countries registering an unemployment rate of more than 10 percent, unemployment has become a big political and social issue.

In nonoil-producing, developing countries, deficits in the balance of current accounts are on the increase; cumulative foreign debts have sharply increased; and, on top of all this, price rises continue unabated.

In the midst of this situation, the Japanese economy has been able to tide over the second oil crisis comparatively smoothly, thanks partly to the nation's wise measures. Due to rises in the oil price, prices rose quite a bit for a time, but we were able to prevent imported inflation from turning into inflation on the domestic market. Since the spring of 1981, prices have regained their calm. However, the tempo of recovery in business is slow and lacks strength.

On the strength of powerful international competitiveness and the yen's low exchange rate, exports continued to increase; plant and equipment investments by large businesses are in a stable condition; and the tendency for a decrease in inventory investments seems to have almost come to an end. In the midst of this, production and shipments have been showing increases since last autumn. However, individual consumption continues to fluctuate, and changes in plant and equipment investments by small and medium businesses also continue to be sluggish. Since the end of 1979, housing investment has been falling below the average of preceding years. Thus, recovery in the domestic demand is slow, the demand for imports remains sluggish, and we depend on overseas demands for the most part in our economic growth. Because of these reasons, economic frictions with the Euro-American countries, troubled with inflation and unemployment, have become increasingly serious.

Under this situation, our economy is about to usher in fiscal year 1982. In managing this economy, we will pursue a policy with the following basic goals:

First, business activity will be steadily maintained and expanded and stable employment insured, mainly through the stimulation of domestic demand. The attainment of steady economic growth is also essential for a smooth implementation of administrative reform, the foremost current task. The maintenance and expansion of business activity, mainly through the stimulation of domestic demand, will greatly contribute to defusing economic frictions with foreign countries, a task of immediate urgency.

For this reason, in compiling the 1982 budget, we have done our best to stimulate domestic demand while paying attention to the fiscal impact on business activity. For instance, in consolidating social overhead capital, we have tried to increase the volume of projects through the use of private capital and the effective allocation of fiscal resources. However, to expand domestic demand under the present circumstances, where the fiscal resources are limited, it is very important to improve the business climate so that the vitality of the private sector of the economy can be given full play.

To this end, it is essential to consolidate the foundation for the recovery of private consumption through the preservation of the basic trend toward price stability. It is also important to make the pace of investment in equipment more secure through the continued effective and dynamic implementation of the financial policy, while promoting technological innovations and improvement in productivity.

Housing construction forms the foundations for a better living standard, and plays a significant role in stimulating private demand. For this reason, for the correct implementation of the fourth housing construction plan, the government has decided to take various carefully thought-out measures, such as those for increasing housing loans and providing more housing sites. Thanks to these measures, we believe that housing construction, which is sluggish at present, will head for recovery.

Inventory adjustment, which has been an obstacle to business recovery, has been almost completed. Accordingly, investment on inventory is expected to rise from now on. Moreover, as for the future trend of the world economy, business recovery is expected in the latter half of this year in most of the major industrialized nations, with the ill effects of the second oil crisis gradually being overcome in those countries.

Through the combined effects of the government measures just outlined and the vitality of the private sector of the economy, our economy is expected to attain approximately a 5.2 percent growth rate in real terms in fiscal 1982.

The second goal is the attainment of price stability. The current price trend is towards stability, both in wholesale and consumer prices. Needless to say, stable prices are a basic requirement for a stable livelihood for our people and thus form the foundation of economic management. To maintain the present basic trend for price stability, the government will continue to implement its policy in a dynamic way in fiscal 1982.

To this end, while closely monitoring the volume of currency in circulation, the government will take comprehensive measures, such as stable supply of daily necessities, price survey and monitoring, and the active implementation of policies designed to stimulate imports and competition. As for public utility rates, the government will be strict in setting these rates, on the assumption of thoroughgoing rational management and in consideration of their impact on prices and the people's livelihood.

The government anticipates continued price stability in fiscal 1982, with wholesale and consumer prices expected to rise by approximately 3 and 4.7 percent respectively.

The third goal is the establishment of harmonious external economic relations. There is some tone of severity in the demand for the opening of our market among the Western countries, which are plagued by inflation and unemployment. It is feared that protectionist moves will intensify in these countries.

World trade has continued expanding by leaps and bounds under the IMF-GATT system since the end of World War II, making great contributions as a driving force to the world economy. Behind the remarkable postwar development of the Japanese economy, there was the smooth expansion of world trade under the free trade system. Today Japan accounts for as much as 10 percent of world trade. That is why it bears a weighty obligation in preventing the rise of protectionism and achieving a harmonious development of the world economy.

We have to make active efforts to maintain and strengthen the free trade system.

From this point of view, the government will actively implement various external economic measures, such as import promotion which was adopted in December last year, to achieve expanding equilibrium in trade on the basis of the recovery of domestic demand. These measures include those designed to open our market, such as the gradual reduction of import tariffs and the simplification of inspection procedures on imported goods, as well as such import promotion measures as emergency imports, foreign currency loans, the stockpiling of petroleum and rare metals, and the dispatching of trade missions.

Needless to say, the basic cause of the protectionist moves lies in the stagnation of the economies of various countries. I believe that it is imperative for all nations to make positive efforts and cooperate in order to revitalize the world economy. In this connection, I would like to discuss economic cooperation with developing nations. By assisting developing nations in their economic development through economic cooperation, Japan as a peaceful nation can contribute to world peace and prosperity and meet the expectations of the community of nations. Such cooperation will also contribute to Japan's own development and security, for it has close, mutually dependent relations with these nations. From this point of view, we have taken maximum care in the 1982 budget to steadily fulfill the new medium-term goals of official development assistance [ODA].

Now I will discuss measures to consolidate the foundations of economic development in a long-term perspective. Since the end of World War II, Japan has been assisted by favorable internal and external conditions in achieving a remarkable economic development unparalleled in the world. Ours has grown to be a gigantic economy whose annual GNP is close to 280,000 billion yen.

However, the internal and external conditions surrounding Japan are undergoing radical changes, as seen in increasing limitations on resources and energy and the changing international economic order. Under these circumstances, we urgently need to consolidate our economic foundations so that our economy can be developed on a long-term, stable basis.

Compared with other advanced industrial nations, Japan's dependence on foreign oil is very high. This makes it imperative for us to secure a stable energy supply. At present, the strain on our oil supply has eased. But the medium and long-term energy supply picture still remains severe and is full of unstable factors. It is important to push through energy measures forcefully and stably at a time when the energy situation is in a state of lull.

To this end, we will strive to ensure a stable oil supply while more forcefully pushing energy conservation measures and oil stockpiling. It is also necessary to promote the development and use of alternate energy sources, such as the development of atomic power generation and the utilization of coal. Moreover, we have to exert efforts to study and develop new energy sources, such as nuclear fusion research, with a view to meeting the energy needs in the 21st century.

Thus far I have dealt with the immediate problems confronting our economy and expressed my basic views on the management of our national economy. In order that we may solve various urgent problems and bring about the economic picture just described in this period of radical worldwide economic changes, we need to manage our economy in a dynamic way appropriate to changing conditions. The government will tackle these problems with might and main. I earnestly ask each and every citizen for his understanding and cooperation.

GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCES FOREIGN TRADE PACKAGE

OW300527 Tokyo KYODO in English 0310 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 30 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government Saturday announced a package of measures to ease and simplify import-testing and other "nontariff trade barriers" in another major move toward allowing greater market access to foreign goods.

The wide-ranging package, adopted at a special meeting of top government aides and leaders of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, emerged from more than a month of intensive study following complaints by foreign governments that the Japanese market is not sufficiently open to imports.

The United States, the European Community and other Japanese trade partners have presented the government with 99 specific cases in which they felt their imports into Japan are being deterred.

A government spokesman said that Japan will ease or remove 67 of such nontariff barriers "as swiftly as possible." He said that further consideration will be made of another nine demands. The government found 15 others to be "based on misunderstanding" on the part of foreign governments, and decided that the remaining eight will "remain unchanged."

The package also called for establishing an "Office of Trade Ombudsman (OTO)" to handle foreign businessmen's trade grievances. Saturday's package followed the government decision last month to cut tariffs on 1,600 items two years ahead of schedule.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, emerging from the Cabinet council session, told reporters the measures just announced would "prove fairly affective" in defusing Japan's economic friction with its trading partners, particularly the U.S. and the 10-member EC. "I think we've done a fairly good job. No other countries can do this much," a confident Suzuki said.

But International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe conceded that the package might not fully satisfy the Americans and the Europeans. "I don't think that the solution of the problems of nontariff barriers is enough to resolve our trade friction," he said in reply to questions by reporters. Abe said that he will press for continued study of additional steps, including import liberalization for some of the 27 items, still subject to restrictions, or expansion of quotas for others.

Suzuki admitted that the new measures might not be quick in producing the desired results. He said he will send Masumi Esaki, a former MITI minister, to the United States and Europe on a mission to explain the package. Esaki heads the LDP's Special Committee on International Economic Policy, which drafted the package.

Initial reactions from these countries were generally guarded. An official of the EC Commission Office in Tokyo was quoted as saying that the Japanese move "is a step in the right direction, but there is still a long way to go." The U.S. Embassy released a statement welcoming the move, but added the U.S. Government "cannot make a judgment on the impact of the measures until we have a chance to study them and analyse their effect on specific problems...."

The 67 nontariff barriers to be eased or removed cover a wide range of products, including motor vehicles, cosmetics, pharmaceuticals, electric appliances, farm implements, sporting goods, chemicals and food additives. In fact, the package involves partial revisions of 24 domestic laws and regulations coming under jurisdiction of nine different government agencies.

Specific improvements will take the form of making Japanese standards in line with international ones, accepting foreign testing results, clarifying and quantifying standards and simplifying import-testing procedures. For example, U.S.-made aerosol sprays for cosmetics, whose wall is 0.015 millimeters thinner than the Japanese standard, will now be allowed into Japan. In another case, foreign-made metallic baseball bats and tennis balls will now be accepted at official competitions held in Japan. Officials said that as to the nine nontariff barriers, of which further consideration is to be made, conclusions would be reached "by the end of March."

The new Office of Trade Ombudsman, to be created within the Economic Planning Agency, will be headed by a deputy chief Cabinet secretary to ensure an easy access to the prime minister, they said.

Vice ministers of the government agencies concerned will be other members of the office, they added.

Hiromu Fukada, director general of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Affairs Bureau, told a separate news briefing, "we are very anxious to proceed along this line in opening our market in the interest of our country." Fukada, one of the senior bureaucrats who helped formulate the trade promotion package, also noted, "Trade friction is on the minds of many Japanese people, including the prime minister."

But the Foreign Ministry official cautioned the U.S. against enacting protectionist legislation, which he said would hamper bilateral trade between the two countries. "It will not be in the interest of the U.S. economy to introduce such legislation which will sap the U.S. industry of the vitality that comes from sound and healthy competition," he said. He also forecast it was "extremely unlikely" Japan would lift quotas on citrus and beef entirely for the United States, referring to the current bilateral agreement which will remain in force until March, 1984.

Nevertheless, the director general said, the government will continue to make efforts to strengthen and improve "the setup for handling complaints" from Japan's trading partners via OTO and indirectly the ruling party's Esaki committee. "The Esaki committee will stay," Fukada promised. "It will continue its work."

HEGG CREWMAN SAYS SHIP WAS SIGNALED TO STOP

OW230741 Tokyo KYODO in English 0638 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Naha, Jan 23 (KYODO) -- A crewman of the Japanese chemical tanker Hegg told Maritime Safety Agency officials that he saw a patrol boat approaching the tanker and giving signals to halt before it was fired on by Philippine fighters off Mindanao Island a week ago, supporting Philippine official statements. The officials said Saturday the crewman, who was not identified, gave the testimony during the questioning of 13 of the 22-man crew from the 5,307-ton tanker. The officials said, however, that they found no sign of weapons or supplies for Philippine Muslim guerrillas, which Manila authorities have alleged were being carried by the tanker.

The crewman was quoted as saying that a patrol boat approached the tanker and flashed a light several times before the strafing incident occurred. "I suppose it was the order to halt," MSA officials quoted him as saying. The witness contradicted what the Hegg's captain, Hideo Takakuwa, had said earlier. The captain told a press conference that he never received any order to halt by any Philippine Air Force aircraft or patrol boat, adding that no ship was near the Hegg before it was strafed.

The MSA officials said they will continue questioning for a few more days before the ship will be allowed to leave for its original destination of Pusan, South Korea. They said, however, a thorough investigation of the ship produced nothing to back up the Philippine accusation it was carrying weapons. They said only the ship's main tanks filled with methanol and caustic soda had not been checked, but added that they could hardly imagine weapons were concealed in the tanks. Nevertheless, the MSA officials said they plan to probe the tanks when the tanker unloads its cargo at Pusan.

VRPR: SOUTH'S 20-POINT PROPOSAL 'PREPOSTEROUS'

SK011045 (Clandestine) Voice of the Reunification Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] This morning Son Chae-sik, minister of the National Unification Board, issued a so-called statement to the North containing a 20-point proposal, such as opening the road between Seoul and Pyongyang. Because the so-called 22 January unification proposal has been internationally denounced and frustrated at the outset, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has put forth such a preposterous proposal to again deceive public opinion at home and abroad.

Any proposal which does not thoroughly guarantee the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea, democratization and the abolition of the anticommunist confrontation policy -- inevitable prerequisites for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country -- constitutes unrealistic, perfunctory slogans and hollow remarks. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should not fool people any more and deceive or ridicule the world's people with such a disguised reunification policy or proposal as the 22 January unification policy, which is only for propaganda purposes.

Before putting forward unrealistic and deceitful reunification proposals, Chon Tu-hwan should apologize for his crimes against the country and the people. If he really has an intention for reunification, he should immediately withdraw the U.S. troops from South Korea, enforce democratization, and abolish the anticommunist confrontation policy, collaborating, instead, with communism.

U.S. WITHDRAWAL CALLED 'ESSENTIAL' PREREQUISITE

SK011141 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1112 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 1 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today carries an article titled "Withdrawal of U.S. Troops Is Essential and Preferential Requisite to Peaceful Reunification."

Hidden behind the so-called "unification proposal" brought forward by the South Korean puppets on January 22 is a sinister design to keep the country divided forever and leave South Korea to the U.S. imperialist masters permanently, the author of the article declares.

This nature of the "proposal", he continues, finds typical manifestation in the outcry of the traitor for "the maintenance of the present truce system" and "respect of the treaties and agreements" concluded with foreign countries in an "agreement on basic relations between North and South" which he presented as "a practical step" till reunification. As clear to anyone, this is intended to leave South Korea under the U.S. troops' occupation and keep the aggressive and treacherous "South Korea-U.S. mutual defence treaty" as it is.

In that case, the wall barring reunification will be built higher and Korea will face a danger of being bisected for good and all into "two states" and "two nations". Herein lies the reactionary and treacherous nature of the "proposal" brought forward by traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

The withdrawal of the U.S. imperialists from South Korea is a question of principle assuming top priority in reunifying the country. If anyone want to advance a proposal for Korean reunification, he, first of all, must raise the question of withdrawing the U.S. troops from South Korea. But the Chon Tu-hwan clique in their "proposal" did not utter a word about this, but tried to justify the U.S. occupation policy.

Citing concrete facts, the article points out that the U.S. imperialists are becoming more vicious in their "two Koreas" plot and new war provocation manoeuvres for the invariable purpose of turning South Korea into their permanent colony and military base and realising their aggressive designs on the whole of Korea.

To wax eloquent about reunification with the U.S. imperialists, the shameless aggressor, the chieftain of war and the very one responsible for the division, left in the country, is as silly a talk as raising sheep with a wolf in the shed.

This suggests that traitor Chon Tu-hwan does not have the least intention to realise reunification, but he is trying to fool the nation with a word-juggling about it. If he has the least idea of seeking reunification, he should, first of all, have put forth a proposal for the withdrawal of the U.S. troops, ended the military fascist rule in South Korea and given up the anti-communist confrontation policy. A reunification "proposal" omitting this demand is a mere empty talk which is not worth a farthing.

FURTHER CRITICISM OF 22 JAN UNIFICATION PROPOSAL

NODONG SINMUN Commentary

SK290831 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0813 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 29 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today runs a signed commentary titled "South Korean Puppet's Splittist Proposal and Argument for Unification in the 2000's" in denunciation of the so-called "unification proposal" brought forward by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

In his so-called "unification proposal," the traitor hammered away at the poppycook about "general elections," "agreement" and the like, turning away his face from such fundamental problems of primary importance for national reunification as the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression troops from South Korea, the realisation of democracy and the renunciation of the anti-communist confrontation policy, the commentary notes, and says: This is a criminal act flouting the nation over the sacred reunification question.

The commentary further says: In a nutshell, the "proposal" brought forward by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan is ipso facto a malrevised version of the splittist "June 23 statement" of traitor Pak Chong-hui. This "proposal" was put forward at a time when the South Korean puppets advanced the "argument for unification in the 2000's" and defined the 1900's as an "era of frontal confrontation between North and South," "era of North-South competitions" and "era of building up foundations," claiming that the unification question should be dealt with in the 2000's. This clearly shows the criminal nature of the "proposal."

Clear is the real intention of the Chon Tu-hwan clique in bringing forward such criminal and vicious argument for permanent division as the "argument for unficication in the 2000's" at a time when the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo was advanced as a most fair and realistic reunification proposal and with this as an occasion the desire for national reunification is growing stronger than ever before.

The "argument for unification in the 2000's" of the Chon Tu-hwan clique is an argument for long-term office and an "argument for unification by prevailing over communism." The South Korean military fascist clique is noisily advertising that it would build up "strength" and "destroy communism" by perpetuating the division to gain time. This means extending its reactionary ruling system. This is the stance and attitude of the traitor in bringing forward the "argument for unification in the 2000's."

All these facts clearly show what the Chon Tu-hwan clique seeks in crying about "unification in the 2000's." It is a sham unification and a real division. The "proposal" advanced by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan this time is in essence an elaborated and politicized "argument for unification in the 2000's."

If he is interested even a little in national reunification, he must put forward, first of all, a proposal for the withdrawal of the U.S. troops from South Korea, take steps for democratizing South Korean society and renounce the anti-communist confrontation policy, instead of talking nonsense.

Today our people and unbiased public opinion of the world sternly denounce the "proposal" of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan, branding it as a political stratagem to perpetuate the division of the country and realise his wild ambition for long-term office and a political swindle to escape denunciation, rejection and isolation at home and abroad and delude public opinion.

LSWYK Chairman Comments

SK291017 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Talk by Yi Yong-su, chairman of the Central Committee of the League of Socialist Working Youth of Korea, dated 27 January -- read by announcer]

[Text] The voices of the progressive peoples of the world, to say nothing of all the Korean people, supporting the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Korea [DCRK] put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, are further increasing with each passing day.

The proposal for founding the DCRK is a most reasonable and realistic reunification program which elucidates the road toward the early achievement of the cause of national reunification, based on the scientific analysis of the specific reality of our country, the interests of our nation and the complicated, changing situation surrounding us. This is why all of those who deeply consider and worry about the sufferings of the divided nation and the future of the country are actively supporting this proposal and struggling for its realization.

This pannational struggle for establishing an independent, peaceful and neutral unified Korea on the land of the fatherland is participated in by our youth and students, too, who were born in the divided fatherland and have undergone the severe sufferings of division. But in South Korea today, rackets to attempt the permanent division of the country are still being waged, running counter to the burning national aspiration and desire for reunification of the fatherland, thus arousing unanimous indignation from within and without.

As is already known, traitor Chon Tu-hwan recently put forward a so-called reunification proposal. This proposal is one which completely fails to take into consideration the reality of our country and the aspirations of our nation. Therefore, it is only preposterous, empty theory and talk, the feasibility of which is not worth debating. The so-called reunification offer put forward by traitor Chon Tu-hwan is said to propose the formation of a unified National Assembly and the establishment of a unified government through general elections, while keeping the U.S. imperialist aggressors -- the basic obstacle to reunification of the fatherland -- in South Korea and maintaining the military fascist system, which has mercilessly trampled even the smallest bud of democracy and reunification. This is indeed preposterous.

It is clear to everyone that under the present situation in South Korea, where the U.S. imperialist aggressors dominate everything, the military fascist elements are perpetrating tyranny, patriots and democratic figures speaking for the will of people are all cast into prison and all political activities have been banned, it is impossible to hold general elections in accordance with the principles of national self-determination and democratic procedures.

Democratic figure Kim Tae-chung is now suffering in prison, wearing the shackles of a life sentence, simply because he espoused the will of the popular masses for reunification. Tens of thousands of youths and students who had demanded academic freedom, democracy and peaceful reunification were put into prison. They are now forced to endure unbearable sufferings at the military courts and on the rack.

Even at this moment, the patriotic students of Kwangju, who struggled, sacrificing the flower of youth, shouting "reunification is our desire" and many other youths and students, including those involved in the case of the Democratic Students Union, are suffering under heavy penalties or brutal torture. They are dying on the gallows.

In South Korea where all things democratic and patriotic have been obliterated, where can those who speak for the will of the residents exist? If they did exist, they would only be those who speak for the military gangsters and traitors, not those who truly speak for the will of the popular masses.

It is self-evident that we cannot consult on and discuss the reunification issue of the country with these men. Therefore, the so-called proposal for general elections brought about by the South Korean rulers is not worth considering for reunification. It is nothing but a deception designed to divide our one fatherland into two Koreas forever.

Such a splittist scheme by the South Korean rulers is more clearly exposed in their proposal to conclude a so-called agreement on basic relations between South and North as a practical measure till reunification is achieved. Through the agreement on basic relations, they clamor for South and North to respect each other's agreements and treaties concluded with foreign countries and not to interfere in each other's internal affairs. This is aimed at freezing by law the status quo of the North-South division and at building higher the barrier of division so as to separate one Korea into two countries forever under the mask of reunification.

On behalf of all members' of the League of Socialist Working Youth of Korea [LSWYK] and students in the northern half of the republic, I bitterly condemn with surging national indignation the South Korean rulers for thier foolish scheme to insult our youths and students and all compatriots aspiring for reunification with such a proposal.

The aim of the South Korean rulers -- who recently put forward the proposal for permanent division disguised as reunification with the same mouth through which they have openly clamored before the world people about the theory of reunification in the 2000's in a bid to divide the country permanently --is too obvious. It is aimed at blocking the great vitality of our proposal for founding the DCRK which is enjoying unanimous support at home and abroad, at soothing the growing sentiment for reunification among the people, at maintaining their dictatorial power and at realizing their greed for long-term office.

However, no matter what schemes they may employ, they cannot block the development of the history of the nation advancing toward reunification. If it truly wants reunification, the Chon Tu-hwan ring should not engage in lengthy jargon about such a preposterous and unrealistic proposal, the true intention of which is too obvious, but take an actual step to remove the basic obstacles to national reunification and to open a correct road toward reunification.

The basic obstacles hindering the independent and peaceful reunification of the country are the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. forces, the military fascist rule perpetrated under their patronage and the anticommunist policy for confrontation against the same nation.

If the South Korean rulers are to put forward a sincere porposal for reunification, they should, before they talk about reunification, take measures for withdrawing the U.S. forces from South Korea, for enforcing democracy and renouncing the anticommunist policy for confrontation in South Korea. Along with this, they should renounce their schemes to fabricate two Koreas, apologize for the crimes of slaughtering fellow countrymen in Kwangju and release all detained democratic figures and patriots, including Kim Tae-chung, without delay.

The South Korean rulers never talk about these problems which they ought to if they want the peaceful reunification of the country. Instead, they talk about preposterous problems which are of no help in reunification. This arouses only suspicion from people.

The South Korean youth and students, who are burning with patriotism and who have vigorously struggled for democracy and reunification should more vigorously struggle to sternly reject the Chon Tu-hwan ring's splittist proposal for reunification, to put an end to the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialist forces and to realize democratization of the South Korean society. Those who should stand at the head of fatherland reunification are our youths. The generation who will lead a happy life in the reunified fatherland is also that of our youths.

We are firmly convinced that the South Korean youth and students will raise the flames of struggle higher for national salvation against imperialism and fascism and for democracy to expedite the day when the military fascist clique's schemes for permanent division are smashed and the proud flag of the DCRK flies high in the land of our fatherland. All youths and students in the northern half of the republic will, as in the past, continue to actively support and encourage the just struggle of the South Korean youth and students for fatherland reunification, democratization of society and academic freedom in the future, too.

I take this opportunity to warmly appeal to all youths and students in the North and South and all Korean youths abroad to unite firmly and struggle more vigorously for the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

VRPR SCORES SUZUKI FOR SUPPORTING CHON PROPOSAL

SK292240 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] At a session of the Japanese Diet yesterday afternoon, Japanese Prime Minister Suzuki voiced support for Chon Tu-hwan's reunification formula as realistic and concrete and said that Japan will offer economic aid to South Korea. This is a provocative remark running counter to the aspiration of the world's progressive people, including our masses and the Japanese people, for the independent and peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

In South Korea, democracy has been eliminated and the anticommunist confrontation policy is maintained under U.S. occupation and a vicious fascist military system. Anyone aware of this would realize that Chon Tu-hwan's 22 January reunification formula is nonsensical and preposterous. Nevertheless, Suzuki praised Chon Tu-hwan's reunification formula, which is aimed at perpetuating division, as realistic and concrete. He said Japan will step up economic assistance to South Korea. This is to achieve a wicked aggressive ambition by supporting the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which confronts political and economic difficulties, in league with the U.S. imperialists and by instigating maneuvers for permanent division.

If the Japanese authorities truly want peace on the Korean Peninsula and its peaceful reunification, they should refrain from words and actions running counter to peace and peaceful reunification. They should end maneuvers for dark collusion with the Chon Tu-hwan clique and stop political, economic and military support for it.

HITLER BRUTALITIES IN AUSCHWITZ CONDEMNED

SK291521 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1509 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 29 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON today carry signed articles condemning the brutalities of the Hitler fascists in Oswiecim [Auschwitz] under the respective titles "Oswiencim Condemns Brutalities of Hitler Fascists" and "Oswiecim Disasters Must Not Be Repeated."

NODONG SINMUN points out that the German fascist occupationists slaughtered in cold blood as many as 6,000,000 guiltless people in Poland, especially set up a "death factory" in Oswiencim and butchered people there in a most vicious way.

Noting that the Workers Party, which was founded in the flames of the struggle against the Hitlerites, powerfully roused the working class and the people to the struggle for the liberation of the country from the fascist occupationists, the paper says: Since liberation the Polish people who became the master of their destiny have taken the road of building a new life, smashing the manoeuvres of the class enemies at home and abroad not to repeat such disasters as in Oswiecim.

Today the Polish people under the leadership of the Polish United Workers Party are striving to defend the gains of the revolution and achieve the stability of the country and its development along socialist lines, frustrating the insidious manoeuvers of the class enemies within and without.

MINJU CHOSON says: Today Oswiecim, as an eyewitness indicting the imperialists to the world for their barbarous brutalities, falls upon the peace-loving people of the world to heighten vigilance against the new war provocation manoeuvres of the imperialists.

CONFERENCE ON REUNIFICATION HELD IN HELSINKI

Kim Il-song Greetings

SK300419 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2200 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, January 30 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on January 30 sent a message of greetings to the World Conference on Journalists for Korea's Reunification scheduled in Helsinki, Finland, on January 30 and 31.

The message reads: On behalf of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Korean people and on my own, I extend warm congratulations and greetings to the World Conference of Journalists for Korea's Reunification and its participants.

Your conference which has been convened by reflecting the unanimous desire of the world progressive journalists signifies a great encouragement to the Korean people in their struggle to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

In the past the world progressive journalists, the mouthpiece of fair public opinion, have expressed warm sympathy with and support to the just cause of our people by conducting various press and information activities.

Convinced that the current conference which is being held amidst the deep interest and expectation of the world people who value independence and love peace will make big contributions to raising higher the just voices of exposing and denouncing the "two Koreas" plot of the separatists and their new war provocation manoeuvres and of supporting Korea's reunification, the supreme national desire of our people, I sincerely wish your conference great success in its work.

Conference Opens

SK310922 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0902 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Helsinki, January 30 (KCNA) -- The World Conference of Journalists for Korea's Reunification opened in Helsinki with a large attendance on January 30.

The subjects of the discussion at the conference are "on the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo," "on the reunification of Korea and role of the journalists" and "on the influence of the Korean situation upon world peace."

Placed in the conference hall was a photograph of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song with the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

The conference was attended by delegates of journalists from 63 countries and regions. Present there were delegates of international and regional organisations including the International Organization of Journalists, the ASEAN Journalists Association and the World Peace Council.

A delegation of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea headed by Kim Kwan-sop, chairman of the Korean Committee for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries and chairman of the Korean Committee for Solidarity with World People, a delegation of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in South Korea, a delegation of "CHOSON SINBO" under the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan (Chongnyon) and a delegate of overseas Koreans were invited to the conference. Also invited there were parliamentarians and political figures, personages of political parties and public organisations, and men of the press of Finland. Reporters of various countries who came to cover the conference and foreign correspondents in Finland were also present on invitation. Ambassador Yu Chae-han and officials of the DPRK Embassy in Helsinki were invited to the conference.

At the conference, the head of the delegation of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea conveyed a message of greetings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, to the attendants.

Introduced at the conference were messages of greetings from political parties, public organisations and personages of various circles of Finland and other countries.

The first-day session was presided over by the chairman of the Finnish Solidarity Committee for Korea's Reunification who is member of the parliament of the Republic of Finland.

The chairman of the preparatory committee for the conference, who is former director general of the Finnish Radio Corporation, made an opening address, which was followed by congratulatory speeches of the minister of transport and communications of Finland who is delegate of the Finnish People's Democratic League, the chairman of the Finnish Solidarity Committee for Korea's Reunification and the chairman of the Finland-Korea Association.

Japanese critic Hiroshi Wakabayashi made the keynote report which was followed by supplementary reports and speeches. On the same day, a performance was given by Finnish artists upon the opening of the conference. The preparatory committee for the conference arranged a cocktail party for the occasion.

The attendants at the party raised glasses to the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, to the friendship and solidarity among the progressive men of the press and journalists of the world and to the good health and long life of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. The attendants of the conference saw the Korean film "Kwangju Indicts."

KIM YONG-NAM CONVEYS GREETINGS TO KRIANGSAK

SK010902 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0823 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 1 (KCNA) -- The delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Yong-Nam, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, on January 26 met Kriangsak, leader of the National Democratic Party of Thailand and ex-prime minister, according to a report.

The head of the delegation conveyed cordial regards from the great leader Conrade Kim Il-song and the party centre to Kriangsak.

He expressed deep thanks for the cordial regards from the great leader and the party centre, and said: I hope you will convey my most heartfelt greetings to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, and to the party centre.

I know well that your country owes prosperity and splendid successes wholly to the wise leadership of His Excellency Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people. As he leads Korea, her prosperity and security will be guaranteed forever. I firmly believe that he will wisely lead the Korean people to greater victory and prosperity in the future.

Referring to the question of Korean reunification, he said: In the solution of the reunification question mutual misunderstanding and suspicion should be discarded and importance be attached to the interests of the nation. People desire a peaceful way. Korea should (?be) reunified for security in the Asian and Pacific region.

That day the delegation was invited to a dinner hosted by Saard Piyavan, the first deputy speaker of the Thai Parliament. On the same day the delegation met Marut Bunnak, deputy leader and secretary general of the Thai Democratic Party and justice minister, and had a talk with him in a friendly atmosphere. It attended a meeting with members of parliament on January 27.

Marut Bunnak, deputy leader and secretary general of the Thai Democratic Party and justice minister, arranged a dinner for the delegation on January 27.

On January 28 the delegation met and had a talk with Banharn Silapacha, deputy leader and secretary general of the Thai National Party, and the Bangkok state-run housing construction authorities. The delegation was invited to a dinner hosted by the Bangkok state-run housing construction authorities that day. The delegation held press conferences during its stay in Thailand.

DPRK TO HOST NONALIGNED NEWS AGENCIES MEETING

SK010510 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2208 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 1 (KCNA) -- An information on the convening of the seventh coordinating committee meeting of the Nonaligned News Agencies Pool was released on February 1 in Pyongyang and Belgrade.

The information reads: "The seventh coordinating committee meeting of the Nonaligned News Agencies Pool will be held from 12 to 14 May this year in Pyongyang. Decision on holding of the meeting in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was adopted at the sixth coordinating committee meeting held in February 1981 in New Delhi.

"The date was determined after consultations with the host -- the KOREAN CENTRAL NEWS AGENCY (KCNA) -- and members of the pool coordinating committee."

UNIFICATION MINISTER ISSUES POLICY STATEMENT

SK010200 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0030 GMT 1 Feb 82

[1 February "Statement to North Korea" released by Son Chae-sik, minister of the ROK Board of National Unification, at the office of the Secretariat of the North-South talks in Seoul -- live]

[Text] In his administrative policy speech at the National Assembly, President Chon Tu-hwan on 22 January proposed that the North and South adopt a unification constitution and based on it establish a unified state, which, he said, is the most reasonable way to achieve peaceful reunification.

Proposing that the constitution be drafted at a body tentatively named the Consultative Conference for National Reunification, which, he said, would be composed of representatives of the North and South, the president called on the North Korean authorities to conclude a three-point agreement on basic relations between the North and South -- a provisional agreement he suggested as a practical measure until reunification is achieved to facilitate the historic work of writing a constitution.

Reiterating his call for an early meeting between the persons in highest authority of the North and South to hold heart-to-heart discussions on all these matters, the president, in making arrangements for the meeting, proposed Cabinet-level officials' preliminary talks to the North Korean authorities.

As our unification proposal includes the ideas espoused by the North Korean side, we feel there is no reason whatsoever for the proposal to be rejected. In resolving the unification question of the divided fatherland, what is important is not mere talk but the attitude needed to resolve through dialogue current issues pending between the North and South.

Once again calling on the North Korean authorities to agree at an early date on Cabinet-level officials' preliminary talks designed to make arrangements for a meeting between the persons in highest authority of the North and South, our government, in the spirit of the president's unification proposal, is asking the North Korean authorities to promptly enact the following model projects:

1. As a measure to guarantee free passage between the North and South, open the road between the South and Pyongyang.
2. In order to alleviate pain suffered by the families scattered in the North and South, as a first step, allow them to exchange mail and hold family reunions.
3. Designate areas north of Mt Sorak and south of Mt Kumgang as sightseeing and resort places and open these areas as a joint tourist zone.
4. Manage jointly homeland visits by compatriots abroad and allow them to travel freely in the North and South via Panmunjom.
5. To promote free trade between the North and South, open Inchon and Chinnampo harbors as a first step.
6. In order to promote mutual understanding between the North and South, allow people in the two parts free access to regular broadcasts of North and South by removing all the slanderous broadcasting facilities and jamming facilities.
7. Allow the North Korean sportsmen to participate in the 1986 Asian Games and 1988 Olympic Games via Panmunjom.
8. Guarantee that all foreigners who desire to visit the North and South freely travel in the two parts via Panmunjom.
9. In order to ease the hardships of the North and South fishermen, establish a joint zone for free fishing.
10. In order to improve the relations between the North and South and promote trust, allow mutual friendship visits between personages of all strata, including politicians, economic personages, youth and students, workers, men of letters, artists and sportsmen.

11. To make known the realities of the North and South societies in a correct way, guarantee free news gathering activities to reporters from both parts in areas belonging to the other party.

12. For the purpose of preserving and developing the national culture, conduct joint studies of national history.

13. Hold friendship and exchange sports meetings preserving between the North and South and participate in all international sports meetings by forming a single team between the North and South.

14. To promote the standard of living of the residents living in the two parts, open trade of daily commodities and products between the North and South.

15. To promote the national economy, realize joint development and joint use of natural resources between the North and South.

16. To contribute to industrial development of the North and South, exchange engineers between the manufacturing firms and hold goods exhibitions.

17. Provide joint sports facilities in the Demilitarized Zone and use these for holding friendship sports meetings between the North and South.

18. For the study of nature and animals in the Demilitarized Zone, conduct joint scientific research in the Demilitarized Zone between the North and South.

19. To ease military tension between the North and South, remove completely all the military facilities in the Demilitarized Zone.

20. The North and South should consult each other about measures for arms control and install and run direct telephone lines between the military persons in authority of the North and South.

1 February 1982; Son Chae-sik, minister of ROK National Unification Board

PRC HAS NO COMMENT ON UNC PROPOSAL ON OBSERVERS

SK301401 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 30 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] (AP-YONHAP from Beijing) Communist China on 29 January hinted at the possibility of its turning down an offer advanced by the United Nations Command, which proposed that Communist China send observers to a large-scale ROK-U.S. joint military exercise to be staged in South Korea.

In reply to a reporter who asked whether Communist China will send observers, a spokesman for Communist China's Foreign Ministry said: "This proposal has been made by the U.S. representatives to the Military Armistice Commission, and we do not have enough information on which to base a response."

The spokesman refused to say if this statement was a rejection or if the United States or the United Nations Command had directly contacted Communist China in Panmunjom.

HUN SEN: THAI-PRK NEGOTIATIONS ARE 'NECESSARY'

BK291510 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1432 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jan (SPK) -- The People's Republic of Kampuchea is ready to cooperate with the Republic of India. The above was stated by Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs, during a meeting in Phnom Penh on 27 January with an Indian interministerial delegation led by G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture.

Vice Chairman Hun Sen affirmed the good intentions of the PRK to resolve, by means of negotiation, the problems of peace and stability in Southeast Asia -- problems which interest the Indochinese countries and ASEAN, particularly between the PRK and Thailand. Negotiations between Kampuchea and Thailand are necessary, according to Hun Sen, who elaborated that when Thailand has gathered the Pol-Potists and other Khmer reactionaries in one place and when it has stopped giving them supplies, Kampuchea will take steps towards a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. It is necessary to establish a demilitarized zone at the Thai-Kampuchean border, Vice Chairman Hun Sen stated. Dr G.V.K. Rao spoke about the results of meetings between Kampuchean and Indian experts on bilateral cooperation in the fields of agriculture, industry, transportation, health, culture and tourism.

PARTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE PLENUM ISSUES COMMUNIQUE

BK010509 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Communique of the Third KPRP Central Committee Plenum]

[Text] The Third KPRP Central Committee Plenum has been in session since 26 January and ended successfully on 31 January. The plenum proceeded actively and enthusiastically and unanimously agreed on the following issues:

1. Examined the development of the Kampuchean revolution in 1981 and set all the major general tasks for 1982;

2. Examined and evaluated the execution of the economic and cultural tasks in 1981 and during the 3 years since the liberation day and defined the orientation for the application of the state plan for 1982;

3. Discussed and adopted a resolution on organizational work;

4. Discussed and adopted a resolution on ideological work; and

5. Elected Comrade Khang Sarin to the Secretariat of the party Central Committee.

The Central Committee will issue plans for the state organs of all levels and circles, advising them on the implementation of all the above-mentioned significant resolutions. The party Central Committee requests the regional party committees of all levels to intensify their motivation work in order to lead all the people and the entire army to successfully fulfill all duties according to the resolutions of the fourth party congress and all the resolutions of the party Central Committee.

[Signed] The KPRP Central Committee; Phnom Penh, 31 January 1982

FURTHER MATERIALS ON SRV NEW YEAR CELEBRATION

Chea Sim Greeting

BK291043 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] On 25 January, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council, sent a message to Comrade Hoang Quoc Viet, chairman of the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee, greeting him on the occasion of the Vietnamese New Year. The message says:

On behalf of the KUFNCD National Council, all the mass organizations and the Kampuchean people throughout the country, and in my own name, we would like to join with the fraternal Vietnamese people in celebrating their traditional New Year. On this joyous occasion, we would like to extend best wishes to the Vietnamese people. May the new year bring new victories to all the Vietnamese people in the construction of socialism and in the struggle to crush all the perfidious maneuvers and aggressive acts of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists, the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys. We sincerely wish the comrade state leaders, all the Vietnamese combatants, particularly those Vietnamese combatants who are valiantly carrying out their proletarian internationalist duties with a lofty sense of sacrifice on the Kampuchean soil, and the fraternal Vietnamese people good health and greater victories in all tasks. May the close friendship, firm militant solidarity and and traditional cooperation between our two armies and peoples grow firmer and remain everlasting.

Yos Por Message

BK010421 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Recently Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council, sent a message of congratulations and best wishes to Comrade Nguyen Van Tien, VFF secretary general, on the traditional New Year of the Vietnamese people. The message reads:

On the occasion of the fraternal Vietnamese people's New Year, on behalf of the KUFNCD National Council, mass organizations and Kampuchean people throughout the country, we extend profound gratitude to the VFF and the fraternal Vietnamese people for their support and assistance -- in the past, at present and in the future -- for the correct and just cause of the Kampuchean revolution. We would also like to join with the Vietnamese people in celebrating this traditional New Year.

May the new year bring more victories to the Vietnamese people in their national construction work and in the struggle to crush all perfidious maneuvers and all the threatening and aggressive acts of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists and the U.S. imperialists as well as their lackeys. We sincerely wish the comrade state leaders, all the Vietnamese combatants -- particularly those combatants who are valiantly fulfilling proletarian internationalist tasks with a lofty sense of sacrifice on the Kampuchean territory -- and the fraternal Vietnamese people good health and greater victories in all tasks.

Visit to SRV Embassy

BK291031 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 26 January a delegation of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council led by Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the front National Council, went to extend best wishes to Comrade Ngo Dien, SRV ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the PRK, on the occasion of the Vietnamese traditional New Year.

On this joyous occasion, Comrade Yos Pos extended best wishes for happiness and more successes to the comrade ambassador, his family and all his colleagues who are fulfilling admirable tasks on our beautiful Angkor land. In his reply, Comrade Ngo Dien thanked and wished our Kampuchean party and front greater victories in the new year. The comrade added: The presence here of the delegation constituted a clear proof of the firm and unbreakable strength of the solidarity of our three countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- as well as the solidarity between the three countries and all the socialist countries, with the USSR as the firm support.

CONDOLENCES EXPRESSED OVER DEATH OF SUSLOV

Leaders' Condolence Message

BK301357 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] On 29 January Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the State Council; Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the National Assembly; and Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and acting chairman of the Council of Ministers, sent a message to Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium; Comrade A. Shitikov, chairman of the Council of the Union of the USSR; and Comrade Nikolay Tikhonov, chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR, expressing condolence over the demise of Comrade Suslov. The message reads, in part:

We have learned with shock about the demise of Comrade Mikhail A. Suslov, an outstanding party and state figure of the USSR and a most famous communist theoretician. Comrade Mikhail A. Suslov was an excellent combatant of the Soviet working class as well as of the international proletariat for the cause of socialism and communism. He made immense contributions to the consolidation of fraternal friendship and solidarity between the Kampuchean and Soviet peoples. The demise of Comrade Mikhail A. Suslov is a great loss for the Soviet people as well as for the Kampuchean people and the proletariat throughout the world. On behalf of the KPRP Central Committee, the Kampuchean People's Assembly and the Council of Ministers of the PRK, and in our own names, please permit us to extend our most profound condolences to you, to the CPSU Central Committee, the USSR Supreme Soviet and Council of Ministers and to the bereft family.

Wreath-Laying Ceremony

BK300806 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 29 January 1982, a high-ranking Kampuchean delegation laid wreaths at the Soviet Embassy and paid their respects to the memory of Comrade Suslov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo, secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and member of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, who died on 25 January 1982 at the age of 79.

Present on that occasion were Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Council; Comrade Say Phuthang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Organization Commission; Comrade Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; as well as many ministers. Ambassadors of various countries accredited to the PRK were also present on that occasion.

Call at Soviet Embassy

BK300938 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1436 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jan (SPK) -- A delegation composed of members of the KPRP Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers called at the Soviet Embassy in Phnom Penh this morning to pay homage to M.A. Suslov, member of the CPSU Politburo and secretary of the CPSU Central Committee.

The delegation included Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Chea Sim, member of the Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD]; Say Phuthang, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of State and chairman of the Central Organization Commission; Bou Thang, member of the Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission; Chea Soth, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; and other personalities.

The party and state leaders observed a minute of silence in honor of the memory of M.A. Suslov. They signed the mourning book beneath the following inscription: The Kampuchean people deeply appreciate the noble merits of the late Comrade M.A. Suslov, who sacrificed body and soul for the cause of the Soviet Communist Party and people as a shrewd theoretician, a skillful organizer and a combatant who fought for the great cause of Lenin, the construction of communism, the consolidation of fraternal solidarity in the socialist community and liberation movements, and for peace in the world.

On the same day, delegations from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, led by Vice Minister Hor Nam Hong, and the KUFNCD, led by Deputy Secretary General Chem Snguon, paid homage to the memory of the deceased comrade.

EDITORIAL URGES EXPANDED PRODUCTION, TRADE

BK300545 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 27 Jan 82

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Expand the Trade Networks and Increase Categories of Goods for the Society" -- date not given]

[Text] For more than 3 years our revolution has advanced valiantly, surmounted all the problems of the former regime and scored victories in all fields in the cause of national construction and defense. In the field of production since 7 January 1979, a large number of factories and enterprises were destroyed; almost all the technicians and specialized workers were killed and the surviors were weak and suffered from chronic ailments. But, thanks to the clear-sighted leadership of our party and our sense of perseverance and creative ingenuity, combined with the support and assistance of Vietnam, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, our cadres, personnel and workers in charge of the industrial sector grasped the most urgent tasks of rebuilding industry and stimulating all types of production and arduously repaired the production machinery and put it back into operation so that goods could be produced to serve the needs of our national society.

During the past 3 years, we restored 72 factories and enterprises, 57 of which are now operational. We have gained more good experiences and an increased sense of responsibility from the tasks we carried out in 1981. A number of factories overfulfilled the production plans and electricity has been controlled and distributed better than last year. In brief, both control and organization have been improved in accordance with scientific principles.

All of these victories clearly attest to our resolve to carry out labor and display our capabilities in combat and leadership. Moreover, handicraft and small industrial worksites have been restored and built throughout the country, thus accelerating the production of more goods and utensils for use in our society. In addition, during the past year a number of our national handicrafts, such as various kinds of silken sarongs and skirts, have been exported. This clearly proves the significant role of handicrafts in the rehabilitation and development of our economy. As the revolution advances and develops, society's needs also increase and become more complicated. This requires us to strive more arduously in the rehabilitation of production. The resolutions of the fourth party congress stressed the strategic points in the rehabilitation of production by underlining two tasks that are essentially interrelated -- that is, while rehabilitating the industrial establishments, attention must be paid to craftsmanship and small-scale industries.

In order to successfully expand handicrafts and small-scale industry, attention must be paid to the following tasks:

Encourage the people, particularly those who do not yet have any appropriate work, to heighten their perseverance in labor, and have them join in the production drive.

Stimulate craftsmanship, small-scale production and family-scale production by providing loans and selling raw materials to these production sectors.

Expand craftsmanship according to the availability of raw materials so as to make use of local resources -- such as jute, bamboo, rattan, grindstones, household utensils, wood-crafts, ironwork and ordinary means of transport and so forth -- as much as possible.

Avoid any handicraft work or the production of any type of goods banned by the state or not needed by society, and avoid the production of any handicrafts that require the import of raw materials from abroad.

Pay attention to expanded fishing, lumbering, palm sugar production, handicrafts and various other skilled tasks in order to increase the production of other types of utensils, tools, commodities and consumer goods to serve the needs of the people and production. In particular, the production of consumer goods must thoroughly and strictly comply with the sanitary standards so as to ensure the quality of the products and the health of the consumers.

Absolutely avoid any dishonest profiteering activity that affects the health of the consumers.

In agricultural areas, urge the people to grow industrial crops, such as jute and mulberry, in order to obtain raw materials for use in serving the needs of various handicrafts and industries.

In cooperation with the trade service, the Industry Ministry must organize transportation networks from the capital to the outlying areas in order to ensure the circulation of raw materials and to facilitate the supply of raw materials to the craftsmanship sector. It must also take into account the labor force, the number of machines available and the quantity of products turned out by each handicraft task.

Our party currently has a plan to restore the national economy, agriculture, fisheries and forestry. Thus, the handicraft sector must produce tools, such as plowshares, hoes, plows, fishnets and so forth, for sale to our people. Aside from daily production, attention must be focused on the improvement of technique so as to increase both the quantity and quality of the products. Moreover, production must be continuous and uninterrupted. In this case, the human factor is the most significant factor; thus, the spirit of love for labor and the sense of perseverance must always be heightened. All of us should hold aloft the slogan of our struggle, that is, discipline and work in accordance with the regulations set by the Constitution and decrees. No one may live like a parasite without working or serving the society.

We must mobilize the immense resources of our land; encourage the people to display their capabilities, creative ingenuity and good works; and actively stimulate the production of more types of goods in larger quantities. Not only will those goods meet the needs of the country, but some of them may be exported to earn foreign exchange for contribution to the strengthening of our nation's balance of trade. If we strengthen and expand more small-scale industry and handicrafts throughout the country and proceed with the production of goods with good quality and in a larger quantity, our people's standard of living will certainly improve and we will certainly succeed in the rehabilitation and construction of the national economy.

PHILIPPINE FOREIGN MINISTER'S STATEMENTS VIEWED

BK300642 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Danger of Vietnamese Aggression and Occupation of Kampuchea Is Bad Precedent"]

[Summary] "On 24 January [as heard], during his talks with the Iraqi Vice President currently visiting the Philippines, Foreign Minister Romulo of the Philippines stated that the Kampuchean issue must not set a precedent for big countries to interfere in the internal affairs of small countries. In this case the ASEAN countries will work for a complete Vietnamese troop withdrawal from Kampuchea."

Democratic Kampuchea, a full member of the United Nations, is an independent, peaceful and nonaligned country. For over 3 years, this small country of Kampuchea has suffered under the occupation of Vietnam, a big country which receives support and assistance from the Soviets and their accomplices. This is an unjust act which violates the basic tenents of the UN charter, international law and the nonaligned principles, and threatens peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

All the peace-loving countries of the world have firmly condemned the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies and have asked them to promptly withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea. The world community has adopted resolutions in the UN General Assembly on three occasions which demand the withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and respect for the Kampuchea people's right to determine their own destiny without external interference. In July of 1981 an international conference on Kampuchea clearly demonstrated the world's demand for an unconditional withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. Yet, the Vietnamese are very stubborn, for they do not listen to world public opinion and continue with their aggressive war in Kampuchea in an attempt to have it accepted as a fait accompli and to have it legalized by the world.

"What is the danger if the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea is legalized and the Vietnamese occupy Kampuchea forever as they wish? The Kampuchean issue will be a precedent for big countries to commit aggression, interfere in the internal affairs of and commit genocide against the small countries as they desire. Therefore it is a great danger for many countries in the region and the world." The Vietnamese and Soviets are cooperating with each other in order to fulfill their aggressive and expansionist strategy in Southeast Asia and the Asia-Pacific region. Military and espionage activities, as well as diplomatic maneuvers by the Vietnamese and the Soviets clearly indicate that they have not given up their ambitious aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia.

Philippine Foreign Minister Romulo's views on the Kampuchean issue are quite correct. Peace can only be restored in Kampuchea and Southeast Asia and world peace can be defended only if all regional countries and all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world, as well as all countries which have interests in this region, unite with each other to fight against the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea. To do so they must assist and support the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea and take all measures necessary to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they withdraw all their aggressive troops from Kampuchea, in conformity with the UN General Assembly resolutions which permit the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny. Through free elections under UN supervision. Kampuchean independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, neutrality and non-alignment should be guaranteed by the world community and the UN.

MALAYSIAN OFFER TO HOST MEETING REPORTED

BK310959 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] According to reports from Kuala Lumpur, on 27 January Tan Sri Ghazali, Malaysian foreign minister, stated that Malaysia hoped that the three Kampuchean factions would be able to unite.

He said that Malaysia wished to help bring about this union by all means possible, including providing the three Kampuchean factions with a meeting site for discussions.

UNITY IN STRUGGLE AGAINST SRV 'AGGRESSORS' URGED

BK301344 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Station editorial: "Increase the Union Forces of All Kampuchean People To Fight the Vietnamese Enemy Aggressors Until They Are All Driven Out of Kampuchea"]

[Excerpts] Our Kampuchean people's struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, swallowers of territory and race exterminators for national salvation and the defense of our Kampuchean nation, territory and race has passed through three full rainy seasons and three full dry seasons. At present, we are entering the middle of the fourth dry season. Our situation is improving in all fields.

1. The military situation:

As of the middle of the fourth dry season -- the end of January 1982 -- the Vietnamese enemies have been strategically defeated. They are completely bogged down. Since the end of the 1981 rainy season they have lost much materiel and have been unable to take initiatives or to launch any major offensives. Compared with 1980, the military situation of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors has deteriorated.

2. The political situation:

The Vietnamese enemy aggressors cannot win over our people to their side. The entire Kampuchean nation and people know well their crimes in attempting to swallow up Kampuchean territory and exterminate our race.

3. The diplomatic situation:

The world is aware of the danger of the aggressive and expansionist strategy of the Vietnamese and the Soviet Union in Southeast Asia. It has also acknowledged the role of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea in their struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors in defending their nation and blocking the southward thrust of the Vietnamese-Soviet aggressive and expansionist strategy. The world has shown its sympathy by assisting and supporting the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea in their struggle. Many countries have joined together to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they withdraw all their aggressive troops from Kampuchea in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea, which was held in July 1981.

What are the causes underlying the improvement in our situation?

1. The Kampuchean people of all nationalities and strata throughout the country provide assistance and support to Democratic Kampuchea. They cooperate with it to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors.

2. Our Democratic Kampuchean Government, which directly leads the struggle on the battlefield, follows the correct policy of the PDFGNUK. It implements the guidelines of this policy well. It rallies the Kampuchean nation and people of all nationalities and social strata. It gathers all patriotic forces inside and outside the country in waging a great struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors.

3. We have received assistance and support from friendly countries near and far and from peace- and justice-loving countries throughout the world, especially the ASEAN countries, which have continuously supported us -- politically, diplomatically, morally and materially.

In order to continue the struggle against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors until they are all driven out of Kampuchea, our Democratic Kampuchean Government, national army and guerrillas as well as our people fully realize that it is necessary to continue to implement the policy of rallying Kampuchea's great national union forces inside and outside the country. They also understand that it is essential to continue to unite with all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world, in particular the ASEAN countries who are our neighbors, who, like us, have been threatened by the Vietnamese and the Soviet Union and who have assisted and supported our struggle. It is vital for us to follow the new strategic policy and the political program of the PDFGNUK in gathering the great national union forces of the entire Kampuchean nation and people as well as in mobilizing assistance and support from friendly countries near and far and from all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world for generations to come.

VODK REPORTS SUCCESSFUL CUTTING OF RAILWAY TRACK

BK220410 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] Last December our comrades in arms on the southwestern region battlefield killed 191 Vietnamese enemy aggressors and wounded 176 others for a total of 367 casualties. Among those killed were two company commanders. Our comrades in arms destroyed an engine, 8 vehicles, 2 B-40's, 2 M-79's, a Goryunov, 11 AK's, 2 military barracks and 3 trenches. They cut a 300-meter section of railway track and a 10-meter bridge. Our comrades in arms seized 3 AK's, a carbine, 1,535 rounds of AK ammunition, 5 B-40 rockets, 2 M-79 grenades and a quantity of materiel. Concerning the production of primitive weapons, our comrades in arms made and planted 180,000 new spikes, dug 400 new punji pitfalls and set up 350 new automatic bows.

Long live our valiant army, guerrillas and people on the southwestern region battlefield!

AFP: SON SANN CALLS SIHANOUK 'PESSIMIST'

NC291348 Paris AFP in English 1252 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Brussels, 29 Jan (AFP) -- Son Sann, a former Kampuchean prime minister under Prince Norodom Sihanouk, described the ousted monarch as a "pessimist" on hearing his statement in Beijing today that any agreement between rival liberation groups would be a "miracle." Mr Son Sann, who heads the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), is in Brussels as part of a European tour to drum up support for his movement. He has already called in Paris, Bonn and London. Prince Sihanouk called today for a summit between his own movement, the KPNLF and the Khmer Rouge, following this third group's refusal to follow an Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) plan for a "loose coalition" of Kampuchean liberation groups, in which each would retain its own identity.

Mr Son Sann said that he saw no reason to change the plan, and that he was waiting for further explanations from the Khmer Rouge. The former premier, who is hoping for humanitarian, financial and military aid from Europe, said that he was "highly satisfied" with his reception so far. But he said that while he had been promised increased humanitarian aid, he had received no reply as to military or financial assistance.

SOUPHANOUVONG SENDS TET GREETINGS TO SRV LEADERS

BK261312 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Greetings message from LPDR President Souphanouvong to Troung Chinh, chairman of the SRV State Council; Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the National Assembly; and Hoang Quoc Viet, chairman of the Vietnam Fatherland Front, on the occasion of the Vietnamese New Year]

[Text] Beloved and respected comrades: On the occasion of the traditional Vietnamese New Year, and on behalf of the Lao people, I would like to extend my warmest congratulations to you. I wish you, comrades, good health and victory. I also would like you to convey the best wishes of the Lao people to the Vietnamese people. We hope that in the new year the Vietnamese people will overcome all difficulties and trials to score more and greater achievements to welcome the Fifth Congress of the majestic VCP; to contribute to the cause of socialist construction and the defense of the rich and beautiful Vietnam; to fulfill their right of collective mastery successfully; and to contribute to the highly esteemed international obligations of the SRV.

May the great solidarity and special militant relations between the Lao and Vietnamese peoples as well as the solidarity and friendship among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea remain fresh and last forever so that no dark reactionary forces can destroy them.

[Signed] Souphanouvong, president of the LPDR, chairman of the Supreme People's Council and the LFNC; Vientiane, 22 January 1982

EXPRESSIONS OF CONDOLENCE ON DEATH OF SUSLOV

Central Committee Message

BK280554 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Message of condolence from the LPRP Central Committee to the CPSU Central Committee on the death of Mikhail Suslov -- dated 27 January]

[Text] To the CPSU Central Committee, Moscow: We are very sad to hear of the death of Comrade Mikhail Andreyevich Suslov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and Secretariat. Comrade Suslov was an outstanding leader of the Soviet party and state and an indomitable combatant of the international communist-worker movements. He has made a significant contribution to the development of Marxism-Leninism.

During more than 60 years in the ranks of the CPSU, Comrade Suslov has devoted his energy and strength, his creative abilities and his intelligence to the cause of the party and the great people of the Soviet Union. He has served as a fine example in upholding the spirit of genuine patriotism together with pure proletarian internationalism, and in strengthening the friendship and cooperation between various parties and peoples in the socialist community and various countries in the world. As a result, he has drawn widespread respect and love from the Soviet people as well as from the communists and revolutionaries of various countries.

With respect to our Lao revolution, Comrade Suslov contributed to the strengthening and consolidation of the friendship, solidarity and fruitful cooperation between the parties and peoples of Laos and the Soviet Union.

The passing away of Comrade Suslov is a great loss for the CPSU and the Soviet people. It marks the loss of a senior communist and a tireless fighter for peace and friendship between various nations. At the same time, we have lost a close friend of the Lao people. On behalf of the LPRP and the Lao people, we would like to express deep condolences to the CPSU Central Committee and the fraternal Soviet people, together with the family and relatives of Comrade Suslov.

[Signed] The LPRP Central Committee; Vientiane, 27 January 1982

Wreath Laying at Embassy

BK301053 Vientiane KPL in English 0908 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Vientiane, 30 Jan (KPL) -- Members of the party CC, People's Supreme Assembly and the Council of Ministers led by Souphanouvong, Political Bureau member of the party CC, president of the republic and of the PSA, on January 29 laid a wreath in rememberance of Mikhail Suslov at the Soviet Embassy here. Also present with President Souphanouvong at the ceremony were Khamtai Siphandon, Political Bureau member of the party CC, vice premier, minister of national defense and commander in chief of the Lao People's Liberation Army; Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary of the party CC, vice premier and chairman of the National Planning Committee; Sisavat Keobounphan, secretariat member of the party CC, minister of interior and chief of the General Staff of the LPLA; Faidang Lobaliayao and Khamsouk Keola, vice president of the PSA; Souvanna Phouma, government's advisor; and other members of the party CC, the Council of Ministers, and the PSA. After the wreath-laying ceremony, Sisana Sisan, alternate member of the party CC and minister of propaganda, information, culture and tourism, in behalf of the condolence party put down in the record book his sympathetic and bereaved expression on the passing away of Mikhail Suslov.

On the same day, representatives from various mass organizations and state institutions also paid homage to M. Suslov at the Soviet Embassy.

INDIAN SCIENTIFIC, TECHNICAL DELEGATION VISITS

Arrival of Delegation

BK151142 Vientiane KPL in English 0940 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 15 Jan (OANA-KPL) [dateline as received] -- A technical and scientific delegation of Indian led by G.V.K. Rao, secretary general of the Government of India [title as received], on January 14 arrived here for an official visit. While staying in Laos, issues on scientific and technical cooperation between Laos and India will be discussed. Greeting the delegation at the airport were Khamleung Saignalat, deputy head of the National Scientific and Technical Committee, along with other officials. P.R. Sood, Indian ambassador to Laos, was also present at the airport.

Meeting With Sali Vongkhamsao

BK181045 Vientiane KPL in English 0932 GMT 18 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 18 Jan (KPL) -- Sali Vongkhamsao, vice-premier and chairman of the National Planning Committee, on January 16, received in Vientiane a technical and scientific delegation of India led by G.V.K. Rao, secretary general of the Indian Government. Issues on the exchange of economic, technical, scientific experiences were the main topics of the discussion. The meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding.

Meeting With Kaysone Phomvihan

BK190735 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 18 January, Kaysone Phomvihan, premier of the LPDR, received an Indian technical and scientific delegation led by Rao, secretary general of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry of the Republic of India.

Kaysone Phomvihan talked with the guests on many issues. He explained some aspects of the econmoic, technical, scientific and industrial situation in Laos to them. He made the explanation for the purpose of exchanging experience with India. The talks proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding.

On the afternoon of the same day, Rao led his delegation on their return home after ending a 5-day visit to Laos. During the visit, the delegation paid courtesy calls on some Lao leaders and met with the Lao National Scientific and Technical Committee headed by (Souli Nanthavong) to discuss assistance and technical and scientific cooperation between Laos and India.

MPR STATE BANK DELEGATION PAYS OFFICIAL VISIT

Arrival of Group

BK151144 Vientiane KPL in English 0938 GMT 15 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 15 January (OANA-KPL) -- A delegation of the State Bank of the Mongolian People's Republic led by its chairman, Huderchuluun, yesterday arrived here for an official visit. Hunderchuluun is also president of the Intergovernmental Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technical Cooperation between Mongolia and Laos. Greeting the delegation at the airport were Sot Phetlasi, general director of the Lao State Bank, and other members of the Intergovernmental Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technical Cooperation between Laos and Mongolia. Jambyn Nyamaa, Mongolian ambassador to Laos, was also present at the airport.

During its stay here, issues on banking cooperation and projects on Mongolian economic, scientific and technical assistance to Laos will be the main topics of the discussion.

Signing of Cooperation Memo

BK221239 Vientiane KPL in English 0925 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 22 Jan (KPL) -- A memorandum on economic, scientific, technological and banking cooperation between the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the Mongolian People's Republic was signed in Vientiane on January 21. The signatories were, on the Lao side, Sot Phetlasi, representing the Lao-Mongolian Intergovernmental Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation and president of the Lao State Bank; on the Mongolian side, Huderchuluun, representing the Mongolian-Lao Intergovernmental Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation and chairman of the Mongolian State Bank. Jambyn Nyamaa, Mongolian ambassador to Laos, was also present at the signing ceremony.

The memorandum deals with the implementation of the agreement on economic, scientific, technological and banking cooperation signed in 1980 between Laos and Mongolia.

Departure of Group

BK290427 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] The State Bank delegation of the Mongolian People's Republic led by Huderchuluun, chairman of the State Bank and representative of the Mongolian-Lao Intergovernmental Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation, left for home on the afternoon of 27 January after concluding, with glorious success, its 2-week visit to Laos. The delegation was seen off at the airport by Sot Phetlasi, director of the Lao State Bank, and Jambyn Nyamaa, ambassador extraordinary and planipotentiary of the Mongolian People's Republic to Laos, together with many high-ranking cadres of both the Lao and Mongolian sides.

During the visit, the Mongolian delegation called on Deputy Prime Minister Nouhak Phoumsavan. It met and held discussions with the Lao side on the implementation of an assistance plan extended to the LPDR by the Mongolian People's Republic. It also visited some production establishments and historical places in Vientiane and Xieng Khouang Provinces.

SOVIET BUILDING DELEGATION PAYS OFFICIAL VISIT

BK221231 Vientiane KPL in English 0927 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 22 Jan (KPL) -- A delegation of the Soviet Building Ministry headed by its deputy minister, Leonid Alexseyevich Bibin, on January 21 arrived here for an official visit. The delegation will hold talks with officials of the Lao Ministry of Communication, Public Works and Transport. The talks are to concentrate on the implementation of protocol signed earlier during the 3d session of the Lao-Soviet Committees on Economic, Scientific, and Technological Cooperation.

Welcoming the delegation at Wattai Airport were Khamluat Sitlakhon, deputy minister of communications, public works and transport, and Soviet Embassy staff.

NOUHAK PHOUMSAVAN MEETS MPR, SOVIET DELEGATIONS

BK251247 Vientiane KPL in English 0911 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 25 Jan (KPL) -- Nouhak Phoumsavan, Political Bureau member of the party CC, vice premier and minister of finance, on January 23, received in Vientiane a visiting delegation of the Mongolian-Lao Intergovernmental Committee for Economic Scientific and Technological Cooperation led by Huderchuluun, representing the president of the committee and chairman of the Mongolian State Bank.

The Mongolian delegation was accompanied by Sot Phetlasi and Jambyn Nyamaa, respectively director of the Lao State Bank and Mongolian ambassador to Laos.

The discussion was centered on the enhancement of friendship relations and mutual cooperation between Laos and Mongolia. Vice Premier Nouhak Phoumsavan, on this occasion expressed his thanks to the party, government and people of the Mongolian People's Republic for their precious support and assistance to the Lao revolutionary cause. Huderchuluun in return informed the vice premier on the successes of his official visit here. He also talked on the exchange of opinions with his Lao counterpart on the implementation of various assistance projects provided by the MPR. The meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship cordiality.

In the afternoon of the same day, Vice Premier Nouhak Phoumsavan also received a visiting delegation of the Soviet Ministry of Construction led by its deputy minister, Bibin. The Lao vice-premier took this opportunity to express his thanks to the Soviet deputy minister for the Soviet assistance to Laos. He also highly appreciated the proletarian internationalism of the Soviet Union and wished the Soviet delegation success during its official visit here. Deputy Minister Bibin informed the Lao vice-premier the purpose of his visit of the (?100-bed) hospital and the construction of the Polytechnical Institute, and other issues including in the mutual assistance and cooperation projects between Laos and the Soviet Union.

The meeting was conducted in an atmosphere of friendship and warmest cordiality.

FIGHTING IN AREA OF KAMPUCHEAN BORDER REPORTED

BK291227 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] More than 1,000 Kampucheans fled across the border into Thailand briefly yesterday after a fierce fighting erupted between the Vietnamese-backed forces and the Khmer Rouge about 50 km south of Aranyaprathet. Military sources said that the fighting near the Thai border followed a 2-hour clash near Poipet, opposite this border town. They said the fighting near Poipet started at around 0700 in the morning, but no casualties were reported.

Over 1,000 Kampucheans fled the fighting across the Thai border area near Khao Din, south of Aranyaprathet, but later returned to Kampuchea. The fighting yesterday came following a military report that around 1,000 Vietnamese-backed soldiers, backed by units of heavy weapons, had been massing near the Thai border. The sources said the new military movement was detected since the middle of this month after a major battle near the area earlier this month.

AFP Report

BK301411 Hong Kong AFP in English 1340 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Bangkok, 30 Jan (AFP) -- Thailand has sent fresh troops backed up with armoured cars to the Cambodian border amid fierce fighting between Vietnamese-led forces and Khmer Rouge guerrillas in the extreme west of Cambodia.

Field reports reaching here said the rival forces were battling heavily in the Cardamom Range for the second consecutive day and some 30,000 Khmer Rouge dependents were massing at a border canal, apparently in readiness to flee into Thailand. The fighting followed Thai military findings of a Vietnamese build-up with troops and hardware being sent into the border area from the northwestern Cambodian province of Battambang.

Thai military sources said Thailand yesterday afternoon sent up two F-5A fighters as fighting raged at about 40 kilometres (25 miles) south of the key Cambodian border town of Poipet, adjacent to Thailand's Aranyaprathet District. Thai villagers in the border village of Thap Phrik have around-the-clock patrol units amid reports that Khmer Rouge dependents are building rafts for a possible dash across the Phrommahot canal into Thailand.

The Khmer Rouge, with some 30,000 guerrillas largely based in the Phnum Malai hills in the Cardamon Range, were believed to have initiated the current struggle, But Vietnam, with an occupation force of between 150,000 and 200,000 troops in the war-torn state, is expected to launch a major sweep against the guerrillas as the dry season facilitates mobilisation of bulky hardware. The Thai Navy early this week reported a naval build-up near the Cambodian island of Koh Kong in what was seen as a related move. The Thai Navy is closely monitoring the movements of nine gunboats recently spotted in the Gulf of Thailand area and has ensured that it is prepared to repulse any intrusion into Thai waters.

Further AFP Report

BK310658 Hong Kong AFP in English 0631 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 31 Jan (AFP) -- Two Thai boys were killed and five other civilians seriously wounded in an overspill of fighting in the extreme west of Cambodia early today, filed reports said.

According to the reports, the Thai border village of Koke Sabaeng was hit by about 13 artillery shells amid fierce fighting between Vietnamese-led forces and Khmer Rouge guerrillas on the strategic Cambodian Highway 5. A house was razed and six others damaged in the overspill at about 0230 am (1930 GMT).

The fighting reportedly erupted about an hour before midnight and raged for three hours, the reports said. A 15-strong guerrilla force sparked the battle by striking a Vietnamese unit at Poh Sam Ton, about three kilometres (1.8 miles) east of the Thai border. The Vietnamese side hit back with heavy artillery, mortars and tank guns, the reports said.

Thai troops were on full alert during the fighting south of Poipet, adjacent to the key Thai border town of Aranyaprathet. Two Thai reconnaissance planes later skirted the border area as sporadic exchanges resumed between the rival forces. Thailand has beefed up its defences at the border with fresh troops and armoured cars amid Thai intelligence reports of a recent Vietnamese build-up. Thai authorities are also bracing for a possible influx of Khmer Rouge dependents said to be massing at the border, apparently in readiness to flee into Thailand. Meanwhile, Thai civilian authorities late this morning put Thai border villagers through an evacuation exercise.

Assessment of Damage

BK310740 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] The Public Relations Department correspondent at the Aranyaprathet information center has reported that at 0245 today the Heng Samrin soldiers fired 17 artillery shells from the Pho Sam Ton camp into Thailand at Wang Mon school and Ban Khok Sabaeng. The shells killed two Thai citizens and wounded five others, and did 5,000 baht worth of damage to a house. Some 450 kg of rice were also destroyed.

SITTHI ON MALAYSIAN-KAMPUCHEAN TALKS PROPOSAL

BK301208 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Swwetsila's 29 January news conference -- recorded]

[Text] [Sitthi] Malaysia has a right to host a meeting of the three Kampuchean factions. Ghazali has said that Malaysia will host the meeting. Thailand, as an ASEAN member, has no objection to this.

[Question] Has ASEAN made a joint decision on holding a meeting of the three Kampuchean factions in one of the ASEAN countries?

[Answer] No. Let me review this matter. ASEAN wants to see a coalition Kampuchean government materialize, but so far this has not been the case. Ghazali feels that the matter is not hopeless and thus offers Kuala Lumpur as the site for a meeting of the Kampuchean factions. As a matter of fact, the leaders of the Kampuchean factions are going to Beijing. One is there now. The problem is not where they meet, but that some concrete results emerge from their meeting.

[Question] Did you say they are going to Beijing?

[Answer] Sihanouk is there now, and I heard that Son Sann will go there.

SRV 'PROPAGANDA,' 'MILITARY ADVENTURISM' SCORED

BK291144 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The NATION REVIEW on 27 December last year carried a report saying U.S. aircraft made refueling stops at Thailand's Utaphao Airbase. Vietnam took the opportunity to charge Thailand with cooperating with a U.S. plan to reestablish its military role in Southeast Asia. Also on 11 January Thai Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon suggested during an interview that the United States should expand its military assistance to Thailand. Vietnam immediately mounted a propaganda campaign against Thailand as a result.

In reading the above reports, one must take into consideration the fact that Thailand is an independent country with full sovereignty and that it has the legitimate right to adopt policies it deems appropriate without having to consult other countries first. However, to make Thailand's sincerity clear and to foster the correct understanding of what happened, Thailand would like to make the following explanation:

In addition to refueling during joint training, Thailand gave permission to U.S. aircraft to stop at Utaphao for refueling, from time to time, because of its wish to provide facilities for a friendly country in the common interest of two sovereign states. However, permission is given each time on a case-to-case basis given appropriate reasons. It has nothing to do with a permanently established military base here, or with conducting hostile acts against any country. Thailand's action in this regard is part of its policy on relationships with friendly countries based on the principles of mutual assistance, common interests and mutual respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. It is also in accordance with the generally accepted principles of international relations. Thailand will adopt the same policy and apply the same principles with regard to other friendly countries as well. In its conduct of foreign policy, Thailand upholds the principle of sincerity and friendship with all countries. It harbors no designs for a military buildup for aggression against any country.

Meanwhile, Thailand reserves its legitimate right to make preparations for the protection of its independence and sovereignty. U.S. assistance to Thailand is part of Thailand's effort to strengthen itself for the defense of its national sovereignty. If Vietnam thinks that Thailand has made greater efforts this time for its national defense, this is because of the fact that, following the aggression and illegitimate occupation of Kampuchea by some 200,000 Vietnamese troops, Thailand is now confronted with an immediate threat on its eastern border. Therefore, it is a purely internal affair of Thailand if it renders service to a friend on an equal basis as a sovereign state, and if it has to increase its readiness to face aggression against it. It is improper for any other country to interfere or make distorting criticism to mislead others.

It is nonsensical for Vietnam to have distorted the facts and charged Thailand with, for example, cooperating in an act of military adventurism. Vietnam must have forgotten to consider whether or not its past act of sending a large number of troops to occupy Kampuchea was an act of military adventurism. Which country in fact has allowed a power to dictate its policy and to use its territory for military expansion, posing a threat to peace and stability in the region? Which country has again received military assistance, including a large quantity of weapons, from a power to carry out an act of aggression against and occupation of its neighboring country?

The Vietnamese leadership's design of inducing others to accept the status of a satellite country and adopt a policy of military adventurism -- as Vietnam itself has done -- cannot hoodwink all peace-loving countries. On the contrary, those countries can see more clearly the true face of the Vietnamese leadership, and they are mounting a more resolute opposition against Vietnam's act of aggression against its neighbor.

An act of military adventurism deserves condemnation. It will only result in all kinds of disadvantages to the country adopting it as a policy. Thailand loves peace and strictly abides by the principles of international relations. It therefore will never adopt such an incorrect policy. Thailand has preserved its national independence for hundreds of years. This has led the Thai people to cherish highly their national independence and freedom. It is therefore impossible for Thailand to risk involving itself closely with any power, as some countries are doing.

As for Vietnam itself, when will it realize this fact, extricate itself from the trap involving the struggle of the powers for interests and abandon the policy it is adopting, which only invites danger for Vietnam and other countries in the region? By so doing, Vietnam will contribute not only to the cause of Vietnam's peace and prosperity, but to the cause of peace and stability of the entire Southeast Asian region.

POST: TWO TRAWLERS SEIZED BY VIETNAMESE PIRATES

BK010126 Bangkok POST in English 1 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Pattani -- Two Thai trawlers and their crews have been seized by pirates said to be Vietnamese while fishing off Muang District, police in this southern coastal provincial capital said yesterday. Police said there were 25 crewmen on one of the boats. No details were available yesterday on the number of men manning the other boat. The boats, identified as the Siriphong 4 and the Sitthichai, were with a fleet of trawlers fishing about 48 kilometers off the coast early yesterday morning when they were intercepted by the pirates.

Police said a gang of about 20 men later seized both boats and escaped towards Vietnamese waters, about 430 kilometers to the northeast. A report of the incident was radioed by other fishing boats to the Pattani fishing association, which immediately told the police. Police said the 25 men were aboard the Siriphong 4. The fate of both boats remained unknown yesterday evening, police said.

FURTHER REPORTS ON NARCOTICS SUPPRESSION DRIVE

Spokesman's Report

BK300701 Bangkok POST in English 30 Jan 82 p 1

[Excerpt] The latest military report said about 1,000 Shan United Army (SUA) rebels had retreated to their former stronghold on Arkor Mountain, about 28 kilometers west of Ban Hin Taek. On Thursday night about 300 rebels surrounded a border outpost in Ban Ponghai of Mae Sai District, forcing a hilltribe volunteer force under the command of a border patrol policeman to scatter throughout the village, said government spokeswoman Mrs Wanida Chitman. Six volunteers were temporarily held for questioning and nine weapons, as well as some ammunition and maps, were confiscated. The rebels did not harm the volunteers, she added. An informed military sources said Khun Sa's Uncle Chun Saeng had moved about 1,000 of his men from Mae Suriya of Mae Hong Son to Soi Tung in Mae Chan District to beef up the SUA rebel force.

Meanwhile, Thai army and ranger units yesterday arrived in Ban Hin Taek to relieve border patrol policemen who fought a bloody battle against the rebels late last week. Sources said a command centre was set up in Chiang Rai to co-ordinate a suppression campaign against the rebels under the command of Maj-Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut, the director of army operations.

Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Prayut Charumani yesterday visited the Meng Rai Army garrison for a briefing on the general situation and the latest known rebel movements. He later visited Ban Hin Taek and Mae Sai District town which was damaged in a predawn attack on Tuesday.

In Bangkok, Police Director-General Pol Gen Suraphon Chunlaphram said police and army units had beefed up checks on all routes leading to Ban Hin Taek and other suspected Khun Sa hideouts to cut off the supplies for the rebels. He said the measure has been effective and has caused hardships for the rebels -- some of whom had robbed civilians of food and medicine.

Further Report

BK310213 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 31 Jan 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpts] Mae Chan, Chiang Rai -- Notorious opium warlord Khun Sa yesterday instructed his armed followers to suspend their subversive acts against government forces to pave the way for what appears to be his new move to propose "truce talks" with the government. Informed field officials who asked not to be named told the NATION yesterday that two Han Chinese captives believed to be followers of drug kingpin Khun Sa were released Friday night to deliver a government message to the leader of the Shan United Army (SUA). The two "emissaries" were sent to areas under Khun Sa's influence. He is believed to be in hiding near the Thai-Burmese border, the officials said. The sources added that one of them were despatched to Doi Tung areas while the other had trekked his way to Huay Krai area.

Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Prayut Charumani had earlier said that the government would not hold truce talks with the notorious narcotics kingpin unless all members of SUA unconditionally handed over their weapons to the government.

The field officials said: "We sent the two former captives to establish a channel of communications with Khun Sa over the current situation." However, the sources declined to divulge details of the message sent to the SUA leader, saying that the contents would be revealed only after the two emissaries returned. He said the two Chinese emissaries were among about 200 hilltribesmen who were put into custody at Ban Hin Taek following the seizure of the former stronghold of Khun Sa on January 21.

Another informed official who requested anonymity yesterday quoted villagers as claiming that Khun Sa had instructed his armed followers to suspend their military activities against the government. "The instruction was supposed to say that the suspension was aimed at facilitating the return of tribesmen to their native villages and after that, truce talks would be held with the government," he said. He also quoted the order as saying that Khun Sa planned to hold "secret talks" with the government after the situation returned to normal.

However, he said that the clashes between government troopers and SUA members might have resulted from the fact that the order failed to reach all the operatives of SUA, who were split into small units to dodge suppression by the government. "SUA's men have in the past several days raided a police station and an outpost in this northernmost province, killing at least seven persons in what observers believed to be its attempt to spur the government to the negotiating table by maintaining military pressure.

There were reports of clashes yesterday. The source said about 300 additional rangers were yesterday despatched to Ban Hin Taek to reinforce government forces there in the wake of skirmishes staged by SUA. The rangers, despatched from Doi Tung, were assigned to operate along the border areas to prevent infiltration of SUA's elements while border patrol police troopers have been tightening security in the inner areas. Chiang Rai Governor Sakda Ophong yesterday visited Ban Hin Taek and asked the captives to persuade villagers to return to their village where the situation was under full control of the government.

Commander of the government troops at Ban Hin Taek Pol Col Itthiphon Sirimonthon said that the situation was gradually returning to normal in light of reinforcement in this strategic village. "We expect that tribesmen who had fled the fierce fighting would gradually return in the next few days. We have informed them that we will guarantee the security of all villagers who return home," he said.

Interior Minister's Remarks

BK301428 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Speaking to newsmen this afternoon after returning from an inspection trip to the northern border provinces, Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot said he spoke with the governor of Chiang Rai about Khun Sa's armed activities in the province. The interior minister said he does not believe the suppression campaign against Khun Sa will end easily, as no one knows how he will retaliate. The minister gave assurances, however, that government security units are on the alert. Asked to comment on the frequent harrassment of government forces by Khun Sa's forces, the interior minister said, "Since we have no information on Khun Sa's plans, all the government forces can do is to be prepared. As for the concern expressed by the people in Chiang Rai," the interior minister said, "it is normal for the local people to become concerned following an armed clash." Provincial authorities have been instructed to try to placate the people's concern. Regarding the letters written by Khun Sa to the prime minister, the defense minister and himself, the interior minister said he has not seen such a letter; all he has seen are leaflets.

Army Commander's Comments

BK010714 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Army Commander in Chief Gen Prayut Charumani stated this morning that an army task force had been set up in Chiang Rai Province to conduct talks with Khun Sa's group, which had given indications that they would like to end their activities threatening the security of Thailand. He said the commander of the Chiang Rai Military District will head the mission for the talks. The army chief said that if talks really take place with good results -- meaning the forces of Khun Sa agree to lay down their arms -- the military will hand over responsibility for the ethnic minority groups in the area to the Interior Ministry and law and order will be restored. The government, he said, does not wish any harm to befall those minority groups. The army, he said, will use peaceful means in talks with Khun Sa's men. Khun Sa's forces will be told to lay down their arms.

Commenting on communist suppression, the army commander in chief said there is an indication the government will be victorious because all major bases, food supplies and weapons depots of the terrorists have been destroyed. Terrorists now operate in small guerrilla bands, launching sporadic harassment raids against the authorities. Due to lack of support from the masses, it is unlikely that communist terrorists will be able to regroup again. Besides, the various development projects launched by the government have had successful results and it is now difficult for the insurgents to infiltrate and receive support from the population.

VNA DENIES PRC REPORT ON BORDER PROVOCATIONS

OW010719 Hanoi VNA in English 0711 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 1 -- The Chinese paper RENMIN RIBAO on January 30 reported that from January 18-28 Vietnam had made armed provocations in areas bordering on Guangxi and Yunnan, China. VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to fully reject this piece of slanderous information circulated by the Chinese propaganda machinery with the intention of distorting Vietnam's good will and misleading the Chinese people and world public opinion.

It is a known fact that although China has turned down the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's proposal contained in its December 28, 1981, note that the two sides cease armed hostilities and firing along the common border from January 20-29, 1982, Vietnam has unilaterally acted upon this proposal and its good will has been welcomed by the Chinese people and world public opinion. The Chinese propaganda machinery can deceive nobody with its dirty trick.

SRV PROPOSES RESUMPTION OF TALKS WITH PRC

OW301213 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1112 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] On 30 January Tran Trung, head of the Chinese Department of our Foreign Ministry, met with the charge d'affaires of the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi to hand him a note from our Foreign Ministry to the Chinese Foreign Ministry. The text of the note follows:

Respectfuly, to the Foreign Ministry of the People's Republic of China, Beijing:

Since the end of the February 1979 war of aggression, the Chinese authorities have continued to step up their hostile anti-Vietnam policy, repeatedly carried out armed provocations and conflicts, continued to occupy and grab Vietnamese territory, thus creating constnat tension, seriously threatening Vietnam's security, causing instability along the two countries' border, affecting the normal activities and lives of the people of both sides and jeopardizing the peace and stability of the countries in the Southeast Asian region.

The Vietnamese side resolutely demands that the Chinese side immediately put an end to those actions and withdraw from the Vietnamese territories which it has illegally seized and occupied. Now as always, the Vietnamese people highly prize the longstanding Sino-Vietnamese friendship and the early reestablishment of normal relations between the two countries.

The SRV Government has persistently advocated peacefully resolving all problems between Vietnam and China and has repeatedly advanced many positive proposals, including measures aimed at lessening the tensions and insuring peace and stability along the two countries' border. Regrettably, the Chinese side has adamantly rejected the constructive proposals of the Vietnamese side.

Despite the fact that the Chinese side once again rejected the proposal mentioned in the 28 December 1981 note of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry on the two sides refraining from waging hostile armed activities and from opening fire along the Sino-Vietnamese border for a 10-day period on the occasion of the Nham Tuat Lunar New Year Festival, the Vietnamese side unilaterally carried out that proposal, thus creating favorable conditions for the people and soldiers in the two countries' border areas to celebrate their traditional Lunar New Year Festival peacefully and joyfully. This proves that the Vietnamese side's proposal conforms to morals, the traditional friendship between the two peoples and the aspirations and feelings of the peoples and soldiers of the two countries.

With the desire to reduce tension and move toward stabilizing the situation along the Sino-Vietnamese border to enable the peoples of the two countries to carry out their normal activities, live under favorable conditions and create a basis for peacefully resolving the problems in Sino-Vietnamese relations, thus conforming to the interests and aspirations of the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, the SRV Government proposes that: 1) both sides end all hostile armed activities along the Sino-Vietnamese border; 2) the third round of the Vietnam-China talks -- which the Chinese side has unilaterally disrupted since March 1980 -- be held expeditiously in order to resolve the problem of ensuring peace and stability along the Sino-Vietnamese border and to discuss all problems of mutual concern.

The third round of talks should be held during the first 6 months of 1982 in Hanoi or Beijing according to the Chinese side's choice -- the sooner the better.

This correct and constructive proposal of the Vietnamese side conforms to the interests and aspirations of the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples and to the common aspirations of the Southest Asian peoples and the rest of the world who desire peace and stability in this region and the rest of the world. It is hoped that the Chinese side will give an early, positive answer.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Commentary

BK010914 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 31 Jan 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 31 January commentary: "Once Again Vietnam Clearly Displays Its Good Will"]

[Text] Following its constructive proposals for the cessation by both sides of hostile armed actions along the China-Vietnam border on the occasion of the traditional Tet, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 30 January sent a note to the Chinese side proposing that both sides end all hostile armed activities in the border area between the two countries and that the third round of the Vietnamese-Chinese talks, unilaterally interrupted by the Chinese side for nearly 2 years, be speedily reopened.

Our Ministry of Foreign Afairs' note said: The third round of talks should be conducted within the 6 months of 1982 in Hanoi or Beijing accoring to the Chinese side's choice -- the sooner the better.

Once again we demonstrate our desire to reduce tension and eventually to stabilize the situation in the border area so that the peoples of both countries can carry on their normal lives in peace. This will create a basis for peacefully resolving the problems in the relations between the two countries.

This good-will and constructive proposal of our side conforms entirely to the aspirations and morals of the two peoples to their traditional friendship and to the trend and common aspirations of the peoples of Southest Asia and the rest of the world. Regrettably, the Chinese side has not responded to our previous initiatives and proposals and has even slandered and rejected them. Deeply imbued with the spirit of great-nation hegemonism, it has made every effort to wage a multifaceted war of aggression against the Vietnamese people and the three Indochinese countries. It is continuing to pursue its provocative activities and an armed conflict. It is still occupying and encroaching upon Vietnamese territories, thus committing untold crimes against our people. It is intensively helping the Pol Pot remnant troops, rallying the exiled reactionary Lao force and drawing to its side the ultrarightist forces within the Thai ruling circles to oppose and sabotage the revolution in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. It has prevented and sabotaged the trend of dialogue between the two groups of countries -- Indochina and ASEAN -- thus threatening peace and stability in the region.

Obviously, the situation in Indochina is still very tense, and it is completely caused by the Chinese side. Everyone knows that Vietnam has made anumber of constructive initiatives and proposals to solve the problems in the relations between Vietnam and China. Meanwhile, China has never made any similar initiatives or proposals.

Inspired by the friendship between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, we demand that the Chinese side respond positively to Vietnam's serious and constructive proposals, put an immediate end to all hostile activities against Vietnam and all armed actions along the border between the two countries and resume the third round of the Vietnamese-Chinese talks in order to reestablish peace and stability in the border region and discuss and solve problems of mutual concern.

UN SECRETARY GENERAL'S NOTE ON SRV-PRC BORDER

OW311427 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] On 28 January, UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar sent the following message to Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong:

His excellency the chairman,

I am very happy to know that the situation was again calm and that no military action was taken by either side along the border between the SRV and the PRC on the occasion of the Lunar New Year. I am very elated at this positive development. This can only contribute to regional and international peace and security.

I sincerely hope that the two sides will endeavor to maintain the present peaceful status beyond the Lunar New Year period. I am confident that the maintenance of peace and stability along the border between the two countries will contribute to creating an atmosphere favorable to a mutually satisfactory solution of the present problems.

I would like to avail myself of this opportunity to affirm that I am ready to offer my efforts, should the different parties so desire, to contribute to the search for a peaceful solution tothe problems and to the promotion of understanding, friendly relations and cooperation between the two countries.

Please accept my most respectful salutation.

Pham Van Dong's Response

BK010040 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] As already reported, UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar has recently sent a message to Pham Van Dong, chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers, on the Vietnam-China border situation. On 31 January, Chairman Pham Van Dong addressed the following reply to the UN secretary general:

I was honored to have received the message dated 38 January 1982 from Your Excellency. I welcome your initiative in proposing that Vietnam and China maintain the present state of peace on the Vietnam-China border after the Lunar New Year period.

Your Excellency's initiative conforms to the position of the SRV, which has time and again proposed that both sides end acts of armed opposition at the border area between the two countries and settle all problems concerning Vietnamese-Chinese relations through peaceful negotiations. Regrettably, up to now all these peace proposals have been rejected by the Chinese side.

Following the SRV's unilateral implementation of the proposal that both sides refrain from acts of armed opposition in the border area between the two countries during the Lunar New Year festival, on 30 January 1982, Hanoi time, the SRV Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent another note to its Chinese counterpart proposing that both sides end acts of armed opposition along the Vietnam-China border and that the sooner they resume the Vietnam-China talks the better.

I welcome all of your excellency's efforts contributing to preserving the state of peace on the Vietnamese-Chinese border and promoting Vietnam-China talks aimed at restoring normal relations between the two countries. Please accept the expression of my respectful regards.

NHAN DAN 1 Feb Commentary

OW010742 Hanoi VNA in English 0714 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 1 -- Vietnam's good will in solving all question in the Sino-Vietnamese relations is underlined in a commentary of the paper NHAN DAN today in a commentary on Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong's reply to the UN secretary-general welcoming his suggestion that Vietnam and China maintain the present peaceful situation along the Sino-Vietnamese border beyond the Tet (Lunar New Year festival) period.

The paper remarks: "Launching an aggressive war against the Vietnamese people has been a big crime of the Chinese ruling circles. By mounting a barbarous aggression against the people in Vietnam's northern border provinces and using the Pol Pot clique to slaughter Vietnamese civilians in the southwestern border areas, the Beijing expansionist forces have seriously undermined the long-standing friendship between the Chinese and Vietnamese peoples. All genuine revolutionaries and the Chinese people must have felt profound grief over these criminal acts. The Vietnamese people deeply sympathize with the Chinese people's suffering for decades in their motherland which they have fought so valiantly to defend against imperialism, feudalism and capitalism. The Vietnamese people have never borne any hatred for the Chinese people. On the contrary, they have always treasured their long-standing friendship with the Chinese people and are always grateful to them.

"The Vietnamese people eagerly want to eliminate the danger of war and restore friendship with the Chinese people. The untiring efforts of the Vietnamese Government in that direction have been demonstrated through many initiatives and positive proposals, including the proposals on measures to reduce tension and ensure peace and stability along the border of the two countries. So far, all goodwill efforts of the Vietnamese people and government have been rejected by the Beijing authorities who have responded with a blatantly hostile policy. Because they oppose Vietnam, Vietnam must oppose them. Prone to betrayal and deception, they have done all they could to make black white, and reverse wrong and right. For its part, Vietnam will, now as before, persist in its policy of peace and friendship."

The paper goes on: "In spite of the Chinese refusal, the Vietnamese side has unilaterally carried out its proposal, that the two sides refrain from hostile armed activities along the common border during the Tet period. This has enabled the population and soldiers along the border to enjoy the new spring. On January 30, 1982 the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, proposing that the two sides end all armed activities along the common border and resume the Sino-Vietnamese negotiations broken by the Chinese side in March 1980.

"The Chinese people, especially the Chinese civilians and soldiers who have just enjoyed a peaceful Tet in the border area more than anyone else, have seen the serious character of the proposal. We believe that like the Vietnamese people, the Chinese people do not want aggression and war, but peace and friendship. To reduce tension and eventually to stabilize the situation along the Sino-Vietnamese border and through negotiations to restore normal relations between the two countries is also the aspiration of peace-loving people throughout the world. On January 28, 1982 the U.N. secretary-general sent a message to Vietnamese Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong welcoming the 'positive development' along the common border of Vietnam and China and stressing that this 'can only contribute to regional and international peace and security.' Chairman Pham Van Dong has sent a message to the U.N. secretary-general welcoming his initiative in proposing that the two sides maintain the present peaceful situation along the border beyond the Tet period."

"The Chinese authorities recently have repeatedly boasted of their 'love for peace.' We are waiting for their answer to see if their deeds match their words. Good will can be proved only by concrete deeds. One hundred empty discourses are not worth a concrete deed," NHAN DAN concludes.

USSR'S OGARKOV TO VISIT EARLY IN FEBRUARY

BK 311447 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] At the invitation of the SRV Ministry of National Defense, Comrade Soviet Marshal Nikolay Vasilyevich Ogarkov, member of the CPSU Central Committee, chief of the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff and USSR first deputy minister of defense, will make an official friendship to our country early in February of this year.

NHAN DAN HITS REAGAN STATE OF THE UNION SPEECH

OW300929 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Under the title "Awkward Explanations," Nguyen Huu Chinh's article published today in NHAN DAN says:

This year many Americans anxiously awaited the State of the Union address by the White House head, not because they expected from Ronald Reagan a certain miracle to prevent the U.S. economy from more deeply plunging into recession, but because they wanted to know the U.S. President's view of the serious U.S. situation as regards its foreign and domestic policies. More important was the fact that they wanted to know to what extent Reagan had awakened to his errors regarding his policies and decisions during a year's rule.

In his 26 January address, Reagan haughtily declared that U.S. foreign policy must take root in pragmatism, not in naivety and self-deceit. Again, he bombastically said: We have promised a season of truth to the world.

Although the address devotes only a few lines to U.S. foreign policy, it contains many deceitful explanations of the true picture and influence of the United States in the world. Reagan said that the United States approved the reduction of weapons and military activities. However, the Pentagon's latest revelation indicates that the United States is currently the most harmful weapons dealer, with arms sales amounting to nearly $25 billion in 1981. In addition, the United States intensified its military provocations on many continents in 1981, from the Middle East to Central America and the Caribbean Sea.

In his address, Reagan willfully abstained from talking about the sharp differences that have caused dissension between the United States and its Western allies as far as the Polish issue is concerned. He was also intentionally silent about the vigorous development of the peace movement in Western Europe -- a development closely connected with the world people's anti-U.S. sentiments." In other words, Reagan did not have the courage to admit that U.S. foreign policy suffered many bitter setbacks in 1981.

The article concludes: Through the State of the Union address one can see the impotence and dilemma of the U.S. ruling circles which are faced with a series of tough dmoestic problems. The Reagan administration still harbors the illusion of regaining its military superiority and applying an external policy from a position of strength while the world balance of forces is evolving in a way more and more unfavorable to the United States.

As observed by widespread Western public opinion, the Reagan administration's policy remains basically one of guns and butter. Noteworthy is the fact that Reagan's gun arsenal and the U.S. industrial unions' profits are growing bigger and bigger, while the U.S. workers' slice of butter is getting thinner and thinner.

In his 27 January address, Reagan boastfuly said that in the next 200 years, many Americans will speak of us today with all their pride. There is no need to wait 200 more years. The United States will be holding by-elections by the end of 1982, with many Republican congressmen already worrying about retaining their seats.

REPORT ON U.S. 'INFILTRATION' INTO LAOS CITED

BK301419 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] AFP on 27 January quoted the U.S. newspaper Boston GLOBE of the same day as saying that on 15 Novemenber 1981 two groups of U.S. mercenaries infiltrated into Lao territory for reconnaissance activities. The infiltration was under the command of (James Reader), a former lieutenant colonel of the noted U.S. Green Berets. (Reader) disclosed that the U.S. Defense Intellegence Agency set up a top-secret organization to serve the infiltration into Laos. This organization gave (Reader) $40,000 to arm the two groups of Lao mercenary commandos -- each group consists of 9 persons -- and 3 U.S. Green Berets soldiers, formerly CIA officials, who trained them on Thai soil.

(Reader) said that bandit leader Vang Pao introduced him to other Lao bandits in Thailand for his recruitment of mercenaries to infiltrate into Laos.

According to the Boston GLOBE, Inman, deputy director of the CIA, did not deny the aforementioned infiltration. The U.S. Pentagon, while giving no comment on this matter, confirmed they had done all the necessary work to check information on U.S. servicemen in Indochina.

The infiltration into Laos on 15 November 1981 by the U.S. mercenary commandos once again shows that the U.S. leadership did not respect international laws and stubbornly carried out provocative acts against LPDR sovereignty to fulfill their wicked plots.

NGUYEN VAN LINH ATTENDS CEREMONY FOR SUSLOV

OW291925 Hanoi VNA in English 1456 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 29 -- The Soviet consulate-general in Ho Chi Minh City this morning held a memorial ceremony for the late M.A. Suslov, member of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, secretary of the party Central Committee, and member of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet. Nguyen Van Linh, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam, and secretary of the city party committee led a delegation to the ceremony. The Fatherland Front Committee and mass organizations also sent delegations to the ceremony.

M.A. Suslov was also mourned in Haiphong, Quang Nam-Danang and other places.

THAI BINH HOLDS PARTY CONGRESS 8-15 JAN

OW311255 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Excerpts] As previously reported, the first round of the Thai Binh provincial party organization congress, which opened on 8 January, ended on 15 January with splendid success.

Our general observation about the 8-day congress is that the delegates attending the congress, working diligently and displaying a correct attitude, engaged in highly intensive and truly democratic discussions. The more than 20,000 suggestions advanced at the province's grassroots-level, district and city party organization congresses and the 44 suggestions made by various sectors, party echelons and mass organizations at the provincial party organization congress manifested a high unanimity of views with the central level in its assessment of the current situation, of the achievements scored in the political, military and diplomatic fields, of the great difficulties facing our country and of the guidelines on the tasks that are being carried out in the new stage of our counrtry's revolution.

A number of questions raised at the grassroots-level, district and city party organization congresses were discussed very carefully, and the participants finally fully agreed with the central level that we have scored noteworthy achievements on the economic front.

The delegates also affirmed that the socialist building line set forth at the fourth national party congress was correct. Many delegates advanced rational arguments and concrete figures on the province's achievements to support their statements.

Despite the fact that over the past 5 years we had to contribute considerable manpower and material resources in the victorious fights against the Beijing expansionists in the two wars on our country's southwestern and northern borders, and despite adverse weather conditions and repeated natural calamities, Thai Binh Province's gross income in 1980 reached over 555 million dong -- a 53.6-percent increase over 1975. Over the past 5 years its agricultural production increased 16 percent and its industrial production 56 percent.

The high unanimity of views at the Thai Binh provincial party organization congress was also manifested in the delegates' analyses of the province's concrete progress following the issuance of the resolution of the sixth party Central Committee plenum. Irrationalities in the management mechanism and the administrative supply system and a number of policies that did not conform to the economic situation and so forth have been initially remedied. The improvement has constituted the motive force in helping the province boost production and overcome many difficulties resulting from imbalances in production and the people's lives and overcome, to some extent, the difficulties due to shortcomings in material supplies and raw materials, thereby helping further boost the province's industrial and small industry and handicraft production. The delegates particularly cited some of the province's 1981 agricultural production figures to affirm its initial progress in implementing the party's economic building policies. Thanks to the display of the revolutionary offensive spirit, the creative application of policies and resolutions of the party and the local party organizations, the impact of a number of policies that the party and state recently promulgated, such as the policy of stabilizing grain and foodstuff tasks and the policy of distribution according to work done, and especially thanks to the expanded application of the end-product contract system, Thai Binh has achieved all-round success as regards the 10th-month, secondary and industrial crops and successes regarding area, productivity and volume of production.

While positively supporting the central-level draft political report, the delegates engaged in highly intensive and thorough discussions about a question raised at the grassroots-level, district and city party organization congresses: Does the implementation of directive No 100 of the central level on expanded implementation of the end-product contract system weaken the new production relations and hamper the advance to large-scale socialist production?

it is noteworthy that at the Thai Binh provincial party organization congress, while they affirmed successes, the delegates also boldy pointed out the difficulties and sluggishness in the present economic situation as well as the objective and subjective causes of that situation. During the first years of the second 5-year plan, grain production has increased slowly, with paddy production tending to decrease -- the average paddy production is only 55.8 quintals per hectare. Hog raising has decreased seriously. Industrial production and small industry and handicraft production has increased somewhat, but slow production has failed to meet requirements and is not commensurate with the province's capabilities.

Many delegates pointed out that subjectivism and rashness have caused them to see only the province's potentials while failing to discern all the difficulties. Regarding planning, stress has been laid on requirements while capabilities and material conditions have been slighted. As a result, high plan norms were set while little achievement was scored in the implementation of the plans. The value of the province's 1980 agricultural production was only 57.7 percent of the plan norms and the value of its industrial production less than 50 percent.

It may be said that most of the delegates' statements at the Thai Binh provincial party organization congress contained more or less serious self-criticisms regarding shortcomings and the subjectivism of their respective sectors and echelons and of themselves.

We think that this is an encouraging factor because it proves that the province's body of cadres and party members now have a more objective view and, with this, they can find out the subjective, direct causes of sluggish production and will seek ways to overcome them. Many delegates analyzed carefully some of the causes of sluggish production: the long overdue maintenance of the administrative subsidy system, a lack of knowledge of economic management, conservatism, and reliance on higher levels -- with the low level of managerial capability and conservatism being major obstacles to production development. In many instances, conservatism creates obstacles right from the beginning in our application of a new managerial method. It creates negative manifestations when cadre policy changes and when cadres are reassigned or replaced. The delegates also talked a lot about a weakness which is also one of the causes of sluggish production: the party building task has not been satisfactorily carried out. Wherever party organizations are stable and strong, production develops and the people's living conditions are improved. Conversely, in those production installations where party organizations are weak and cadres and party members are not as exemplary as they should be or show lack of unity, production decreases and the people are unhappy. The cause of that situation is the party members' failure to carry out serious self-criticisms and the party organizations' failure to satisfactorily educate and train party members in political matters, to make them clearly realize that the economic construction task is the major task of their respective party organizations and chapters. In short, they fail to pay due attention to the overall party-building task. A delegate's self-criticism highly applauded by many delegates, particularly those delegates from the agricultural production sectors, was the statement by Comrade Nguyen Van Thang, deputy chief of the provincial agriculture service.

[Begin Nguyen Van Thang recording] In our opinion, over the past many years, the machine industry from the central down to the local level has paid too much attention to producing new products, while slighting repairs and the production of spare parts for use in restoring machines worn out through long use. Over the past years, the machine industry has also paid little attention to the production of ordinary and improved tools. This has resulted in prolonged shortages of tools and the production of bad-quality tools over many years in localities and regions across the country. What is the cause of all that? Why do we lack farm tools and why are our farm tools of bad quality? Who is aware of the situation and who has resolved the problems, and how far has the problem been resolved? And why is that situation being prolonged? Apart from the cause of the lack of raw materials and material supplies that we must discuss, we think that organization of production and division of responsibilities are matters that we must also discuss in the coming period in order to resolve the problem temporarily and rationally and to better support agricultural production. Over the past many years, we have concentrated too much on the production of ordinary and improved tools at state-run production installations and at district engineering cooperatives. We have forgotten and slighted the existing potential of the engineering cells and teams in production teams and units and in agricultural cooperatives. We have paid little attention to developing and tapping locally available raw materials and the production potential of cooperative member families for production of tools, such as lumber and bamboo for producing improved tools. [end recording]

The statements made at the first round of the Thai Binh provincial party organization congress, which correctly assessed the achievements scored and the difficulties that have caused sluggish production, as well as their subjective causes, manifest a major change in the thought of the body of the Thai Binh cadres.

The change will create conditions for the province to better realize its great capabilities and to seek a way out of difficulties for the sake of the Thai Binh economy during the 1981-1985 5-year plan and during subsequent years.

REVIEW OF JANUARY ISSUE OF TAP CHI CONG SAN

BK300830 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Review of the January 1982 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN]

[Summary] In its January 1982 issue, TAP CHI CONG SAN carries an editorial entitled: "Strive To Carry Out the 1982 State Plan." After reviewing achievements, difficulties and shortcomings of the 1981 economic task, the editorial says: "We are entering 1982 with the development of new factors in all economic sectors and with encouraging results of the emulation movement to score achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress."

The editorial adds: "In 1982, economic tasks and the state plan have been set forth to fulfill the general economic strategy of the 1980's, which consists of bringing agriculture a step further toward large-scale socialist production. Its main objectives are to exercise collective mastery over the land and labor, to formulate an agricultural zoning plan throughout the country, to distribute social labor on a large-scale basis in order to fully use the labor force, to exploit tens of millions of hectares of arable and forest land, to expand comprehensively various branches and trades and to establish concentrated production zones and agroindustrial districts."

This is followed by an article entitled "The Kampuchean People Are Firmly Defending National Independence and Building Their Fatherland." The article cites the all-round achievements scored by the Kampuchean people over the past 3 years and stresses that "the present task of the Kampuchean party and people, as the resolution of the fourth congress of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party points out, is to firmly defend national independence and build the country in a gradual advance along the transitional path toward socialism."

An article by Sen Gen Hoang Van Thai entitled "Special Relations Among the three Indochinese Nations" points out the strategic position of these three countries in the Southeast Asian region, whose peoples have fought shoulder to shoulder against aggressive and expansionist forces from the north and the west. The article adds: "This special relationship stems from the natural relations of the three nations, namely, the geographical, social and historical backgrounds. It has formed and developed concretely since the formation of the worker's party. Experiences of the past 50 years show that all schemes of the French, Japanese and U.S. imperialists and the present Beijing expansionists and hegemonists have been carried out according to the laws of "aggression against the three nations in Indochina" in order to use one country's territory as a springboard to fight and dominate another country, and to sow division among these countries in order to rule them easily.

"For them, Indochina is a battlefield and they always have a common strategy against this peninsula. As a result, the revolutionary alliance among the three nations is an essential objective to defeat the imperialists and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists."

Also featured in this issue is an article by (Hong Quang) entitled "The History of the VCP: A Valuable Book." The article reviews the first draft of Volume I of the history of the VCP prepared by the VCP Central Research Department on party theory and published by the Su That Publishing House.

This is followed by an article by (Phuc Khanh) entitled "Selected Works of Karl Marx and Frederick Engels" in Vietnamese, saying that "this Vietnamese version is a valuable gift from the GDR party, government and people to the Vietnamese party, government and people."

Marx's economic and political philosophies and social science system were included in these selected works, the article says.

Also featured in this issue of the journal is an article by (Nguyen Luong Bich) entitled "Nguyen Hue's Role in Resisting Foreign Aggressors in the Late 18th Century." The article stresses the role of the Tay Son movement, "especially the accomplishments of King Nguyen Hue in the war of liberating the people from internal feudalism and the war against foreign aggressors, particularly the great victory over the Qing aggressors in the spring of 1789."

Next is an article by (Thien Nhan) entitled "President Ho Chi Minh and the Struggle Against Bureaucratism." The article recalls the teachings by President Ho Chi Minh on the struggle against bureaucratism "which, together with corruption and waste, are dangerous enemies of the people, army and the government."

The journal also carries an article by (Nguyen Khac Chung) on "a study of orchard economy," stressing the significance of family orchard growing "to increase agricultural production and provide more food for the people's meals."

WEST EUROPE CULTURE, SCIENCE COOPERATION NOTED

OW261718 Hanoi VNA in English 1516 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 26 -- In recent years Vietnam has considerably increased its cultural, scientific and technical co-operation with Western Europe. With regard to France from July 1977 to the end of 1980 more than 200 Vietnamese have gone to France. In return French specialists made a dozen teaching tours of Vietnam.

In early 1981 at the meeting of the Joint France-Vietnamese Commission for Cultural, Scientific and Technical Co-operation held in Hanoi, it was decided that the 1981 program would include more than 100 visits of French specialists to Vietnam and the sending of about 100 Vietnamese students to France, in addition to the exchange of survey teams in communications and transport, electricity, economic management, etc.

In the medical field France will accept 20 Vietnamese practitioners and send 25 specialists to Vietnam to help in such departments as sanitation, epidemiology, cancer, surgery, cardiology, hematology and ophthalmology. Many French organisations have made important contributions to the aid program: the France-Vietnam Friendship Association, the Popular Relief Organization, the Christian Committee Against Famine and for Development (C.C./F.D.) etc; they have been helping in some major projects such as the research centre for infant nutrition and the production of glass for medical use.

The French Government has also helped Vietnam to establish a French-language department at the Hanoi Foreign Languages Teachers College. Aside from inter-governmental co-operation, there has been cooperation between various French universities and the Hanoi University and the medical college in Ho Chi Minh City. At present the co-operation agreements between the Grenoble Polytechnical Institute (INPG) and the Vietnam Polytechnical College and between Paris University of Southern Orsay and a Vietnamese university are well under way, and there are good prospects for co-operation between the French Scientific Research Centre and the Vietnam Institute of Sciences.

With regard to Holland, the two countries have agreed on a program for co-operation between the Amsterdam Leyden, Groningen and Delft universities and the Hanoi University, Hanoi Agricultural College, Agricultural College No. 3 and Can Tho University, involving more than ten projects (agronomy, biology, technology, physics and chemistry). The Dutch Government has agreed to allocate more than 4.5 million guilders for the program in the period 1978-1981.

Since 1978 more than 50 Dutch specialists have come to Vietnam and about as many Vietnamese specialists have gone to Holland for study tours. Talks are under way for bilateral scientific and technical co-operation for the period 1982-1986. The Nuffic international co-operation office in Holland has proposed to the Dutch government a budget of 12 million guilders for this program. Six Dutch universities took part in a program of co-operation with the Vietnamese medical and pharmaceutical services in 1977 with an allocation of more than 2.5 million guilders by the Dutch Government. Since 1978 more than 50 Vietnamese doctors and pharmacists have made study tours of Holland and ten Dutch professors have come to Vietnam to teach.

In Belgium about 40 Vietnamese students are studying at various universities and colleges with scholarships granted by the Belgian Government.

In addition, through non-governmental agencies such as the Co-operation Development Fund and Oxfam, the Belgian Government has funded a number of scientific and technical projects in Vietnam including two research centres in the Mekong River Delta, a school for creche attendants in Nha Trang, and the expansion of the vegetables research in Hanoi. The Belgium-Vietnam Association is actively working for the founding of the commission for scientific and technical co-operation with Vietnam in order to further the co-operation between the two countries.

NGUYEN DUY TRINH LEAVES FOR PCF CONGRESS

OW301532 Hanoi VNA in English 1451 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 30 -- A delegation of the Communist Party of Vietnam headed by Nguyen Duy Trinh, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the party Central Committee, left Hanoi today to attend the 24th congress of the French Communist party. The delegation was seen off by Le Thanh Nghi, Political Bureau member and secretary of the party C.C., Nguyen Thanh Le, member of the party C.C., head of its Commission for External Relations, Hoang Bich Son, vice foreign minister, and other officials.

OFFICIALS ATTEND INDIAN EMBASSY RECEPTION

OW291930 Hanoi VNA in English 1453 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 29 -- The Indian ambassador to Vietnam and Mrs Kuldip Shadad Shadad gave a reception here today in honour of the 32nd Republic Day of India. Present were Tran Quynh, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Phan Anh, vice chairman of the National Assembly; Le Khac, minister of foreign trade; Phan Hien, minister of justice; Hoang Anh Tuan, deputy foreign minister; Lieutenant General Tran Van Quang, vice minister of national defence and others. Also present were members of the diplomatic corps and representatives of international organizations in Hanoi.

At the reception, the ambassador and his guests raised toasts to welcome the Indian people's great successes in national construction and defence, their great contributions to the Non-Aligned Movement and to the strengthening of the forces of peace, national independence, democracy and social progress, and to wish for constant strengthening of the friendship and close cooperation between Vietnam and India.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 022 2 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Text of Watanabe Fiscal Policy Speech to Diet C 1
Suzuki Calls for International Economic Study C 7

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Denounces U.S. Envoy's Speech [31 Jan] D 1
Further Comment on Chon's Reunification Plan D 2
GFTUK Leader's Statement D 2
NODONG SINMUN Commentary [1 Feb] D 4
VRPR Calls 20-Point Plan 'Trick,' 'Clumsy Drama' D 5
Coverage of Kim Yong-nam Visit to Bangladesh D 7
Arrives 29 Jan D 7
Meets Prime Minister D 8
Signing of Cultural Accord D 8
Yun Ki-pok, KWP Delegation Return From Africa D 8

KAMPUCHEA

Scientific Delegation From USSR Pays Visit H 1
Meeting With Heng Samrin H 1
Signing of Protocol H 1
USSR Economic Relations Delegation Visits H 1
Signing of Cooperation Report H 1
Conclusion of Visit H 1
Soviet Komsomol Delegation Visits Phnom Penh H 2
Arrival of Group H 2
Meeting of Youth Groups H 2
Departure of Delegation H 2
Further Reports on Indian Delegation's Visit H 3
Visit to Battambang H 3
Meeting With Khun Chhy H 3
Meeting With Tang Saroem H 3
Conclusion of Visit H 4
Khieu Samphan Meets With Visiting Buddhist Monk [VODK] H 4
AFP: Sihanouk on Summit Meeting, Coalition H 5
Call for Early Summit H 5
View of Coalition Prospects H 5

THAILAND

Supreme Commander Gives Armed Forces Day Speech J 1
NATION REVIEW on Speech [27 Jan] J 4
Aid for Villagers Affected by Refugee Influx J 5
[NATION REVIEW 28 Jan]

VIETNAM

Leaders Pay Tet Visits to Various Areas K 1
Pham Van Dong in Ha Bac K 1
Pham Van Dong in Cao Bang K 1
Pham Hung in Ho Chi Minh City K 3
Pham Hung's Other Visits K 3
Indonesia's Mokhtar Cited on Kampuchea, PRC, SRV K 6
Role of Mass Motivation Work Emphasized K 6
[TAP CHI CONG SAN December]
Preparations for Army Induction of Youth Urged K 19
[NHAN DAN 1 Feb]

TEXT OF WATANABE FISCAL POLICY SPEECH TO DIET

OW271015 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 0504 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Speech by Finance Minister Michio Watanabe at the resumption of the 96th Regular Diet Session on 25 January -- live]

[Text] In submitting the budget for the 1982 fiscal year for deliberation, I would like to explain its main features and present my basic views on current fiscal and financial policies.

At present most of the major European industrialized nations are facing great economic difficulties; they are still beset by double-digit inflation and mass unemployment of a similar magnitude. In particular, increasing unemployment is resulting in deterioration of law and order, causing fears among the people. On the other hand, the Japanese economy has come to account for nearly 10 percent of the world economy and the rate of price increases in Japan has been about 4 percent. The Japanese economy is the most stable one among the major industrialized nations. Japan's rate of unemployment, which stands at about 2 percent, is the lowest.

To begin with, the cardinal purpose of government is to provide a peaceful, affluent and stable livelihood for the people. Ever since the end of World War II, the government of Japan and the Japanese people have consistently made joint efforts to attain that goal. As a result, despite its small territory and scant natural resources, Japan has been able to attain its present prosperity and stability. This demonstrates the vitality of its free economy, and is the product of the wisdom and hard work of our industrious and talented people.

However, when we look back on the past, the course we have traversed has not necessarily been all that smooth, and we have gone through many trials. Aided by the ready availability of cheap oil, Japan was able to achieve what is commonly known as high economic growth from the latter part of the 1950's to the early part of the 1980's. In view of the bulging government coffer, the government took a number of social security and educational measures, areas which previously tended to lag behind.

On the other hand, a social climate of "money is almighty" has pervaded the entire society. It is also a fact that discipline in fiscal management has tended to be marred by political demands based on the desire to depend on the state treasury rather than engage in hard work. To cite an example, before the period of high economic growth, the national railways [Kokutetsu], the health insurance system [Kenko Hoken Seido] and the food management system [Shokuryo Kanri Seido] almost balanced their revenues and expenditures as a result of sound management. But these systems have now come to be regarded as the main source of fiscal deficits, also known as the 3-K deficits. Why? This is because they neglected efforts to cope with the changing times and their deficits were easily covered by the abundant government funds.

But then it became impossible to achieve economic prosperity through imports of cheap oil, as a result of the so-called first and second oil crises. As oil prices continued rising from 1974, the entire world was buffeted by the rough waves of inflation and business recession. Japan was no exception. However, our economy was able to withstand this difficulty. The government's finances played a major role in accomplishing this. When our economy slackened and tax revenues dropped as a result of the first oil crisis in particular, the government resorted to the unusual means of issuing a large amount of bonds to raise funds so that it could achieve business recovery and a stable livelihood for the people. As a result, our economy was able to shift smoothly to stable economic growth and further push ahead with the welfare measures launched since 1973, commonly known as the first welfare year.

Social security spending increased nearly four times and expenditures for educational and scientific development nearly three times in the period from 1973 to 1981. As an example, it suffices to point out the fact that the average monthly welfare payments rose from 22,000 yen to 107,000 yen in the same period. As a result, Japan's social welfare measures came to equal those of the Western industrial nations. In this same period, however, tax revenues increased only 2.4 times. The deficits were covered by the issuance of government bonds.

The balance of government bonds outstanding stood at 83 trillion yen as of the end of the 1981 fiscal year, and it is expected to rise to about 93 trillion yen at the end of the 1982 fiscal year. Interest on these bonds in the budget for the 1981 fiscal year accounts for about 16 percent of the general account expenditures. The bond interest expenditure surpasses the expenditure for public works and corresponds to about three times the outlay for defense.

In projecting for the future, since Japan has become one of the leading countries in the world in terms of its people's longevity, pensions and medical expenditures are anticipated to increase further, and national finance must cope with natural calamities, the energy problem and other changes that develop in the economic situation. Regrettably, however, finance as it stands now has no surplus strength to devise new measures to help resolve these tasks.

On the other hand, the cumulative rise in the balance of public bonds issued has become a factor hampering the lowering of interest rates. This affects the operation of monetary policy to a large extent. To continue issuing a huge sum of public bonds, I am afraid, might result in pressuring private capital and introducing an inflationary factor in the economy. As we can see throughout the world, inflation causes business recession and increased unemployment and harms the stability of national life itself. Therefore, it is necessary that we extricate ourselves from dependence on public bonds as early as possible.

From this viewpoint, the government has been striving hard to reduce the amount of public bonds issued. However, a cutback in the issuance of public bonds in effect means a reduction in financial sources. If financial sources are reduced, we have no choice but to either cut back expenditures or find other financial sources to replace them. However, expenditures comprise many expenses in a variety of forms, and, to individual beneficiaries, a cutback in those expenditures is bound to cause hardships as painful as a pay cut. Due to a habit that originated in the days of high economic growth, the tendency of taking an easygoing attitude and trying to depend on the government has not yet been eliminated. Hence, despite the fact that a cut in expenditures is a first step toward financial rehabilitation, people approve it on principle but not when the cut affects them. In fact, they voice strong opposition to it when dealing with particulars.

It is also a fact that an attempt to find new financial sources is met by extremely strong resistance. We cannot expect that our dependency on public bonds for even those expenses which, by nature, should be borne with taxes -- a dependency we built over many years -- can be changed in 1 or 2 years. Yet those who benefit from the state's measures and those who bear the expenses are, after all, the people. How much reduction in administrative service resulting from a further cutback in expenditures -- subsidies, for example -- should we accept? How much increase in the people's burden for maintaining and improving administrative service should we accept? These are questions which the people should decide for themselves.

In formulating the fiscal 1982 budget, the government took into consideration the public's strong call for financial rehabilitation through thoroughly rationalizing and legalizing administration and finance. The government made it its basic policy to formulate the budget mainly by cutting back expenditures through administrative and financial reforms.

With the financial sources limited under stable economic growth, it is natural that even policies which were approved against the background of plentiful tax revenues under high growth should be reexamined. It is also necessary to adopt the principle that beneficiaries bear part of the costs, and work out plans so as to stop the increase in demands on the state. In general, it is necessary to strive to rationalize the structure of finance in keeping with the demand of the times. From this viewpoint, in examining the budget demands for fiscal 1982 submitted by ministries and agencies, we adopted an epochal system of limiting their budgets uniformly to the level of the preceding fiscal year -- a system called zero ceiling.

Last spring, a provisional council for the survey of administrative reforms was inaugurated, and in July it presented a package of recommendations on ways to reduce expenditures. Under the basic policy of paying utmost respect to this package and putting the necessary measures into practice as early as possible, the government submitted a so-called special bill on administrative reforms to the extraordinary Diet session last autumn and had it enacted.

In the fiscal 1982 budget, which went through this course, the government tried to cut down expenditures as much as possible and decreased the sum of public bonds to be issued by 1.83 trillion yen from what was envisaged under the original budget for the preceding fiscal year. The fiscal 1982 budget was formulated in accordance with this basic policy, as I have explained. Its outline is roughly as follows:

Concerning expenditures, the scale was held strictly in check through thorough reductions in and rationalization of spending. General spending other than for national bonds and local allocation taxes, in particular, was tightened as much as possible. In accordance with the immediate basic policy concerning administrative and financial reforms adopted last August, subsidies and the like were readjusted and rationalized. Regarding the authorized strength of government employees, the government carried out reductions on a steady basis while cutting increases of personnel to the minimum in accordance with the sixth revised authorized strength reduction plan. As a result, the government carried out a drastic reduction in force, which numbered 1,434, in the staffing of administrative organizations.

As a result of these measures, the general account budget was scaled at 49.68 trillion yen, an increase of 6.2 percent over the original budget for the preceding fiscal year. Of this total, general spending was scaled at 32.62 trillion yen, or a 1.8-percent increase over the original budget for the preceding fiscal year. It is the first time since 1955 and 1956 that the increases in the general account budget and general spending were held to such low levels.

Concerning revenues, because of the changes in the economic situation and other factors, the natural increase in revenues forecast for 1982 is anticipated to run about 700 billion yen short of the natural increase envisaged under the midterm prospect for finance, which was used as a reference for making the zero ceiling decision. Therefore, to make up for the shortage in conformity with the actual state of the economy, the following measures were taken:

Efforts were made to increase nontax income as much as possible. The taxation system was reviewed with the aim of making up for the shortage that still remained after those efforts. In other words, in view of the importance of securing [words indistinct] the tax burden, the government plans to readjust and rationalize the special taxation measures -- mainly those which are due to expire -- and, at the same time, strengthen taxation of public bonds. Concerning corporate taxes, even the rate of transfer prescribed under law for bad debt reserves was lowered, and efforts will be made to reduce the role of the yen in the yen currency system. In the area of tax administration, the government is resolved to continue its efforts to bring about a more appropriate and fairer tax administration by winning the people's confidence and cooperation.

As I stated earlier, the government set the amount of public bonds to be issued at 10.44 trillion yen, or a decrease of 1.83 trillion yen from the original budget for the preceding fiscal year. The decrease breaks down to 1.561 trillion yen in special public bonds and 269 billion yen in public bonds for construction. As a result, the amount of special public bonds to be issued is set at 3.924 trillion yen, and the amount of public bonds to be issued for construction is set at 6.516 trillion yen.

Those public bonds reduced did not become special public bonds primarily because of the following reasons: In deciding on whether to approve or reject budget demands submitted by ministries and agencies under the zero ceiling policy, the government respected voluntary efforts made by each ministry or agency. Also,the ministries and agencies adjusted their demands by such means as cutting expenses for facilities requiring construction bonds as financial sources. The government also kept spending for public works at the same level as the preceding fiscal year. However, since increases in the revenues from specific financial sources to be appropriated for public works were anticipated by the Construction Ministry and other offices, shortages in financial sources were reduced. Therefore, public bonds for construction can be cut back.

If we try to cut back 1.83 trillion yen in special public bonds alone under these circumstances, we must further cut back the amount of increase in general spending. The government found this impossible to carry out because, under the zero ceiling policy of allocating the same budget as in the preceding year in the face of increased financial demands, budget demands had already undergone careful examination. As a matter of fact, it was very difficult to tighten spending further because the influence would be great.

The government did not drastically slash spending for energy measures, economic cooperation, etc, which were exempted from the zero ceiling, because they are important government policy areas. At any rate, the zero ceiling policy was upheld and there is no change whatsoever in the government goal of extricating itself from special public bonds by 1984. The government intends to continue exerting its utmost efforts to achieve that goal.

Regarding the issuance of special public bonds, the government plans to submit to you a bill concerning special measures for the issuance of public bonds in 1982.

In planning for financial investments and loans, the government strived to utilize private funds in view of the present difficult situation, to curb increases in scale by such means as reviewing the substance of business and the objects of loans, and to allocate funds effectively on a priority principle with the aim of meeting policy needs. As a result, the financial investment and loan plans for fiscal 1982 are set at 20.2888 trillion yen, or a 4.1-percent increase over the original plan for the preceding fiscal year.

Next, I will dwell on major expenses. Despite the difficult financial situation, the government plans to work out priority measures for those areas that need to be substantiated from the medium- and long-range viewpoints. In other words, the government plans to give more substance to spending for energy measures, for the promotion of science and technology, for economic cooperation and so forth in view of their importance.

Regarding defense spending, the government plans to steadily build up defense capabilities on the basis of the outline of the defense plan while taking into consideration the international situation and other factors affecting Japan. As for spending for social insurance and education, the government paid careful attention to key policies.

Regarding social insurance in particular, the government plans to further strive to amplify measures for the mentally and physically handicapped, implement the social insurance system and rationalize the distribution of burden, while steadily carrying out various welfare policies.

In the public works area, the budget was pegged to the same level as in the preceding fiscal year, but the government will strive to increase the amount of loans for housing construction and thus amplify measures for housing.

In the area of local finance, the government of course plans to exercise care not to let proper management be hindered, but the local public organizations are also requested to strive to manage their finances properly.

I wish to take this opportunity to briefly explain the fiscal 1981 supplementary budget bill submitted to the Diet earlier. The government decided to work out measures for the rehabilitation of disasters, agricultural insurance, pay hikes and other matters of particular importance brought about by various factors arising after the formulation of the original budget. In raising the necessary funds for the additional expenditure, the government took great pains under the present severe financial situation. Under the tight-money budget, the government decided to further cut back spending, which had already been decided on, and to strive to increase revenues from sources other than taxes, thus raising as much funds as possible and appropriating them to meet expenses for pay hikes and other additional financial demands. However, since it was necessary to work out emergency steps to help rehabilitate, as early as possible, the damage caused by disasters of 1981, the worst damage in history, it was inevitable that the necessary funds would be raised by issuing additional public bonds to meet the required costs.

Next, turning to revenues from taxes and stamps for this fiscal year, a decrease of about 400 billion yen in revenues is expected as inevitable because of the anticipated decreases in commodity taxes and revenue stamps, which are levied in proportion to prices or the volume of business dealings. This forecast is made because the commodity prices remain more stable than anticipated.

Believing that it would be appropriate to make up for the revenue shortages incidental to such unexpected changes in the economic situation in a supplementary budget, the government decided to issue additional special public bonds.

The government attempted to achieve the goal of reducing the issuance of public bonds by 2 trillion yen in the fiscal 1981 budget, regarding that year as the first year of financial reconstruction. However, due to changes in the economic situation, the government had to partially alter the goal and could not attain it completely. This is regrettable, but, on the other hand, this is a result of price stability, which was far better than anticipated, or a situation desirable for the stability of national life. Therefore, I hope that you will accept it as an inevitable measure. [applause] Thus, the revised general account supplementary budget for fiscal 1981 was set at 47.125 trillion yen in both revenue and expenditure, or a 337.2 billion yen increase compared with the original budget.

In the above, I have stated only an outline of the fiscal 1982 budget and the fiscal 1981 supplementary budget. Next, I will dwell on the government's basic view of dealing with immediate policies. In dealing with the present domestic and external economic situations, I am planning to manage the economy this year with the following two basic goals, in addition to the aim of financial reconstruction, which I mentioned earlier: The first goal is to accelerate the recovery of business, centering on the domestic demand in the private sector, with price stability as its nucleus. Prices are showing calm trends. Since price stability is the key to the stability of national life, the government will continue its effort to stabilize prices through its financial and loan policies.

Turning to business, although the pace of the recovery of the domestic demand is slow, the situation is expected to gradually improve and become increasingly bright. In the fiscal 1982 budget, although the financial situation is difficult, the government worked out measures to increase the amount of loans to be provided by the housing loan corporation and other taxation measures with a view to helping promote housing construction.

In public investments, the government strove to expand the volume of work by effectively distributing financial sources, by amplifying unaided projects of local government and by utilizing private capital.

Regarding monetary policy, since August 1981 the government has been taking a set of measures to relax monetary restrictions. In December last year, the official discount rate was lowered for the fourth time and, as a result, interest rates in general, including those on subsidies, were lowered. In carrying out its monetary policy in the days to come, the government intends to work out appropriate and flexible measures by taking prices, business, the overseas economic situation and other economic trends as a whole into consideration.

The second goal is to promote harmonious economic relations with other countries, and thus contribute to the development of the world economy. Through trade, capital exchanges and other activities, the world economy has become increasingly interdependent. Since April last year Japan's current account balance has been running a surplus and, against this background, the Euro-American countries have been strongly asking us to redress the trade imbalance.

The source of the vitality of the world economy lies in free trade. In this connection, Japan, for its part, should actively promote it, thus contributing to the harmonious development of the world economy. From this viewpoint, the government recently adopted a package of external economic measures to open up the market substantially, including import promotion and export measures.

Regarding tariffs in particular, the government decided to strive for their reduction with a view to facilitating the opening of our market. That is, the government decided to take steps to revise tariffs, including the implementation of the gradual lowering of tariff rates, as agreed on at the Tokyo round, 2 years ahead of the agreed upon schedule, uniformly, without exception and in addition to those scheduled for next year.

In view of the fact that the repayment of crude costs to oil-producing nations is contorting the world economy, I think that it is necessary for Japan to continue playing its role actively with respect to the reflux of oil money, with a view of smoothing world trade.

Supporting developing countries in their self-help efforts for economic development will not only contribute to improving national welfare and stabilizing national life in those countries, but will be instrumental in insuring a balanced growth and stability for the world economy as a whole. From this viewpoint, and also from the viewpoint of sharing the international burden, the government decided to strive to steadily expand economic cooperation despite the severe financial situation. At the same time, the government decided to exercise adequate care for its effective implementation and continue striving to attain the medium-range goal of the overseas development assistance program.

For the smooth development of the world economy, the stability of international currencies is an indispensable factor. The yen's exchange rate is expected to fluctuate basically in the direction of a high yen, reflecting the various favorable fundamental conditions of our economy. The government intends to keep in close contact with other countries concerned and strive to keep the yen's exchange rate stable.

Since the war, Japan has successfully overcome a number of trials and attained the present economic prosperity and stability. This prosperous and stable economic society is a precious asset, which we can proudly pass on to our offspring. This prosperity and stability is not something that can be maintained by Japan alone, in isolation from the world economy.

Japan is a nation that lacks resources, but it has built its economic strength to account for 10 percent of the world's gross national product. Japan exercises no small amount of influence on the world economy. In this connection, I think that it is important that we awaken to the fact that the Japanese economy cannot survive in isolation from the world economy, and actively fulfill a role and obligations befitting our country. Another important task in ensuring a lasting stable prosperity is financial rehabilitation. Although the course toward financial rehabilitation is rugged and arduous, we are already moving steadfastly on the right track toward it.

An economy is a living thing and, as such, it has both upturns and downturns. It also experiences rainy days and windy days. Accordingly, the measures for achieving financial rehabilitation may be quick or slow in showing results. Nevertheless, we must withstand pain and patiently strive for financial rehabilitation. To do so is a mission assigned to our generation, and also a duty imposed upon me, charged with national finance. Bearing this tremendous duty in mind, I am of the resolve to continue devoting all my energy to financial rehabilitation, with the goal of extricating ourselves from dependence on special public bonds by 1984. I fervently solicit the understanding and cooperation of each and every member of our nation. [applause]

SUZUKI CALLS FOR INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC STUDY

OW300545 Tokyo KYODO in English 0530 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 30 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Saturday instructed his Cabinet officers to study ways Japan can help promote international cooperation to revitalize the stagnant economies of advanced countries. Suzuki issued the instruction at the ministerial meeting on economic policies.

A top government spokesman later told reporters Japan would propose in the future the establishment of a new international institution to replace the Bretton Woods system that, in effect, collapsed following the first international oil crisis of October 1973. The Bretton Woods system, centered on the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, was established in 1945 under an agreement reached by the United States and other countries in a conference at the New Hampshire resort the year before.

The spokesman, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa, added, however, that it would be extrememly difficult to decide when to make such a proposal. Miyazawa also indicated it is almost unlikely that Prime Minister Suzuki will make such a proposal at the next summit meeting in Paris on June 4 by the seven major industrial democracies.

NODONG SINMUN DENOUNCES U.S. ENVOY'S SPEECH

SK310302 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2254 GMT 30 Jan 82

[NODONG SINMUN 31 January commentary: "Sophistry Designed To Justify Policy of Occupation"]

[Text] To safeguard peace in Korea and Asia and achieve the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification, it is fundamental and urgent to withdraw U.S. imperialist aggressor troops from South Korea. Ignoring this, the U.S. imperialist aggressors make their scheme for aggression and war more blatant with each passing day, maintaining their hold on South Korea.

This was manifested in the speech U.S. Ambassador to South Korea Walker delivered on 26 January at the American Women's Club in Seoul. He discussed the geostrategic importance of South Korea, the integrity of U.S.-South Korea treaties and U.S. commitments to South Korea. By so doing he exposed the intent of the U.S. imperialists to occupy and rule South Korea indefinitely.

It is no secret that, being concerned with the strategic importance of Korea, the U.S. imperialists are holding on to South Korea as a colonial military base and a bridgehead, trying to realize their ambitions for aggression against the northern half of the republic and other places in Asia.

The U.S. imperialists are reinforcing their occupation forces, bringing into South Korea the latest combat hardware and operational equipment and modernizing -- or arming with lethal weapons -- South Korea's puppet armed forces, their local mercenaries. All this proceeds from an aggressive strategic plan.

To justify their aggression, Walker made a fuss about the North's military superiority. This is fiction and can convince no one. No matter how much he babbles about the North's military superiority and the threat of an invasion from the North, the present situation on the Korean Peninsula is the exact opposite. When a comparison is made between us and South Korea in terms of populations -- the source of manpower -- and armaments and in terms of our military strength vis-a-vis the U.S. imperialists' cum the South Korean puppets, any talk about the North's military superiority and the threat of an invasion from the North becomes a preposterous sophistry and distortion of the facts.

The threat of a northward invasion by the U.S. imperialists and the puppets, rather than the threat of a southward invasion by the North, is what actually exists. Allegations of the North's military superiority are nothing but a trick to justify the U.S. imperialists' criminal occupation of South Korea and their war preparations.

To conceal their occupation of South Korea, Walker brazenly said the United States does not exercise the authority of a governor general in South Korea and described South Korea as an independent sovereign state -- as if it were. This is the culmination of absurdly reversing black and white. The U.S. imperialists occupied South Korea militarily, have turned it into a colonial military base and have in their hands all the authorities, including the right to military command -- meaning that the real rulers in South Korea are the U.S. imperialists. This is the truth. Even a child knows this.

We need not trouble ourselves to prove that the U.S. ambassador to South Korea is a de facto governor general and that the Government of South Korea -- a puppet regime established by the U.S. imperialists -- is a cover for their military occupation and colonial rule and a servant faithfully executing their policy of aggression.

That the U.S. imperialists describe South Korea as a sovereign state and talk absurdly of independence and sovereignty is but a clumsy political fraud to cover up their rule of the absolute rights in South Korea.

It is no accident that the U.S. ambassador to South Korea welcomed as a constructive initiative the so-called reunification proposal traitor Chon Tu-hwan announced on 22 January. The proposal advanced by traitor Chon Tu-hwan is an ugly product of the two Koreas policy of the U.S. imperialists who are trying to occupy and rule South Korea indefinitely, and the nation-selling policy of the South Korean puppets who have entrusted to the U.S. imperialists South Korea as a colonial military base. In return for this they are trying to seek long-term power under the protection of the master. This is a drama Chon Tu-hwan -- the puppet -- plays according to the script written by the U.S. imperialists, which became all the more clear by the remarks of Walker. In other words the United States is playing the ridiculous drama of welcoming and applauding what it worked out behind the scenes.

The U.S. imperialists should realize that shoddy frauds and tricks can neither conceal nor justify their criminal occupation and colonial rule in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and colonial rule run counter to the unanimous desire of the Korean people and the world's peace-loving people as well as the trend of the times. The U.S. imperialists' anachronistic occupation of South Korea must end.

If the U.S. imperialists, ignoring the desire of the people and the demand of the times, hold on to South Korea and adhere to the policy of aggression and war, they will be denounced and rejected as aggressors and war fanatics. The U.S. imperialists should abandon the policy of aggression and war, promptly withdraw from South Korea and take their interfering hands away from Korea.

FURTHER COMMENT ON CHON'S REUNIFICATION PLAN

GFTUK Leader's Statement

SK300600 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 29 Jan 82

[29 January statement by Kim Pong-chu, chairman of the Central Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea -- read by announcer]

[Text] Reunifying the divided fatherland is the unanimous will and desire of our working class and all the Korean people. With each passing day, this irrepressible, ardent desire for reunification has been fused into a trend for enacting the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], set forth by the great leader. Because of its rational, practical and fair nature, this proposal has become a banner encouraging compatriots at home and abroad in the struggle to achieve the country's peaceful reunification and a powerful force helping the world's progressive people participate in the movement to support our people's cause for reunification.

Feeling uneasy about the great vitality of the proposal for founding the DCRK, the South Korean rulers, recently making a proposal to stop the influence of our proposal for reunification from spreading, have foolishly maneuvered to replace our rational proposal with their own. However, this has only revealed the ludicrous appearance of those who are wriggling in a corner.

As is well known, the proposal advanced by the South Korean ruler is a sham reunification proposal unworthy of discussion for the country's peaceful reunification and is a plan for making division permanent. The proposal for achieving reunification through an election, leaving foreign aggressor forces in South Korea, is a preposterous idea. It is like raising sheep by bringing a jackal into a house. The plan for convening a consultative meeting with those representing the desire of the people, drafting a constitution and conducting a national referendum under the fascist military dictatorial system is nonsense.

Foreign forces and the people's self-determination and fascism and democracy cannot coexist. In South Korea, the U.S. imperialists, seizing power everywhere, including the political, economic, cultural and military sectors, pose as masters. The fascist military elements, wielding bayonets, patronized by them, have strangled human rights and democracy. How can we conduct a democratic election to reflect the desire of all fellow countrymen? How can we produce results benefitting the people? The elections which have been conducted in South Korea since the 15 August liberation, resembling annual functions, are evidence. As a matter of fact, many patriots and democrats have been dragged to prisons, tried and executed in South Korea for demanding the country's reunification by those rulers who are clamoring about elections through democratic procedures and for the people's self-determination. Workers have been arrested, imprisoned and cruelly punished en masse on charges of demanding the basic rights to existence. This is the situation in South Korea today.

The ghosts of coal miners who were subjected to a bloody suppression at the Tongwon colliery in the Chongson District, Kangwon Province, South Korea; workers in Pusan and Masan; and thousands of workers who were slaughtered in Hwasun and Kwangju denounce the fascist dictatorial maniacs who have submerged South Korea in a sea of blood.

The desire for democracy and the fatherland's reunification has become an epithet for the toleration of communism by the fascist elements who have been patronized by the United States. This desire has supplied a clue for murderous trials. It is indisputable that a free election cannot be conducted under an outrageous fascist military system strangling reunification and democracy.

In particular, the South Korean authorities, in advancing their proposal, have demanded the signing of an agreement on basic relations between the North and South, such as the mutual respect of treaties and agreements signed by the North and South Korean sides with foreign countries -- which they have brought up under the pretext of noninterference in the internal affairs of the other side -- the establishment of permament liaison representative offices in Pyongyang and Seoul and the maintenance of an armistice agreement. This clearly reveals their splittist nature.

This proposal, ostensibly designed for an agreement between the North and South, is actually aimed at transforming the relations between the North and South into those between different peoples, not relations within a nation-state -- an unabashedly naked scenario for permament division designed to rationalize two Koreas.

In addition, the proposal was not a creation of their own but one borrowed from another country and unsuitable to our country's reality. In an attempt to frustrate the influence of our rational and realistic proposal for reunification, the South Korean rulers made fraudulent use of a method designed by foreigners suitable to their reality, presenting it as if it were their own creation. We cannot but view the South Korean rulers' acts as miserable and childish. Such acts by the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is attempting to mislead public opinion with an untimely proposal, show how the clique has been cornered by the great vitality of our proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK].

Viewing the proposal for permanent division propounded by the South Korea rulers as an open mockery of our people's unanimous aspiration for reunification and as a vicious challenge to the nation's cause for reunification, I, in the name of the entire working class of the northern half of the republic, strongly reject it.

The most rational method for correctly solving the question of national reunification suitable to our country's reality and conditions is to found a confederal state, leaving the two different systems in the North and South intact.

To achieve the proposal for founding the DCRK is the way to accomplish at the earliest date the cause of national reunification in accordance with the fundamental interests of our people and the concrete conditions of our country, while taking into consideration the complicated and changing situation around us.

No matter how frenziedly the South Korean rulers may try to disregard this rational proposal for reunification of ours and not matter with what efforts they may try to replace our realistic proposal for reunification with a proposal which is far-fetched and unsuitable to the conditions of our country, all the Korean people will surely greet the day of reunification by founding an independent, neutral and peaceful confederal republic on the land of 3,000 li.

If the South Korean rulers, too, have a genuine desire for reunification, they should, before coming up with any proposals, put an end to the forcible occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists — the fundamental obstacle to the national reunification — practice democracy in South Korea and abandon the policy of anticommunist confrontation. They also should apologize to the nation for the massacre and atrocities committed in Kwangju, release all political prisoners, such as Kim Tae-chung, and allow complete political freedom to those who are banned from participating in political activities.

What matters now is wholly the attitude of the South Korean rulers.

We, the working class in the northern half of the republic, will continue to keenly watch the attitudes of the South Korean rulers.

NODONG SINMUN Commentary

SK020740 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2252 GMT 1 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 2 February commentary: "Absurd Remarks By a Splittist Assault Unit"]

[Text] Puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan has played a game of putting the Central Committee for National Unfication [CCNU] to the fore to gain support for his proposal. In its statement this council praised the proposal advanced by traitor Chon Tu-hwan as an epochal measure and said it has won support at home and abroad. It tried to attribute the cause for failure to achieve Korea's reunification elsewhere. This is another game of false, slanderous propaganda by those who have habitually distorted facts. Now we feel it necessary to discuss the CCNU, which has issued a statement. As is well known, this council is one of the figurehead bodies which traitor Chon Tu-hwan has fabricated to conceal his maneuvers to oppose the country's reunification and make division permanent. While hoisting a signboard for reunification this committee includes no one who truly loves the country and the people or who wants to achieve reunification. There is not a single person in this organization who represents the South Korean people's aspirations. The CCNU is a group of Chon Tu-hwan's cronies who serve traitor Chon Tu-hwan. It is comprised of wicked anticommunist elements and human trash. This organization is a private, government-sponsored body which tries to cover up the puppet clique's treacherous crimes.

It is ridiculous for traitor Chon Tu-hwan -- a heinous renegade of the people and splittist -- to talk about reunification. By the same token it is preposterous for a figurehead body to babble about reunification. From beginning to end the council's statement is devoted to preposterous distortions, fictions and slander. Falsehood and fictions are only necessary for those who try to justify their crimes. Despite the game played by the figurehead body, traitor Chon Tu-hwan's proposal has been subjected to derision and denunciation since its publication. Instead of referring to the question of forcing U.S. forces to withdraw from South Korea — a principal question which should be solved without fail to achieve the country's reunification -- the question of democratizing South Korean society and the question of abandoning the policy for anticommunist confrontation, he has made a proposal for a general election — which is not feasible -- and for seeking two countries and two peoples. How can this be in the interest of reunification? It is very impudent for the council to babble about something epochal in describing a sham reunification proposal which ignores the fundamentals in resolving the reunification question.

Today fair public opinion and the broad strata of social circles are unanimously denouncing and rejecting traitor Chon Tu-hwan's proposal as a trick designed to avoid international criticism following the mass slaughter in Kwangju and as a wicked, abominable plot for Korea's perpetual division. It is indisputably clear that we cannot support the outrageous, wicked splittist plot of those who try to betray the country and the people and hope for division. The world has assessed our stand of resolutely rejecting the puppets' proposal as just and natural.

No matter how zealous traitor Chon Tu-hwan may be in propagandizing his proposal by mobilizing the rabble he will never be able to conceal his true color as a splittist. The council has picked a quarrel with someone by absurdly shirking responsibility for failing to achieve our country's reunification. This is an act of a thief shouting "stop thief!"

The world knows that we have advanced many practical and rational proposals for achieving Korea's independent and peaceful reunification and made sincere efforts to implement these proposals. The proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] -- a patriotic, fair and just proposal reflecting relations between the North and South, the basic interest and desire of our people and the demand for world peace -- manifests our basic and sincere stand and work for the fatherland's reunification.

The U.S. imperialists, who are maneuvering to occupy and dominate South Korea forever and achieve their wild desire to invade all of Korea, and the successive puppets, who have pursued a splittist policy to achieve their wild desire for power and wealth by hindering reunification and prolonging division, are completely responsible for the failure of our country to achieve reunification and for its division. Because of puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan's maneuvers for division, instigated by the U.S. imperialists, our proposal for founding a confederal state has not been implemented despite active support from all fellow countrymen and the world's people. The proposal, which he has recently advanced, is a gibberish he has prattled in accordance with the scenario prepared by the U.S. imperialists.

It is intolerable that the puppet clique has babbled about generosity. This is an absurd utterance by a shameless traitor. No matter how eagerly traitor Chon Tu-hwan tries to mobilize a disorderly crowd of splittists to propagandize his proposal and slander someone, he will be not able to gain anything by this act. He will only reveal his dirty nature as the enemy of reunification and an assault unit for a splittist line.

If puppet Chon Tu-hwan has any desire for reunification, instead of resorting to this filthy game he should demand the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea, stop hindering the democratization of South Korean society and abandon a policy for anticommunist confrontation. At the same time he should immediately release all democrats and patriotic people he has unjustly arrested and imprisoned and apologize for the crimes he has committed against the people. People will not change their opinion of him until he does this.

VRPR CALLS 20-POINT PLAN 'TRICK,' 'CLUMSY DRAMA'

SK020936 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] On 1 February the minister of the unification board, Son Chae-sik, issued a so-called statement to the North and proposed a 20-point pilot project. He clamored about the opening of a highway between Seoul and Pyongyang, the establishment of a tourist zone in the area north of Mt Sorak and south of Mt Kumgang, construction of joint sports facilities inside the demilitarized zone and so forth. Proposing such pilot projects 10 days after Chon Tu-hwan's 22 January proposal -- a splittist proposal -- is a trick to soothe the voices of the international community opposing and rejecting the camouflaged reunification proposal and to escape isolation at home and abroad. It is another clumsy drama insulting our people's aspiration for reunification.

The 20-point pilot project proposed by the minister of the unification board are a modification of the 22 January proposal for division and are not worthy of consideration. In a nutshell this is a splittist political scheme to obscure the basic problem with a secondary problem. As is well known, all the people in the South and North and the people of the world want to end the tragedy of division, which has continued for 37 years, and to achieve national reunification.

This problem can be resolved only be establishing a unified state in conformity with the desire and will of our masses under the three principles of national reunification -- independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity.

The proposal for founding a confederal state put forward by the North is the best way to achieve reunification in conformity with the will and desire of the popular masses. In fact, under the present circumstances confronting the South and North the most reasonable and realistic way for reunification is to achieve the country's reunification by founding a confederal state through the establishemtn of a unified national government on the condition that the ideologies and systems in the South and the North are recognized and tolerated.

This is the only way to achieve national unity while leaving the systems and ideologies in the South and the North as they are. It is a just and fair way acceptable to the South and the North. The 10-point political program to be carried out by the confederal state which was proposed by the North includes detailed policies to be implemented in the political, diplomatic, economic, social, cultural and military fields after the country is reunified by founding a confederal state. In other words, the 10-point political program proposed by the North clearly includes the practical policies to be carried out in all fields, such as visits by personages from various circles, exchanges in the fields of science and technology, sports and culture, joint development and natural resources, joint research on national history and aboliiton of military facilities.

Despite this, ignoring this reasonable reunification proposal by the North, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is clamoring about the 20-point pilot project, pretending they are for national reunification. This is nothing but a preposterous political trick to cover up its splittist nature and mislead public opinion at home and abroad. If the Chon Tu-hwan ring sincerely wants reunification, it should first of all remove obstacles hindering reunification. Nevertheless, there is not a single word on the withdrawal of the U.S. forces -- the basic obstacle to reunification -- from South Korea, in not only the current proposal but also Chon Tu-hwan's 22 January reunification proposal.

The U.S. forces in South Korea are the ringleaders of the division of fatherland and the basic obstacles to national reunification. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is clamoring about exchanges while uttering not a word on the withdrawal of the U.S. forces from South Korea. This vividly exposes its wild ambition to perpetuate division under the mask of reunification.

Under the present situation in which the schemes for preparing for a war of northward invasion are being perpetrated, while keeping the U.S. forces in South Korea and maintaining the military treaty and agreements concluded with the United States, how can we open the lifeline of reunification merely by conducting joint research on the ecology and joint development of tourist zones?

If they really want reunification, why do they say nothing about the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea? Why are they afraid to discuss abolishing military treaties with the United States? This means they have no desire for reunification.

If reunification is to be achieved, an atmosphere in which all people can freely participate in discussions on and movements for reunification should be provided. In other words, democratic politics, in which the institutional devices of attacking and obstructing the reunification force [tongil seryok] are eliminated and all parties and factions and personages of all segments and all classes freely participate in the discussions on and movement for reunification, should be guaranteed. Nonetheless, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has not uttered a word about this.

If they really want reunification, why do they not say a word to abolish fascist evil laws, such as the national security law, social protection law, and the law on assembly and demonstration -- laws that had been enacted to suppress the reunification force? And why can they not say they will release the democratic figures including Kim Tae-chung, students and patriots urging reunification and legalize the activities of the democratic parties and organizations, including our Revolutionary Party for Reunification (RPR).

They have arrested and imprisoned all politicians in this land who have been advocating reunification and banned them from political activities. They have banned the activities of democratic parties and organizations including our RPR which are fighting for the rights and interests of the South Korean people and for reunification with all kinds of evil laws. It is nothing but empty talk for them to babble about dialogues or exchange of visits.

If reunification is to be achieved the North-South confrontation policy should end. If anyone opposes or smashes the great principle of reunification with military strength, national unity would never be achieved, division would be made permanent and only the horrors of fratricidal war would ensue. This notwithstanding they did not utter even a word about ending the anticommunist confrontation policy.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring's babbling about a hot line or a joint stadium, while advocating reunification through victory over communism and annihilation of communism, can be construed as revealing its hypocritical nature. It is clear that the latest 20-point pilot project put forth by the Chon Tu-hwan ring are not for reunification.

Because the latest splittist proposal by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan has been strongly opposed and rejected by our masses and in the international community and the North's proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and Vice President Kim Il's statement have been supported and welcomed at home and abroad, they have devised such a political trick because their splittist nature has been revealed and they have been cornered. In other words the Chon Tu-hwan ring is staging a clumsy political farce to mislead public opinion at home and abroad and to fool people, while veiling its splittist proposal against the country and people with reunification.

If the Chon Tu-hwan ring really wants reunification it should not mislead public opinion at home and abroad with such nonsense but should apologize for its splittist machinations and brutality in massacring the people. Furthermore it should withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea, abolish fascist evil laws, guarantee the free activities of the democratic parties and organizations including the RPR, unconditionally and immediately release democratic figures and patriots including Kim Tae-chung and immediately end the anti-communist confrontation policy.

However it may try to disguise itself and mislead public opinion at home and abroad, the Chon Tu-hwan ring cannot cover up its splittist nature against the country and people. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should not resort to such petty guile but should step down from power without delay in conformity with the unanimous demand and desire of people at home and abroad.

COVERAGE OF KIM YONG-NAM VISIT TO BANGLADESH

Arrives 29 Jan

SK020443 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2206 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 2 (KCNA) -- The delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau, and secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, arrived in Dacca on January 29 for a visit to Bangladesh, according to a report.

It was met at the airport by members of the National Standing Committee of the Nationalist Party of Bangladesh, vice-chairmen of the National Executive Committee, joint general secretaries and secretaries of the party and other personages concerned.

DPRK Ambassador to Bangladesh Chong Tae-kun and officials of his embassy were also present at the airport.

The delegation left Bangkok on the same day after a visit to Thailand. It was seen off at the airport by Thiem Chaiyanandana, second deputy speaker of the Lower House of Thailand, the spokesman and the deputy spokesman of the Democratic Party of Thailand, democratic members of the parliament, the Bangladesh ambassador to Thailand and officials of the DPRK mission in Bangkok.

Meets Prime Minister

SK020501 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2209 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 2 (KCNA) -- Shah Azizur Rahman, Bangladesh prime minister, on January 30 met the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the Central Committee of the WPK, on a visit to Bangladesh, according to a report.

The prime minister asked the head of the delegation to convey his warm greetings and those of the Nationalist Party of Bangladesh to the great leader of the Korean People's President Kim Il-song. He expressed the belief that the visit of the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea to Bangladesh would greatly contribute to the development of the relations between the two parties and the two countries. He also expressed satisfaction with the excellent development of the friendly and cooperative relations between Bangladesh and Korea.

The conversation took place in a friendly atmosphere.

Present on the occasion were Chong Tae-kun, DPRK ambassador to Bangladesh, and Ekramul Haq and Nazmul Huda, members of the National Standing Committee of the Nationalist Party of Bangladesh, and the international secretary of the National Executive Committee of the party.

Signing of Cultural Accord

SK021024 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1018 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 2 (KCNA) -- A working plan for cultural exchange between the Governments of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the People's Republic of Bangladesh for 1982-83 was signed in Dacca on January 26, according to a report. The plan was signed, on our side, by the ambassador of our country to Bangladesh, and, on the opposite side, by the secretary of the ministry of information, broadcasting, sports and culture.

YUN KI-POK, KWP DELEGATION RETURN FROM AFRICA

SK020430 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2201 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 2 (KCNA) -- The delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Yun Ki-pok, alternate member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the Central Committee of the WPK, returned home on February 1 by plane after attending celebrations of the 15th anniversary of Togolese national liberation and visiting Benin and Nigeria. The delegation was met at the airport by Comrades Hwang Chang-yop and Cho Yong-kuk, and other personages concerned.

SCIENTIFIC DELEGATION FROM USSR PAYS VISIT

Meeting With Heng Samrin

BK010904 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1437 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 31 Jan (SPK) -- Thanks to the moral and material assistance of Vietnam, the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries, the Kampuchean people have achieved many successes in the restoration of the country, Council of State Chairman Heng Samrin said during a conversation in Phnom Penh on 30 January with the Soviet delegation led by Dr Long Seam [name as received], principal scientific collaborator of the USSR Academy of Sciences. Chairman Heng Samrin talked about the destruction suffered by Kampuchea during the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. Following liberation, however, the chairman affirmed, and thanks to the aid accorded by Vietnam, the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries, the Kampuchean people have achieved great successes in the restoration of the country. Faced with our victories, the Beijing expansionists and other reactionaries do not want to let the Kampuchean people live in peace. They are seeking by all means to sabotage Kampuchea's revolutionary gains. The Kampuchean people are determined to fight against all of them and continue to build the PRK into an independent country gradually progressing toward socialism.

Dr Long Seam affirmed that during his visit to Kampuchea, he could understand the reality in the country. He promised to do his best to contribute to Kampuchea's reconstruction.

Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State, and Pen Navouth, minister of national education, took part in the conversation.

Signing of Protocol

BK010854 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1435 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 31 Jan (SPK) -- Pen Navouth, minister of national education, and Long Seam [name as received], principal scientific collaborator of the USSR Academy of Sciences and head of a visiting Soviet delegation, signed a protocol in Phnom Penh on Saturday [30 January] dealing with Kampuchea-USSR bilateral scientific cooperation. Present at the signing ceremony was O.V. Bostorin, USSR ambassador to Kampuchea.

USSR ECONOMIC RELATIONS DELEGATION VISITS

Signing of Cooperation Report

BK010847 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1434 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 31 Jan (SPK) -- An official report on the cooperation between Kampuchea and the USSR was signed in Phnom Penh on 30 January by Ti Yav, vice minister of planning, and Minayev, member of the State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations under the USSR Council of Ministers. O.V. Bostorin, USSR ambassador to Kampuchea, was present at the signing ceremony.

Conclusion of Visit

BK021000 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1439 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 1 Feb (SPK) -- The delegation of the USSR State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations led by Vice Chairman Minayev left Phnom Penh today at the end of its visit to Kampuchea.

It was seen off by Ti Yav, vice minister of planning, and other cadres. O.V. Bostorin, USSR ambassador to Kampuchea, was present at the delegation's departure. During its stay, the delegation was received by Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning. It also met with Yit Kim Seng, Pen Navouth and Kong Samol, ministers of health, national education and agriculture, respectively. An official report on cooperation between Kampuchea and the USSR was signed at the end of the delegation's visit. The delegation visited the Tuol Sleng school-prison, the former royal palace, the mass graves at Cheung Ek, the Kampuchean-USSR Friendship Hospital and the Kampuchea-USSR Institute of Technology.

SOVIET KOMSOMOL DELEGATION VISITS PHNOM PENH

Arrival of Group

BK270651 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0405 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 26 Jan (SPK) -- A Soviet Komsomol delegation led by its first secretary, Dergausov, arrived in Phnom Penh on 25 January for a friendly visit to Kampuchea at the invitation of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Organization. On hand to welcome the delegation upon its arrival were Kang Nem, vice chairman of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Organization, and other personalities. Soviet Ambassador to Kampuchea O.V. Bostorin was present at the arrival of the delegation.

Meeting of Youth Groups

BK300742 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0405 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jan (SPK) -- The Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Association held a meeting at the Kampuchean-USSR Friendship Institute of Technology in Phnom Penh on Wednesday [27 January] in honor of the Soviet Komsomol delegation led by Komsomol First Secretary Dergausov. Attending the meeting was Yos Por, secretary general of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] and chairman of the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association. O.V. Bostorin, USSR ambassador to Kampuchea, was also present. Nuch Than, chairman of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Association, stressed the great efforts of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth in the defense and reconstruction of the country in its advance toward socialism. The young Kampucheans, he affirmed, are determined to firmly fight against the attempts of the imperialists and other reactionaries opposed to Kampuchea.

Dergausov highly appreciated the achievements scored by the Kampuchean people since the toppling of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. He condemned the intervention in Kampuchean's internal affairs by U.S. imperialism, Chinese expansionism and other reactionary forces. The Soviet people, he stressed, always support the just struggle of the Kampuchean people.

Departure of Delegation

BK300756 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1429 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 29 Jan (SPK) -- At the end of its 3-day visit to Kampuchea, the Soviet Komsomol delegation led by its first secretary, Dergausov, left Phnom Penh on Thursday, 28 January.

It was seen off by Nuch Than and Kang Nem, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Association. Aleksandr V. Bursov, first secretary of the USSR Embassy, was also present at the delegation's departure.

During its stay in Kampuchea, the delegation was received by Nuch Than, took in the meeting organized in its honor by the Kampuchean Revolutionary Youth Association and visited the Tuol Sleng school-prison, the former royal palace, the national museum, Orphanage No 1, a textile mill in Phnom Penh, the school of fine arts and the Bak Tuk School in Phnom Penh.

FURTHER REPORTS ON INDIAN DELEGATION'S VISIT

Visit to Battambang

BK280147 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0400 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 27 Jan (SPK) -- The interministerial delegation of the Republic of India led by Dr G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture, visited Battambang and Siem Reap Provinces on 23 and 24 January.

The people's committees of the two provinces informed the Indian guests of the progress made by their localities during the past 3 years. Dr G.V.K. Rao stressed that this progress reflected the Kampuchean people's efforts to do away with the vestiges of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. He affirmed India's firm assistance to the Kampuchean people in national defense and construction.

The Indian delegation visited a gunnysack factory, a textile plant, an exhibition and a museum in Battambang and toured the Angkor Wat and Baray temples in Siem Reap. The delegation was accompanied by Kong Samol, minister of agriculture. Jawant Raischadev, Indian charge d'affaires ad interim in Kampuchea, was also on hand.

Meeting With Khun Chhy

BK280149 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0403 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 27 Jan (SPK) -- Khun Chhy, minister of posts and communications, on Monday, 25 January, received in Phnom Penh the Indian interministerial delegation led by G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture. Khun Chhy spoke of the Kampuchean people's efforts to restore the communications networks destroyed by the Pol Pot clique. He expressed gratitude to the Indian Government and people for their moral and material assistance and support for the Kampuchean people's just struggle. Former Minister G.V.K. Rao emphasized India's stand of always assisting the Kampuchean people in national defense and reconstruction.

Kong Samol, minister of agriculture, attended the meeting. Jawant Raischadev, Indian charge d'affaires ad interim, was also present.

Meeting With Tang Saroem

BK290402 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1429 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 27 Jan (SPK) -- Tang Saroem, minister of trade, received in Phnom Penh on Tuesday, 26 January, Dr G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture and head of an interministerial delegation of the Republic of India, now visiting Kampuchea.

Minister Tang Saroem talked about the damage caused to the trade sector by the Pol Pot clique, and stressed that under the leadership of the KPRP and Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], and with the assistance of the socialist countries and progressive peoples in the world, the Kampuchean trade sector has overcome many difficulties in meeting the people's demands for essential goods in daily life.

Dr G.V.K. Rao reaffirmed the position of the Indian Government and people, which consists of allying with the Kampuchean people and providing assistance to the economic and cultural restoration in Kampuchea.

Conclusion of Visit

BK291017 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1426 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Jan (SPK) -- The Republic of India's interministerial delegation led by G.V.K. Rao, former minister of agriculture, left Phnom Penh today after its 8-day visit to the PRK. On hand to see the delegation off were Minister of Agriculture Kong Samol and other personalities. Also present at the delegation's departure was Jawant Raischadev, Indian charge d'affaires ad interim in Kampuchea.

While in Kampuchea, the delegation was received by Heng Samrin, KPRP Central Committee general secretary and chairman of the Council of State. It also met with Chea Soth, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; Hun Sen, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs; Khun Chhy, minister of posts and communications; and Tang Saroem, minister of trade. It visited Battambang and Siem Reap Provinces. A reception was given on Wednesday evening [27 January] by Council of Ministers Vice Chairman Chea Soth in honor of the Indian ministerial delegation.

KHIEU SAMPHAN MEETS WITH VISITING BUDDHIST MONK

BK220432 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 21 Jan 82

[Text] On the evening of 16 January 1982, Khieu Samphan, chairman of the state Presidium, prime minister and provisional chairman of the PDFGNUK, visited Preah Moha [ecclesiastical rank] The Thammavireah (Bel Long) who arrived in the Democratic Kampuchean region in the afternoon of the same day. The Venerable (Bel Long) is 92 years old. He lives in the United States and founded an institute for research on Buddhism in (?Stockton), California.

On behalf of the Kampuchean people, the Democratic Kampuchean National Army, guerrillas, and government, Prime Minister Khieu Samphan welcomed the venerable with strong emotion. He praised him for enduring, despite his age, his long journey to visit his beloved fatherland, which has suffered much from all the difficulties caused by the aggressive and genocidal war of the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies. Prime Minister Khieu Samphan said, "Your visit to our Democratic Kampuchean region is a great encouragement to our cadres and male and female combatants who are waging bloody battles on the battlefields against the aggressive and genocidal war of the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies." Preah Moha The (Bel Long) was very elated to visit his beloved fatherland after spending many years abroad. He praised the high and noble patriotic spirit of our leaders in our Democratic Kampuchean Government who gave up everything and live in suffering, lacking everything, and who are waging a firm struggle to defend the nation and liberate the fatherland from the grip of the Hanoi Vietnamese.

He was delighted with the wise political measures successfully adopted by the Democratic Kampuchean Government which were favorable factors in rallying national forces in order to struggle and liberate the nation. He also appealed to our compatriots inside and outside the country to unite with each other and try to implement Buddha's words. Buddha used to tell his disciples to love each other, unite with each other and help each other in difficult times by forgetting all past conflicts and differences in viewpoints. At the end, Preah Moha The (Bel Long) made merit for the Democratic Kampuchean leaders, our heroes and heroines who are determined to live or die with their nation and people in waging a valiant and tough struggle for the survival of their nation and race.

On 17 January 1982 at 1000, Prime Minister Khieu Samphan, with other Buddhist disciples in the village, offered food to Preah Moha The (Bel Long). Before that Khieu Samphan talked sincerely with the elders and our people who are all Buddhist disciples. Ieng Sary, deputy prime minister in charge of foreign affairs; Chhorn Hay, secretary of state of the Ministry of Telecommunications of the Democratic Kampuchean Government; and Mey Mann, deputy chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross, were with Prime Minister Khieu Samphan on this occasion.

AFP: SIHANOUK ON SUMMIT MEETING, COALITION

Call for Early Summit

OW290643 Hong Kong AFP in English 0613 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 29 Jan (AFP) -- Former Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk today called for an early summit meeting of the three ambodian anti-Vietnamese movements following the refusal of the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge to form a loose coalition. But the prince said it would be a miracle if a compromise solution could be found by the three movements -- his own National Front for the Liberation of the Khmer People, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front led by former Premier Son Sann, and the Khmer Rouge.

Speaking to the press here, Prince Sihanouk said that although he would like to see a tripartite summit meet as soon as possible, he would not personally attend if it were held anywhere other than in China or North Korea, since he did not have the money to go elsewhere. If the meeting were to be held in one of the five ASEAN countries -- Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore or Thailand -- the prince said he would be represented by one of his principle supporters, In Tam. Prince Sihanouk said he was ready to subscribe to any formula agreed to by the other two movements, but insisted that it would need a miracle to achieve a compromise between the Khmer Rouge and Son Sann. The anti-Vietnamese coalition would only be formed "after months and months, if ever," he said.

View of Coalition Prospects

OW291502 Hong Kong AFP in English 1453 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Excerpt] Beijing, 29 Jan (AFP) -- He [Sihanouk] said the "united front" formula, rejected by ASEAN as "smacking of communism," was in his view more practical than the proposed coalition government grouping the three Cambodian resistance groups. A "united front" would limit the risks of clashes between anti-Vietnamese Cambodians by rallying them around a single goal: "to unite our efforts to combat the Vietnamese, force them to return Cambodia to its independent status and to withdraw their forces from the country and let the Cambodian people [be] masters of Cambodia's destiny," he indicated.

He said he had not informed Chinese leaders of his proposal to hold a summit here, but added: "I'm convinced China will have no objection." Returning to the issue of how to form a coalition government, he suggested a "collegial system" under which each of the three groups would name a minister to run each ministry, with all decisions reached "by consensus."

SUPREME COMMANDER GIVES ARMED FORCES DAY SPEECH

BK260730 Bangkok Domestic Television Service in Thai 1340 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Speech given by Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon on the occasion of the Thai Armed Forces Day, 25 January -- recorded]

[Text] Good evening, dear compatriots: Today, 25 January, marks another anniversary of a significant day in Thailand's noble history. It was the day when King Naresuan the Great defeated the great army of our enemy in hand-to-hand combat. In order to commemorate King Naresuan the Great's heroism, the military has proclaimed the day "National Armed Forces Day" and is holding ceremonies in accordance with military tradition in Bangkok and the provinces to celebrate the occasion, as well as to pay homage to our ancestors, both soldiers and civilians, who have courageously sacrificed their lives for the national cause since the birth of our country.

On this important occasion, in my capacity as the supreme commander and on behalf of the commanders in chief of the three armed forces, I have been assigned by his excellency the defense minister to report to our respected compatriots on the progress and achievements of the Thai Armed Forces during the past year, as well as the major strategic policies for national defense and the plans and projects to be carried out by the armed forces, so that our respected compatriots will know about their armed forces and have confidence in them, since it is my belief that, for any of the armed forces to achieve a victory, its strategic policies and planning must first gain the people's support. The responsibility entrusted to the armed forces is a weighty burden broad in scope. Yet the armed forces realize that this is a most honorable and important duty, and they have not hesitated in assuming this duty.

The major tasks of the armed forces can be classified in the following three categories: national defense from external threats; internal security; and national development.

Concerning national defense from external enemy threats, during the past year the Thai Armed Forces have accelerated the efforts to develop the armed forces organization and defense system along troublesome or sensitive border areas. The efforts were made within the framework of the national defense plan -- for both the short and long term -- which has undergone regular reviews and adjustments in order to cope with the changing situation. The military has taken and will continue to take steps to expand the combat forces by establishing new units within the three armed forces and improving the deployment of certain units -- both regular and field units -- so that soldiers will be able to cope with external threats and deal with internal problems simultaneously. In improving the structure of the armed forces, we have also taken into consideration the development of our manpower, armament and logistics, with regard to both quantity and quality.

In our efforts to develop manpower, the military has attempted to provide additional training for the soldiers in order to improve their capability to conduct daily tasks as well as combat operations within their respective units, in combined operations with other armed forces units, or in a joint operation with our allies' armed forces. Also, in line with the policy of his majesty the king, who is the commander in chief of the Thai Armed Forces, the military has been trying to instill in our soldiers, both individually and by units, a sense of respect for leadership, a sense of responsibility and a sense of unity in practice and thought. This has been applied to all levels of the armed forces, from the smallest integrated unit to the entire armed forces.

In addition, efforts have been made to promote the soldiers' role as good members of a peaceful and democratic society within Thailand, with the king as the head of state.

Soldiers have been provided with vocational training and religious and political education in order to guide them in the correct direction. Efforts have been made to establish and develop the various reserve forces throughout the country, so that they can be immediately deployed for effective duty in any eventuality under the national defense plan for the military and civilians. In this regard, we must note the good news that, in developing these massive reserve forces, the Thai Armed Forces have received the full cooperation of the people, who have demonstrated their readiness to sacrifice their personal welfare and interests in the protection of national survival.

As for the efforts to develop vital weaponry and war materiel, the Thai Armed Forces have received the full support of the government of his majesty the king, be it for purchases from foreign countries or for research and development in our own country. This will enable our armed forces to be proudly self-reliant and will also contribute to the country's overall economy.

Through such continued diligent efforts to develop combat capability and the defense system, the Thai Armed Forces currently have in their possession highly mobile, modern weapons with great destructive power for ground, sea or air operations. They have also achieved success in improving our soldiers capability to fight a long and protracted war. The above achievements have been regularly reported and demonstrated to the public, with the exception of certain details that must be guarded as military secrets in the interests of our nation.

Additionally, we have reached agreements and developed joint plans with our allies to ensure the supply of large quantities of weapons in case of an emergency, and we are also confident of the capability of our soldiers in handling those weapons. The military has also implemented steps to improve the size and strength of logistics units in order to promote efficiency in logistical services for operations by all units of the armed forces.

Concerning the development of our border security system, attention has been given to all our borders -- with emphasis on sensitive areas and troublesome spots. Attention has also been given to the protection of our territorial waters and airspace.

Regarding those border security arrangements under the direct responsibility of the Thai Armed Forces, vital measures have been implemented to improve the demarcation of borders, warning systems and defense barriers, and to repulse possible aggression. As a result, the Thai Armed Forces have improved their national defense posture, regardless of whether we find ourselves in an offensive or defensive position.

Concerning those border security arrangements under the joint responsibility of the military, other government agencies and mass organizations, measures have been taken to establish a defense line to maximize the use of firepower and facilitate war maneuvers. Emphasis has been placed, however, on helping those people in our border areas to develop a defense system for their own protection -- in case of an emergency -- pending support from other forces. This has even helped those people to improve their livelihood and their means for earning a living. The armed forces are also making a survey and formulating plans for the development of those communities not adjacent to our borders so they can assist those people in the border areas in the course of their social development. The border villages will serve as a first line of defense for the central part of the country. The border villages will work closely with the Thai Armed Forces, other government agencies and mass organizations for national defense in this regard. This method of coordination for national defense and development will also strengthen the solidarity among the Thai people. This answers the ultimate need of the country for integrated strength for success in our national development.

Concerning our efforts to promote national defense to cope with external threats, it can be said that the Thai Armed Forces are maintaining a high degree of combat readiness. Although this task is of the utmost importance, the armed forces have also tried their best to curb spending -- money which comes from the people's taxes and the natural resources of the country -- and optimally utilize these funds for national defense and internal security. This is the first time an attempt has been made to coordinate security with the economic and social development plans of the country.

The task of preserving internal security is also important, since it protects the country against foreign interference and aggression. Internal peace is also vital for our efforts to achieve economic development and to bring prosperity and progress to the nation. In this connection, the Thai Armed Forces have adopted a special plan this year to promote internal security. In particular, it has been trying to eliminate the various threats to national security -- from the hundreds of thousands of illegal immigrants, from foreign pirates, from instigation and subversion by the various groups of bandits and southern separatists and from rural and urban subversion conducted by communist terrorists backed and directed by superpowers. There are efforts to push Thailand -- using both clandestine and overt methods -- into a situation approaching war with our neighboring countries having different political ideologies, leading eventually to involvement in a gruesome and bitter proxy war under the yoke and direction of the superpowers.

In its efforts to promote internal security, the Thai Armed Forces have adopted a wise and thorough strategy in accordance with the government's policy to avoid falling into a position of fighting a proxy war. We have simultaneously adopted two other parallel measures: A self-defense policy that advocates maintaining our alertness but not presenting a direct challenge to anyone in order to reverse the tendency toward a situation approaching war with our neighboring countries to the level of a cold war or one of normal relations. Regarding the second measure, it is aimed at reducing and eliminating internal dangers. This measure would enable the armed forces to have the capability of coping effectively with both an internal and external war should such a situation arise. The armed forces have pursued a political offensive against all forms of threats and groups of terrorists by pursuing a combined civilian-police-military tactic with the aim of obtaining assistance from the people in cases of terrorism.

During the past year, the Thai Armed Forces, with cooperation from government agencies concerned and patriotic people, successfully caused the disintegration of the enemy's united fronts and brought back a large number of misled people to rejoin the rest of society, tremendously weakening -- both politically and physically -- the enemy's armed forces and leading organs at many levels. Nearly all the enemy's major bases and armed units have been destroyed. The high-level organs of these groups have been forced to change their tactics and strategies by adopting a defensive position and have resorted to clandestine activities as they used to do dozens of years ago. They continue, however, to use small bands to carry out guerrilla warfare and sabotage in order to boost their own morale, intimidate us and lure us to encircle and suppress their small guerrilla bands instead of concentrating our efforts on the massive suppression of their few remaining bases. If we direct our efforts toward the latter, we can win a decisive victory in the near future.

The third mission of the Thai Armed Forces is to cooperate with both government and private sectors in developing the country. The armed forces are determined to use their resources, which have been acquired from the fraternal Thai people, to serve the people's interest, such as by giving assistance to the poor or to those victimized by disasters, and participating in the development of the country as a whole.

The armed forces have taken their own initiative and complied with the government's policy through the joint command headquarters -- generally known as the national security command -- in carrying on this mission and supporting the royal development projects. The majority of the developments projects of the Thai Armed Forces concentrate on the development of water resources, vocational training and land and water communication, as well as health care services and relief operations for the fraternal Thai people living in the border areas who have suffered from the consequences of fighting in neighboring countries and from the refugee influx. The Thai Armed Forces have also been providing humanitarian assistance for illegal immigrants from neighboring countries.

Dear fraternal Thai people, the Thai Armed Forces are grateful to all the patriotic fraternal people for your constant support, which has enabled us to carry out and fulfill our important and honorable tasks and missions. I, in my capacity as supreme commnader, promise you fraternal people that your Thai Armed Forces will do their best to fulfill their responsibilities and missions in order to safeguard this land and all the important institutions that have been passed down to us, even though it may mean that we might have to sacrifice our flesh and blood, and despite any and all difficulties and hardships we may encounter. We will follow the examples of our warrior ancestors, who proudly adhered to the motto: A warrior race cannot afford a coward's death.

On this occasion, I pray to the three holy gems [Buddha, Buddha's teachings and Buddhist monks], the guardian spirit of Siam and the divine power of his majesty the king, who is also the head of the Thai Armed Forces, to protect my beloved fraternal compatriots. May they live in happiness and safety and uphold unity and consolidate their forces to safeguard and develop our Thai nation to ensure the country's stability and further prosperity. Good night.

NATION REVIEW on Speech

BK270215 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 27 Jan 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Saiyut Scores Some Key Points in 'Power Play'"]

[Text] When the supreme commander of the armed forces addressed the nation, it is only natural to expect a tough speech, and Gen Saiyut Koetphon made it amply clear that Thailand will take no nonsense from anybody. As the government, and every reader of this newspaper realizes, that it is not only in this region that events seem to be coming to a head -- that they are indisputable -- but there are also grave deteriorations in the situation in Afghanistan and El Salvador, for example, to take just two countries as far away from Thailand as possible. [sentence as published]

But we would have been very happy if Gen Saiyut had been clearer in his reference to a superpower. In journalistic terminology at least -- which, of course, can be as confusing as diplomatese -- only the United States and the Soviet Union are considered superpowers. Of course, there is no definition of a superpower -- like if one country has XYZ megatons of hydrogen bombs, it qualifies to be called a superpower -- but China has consistently denied being a superpower, while neither the U.S. nor the USSR has denied such an appellation. But from the tone of his speech and from the references he has made, there is no question that Saiyut was referring to China. And, clearly, the proxy war that is going on in this region is between the Soviet Union and China.

While all this may be rejected as academic double-talk, the fact does remain that we are somewhere in the middle of all this, with one superpower at least, the United States, temporarily left out of the equation. And let us also humbly accept the fact that all this is happening immaterial of what Thailand wants or thinks -- we are tempted to say ASEAN instead of Thailand, but we are averse to stepping on toes. However, Thailand and fellow-members of ASEAN must think, and later discuss, what are the options that are still open, since many of them have been exhausted.

Assuming that there are three superpowers, we are witnessing a period when some of them are acting tough. The one that is doing the soft-pedaling at the moment is the United States, but nobody would like to say, like Admiral Yamamoto: "We are waking a sleeping giant." The Soviet Union is making her calculated gambles pay in almost every region of the world. And China, assuming again that she is a superpower, is acting very cocky.

Not only has she been trying to make the United States eat the humble pie where Taiwan is concerned, she has also been showing complete indifference to ASEAN efforts to find a political solution to the Kampuchean question.

Whether one likes it or not, geography plays an important part in both foreign policy and military policy of any country, and since we are near both Indochina and China, our policies have to take on the colouring, which Saiyut explained clearly, hoping his listeners would understand the necessary ambiguity. We fully agree with what Saiyut was at pains to explain, but what he did not say is also important -- small countries like Thailand have only limited choice. From this point of view, quiet, firm and skilled diplomacy by Thailand is required, and we are happy to say that the tone taken by Saiyut has set the right tone. A further point must also be made -- that Saiyut's speech has laid some groundwork for future discussions with our ASEAN partners.

AID FOR VILLAGERS AFFECTED BY REFUGEE INFLUX

BK280650 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 28 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] The Supreme Command plans to set up 128 "border villages" for Thais affected by the refugee influx on the Thai-Lao border after a similar project has benefited 104 villages in seven provinces along the Thai-Kampuchean border.

"We will also do the same for affected Thai villages on the Thai-Malaysian and Thai-Burmese borders later on," according to Col Sanan Khachonklam of the Supreme Command. He said about 80,000 Thai villagers have been directly affected and another 200,000 indirectly affected by the Kampuchean conflict.

"Our assistance plan has been formulated to make it possible for the affected Thai villagers to resume their normal way of life and cope with the problems along the border. The five-year programme (1978-83) covers agriculture and cooperatives, water sources, education, community development, public health and road construction," the military officer said. Several countries and international relief agencies have come forward with assistance to help with the scheme, he added.

The Thai Government has allocated about 200 million baht so far, principally for relocation and village site development. Contributions, both in cash and in kind, have come from UNICEF (about four million U.S. dollars); WFP [World Food Program] (providing rice, vegetables and fish); Japan (about 1,000 million yen, in addition to construction of various dams); Canada (about 3.5 million Canadian dollars); West Germany (about 35.5 million marks); Japanese association (8.2 million baht) and Taiwan (two million U.S. dollars).

"The most important thing is to find land for the affected Thai villagers to till. Each family gets about half a rai to one rai of land. We try to get them water sources to make life easier," Col Sanan added.

LEADERS PAY TET VISITS TO VARIOUS AREAS

Pham Van Dong in Ha Bac

OW291417 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Excerpts] In the warmth of the first day of the year, Comrade Pham Van Dong paid a visit to the compatriots and cadres of Ha Bac Province. Comrades Vu Tho, provincial party committee secretary, Nguyen Quat, chairman of the provincial people's committee, and many cadres and representatives of the people of Ha Bac warmly welcomed him. On behalf of the party organization, Comrade Vu Tho reported to him on what has or has not been done over the past year in economic, cultural and livelihood fields.

Attending a spring gathering with hundreds of representatives of cadres, combatants and compatriots of Ha Bac, the Council of Ministers chairman expressed elation over the fact that the Ha Bac party organization and administration have begun to plan the restoration and development of the region's traditional trades to develop production and care for the people's livelihood. He also offered many suggestions on Ha Bac's objectives of solving the questions of food, clothing, housing, education and health of the people and urged that these questions be incorporated into plans at each level, from the provincial to the district and grassroots levels. We must rely on our own capabilities to determine specific direction and plans and strive to achieve economic, cultural and livelihood objectives for the people of our locality. At the same time, we must develop reserves and accumulations.

He urged the various echelons and sectors to pay attention to the cooperatives' production, expand the product-contract system to the laborers and develop the cooperative members' creative labor force. At the same time, we must raise our managerial capacity and level and oppose the phenomena of nonspecific contracts. The party organizations must improve the quality of their cadres and members to ensure the party's correct leadership and develop the people's role of being masters. He wished the Ha Bac party organization and people many great achievements in the new year.

On the same day Comrade Pham Van Dong paid a Tet visit to the members of the Tan Moc cooperative in Luc Ngan, Ha Bac. Comrade Do Phung, district party committee secretary; Comrade Nong Van An, district chairman; many cadres of various sectors in Luc Ngan District; and Comrade (Ly Loi Sang), chairman of the Tan Moc Cooperative; attended the spring gathering between Chairman Pham Van Dong and members of the Tan Moc Cooperative and the compatriots of other villages in Luc Ngan District.

Chairman Pham Van Dong enthusiastically acclaimed the achievements of the cooperative and pointed to its tasks in the coming years in planting cotton, weaving cloth, planting trees and protecting forests to produce more valuable agricultural and forest goods for export, in strengthening solidarity among fraternal nationalities, in building increasingly stronger party organizations and in further improving the managerial capacity of the administration and the cooperative so as always to be worthy of being a comprehensively advanced unit of Ha Bac Province.

Pham Van Dong in Cao Bang

OW291229 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Excerpts] At a time when the country is joyfully welcoming the Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog] spring, Comrade Pham Van Dong, member of the Political Bureau of the VCP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, paid a Tet visit to the compatriots and combatants of Cao Bang and Ha Bac provinces.

Returning to a region that was the first revolutionary base, the Council of Ministers chairman emotionally and firmly shook hands with Comrades Duong Tuong, provincial party committee secretary; Luong Ich Lap, chairman of the provincial people's committee; and dear, old comrades, the first cadres of the party and Uncle Ho during the hard days of the revolution. He inquired about the compatriots' livelihood and about their families and relatives and expressed happiness to be able to meet them again and to see that, despite their old age, they were still healthy and continuing to contribute their efforts to the building and defense of their revolutionary native land.

Hundreds of representatives of cadres, combatants and compatriots of various nationalities in different districts and villages of the province came to welcome the Council of Ministers chairman. Speaking at a spring gathering, he recalled his thoughts about Cao Bang, where Uncle Ho set up the first revolutionary base and where, at a time when the whole country was under aggressive colonialism's domination, all the people -- young and old, male and female -- enthusiastically joined revolutionary organizations to protect party cadres. After that, the Viet Bac revolutionary base was established and a revolutionary movement whipped up throughout the country, which led to the 1945 August revolution and the 1975 spring victory.

On behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers, Comrade Pham Van Dong enthusiastically acclaimed the Cao Bang compatriots' revolutionary awareness and ardor and their patriotism and urged all to forever preserve their native land's tradition. Warmly praising the Cao Bang compatriots and combatants for the victories they achieved in the fight against the Chinese aggressor troops and in the maintenance and development of economic, political, cultural and national defense activities, thus stabilizing our compatriots' production and material and cultural life, he expressed the hope that the compatriots, cadres and combatants will develop these achievements in order to register still many more and greater victories.

Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong pointed to the two strategic tasks of the whole country -- building socialism and defending the socialist fatherland -- and urged the Cao Bang compatriots, cadres and combatants to be concerned, more than anyone, with defending the fatherland's borders, building up the people's armed forces, including the regular troops, regional troops and militia and self-defense forces, and setting up a firm defense system so that, should the enemy recklessly commit aggression again, he would certainly receive many more stunning blows than before. We should arm all of our people with an undaunted spirit and make them ready to fight and defeat the aggressors in the very first battle.

The Chinese reactionaries are hatching many cynical plots of deception, enticement and cajolery aimed at dividing the compatriots of various nationalities in the border region. Consequently, we, each person and each nationality in the great family of the Vietnamese fatherland, must do our utmost to care for, consolidate and build up the solidarity among all the nationalities and between the armed forces and the people as Uncle Ho had admonished.

With regard to economic tasks, the comrade chairman pointed out that Cao Bang has great capabilities for comprehensively developing agriculture -- grain, subsidiary crops, industrial crops, food plants -- as well as livestock breeding. He urged the different echelons and sectors to map out projects and plans to develop agriculture and forestry both on long-term and immediate basis. We must actively plant subsidiary crops, organize their processing and grow beans, especially soybeans.

Cao Bang's livestock breeding must be carried out on a larger scale than other localities. In addition to hogs and poultry, we must pay attention to horned animals -- buffaloes, oxen, goats -- so that we may have draft power, meat and fertilizer for the fields.

Along with comprehensively developing agriculture, we must motivate all the people to protect the forests and engage in afforestation. We must give land and forests to the cooperatives and those who plant trees and protect forests. The more trees one plants, the more income he will get. We must strengthen management to avoid indiscriminate destruction of forests.

Comrade Pham Van Dong said: At a time when the whole country is still facing many difficulties, the various echelons and sectors in the province must exert efforts and formulate plans to gradually and better solve the issues of food, clothing, housing, education and transportation for the people of various nationalities. They must endeavor to develop the cultural, educational and health services in the mountain region in accordance with the motto "the state and the people join in doing things."

He stressed: In order to do the above things, what is important is that the party organizations, particularly those at the grassroots level, must be strong. We must constantly give importance to perfecting and consolidating party organizations, and party members must be truly exemplary. The cadres must study and train themselves in economic and social management. We must realize at all cost the working people's right of collective mastery and, on this basis, create a stirring revolutionary movement in the province. He expressed the hope that with the tradition of the cradle of the revolution, the Cao Bang party organization, compatriots and combatants will achieve still greater successes in the coming years.

On behalf of the Cao Bang party organization, people and the armed forces, Comrade Duong Tuong, provincial party committee secretary, promised to satisfactorily carry out the tasks outlined by the Council of Ministers Chairman and conveyed Lunar New Year greetings to the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers.

Pham Hung in Ho Chi Minh City

BK291331 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] To mark the Lunar New Year and to show gratitude to the fallen heroes who made sacrifices for the nation, Pham Hung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers, and a political-military-civil delegation of Ho Chi Minh City and representatives of the 7th Military Region Command, visited and laid wreathes at the Ho Chi Minh City fallen heroes cemetery. The wreathes bore an inscription reading: "The party, people and army will be grateful to these fallen heroes forever. " On this occasion the delegation paid homage to the graves of fallen heroes who had sacrificed their lives for their nation and compatriots.

Pham Hung's Other Visits

BK011430 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] In the early days of 1982 before Tet, Comrade Pham Hung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of interior, visited and worked with the standing body of the party committee and the people's committee of Lam Dong Province.

After a hearing a report on the orientations, tasks and major targets of the province's 1982 plan, Comrade Pham Hung emphasized the need to concentrate efforts on taking advantage of the local special climatic conditions and the immense and fertile lands of Lam Dong Province and on rationally distributing the work force to step up agricultural production; develop the great potentials of the various types of industrial crops, forestry and livestock breeding; firmly resolve the problem of grain and food; and promote the production of consumer goods and especially export goods.

In agriculture it is necessary to motivate the people to engage in small-scale irrigation work to increase the capabilities of the large- and medium-size irrigation projects already built, promptly replace the old rice varieties with new ones that produce high yields and consolidate fertilizer production establishments so that the local demand for grain will be firmly met in 1982.

With confidence and elation over the successes of the congresses held by party organizations at the three local levels to discuss the draft documents of the party Central Committee, Comrade Pham Hung conveyed the Tet greetings of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers to the party committee, the people's committee, the mass organizations, the armed forces and people of Lam Dong Province and wished them a year full of new vitality and new successes in implementing the resolution of the party Central Committee's 11th plenum, as well as outstanding achievements to greet the fifth national party congress.

During his Tet visit to Lam Dong Province's state dairy farm, Comrade Pham Hung, after hearing a report on the status of scientific and technical development and research and on the building of material and technical bases, praised the state farm's progress and achievements in developing its grazing land, crossbreeding cows of foreign stock with local cows in accordance with technical criteria, building additional stables and barns and developing production. He also urged the state farm to perform certain essential tasks to ensure further and quicker development.

On the day before Tet, accompanied by the provincial leaders, Comrade Pham Hung attended and cut the inaugural ribbon of Lam Dong's spring flower show. He praised the show's participants for their artistic techniques and painstaking labor in selecting and crossbreeding many species of beautiful and precious flowers. He urged them to assist the local horticulturists in maintaining various species of beautiful and precious flowers and developing them into marketable products in order to meet the national demand as well as to create a large and stable source of goods for export.

During his Tet visit to the cadres and combatants of Lam Dong Province's People's Security Force, the comrade praised the provincial security force for their achievements last year and their progress in intensifying control at the grassroots level, contributing to the stabilization of the living conditions of minority ethnic people, promoting the mass movement to safeguard the fatherland's security and closely coordinating with the army in the fruitful struggle to resolve the FULRO problem.

About the tasks for 1982, the comrade stressed: The People's Security Force must strive to fulfill both the long-term and immediate requirements as well as the major targets set forth at the 37th national conference on security successfully. In particular, it is necessary to develop the results of training sessions; overcome shortcomings; enhance political quality; consolidate internal unity; promote the sense of responsibility, organization and discipline; improve leadership and command; intensify control over the grassroots level; promptly grasp the situation; astutely deal with all circumstances; and struggle against the bureaucratic workstyle. In this spirit, Comrade Pham Hung wished the cadres and combatants of Lam Dong's security force new and even greater achievements in the new year in their work and combat and in building a clean, firm and strong people's security force.

Comrade Pham Hung also paid a Tet visit to the mobile unit of the Ministry of Interior in Lam Dong Province. He praised the unit's cadres and combatants for their successes in promoting internal unity, organization and discipline, enduring difficulties and hardships, constantly holding fast to the grassroots level, closely uniting and coordinating with the People's Army and establishing good relations with the local mass organizations and people of various ethnic groups, and for their numerous achievements in work and combat.

Inspired by Comrade Pham Hung's visit and exhortations on the occasion of the Lunar New Year, the unit's cadres and combatants pledged to study, work and fight actively and to score even more achievements to greet the fifth party congress.

Also on the occasion of Tet, Comrade Pham Hung cordially met veteran members of former Nam Bo front's resistance administration committee. In a jubilant atmosphere of springtime, the comrade solicitously inquired after their health and listened to their reminiscences of the days they had spent in the various combat zones during the struggle against French colonialism. On behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers, Comrade Pham Hung heartily greeted the veterans and wished them a new year full of good health and family happiness. He hoped that the shining examples of their devotion to the cause of the party and the nation would help their children and grandchildren.

At meetings with comrades of the Mekong Delta and eastern Nam Bo, Ho Chi Minh City and the Vung Tau-Con Dao Special Zone -- consisting of representatives of provincial, municipal and special zone party committees, people's committees, military and security commands, and representatives of the 7th and 9th Military Regions -- on behalf of the party Central Committee and the Council of Ministers, Comrade Pham Hung highly praised the various provinces and municipalities, the special zone, the Mekong Delta and eastern Nam Bo for their achievements last year in vigorously implementing party and state resolutions and directives: developing the spirit of self-reliance, creativity and initiatives; creating new positive factors; overcoming difficulties; stepping up production; stabilizing the people's life; safeguarding political security and social order; and successfully implementing the 1981 State Plan.

The recent successes of party organization congresses at the three levels to discuss the draft documents of the party Central Committee in the various provinces, municipalities and the special zone, the comrade said, have created a new source of revolutionary vigor, confidence and enthusiasm for us with which to look forward to the fifth party congress. Comrade Pham Hung wished the party organizations, administrative bodies, mass organizations and military and security forces of the various provinces and municipalities, the special zone, the Mekong Delta and eastern Nam Bo a new year full of unity and identity of views for developing their advantages as well as their strengths and capabilities to overcome difficulties, vigorously and successfully implement the resolution of the party Central Committee 11th plenum and score outstanding achievements to greet the fifth national party congress, and even greater successes in fulfilling the 1982 State Plan.

Comrade Pham Hung also paid Tet visits to the security forces of Ho Chi Minh City and the city's 5th Precinct. He praised the security personnel of the city and the 5th Precinct for their efforts and achievements in maintaining political security and social order and their progress in building clean, firm and strong security forces. The comrade highly appreciated the constant leadership and guidance given by the city, district and precinct party committees and the administrative echelons to the People's Security Forces; the assistance and cooperation accorded them by the various sectors, mass organizations, state organs and enterprises; and particularly the close unity and coordination of the People's Army that have created favorable conditions for the city security forces at all levels to make new progress in consolidating forces and fulfilling their tasks.

He urged all echelons of the city security forces to strive to overcome shortcomings; develop the results of the recent training phase; carry out their tasks on the basis of the new organizational structure; improve leadership and command; intensify control at the grassroots level; respect and protect the laboring people's right to collective mastery; heighten vigilance; firmly grasp the situation; enhance their militant character; and, together with the city people, safeguard political security and social order even more satisfactorily.

The comrade wished all echelons of the city People's Security Forces successes in building clean, firm and strong People's Security Forces; promoting the mass movement to safeguard the fatherland's security; implementing the resolution of the 37th national conference on security; emulating in scoring outstanding achievements to greet the fifth national party congress; and actively contributing to the successful implementation of the 1982 State Plan.

INDONESIA'S MOKHTAR CITED ON KAMPUCHEA, PRC, SRV

BK011412 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Indonesia does not consider the presence of Vietnamese armed forces in Kampuchea as a threat to its interests. In a talk with British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington in Jakarta last Friday [29 January], Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said: Indonesia realizes that Vietnam's concern over Chinese ambition in Southeast Asia has a good ground through Beijing's support for the Khmer Rouge rebels in Kampuchea.

ROLE OF MASS MOTIVATION WORK EMPHASIZED

BK280900 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Dec 81 pp 6-19

[Article by Tran Quoc Hoan: "Intensively Carry Out Mass Motivation Work in the New Stage" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] The principle as well as the motto of building our party is to maintain close relations with the masses. Carrying it out is quite an experience. In the new stage, our entire party and all our people are to carry out two strategic tasks simultaneously -- building socialism successfully and heightening vigilance and combat readiness constantly in order to defend the socialist fatherland.

To fulfill these two tasks, it is necessary to improve leadership; increase the party's fighting strength; make the party firm, strong and wholesome; and strengthen the socialist state. At the same time, we must improve and carry out mass motivation work satisfactorily and launch a vigorous mass revolutionary movement. On this basis, we must strengthen and consolidate solidarity among the nationalities and promote the working people's right to collective mastery so as to achieve the goal of "everything for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness."

I -- THE ROLE OF MASS MOTIVATION WORK IN A SITUATION WHEREIN POLITICAL POWER EXISTS

The victories of the Vietnamese revolution over half a century are the result of our party's independent, sovereign and creative line. They are also attributable to the party's mass motivation work. The fine traditions and the source of our party's invincible strength lie in its close relationship with the masses.

However, now that political power has been established, many sectors and localities have neglected the motivation task and paid little attention to building mass organizations and promoting their political role. Many party committee echelons have even neglected leadership over this task. It is fairly common for cadres and party members not to want to do this work, for government cadres to be bureaucratic and highhanded toward the people and for mass-motivating cadres not to work among the masses but operate according to administrative procedures. This is because many people do not fully understand the role of mass motivation work at a time when we have political power. Therefore, it is necessary to make party committee echelons, party organizations, administrative echelons and mass organizations understand thoroughly that the motivation task is always strategically important. In particular, when political power exists, this task is of even greater importance and must be reflected in all fields of party and government activity.

FIRST OF ALL we must understand that revolution is always a mass undertaking. All party lines and guidelines, all state policies and laws and all tasks of mass organizations are eventually carried out by the masses. The party's strength is reflected in the strength of the majority of the politically enlightened and well organized masses. President Ho has said: "Any task, no matter how easy it may be, cannot be carried out successfully without the participation of the people; and any task, no matter how difficult it may be, can be accomplished with the assistance of the people." In his speech delivered at the First Session of the Seventh National Assembly, VCP Central Committee General Secretary Le Duan said: "Whether the results of the development of production and the stabilization and improvement of the people's life are considerable or limited and are obtained quickly or slowly depends to a great extent on the spirit of initiative, and voluntariness, the sense of discipline and the great efforts of all our people." As always, especially in the present stage, the masses are the ones who have built socialism successfully and defended the socialist fatherland firmly.

SECOND, when we have political power in hand, we must prevent such bad practices as bureaucratism, authoritarianism and officialism which can separate the party from the masses and weaken the dictatorship of the proletariat. Mass motivation work must be reflected in all fields of party activity. It must also be considered as an important factor in ensuring that all party lines and guidelines and state policies and laws are devised correctly and implemented scrupulously. Maintaining close relations with the masses and wholeheartedly serving the masses must be qualities held by each Communist Party member and the responsibility of each party, government and mass organization.

THIRD, the masses are the sociopolitical base of the new social regime. To consolidate the working class, the collective peasantry, the socialist intelligentsia and the youth and women's forces vigorously means to consolidate the political base so it will serve as a firm foundation for the socialist social regime.

II -- OBJECTIVES OF MASS MOTIVATION WORK IN THE NEW STAGE

Mass motivation work in the new stage must be aimed at promoting the working people's collective mastery; carrying out the three revolutions simultaneously — the revolution in production relations, the scientific and technological revolution, and the ideological and cultural revolution, of which the scientific and technological revolution is the linchpin — building the new system, the new economy, the new culture and the new man; and successfully achieving the socialist revolution in our country.

The mass motivation work in the new stage must be closely combined with production and life and with the practice of socialist construction and national defense. Mass motivation work must be aimed at enhancing the masses' sense of and capacity for mastery. It must simultaneously ensure the masses' interests and motivate the masses to fulfill their labor and national defense obligations zealously. It must enhance the masses' activity and creativity in developing production and increasing labor productivity as well as in their participation in economic and social management, thereby creating a vigorous and broad revolutionary movement to achieve the common objective; "All for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness."

THE NEW DEVELOPMENT in mass motivation work in conditions wherein the party holds political power is that ALL THREE COMPONENTS OF THE SYSTEM OF PROLETARIAN DICTATORSHIP MUST DEVOTE THEMSELVES TO MASS MOTIVATION WORK.

Unlike the time when the party did not hold power, now that it has assumed power its relations with the masses are reflected in all fields of social life. The party maintains relations with the masses not only through various party and people's organizations but also through an entire system of state organs and through the administrative apparatuses at all levels. Mass motivation work is not an exclusive concern of the party and mass organizations but also is a responsibility of all three components of the system of proletarian dictatorship.

For this reason, the responsibility of party organizations, administrative echelons and mass organizations for mass motivation work and for prompting the masses to uphold their role as the collective masters in national construction and national defnese must be institutionalized.

Mass motivation work is one of the key tasks of all PARTY ORGANIZATIONS.

In the conditions when the party holds power, its mass motivation work, far from being allowed to slacken, must be intensified. All party committee echelons must review their mass motivation work in order to intensify in the near future their educational efforts aimed at improving the masses' understanding in all fields, especially their understanding of socialism and socialist revolution. At the same time, they must promulgate positions and policies concerning various classes and strata of the masses and raise the revolutionary and scientific character of mass motivation work. They must assign cadres endowed with good qualities, virtues and capabilities to various state organs and mass organizations to ensure that the state power really is of the people, by the people and for the people. At the same time, they must do their utmost to assist the various people's organizations in bringing their operational methods up to date, overcoming redtape and bureaucratism, and effecting a new change in the activities of the mass organizations and the mass revolutionary movement.

All party committee echelons should establish a system under which party members at any level must participate in social work and in the activities of mass organizations and be put in charge of a number of people among the masses. They must adopt plans for periodic meetings with the masses in order to explain current affairs and the various policies and positions of the party and state to them. They must carry out self-criticism before the masses, solicit the masses' opinions and criticisms, and evaluate the activities of mass organizations. They must resolutely overcome bureaucratism, authoritarianism and a loss of contact with the masses among cadres and party members.

THE STATE ADMINISTRATION is the principal instrument through which the working people exert their right to mastery. All administrative organs have the responsibility of serving the people; maintaining close relations with the masses; organizing the collection of popular opinion on important policies concerning the people's political, material and cultural interests; and adopting plans for mass motivation work in carrying out any task. Bureaucratism, the tendency to issue orders and arrogance toward the masses must be overcome. The work of all economic, professional, cultural and social organs must, first of all, be aimed at fully developing the people's material and spiritual potential, making the most rational use of the state's supplies and capital to serve the people's interests and resolutely suppressing officialism, favoritism and irresponsibility. State cadres and personnel and the armed forces must have a thorough understanding of mass motivation work. They must maintain close contact with the masses, explain the line and policies of the party and the state to them and listen carefully to their suggestions.

Administrative organs at all levels are responsible for creating every favorable condition, including material conditions, for the mass organizations to carry out their activities. They are also responsible for coordinating closely with the mass organizations in motivating the masses to implement the party's line and policies and the state's plans and laws and for organizing and promoting emulation movements. State regulations must be formulated that will allow people's organizations in general and the VFF in particular to take part in building the administration and controlling its work and to participate effectively in economic and social management. Attention must be paid to broadening the forms of popular control. In the coming years, we must elaborate a law on youth, amend the trade unions law, the marriage and family law....

In conditions when the party holds power, THE VARIOUS PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATIONS are an important and integral part of the system of proletarian dicatorship. They play an extremely important role, forming a direct link between the party and the masses and enabling the party to reach deeply into all strata of the masses to rally, motivate and educate them to carry out the party's political tasks successfully. Also a reliable prop of the state administration, the people's organizations have the following duties: Motivate the masses to participate in economic and social management; cont ol and supervise the administration's work; and exert the masses' right to mastery. In this way they will increasingly help consolidate the administration.

In the new state, the role and strength of the people's organizations are reflected in their ability to organize and rally the masses; raise their socialist consciousness; promote their activity, initiative and creativity; motivate them to participate in managing the state and society; and organize and promote socialist emulation movements.

As a school of socialism, the people's organizations bear great responsibility for building the new man, ceaselessly improving the masses' understanding of socialism, raising their sense of and capacity for collective mastery, and inculcating in them a new attitude toward labor. They also have the responsibility to work in a disciplined, skillful and highly productive manner. Through education, they must prompt the masses to perceive the situation and tasks of the revolution clearly, distinctly see the successes as well as all the difficulties, unmistakably recognize their role and responsibilities and maintain absolute confidence in the party's leadership and the socialist system.

As the representative of the masses' interests and collective mastery, the people's organizations are responsible for motivating the masses to join "the three revolutions," participate in socialist transformations and the building of socialism, fulfill the state plans and strengthen national defense. The people's organizations must participate practically and effectively in economic and social management work. They must also control the implementation of party and state positons and policies and protect the working people's legitimate interests. They are also responsible for contributing ideas to the formulation of party and state socioeconomic policies and motivating the masses to implement them.

The operational methods of the various people's organizations must be changed to suit the new conditions and the rising cultural standard and demands, of the masses and to prevent red tape, bureaucratism and a loss of contact with the grassroots level. The basic units of the people's organizations must be consolidated quickly and programs and plans adopted in order to train cadres for the organizations. Only in this way can we rally large numbers of people, inculcate a high degree of consciousness in the members of various unions and associations and prompt them to remain deeply attached to their organizations.

Mass motivation work must be DEVELOPED FURTHER; that is, it MUST HAVE A SCIENTIFIC BASIS in order to meet the demands of the political tasks in the new stage and to suit the new cultural level and demands of the masses.

The task of motivating the masses to participate in building socialism requires that cadres and party members be conversant with socialism, economic and social management, production organization, sociology, psychology, pedagogy and science and technology. They must also be capable of motivating the masses to wage the struggle between the two roads -- socialist and capitalist -- and carry out "the three revolutions." They must organize and promote productive labor and economization emulation movements; turn all positive factors to good account; and struggle to overcome negative aspects in economic and social management.

In the new conditions, the masses' standards in all fields are being steadily heightened. Moreover, all strata of the masses now have new needs and aspirations. Therefore, mass motivation work can no longer be performed monotonously and rigidly. On the contrary, it calls for the study and exploration of human psychology so that objectives and forms of motivation work suitable for each category of object may be adopted.

In carrying out mass motivation work in the present stage, we must exhaustively review and learn from past experiences so as to change our organizational forms and operational methods to suit the new stage.

THE MASS REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT represents a concrete result of the mass motivation work of party, administrative and mass organizations. The emergence of a vigorous mass movement in any locality is an unmistakable indication of two things: The presence of strong local party, administrative and mass organizations and the masses' maturity as far as their sense of and capacity for collective mastery are concerned.

Therefore, we must promote the mass revolutionary movement if we want to carry out the party's revolutionary tasks in the new stage successfully. The current socialist emulation movement must be geared to promoting production and economization, opposing negativism, building a new life, consolidating national defense and maintaining political security and public order and safety. Each movement must have specific political, economic and social objectives. It must also be closely coordinated with the elaboration and successful implementation of the plans for developing the economy and culture, strengthening public security and order and consolidating national defense in each grassroots unit and locality, especially in districts and precincts. Each emulation movement must achieve results in all three of the following fields: Socioeconomic work, developing the new man and building and developing organizations. Close coordination among party, administrative and mass organizations is absolutely necessary if a mass revolutionary movement is to be launched. All mass organizations, especially the trade unions, have the duty to organize, motivate and foster ever more vigorous, steady and broad revolutionary movements in highly diversified forms. State organs must create a management system capable of providing strong incentives so that the laborer will work zealously in the interests of society and the collective and in his own interest. At the same time, they must coordinate with the various mass organizations and create all necessary material conditions for the launching of emulation movements. The activities of front-rank models in the mass movement to implement the policy of applying product contracts with labor groups and laborers in the rural areas and to apply the contract-based wages system in industrial enterprises have offered us many valuable lessons. All party and administrative echelons must satisfactorily carry out the task of reviewing the achievements of these models and bringing their positive influence into play. They must also adopt a policy to give timely encouragement, rewards and commendation so as to promote the strong development of socialist emulation movements.

III -- CHANGES IN THE METHODS OF ORGANIZATION AND OPERATION OF MASS ORGANIZATIONS

The social and class structure in our country has undergone many changes in the process of carrying out the three revolutions. In the north, the great majority of the people consist of members of the working class, the collective peasantry and the socialist intelligentsia. In the south, there still are five social elements: Workers, peasants, artisans, individual small merchants and the bourgeoisie. The majority of workers are now in state-operated and joint state-private enterprises. Peasants and artisans have become owners of production materials and more than 50 percent of them have taken up the collective production path. The collective mastership awareness and abilities of the people of all walks of life have been improved considerably.

1. THE CONTINGENT OF WORKERS AND CIVIL SERVANTS AND THE ORGANIZATION OF TRADE UNIONS

In our country, the role of the working class in social life has been enhanced day by day. Over the past 5 years, the number of workers has increased by 24 percent. The number of technical workers has risen to 1.3 million. This increases to 3.6 million if civil servants and other working people of the state sector are included. The role of the working class -- the vanguard class that has led the revolution -- has been strengthened and consolidated not only because it has increased numerically, but essentially because it has thousands of state-run production and business establishments and many modern heavy industrial installations and controls the main sectors of the national economy. Some 60 percent of all workers have graduated from vocational schools. The great majority of them have finished general education levels II and III. Many workers have been elected to the leading echelons of the party, government and mass organizations. Though confronted by troubled events in the world and with difficulties in the economy and life, our country's working class remains imperturbable and creative. They are seeking ways to overcome difficulties in maintaining and accelerating production and stabilizing their lives. They are firmly confident in the party's leadership.

However, when it comes to meeting the requirements for building a socialist working class, our country's working class is not immune to shortcomings and weaknesses. In this respect, its class awareness is not keen. It is still influenced by the psychology and behavior of small producers, and its professional skills and labor output remain limited. Moreover, it does not possess a high sense of discipline and is insufficiently acquainted with the operational requirements of large-scale industry. A large number of workers and civil servants have manifested negativism which, in a certain place and at a certain time, is fairly serious.

TRADE UNIONS are the largest mass organizations of workers and civil servants. They are the closest collaborator with and a firm prop for the state administration.

Trade union activities have contributed realistically to the management of the state and enterprises and have motivated workers and civil servants to accelerate the productive labor and thrift movement and the movement for developing innovations, improving techniques, overcoming difficulties, maintaining production and caring for the lives of workers and civil servants.

However, the organization and activities of trade unions at all levels in the new stage are still of an administrative character. Trade unions do not keep up with production and the activities of enterprises and workers. They have not yet fully developed the workers and civil servants' right to collective mastery in applying trade union laws and in the struggle against negativism, bureaucratism, authoritarianism, theft, corruption and illegal transactions in organs and enterprises in order to protect the interests of the working class.

Our party has always considered trade unions to be a strong tool in building the socialist Vietnamese working class and encouraging the entire working class to be in the vanguard of socialist construction. Trade unions at all levels must penetrate the workers and civil servants' life in order to understand their feelings, their livelihood, the level of their enlightenment and their professional skills. They must, through the productive labor movement and production teams and groups, educate workers and civil servants to develop a working class sense, a new work attitude -- working with a high sense of discipline, according to techniques and with high output -- and behavior befitting the operations of large-scale industry. They must, out of class love, take good care of the legitimate demands of workers and civil servants. They must participate in training and helping new workers in vocational classes in order to create conditions for them to become industrial workers quickly.

Trade unions must participate in drafting and implementing the state plan at the grassroots level (factories, construction sites, state farms and so forth) and nationwide. They must intensively control and supervise the implementation of collective contracts, solve all problems concerning labor, protect the interests of workers and civil servants and resolutely struggle against negativism and deviations in the implementation of party and state policies and measures in organs and enterprises. Trade unions have the great responsibility of contributing to the party's leadership and participating in improving and training a contingent of cadres coming from the working class for the party and state.

To help trade unions carry out these tasks, it is necessary to clearly define the responsibilities of trade unions and party and state organs in building a socialist working class, as well as the responsibilities of trade unions for participating in managing the state and enterprises according to a practical system.

In the coming days, the trade unions must strengthen their organizations and improve their operational capabilities. Trade union work must reach deeply into the field of production and suit the conditions of workers and grassroots units so as to exert a practical impact on the efforts to fulfill various economic and technical objectives and to develop the socialist working class. Trade union cadres must be trained according to a comprehensive plan and through satisfactory coordination between the specialized and nonspecialized forces. The trade union schools must improve their curricula and the quality of their training work.

2. WORKING PEASANTS AND THE FEDERATION OF COLLECTIVE PEASANTS [FCP]

Our party's policy regarding the peasantry is aimed at, by means of cooperativization, transforming individual peasants into members of the collective peasantry and strengthening the strong worker-peasant alliance in the socialist revolution.

In the north, working peasants have become the collective peasantry. In the process of consolidating cooperatives and perfecting socialist production relations, the peasants' collective spirit has been heightened gradually and the face of the rural areas has been changed substantially. In implementing the policy of applying product contracts with labor groups and laborers in the rural areas, those localities which have scrupulously followed the directives of the party Central Committee Secretariat have succeeded in creating a new working spirit marked by voluntariness, full use of land and manpower, developing production, stabilizing the people's living conditions and increasing their capacity for socialist collective mastery. We should review our past experiences, exploit the good aspects and rectify shortcomings so as to advance the revolutionary movement steadily.

In the south, where peasants are gradually entering the road of collective production, more than 50 percent of the peasantry have joined cooperatives or production collectives. A major problem to which we should pay attention is that, along with intensifying mass motivation work among peasants, we must have correct policies and good management organizations if the peasantry is to favor the road of cooperativization and actively implement various positions and policies of the party and state.

The FCP, formerly the farmers association, plays an active role in educating peasants in the socialist revolution and motivating them to embark on the road of collective production and implement the positions and policies of the party and state in the rural areas.

In those localities where cooperativization has been completed, the cooperative and production collectives function as both production organizations and broad mass organizations of collective peasants. The cooperative not only devotes itself to production work but also has the responsibility of caring for all aspects of the peasants' livelihood, motivating them to overcome the negative aspects of small producers and heightening their sense of collectivity and their devotion to building and consolidating cooperatives and building new socialist rural areas.

The collective peasants councils at all levels assist the party and state by maintaining close relations with peasants, holding discussions with the collective peasantry to formulate correct policies, carrying out "the three revolutions" in the rural areas, promoting the peasants' collective mastery and motivating the peasantry to step up production, build and consolidate cooperatives and build new socialist rural areas.

3. ARTISANS AND THE ASSOCIATION OF HANDICRAFT COOPERATIVES

There are more than 1.5 million professional artisans in our country. In the north, 90 percent of the artisans work in various handicraft cooperatives: in the south, their colleagues have just begun to adopt the mode of collective production, mainly in the form of cooperative teams. Artisans constitute a contingent of highly skilled workers with considerable potential who account for 61 percent of local industrial output in terms of value. In the southern provinces, the Association of Cooperative Workers [hooij lao doongj howpj tacs] has motivated individual artisans to implement state production and trade policies and to take up the mode of collective production. Once individual artisans have formed a cooperative, this small industrial and handicraft cooperative will function as both a productive organization and a broad mass organization. As such, the cooperative has the responsibility of caring for all aspects of production work and the livelihood of its members and of attending to their political and ideological education. The Association of Handicraft Cooperatives [lieen hieepj xax thur coong nghieepj] is an organization which represents the artisans' collective mastery. It maintains close relations with the party and the state, contributes to formulating the necessary policies and helps intensify the building, broadening and consolidation of small industrial and handicraft cooperatives. The Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union [HCMCYU] and the Vietnam Women's Union [VWU] should coordinate closely with the Association of Handicraft Cooperatives in educating artisans on the working-class stand, in promoting their sense of and capacity for collective mastery, in improving their professional skills and in helping them develop a new work style.

4. THE CONTINGENT OF SOCIALIST INTELLECTUALS

Our country's intelligentsia has increased fairly rapidly over the past 5 years. We now have 260,000 cadres with a college or higher level education and 600,000 middle-level skilled cadres, not to mention the 300,000 college and vocational middle school students. The intelligentsia is playing an increasingly larger role not only in the scientific and technological revolution but also in the cultural and ideological revolution. Most of our country's intellectuals were trained under the socialist system. A number of intellectuals who once lived under the U.S. puppet regime have now made many active contributions under the new regime. The absolute majority of our country's intellectuals are patriotic and have confidence in the party's leadership and the socialist system. Many have shown an ardent passion for research and creative work. Recently, many talented people have emerged, a fact which has demonstrated clearly the intelligence and talents of Vietnamese.

However, we must also see that our scientific and technological cadres, though numerous, are unevenly trained, that we still lack managerial cadres, that the quality of both political and professional training is lower than expected, and that we have developed many shortcomings in our efforts to create proper working conditions for and to care for the livelihood of our scientific and technological cadres. Recently, the resolution of the party Central Committee Political Bureau on the policy regarding science and technology has inspired our country's intelligentsia with enthusiasm.

The Vietnam Confederation of Trade Unions [VCTU], the HCMCYU, the VWU and the VFF should pay attention to coordinating with one another in training the contingent of scientific, technological and managerial cadres and in educating and motivating them to show their patriotism and their love for socialism, to overcome all difficulties, to participate in production and other activities in life, to engage entusiastically in research and creative work, and to develop the spirit of a main force in the scientific and technological as well as the cultural and ideological revolutions.

5. EDUCATE AND FOSTER THE YOUNGER GENERATION AND BUILD A STRONG HCMCYU

The present younger generation is the main force of the new social classes and strata. Youth accounts for 60 percent of the working class, 52 percent of rural workers, 40 percent of the scientific and technological cadres, 80 percent of army and public security combatants, and more than 90 percent of level III and higher students.

We must understand clearly that the younger generation is trained to be both the future champions of the party's revolutionary cause and the shock force of the revolution. As the resolution of the fourth party congress put it: "The bright future of the socialist Vietnamese fatherland is in the hands of the youth, teenagers and children."

Over the past years, young people have made numerous contributions and have matured in many respects. Endowed with fine qualities and considerable potential, they are bringing into play their role as a powerful reserve force of the Vietnamese working class and nation.

However, due to the difficulties encountered and shortcomings developed by the party, the state and society in educating and caring for youth, a number of young people have not yet been able to define a revolutionary ideal for themselves, and their sense of and capacity for collective mastery are still weak. At a time when we are still encountering many difficulties in caring for the employment, education, recreation... of youth, it is worrisome that a number of young people are falling under the influence of the unhealthy neocolonialist and bourgeois lifestyle and of enemy psychological warfare and propaganda. This is a problem to which all party organizations, state organs and social institutions must pay utmost attention so as to turn young people into a generation worthy of being the future champions of the party's glorious revolutionary cause.

THE HO CHI MINH COMMUNIST YOUTH UNION has made a big step in developing its ranks. Its membership has increased to 4.5 million. It has organized and educated more than 5 million teenagers and children. It has, in many forms, engaged assault youths into agricultural and industrial production, combat and study and helped them build a new life. In particular, over the past 3 years the union has trained and introduced to the party some 700,000 outstanding union members, 230,000 of which have been admitted to the party.

However, the organization and operation of the union still do not keep up with the new situation. They are still restricted and unrealistic and are not in line with the demands of grassroots-level union organizations and of youths themselves. Its activities are heavily committed to assault work and to building youth projects. They are not associated with the task of educating and training the entire young generation. Due attention has not been paid to the young people's interests and to the broad youth movement. Therefore, the quality of union members is poor, the grassroots-level union organizations are weak and the organization and assembling of youths is still limited in many respects. The union must carry out more intensively the task of imbuing its members with Marxism-Leninism, socialist revolution and communist ideals. It must educate youths of all walks of life intensively so they will understand their role, duties and rights in the socialist revolution. It must motivate youths to take the lead in the movement to emulate in labor and participate in consolidating national defense, maintaining political security and social order and safety and developing culture and education. At the same time, it must pay great attention to the youths' interests and, together with the party and state, solve their demands and aspirations. Intensively building and making the union politically, ideologically and organizationally firm and strong is an urgent requirement.

In particular, there must be a vigorous change in the building and consolidation of grassroots-level cadres so that the union will be in a position to organize and broadly rally youths, teenagers and children and educate the young generation to become citizens who are politically stable, who have correct thoughts and noble and fine feelings, who are able to exercise the right to collective mastery, who love work and work or study passionately and who are always ready to defend the fatherland. The union is able to fulfill these tasks along with satisfactorily educating backward youths and teenagers, provided that it is organizationally strong, adopts many appropriate methods of broadly organizing and assembling youths, gets closer to youth activities, is subject to the close leadership of party organizations and is given assistance by all administrative echelons and mass organizations with a high sense of responsibility. The campaign launched within the union to participate in developing the party must be accelerated and improved qualitatively in order to make the union truly worthy as the party's reserve force. In this way, the union will be able to complement the party and the working class with new, increasingly large force and to provide the party, sectors, mass organizations and the army with many young outstanding cadres. The union must pay greater attention to developing intensively the Ho Chi Minh vanguard teenagers group and the Ho Chi Minh children's group. It must work out plans for actively developing the body of union cadres and cadres in charge of the teenagers and children's groups. The training and improvement of union cadres must be part of the party's cadre training plan. The party must pay great attention to actively training and improving union cadres into its own reserve force.

6. WOMEN'S LIBERATION AND THE VWU

Vietnamese women, who account for more than 50 percent of our country's population, have become the real masters of their families and society. This is a social productive force playing a major role in the economic, cultural, public health and educational sectors. Endowed with a glorious revolutionary tradition and proficient in both handling state affairs and doing household chores, Vietnamese women have made big strides in achieving liberation and equality with men. The social structure has changed considerably as far as women are concerned. The contingent of women workers who are civil servants is becoming increasingly larger, with women constituting the majority in agricultural and handicraft production cooperatives, small industry and the cultural, educational and public health sectors. The number of women in the armed forces, leading party and state organs and the various mass organizations is growing steadily.

However, at present, Vietnamese women are still being somewhat constrained by backward feudal customs and the vestiges of neocolonialism and are suffering under family burdens, especially at a time when the economic and living conditions remain difficult. This has limited, to no small extent, the progress of Vietnamese women and their participation in labor and social activities.

In the new stage, THE VWU should educate women on bringing into play their traditional "courage and resourcefulness" on the front of productive labor and building and defending the socialist fatherland. The union should care for women's family life and the rearing of their children. It should attend actively to the problems concerning women's welfare and assist them in overcoming the difficulties in daily life and in struggling against backward, feudal and bourgeois customs. In particular, it should pay attention to participating in the formulation of laws, systems and policies ensuring women's collective mastery and their equality with men.

The union should organize women of all strata and rally them in its organizations. It should intensify the training of its cadres, bring its operational methods up to date, and promote cooperation among women while strengthening coordination with the VFF, the VCTU and the HCMCYU. Together with various state organs, it should devote itself to the cause of women's liberation and the building of the new socialist woman.

7. IMPLEMENT SATISFACTORILY THE PARTY'S POLICY REGARDING NATIONALITIES

Never before have the people of various nationalities of the Vietnamese community been united so closely with one another in their common efforts to build socialism and to defend the socialist fatherland as they have been in recent times, although the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists and the imperialists have done everything they could to sow national disunity and to sabotage national solidarity so as to carry out their scheme of aggression and annexation against our country. This is a victory of our party's policy regarding nationalities.

This policy is aimed at achieving complete equality in all fields among various nationalities and creating the necessary conditions for radically abolishing inequalities in economic and cultural standards between the minority and majority nationalities. It is also aimed at enabling the highlands to catch up with the lowlands, promoting the development of all nationalities in all respects and encouraging them to unite with and help one another achieve progress in order to become a community of nationalities acting together as the collective masters of the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

All party committee echelons, administrative organs and mass organizations must understand fully and implement satisfactorily the party's policy regarding nationalities. They must carry out propaganda and educational work even more effectively to enable the people of various nationalities, especially in the northern border areas, to see clearly the Beijing expansionists' and hegemonists' scheme aimed at attracting and dividing them, and to remain alert, stay united and fight resolutely to smash all Beijing's schemes of aggression and sabotage. They should help the people of all nationalities to see clearly the strength of unity in building socialism and firmly defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland. At present, the key measure to improve the material and cultural life of the people of diverse nationalities is to motivate them to be active in developing agriculture and forestry, carrying out the campaign for settled farming and settled life, building and consolidating cooperatives, and developing culture and education. We must satisfy adequately the demands of all families for drinking water, salt, clothing and lamp oil. We must actively lead and guide the people of diverse nationalities in developing a civilized lifestyle and changing and discarding gradually various backward customs and superstitions.

8. SATISFACTORILY CARRY OUT MASS MOTIVATION WORK AMONG THE FOLLOWERS OF VARIOUS RELIGIONS

Due to the victory of the revolution, the party's correct policy, and the efforts of all sectors and levels in motivating the followers of various religions, the latter have become increasingly more attached to the new socialist regime and have joined the various revolutionary movements for socialist construction and national defense. All levels and sectors have implemented actively the party's policy regarding the freedom of worship while suppressing reactionaries resolutely and guiding various churches in associating themselves increasingly with the nation and socialism.

We should help the followers of various religions understand clearly that the party's policy regarding all religions consists of respecting the people's freedom to practice or not to practice a religion, ensuring their normal religious activities, treating all religions equally before the law, and uniting all the patriotic and progressive in various religions who associate themselves with the nation and socialism. This policy, however, does not allow anyone to take advantage of religion to hinder the masses' political and social activities and obstruct productive labor. It advocates resolutely demolishing all subversive propaganda and distortions spread by reactionaries hiding in various religious orders, and frustrating all schemes of the imperialists and their henchmen to take advantage of religion.

In those localities inhabited by large numbers of followers of various religions, all party and administrative echelons and all mass organizations should, on the one hand, pay constant attention to promoting the movement for productive labor and building a new life, actively develop public health and educational services, and devote themselves to improving the material and cultural life of believers. On the other hand, they should attach importance to educating believers in patriotism and socialism and carry out satisfactorily the dissemination of party and state positions and policies, thereby enabling the masses to see clearly the reactionaries' scheme to take advantage of religion. They should also actively unmask the reactionaries and struggle to foil all their maneuvers, guide the churches toward complying with state policies and law, and motivate clergymen to contribute actively to the building of socialism and national defense.

9. INTENSIFY THE VFF'S ACTIVITIES

Today, the VFF is a front for patriotism and the love of socialism, a front of manual and spiritual workers who exert collective mastery on the basis of the worker-peasant alliance led by the party.

As its role has increased in importance in the new stage, the VFF must act as a reliable prop of the state in order to promote national unity, successfully build socialism and firmly defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

The VFF should initiate practical activities to fulfill effectively the following major tasks:

The VFF should reach deeply into all strata of the masses, all nationalities, all religions and all intellectuals to promote their traditional patriotism, raise their socialist consciousness, and motivate them to implement the party's line and policies. On this basis the VFF should strive to strengthen the great national solidarity and heighten the political and moral unity of the people.

The VFF should make every effort to bring into play the working people's collective mastery in all fields -- political, economic, cultural and social -- so as to motivate the entire people to participate enthusiastically in various revolutionary movements, build socialism successfully and defend the socialist fatherland.

The VFF should uphold its responsibilities in participating in the management of the state and society by undertaking practical activities.

It should put its role to good account in building the state -- a state of the people, by the people and for the people -- by motivating the entire people to participate in building and consolidating the administration, and by intensifying its control of the administration's activities.

The VFF should strengthen further the cooperation and coordination among its members so as to disseminate widely its policy and program of action. By so doing it will enable all people to develop their collective mastery, especially at the grassroots level and in villages, wards and enterprises. Formalistic coordination and perfunctory exhortation must be done away with. The front must uphold its role as the key coordinator of the movements for revolutionary actions and in educating the masses.

10. STRENGTHEN PROVINCIAL AND CITY MASS MOTIVATION COMMITTEES

To meet the demand for intensified mass motivation work during the new stage, the party Central Committee Secretariat issued decision No 93 on establishing mass motivation committees. In a province or city, the mass motivation committee serves as the staff of the provincial or city party committee. Its major responsibility is to assist the provincial or city party committee in laying down policies regarding mass motivation work and in strengthening guidance and control of various echelons and sectors of the party, administration and mass organizations in the implementation of directives and resolutions on mass motivation work.

At the same time, the provincial or city mass motivation committee is dutybound to coordinate with the party groups of the various mass organizations in training and formulating plans for cadres to carry out mass motivation and mass organization work. It must also assist the provincial or city party committee echelon in building the party organizations of various organs and mass organizations so as to enable cadres and party members responsible for mass organization work to fulfill their political tasks satisfactorily.

To discharge this function, all provincial and city party committees should implement decision No 93 of the party Central Committee Secretariat scrupulously and strengthen their mass motivation committees. Each district, village, precinct and ward should assign a comrade standing member of the party committee echelon to take direct charge of the mass motivation committee, which comprises this comrade and the key leaders of various mass organizations. The mass motivation committee of a district or precinct should have additional cadres to assist it in its work. Only in this way can it meet the demands of its tasks.

To overcome the neglect of mass motivation work, we must first of all strengthen the leadership of all party committee echelons in mass motivation work. The problem is that provincial and city mass motivation committees must actively take the initative in making suggestions to party committee echelons and conduct profound study to help party committee echelons formulate timely and correct policies and decisions concerning each strata of the masses. At the same time, provincial and city mass motivation committees must satisfactorily carry out the task of organizing and controlling the implementation of these policies and decisions.

Mass motivation committees should review past experiences and develop mass motivation work into a science and an art. Problems concerning mass motivation work must be taught in party schools at all levels. Profound study must be conducted on motivation work directed at each member of the masses to help the party Central Committee issue, in the coming years, specialized resolutions on workers motivation, youth motivation and women motivation work, thereby meeting the new demands of the revolution.

The following tasks must be fulfilled satisfactorily in the immediate future:

— Mass motivation committees, together with the various mass organizations in provinces and cities, must profoundly study the problems already raised in light of the local conditions so as to contribute suggestions on mass motivation work to the draft documents of the forthcoming party congresses at various levels.

— Provincial and city mass motivation committees must be strengthened quickly to meet the demands of the new tasks.

— The various mass organizations must be actively assisted in consolidating their grassroots organizations and formulating plans for the training of cadres for mass motivation work and cadres for the mass organizations.

— Promote a vigorous revolutionary movement of the masses to engage in emulation activities to greet the fifth party congress. This movement must have a practical content and concrete targets so as to help resolve pressing problems concerning production and daily life, security and national defense. It must also help combat negativism everywhere, in rural areas as well as in the cities, especially at the grassroots level.

— Active preparations must be made to review the mass motivation work since 1976 so as to advance to the conference to review mass motivation work in the new stage, which is scheduled to be held in 1982.

Due to the new concepts in mass motivation work, to the strengthening of mass motivation committees from the central to the local level, the tight leadership of all party committee echelons, and the active work of the various mass organizations, the mass motivation work will surely undergo many new changes in the days ahead.

PREPARATIONS FOR ARMY INDUCTION OF YOUTH URGED

BK020349 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 31 Jan 82

[NHAN DAN 1 February editorial: "Carefully Prepare for the Induction of Youths Into the Army"]

[Text] In compliance with the newly promulgated law on military obligation, a large number of youths will be inducted into the army early this year in order to replace those non-commissioned officers and soldiers who have completed their military service. Preparation for this phase of induction has been relatively satisfactory in many localities. Meanwhile, activities aimed at explaining the law on military obligation have been carried out extensively. As a result, our youths and people have been able to understand ever more clearly their national defense obligation. As they have done over the past more than 30 years, wave after wave of youths have joined the army to fight for national independence and freedom under the party's banner. Safeguarding national security has now become the sacred duty of our entire people, while constantly consolidating the all-people's national defense means to firmly ensure success in the struggle to build socialism.

In all localities, obvious progress has been made in the registration of young citizens for military service, in physical examinations for persons reaching the draft age and in the implementation of army rear policies. Although propaganda work has been stepped up, it should be carried out regularly in all localities with emphasis on ideology and in diversified forms. It is necessary to continue to disseminate the newly promulgated law on military obligation on a long-term basis and in combination with the effort to explain clearly the implementation of specific policies in each phase of induction. We must, as an immediate step, carry out activities aimed at fully explaining all the party and state policies in this phase of induction. Efforts must be made to ensure that namelists of persons of draft age or reaching it and those who have been deferred or exempted from induction are posted in all residential areas and work places. Induction of youths into the army must be conducted in accordance with the law and fairly and clearly. Meanwhile, party cadres and members at all levels must play an exemplary role in implementing the law on military obligation.

Before joining the army, it is necessary for our youths to receive political indoctrination and military training and improve their knowledge and professional and technical skills. They must also undergo training to ensure physical fitness and a sense of organization and discipline. These preparations should be made by each city ward, village, hamlet, school, organ and enterprise, as well as by each youth union chapter and family. With the fine "army and people share the same will" tradition, let us demonstrate our love for our soldiers by scrupulously implementing the law on military obligation. It is the duty of all sectors and localities correctly to implement all army rear policies. Meanwhile, it is the reaponsibility of our entire party and people to care for the livelihood of disabled soldiers and families of war dead and other combatants meticulously and to ensure ever more satisfactorily that all the means necessary for army operations are supplied in accordance with the set norms.

To be worthy of their role as a youth training school, all army units, especially all training centers, should make careful preparations to receive the new recruits. All cadres and combatants are dutybound to love and protect their new combat partners and comrades. They must help and encourage each other to fulfill their obligation to the country and people. Full attention must be paid and great efforts must be made to improve gradually the soldiers' material and moral life. National construction and national defense are two closely related strategic tasks. It is the sacred duty of all of us to fulfill these two tasks in our daily activities. Although our people fervently love peace, our enemy is very stubborn and barbarous. In view of this, we must pay constant attention to boosting our fighting strength in order to be able readily to frustrate all schemes of aggression by the international reactionary forces.

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 023 3 February 1982

JAPAN

Suzuki Modifies Stance on Defense Spending C 1
Abe Discusses Joint Arms Research in Diet C 1
Reiteration of Statement C 1

NORTH KOREA

Democratization of South Seen as 'Fundamental' D 1
[NODONG SINMUN 31 Jan]
NODONG SINMUN Hits Chon's 'Confrontation Policy' [2 Feb] D 1
CPRF Scores Sentencing of Students in South D 2
Thai Paper Reports Interview with Kim Yong-nam D 3
[NATION REVIEW 2 Feb]
VRPR: Succession Issue Solved by Kim Chong-il D 4
GFTUK Holds Second Plenary Session 31 Jan-1 Feb D 5
Polish Trade Delegation Arrives for Talks 2 Feb D 5

SOUTH KOREA

Major Parties Urge North To Accept New Proposals E 1
[KOREA HERALD 2 Feb]
KOREA TIMES Views Unification Minister's Plan [2 Feb] E 1
Austrian Foreign Minister Gives Press Conference E 2
Prime Minister Addresses National Issues on TV E 3
[KOREA HERALD 3 Feb]
Deficit With 10 Major Trade Partners Worsening E 3
Seoul Reports Kim Chong-il, Kim Song-ae Discord E 4

KAMPUCHEA

Hun Sen Arrives in Paris for PCF Congress H 1
Hun Sen Protests Pol Pot Group's Presence at UN H 1
Chan Si, Nuon Sareth Address Industry Conference H 1
Keo Chanda Addresses Phnom Penh Trade Meeting H 2
Remarks at Closing H 2
Keo Chanda Addresses Phnom Penh Police Meeting H 3
Yos Por Receives Islamic Development Bank Group H 3
Yos Por Attends Peace in Europe Meeting H 3
USSR Leaders Thanked for Anniversary Greetings H 4
SRV Leaders Thanked for Anniversary Greetings H 4
Leaders' Messages H 4
Hun Sen Message H 5
Agricultural Reportage for 25-31 Jan Period H 5
VODK Notes Cutting of Rail Track in Kaos Kralor H 6

LAOS

PRC Foreign Policy, 'Interference' Condemned I 1
SIANG PASASON Notes Support for Peace Policy [30 Jan] I 1
Strengthening of All-People's Defense Urged I 3
[SIANG PASASON 29 Jan]
PRK Delegation Meets Sali Vongkhamsao, Departs I 4
Kaysone Phomvihan Meets Australian Envoy I 4

THAILAND

Official Sees No Change in ASEAN Policy on DK J 1
[POST 3 Feb]
POST Reports Firing at Kampuchean Border [3 Feb] J 1
Border Crossings Noted J 2
Official on 'Voluntary Relocation' of Refugees J 2
[NATION REVIEW 28 Jan]
Talks Regarding Vietnamese 'Land People' Continue J 3
[NATION REVIEW 28 Jan]
POST: SRV 'Pirates' Release Fishing Trawlers [2 Feb] J 4
High-Level Committee Set Up To Tackle Opium J 5
Seven SAP Members Resign From Parliament J 5

VIETNAM

Press Marks 53d Anniversary of Communist Party K 1
NHAN DAN Editorial [3 Feb] K 1
QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial [3 Feb] K 2
Army Paper Welcomes Soviet Marshal's Visit K 3
[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 3 Feb]
Vo Van Kiet 28 Dec Speech on Assault Youth K 4
[NHAN DAN 6 Jan]
French Communist Party Congress Greeted K 12
VCP Greetings Message K 12
3 Feb NHAN DAN Editorial K 13
Nguyen Duy Trinh Arrives in Paris 1 Feb K 14
U.S. 'Propaganda Campaign' Against Poland Hit K 14
[NHAN DAN 3 Feb]

INDONESIA

Singapore Foreign Minister Meets With Suharto N 1
Mokhtar Comments on Khmer Rouge Rejection N 1
Prawiro Message to Regional Group of 77 Meeting N 2

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Mahathir: Malaysia May Change Stand on DK O 1
STRAITS TIMES Views ASEAN Kampuchean Efforts [30 Jan] O 1
Joint Communique Signed With Saudi Arabia O 2

SINGAPORE

Iraqi Vice President Leads Delegation on Visit O 3
Meeting With Rajaratnam O 3
Meeting With Nair O 3

SUZUKI MODIFIES STANCE ON DEFENSE SPENDING

OW031121 Tokyo KYODO in English 1114 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 3 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, apparently remodifying an earlier stance, told the Diet Wednesday that Japan needn't spend more than 1 percent of its gross national product for defense purposes. Replying to questions by opposition members at a House of Representatives Budget Committee meeting, the prime minister said that he saw no necessity of changing the government's decision in 1976 to keep defense spending within the limit of 1 percent of GNP.

In earlier sessions of the Diet committee, Suzuki expressed his readiness to take a flexible approach toward the government decision. Suzuki said in Wednesday's session, however, that defense expenditures should not exceed the 1 percent limit if the Defense Agency works out its fiscal 1983-1987 five-year buildup plan "as I have instructed."

ABE DISCUSSES JOINT ARMS RESEARCH IN DIET

OW011305 Tokyo KYODO in English 1253 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 1 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said Monday that joint research and development of military technology between Japan and the United States is outside of a government policy banning arms export. Speaking at a House of Representatives committee meeting, Abe said the policy applies only when "jointly developed weapons or military technology are exported." Even then, Defense Agency officials said at the session, the U.S. forces in Japan are "not outlawed" to bring such arms out of Japan under the Japan-U.S. Status of Forces Agreement.

The remarks, interpreted as an apparent sign of easing the policy as far as the United States is concerned, touched off an immediate objection by the opposition camp. Masashi Ishibashi, a senior member of the Japan Socialist Party (JSP) described the government stance as abandoning the policy, a product of Japan's peace Constitution which rejects "war potential."

"It seems the government means to say (such arms and military technology) can be exported anywhere if they go through the U.S. forces in Japan," Ishibashi said.

Reiteration of Statement

OW020345 Tokyo KYODO in English 0329 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 2 (KYODO) -- Japan's anti-weapon export policy does not apply to joint development of new arms or military technology with other countries, a top government official said Tuesday. Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, told reporters after a Cabinet session that the three-point policy, however, bans the exports of "something" which has been created as a result of such joint development. Abe thus reiterated his earlier statement at a Diet committee Monday.

DEMOCRATIZATION OF SOUTH SEEN AS 'FUNDAMENTAL'

SK010515 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0338 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 1 (KCNA) -- If the South Korean rulers have even the slightest desire to solve the reunification question, they must not bring forward such useless stuff as the "proposal on general elections" with loud advertisement but abolish the fascist rule and take practical steps for the democratisation of society. NODONG SINMUN January 31 says this in a signed article headlined "Liquidation of the Military Terror Rule and Democratisation of South Korean Society Are Fundamental Demand for Country's Reunification."

Noting that Chon Tu-hwan the puppet is now kicking up much ado as if his "proposal" were a new one for the solution of the reunification question, the article says: The reunification question cannot be discussed under the condition in which the present military fascist rule is left intact in South Korea. It is one of the fundamental problems of primary importance for the reunification of the country to abolish the military fascist rule and realise the democratisation of society in South Korea.

Today, one of the actual obstacles to the reunification is the repressive policy of the military fascist clique trampling underfoot the democratic freedom and rights of the South Korean people and putting down their desire for national reunification.

Discourse on the reunification question should not be a monopoly of any specific person. All people should be allowed to freely discuss it and actively participate in the patriotic movement for it. Only under such conditions is it possible to achieve national concord and unity.

To democratise South Korean society is a pressing and fundamental demand for the peaceful reunification of the country. Actual obstacles should be removed to open up the road of reunification by realizing the democratisation of South Korean society. This can be possible only when an end is put to the military fascist rule and to its repressive policy in South Korea.

The "national security law" and other fascist laws which suppress the democratic liberties and rights of the people in South Korea must be abrogated and repressive ruling machines abolished. The formation and activities of democratic and patriotic political parties and organisations which call for national reunification should be all legalised and freedom of speech, the press, assembly, demonstration and association, freedom of idea and expression and freedom of political activities by thoroughly guaranteed to the people.

If the South Korean puppets persist in their "proposal" and "agreement" while turning away from these pressing and fundamental problems, they will be unable to escape bitter denunciation at home and abroad as the fascist hangmen and foe of reunification. The present rulers of South Korea must give up the "two Koreas" policy, apologize to the nation for such criminal slaughtering of fellow countrymen as the Kwangju massacre, unconditionally release illegally arrested Kim Tae-chung and all other democratic figures and patriotic people and nullify all the penalties inflicted upon them.

NODONG SINMUN HITS CHON'S 'CONFRONTATION POLICY'

SK021142 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1100 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 2 (KCNA) -- In his recent "unification proposal" traitor Chon Tu-hwan feigned concern for "unification", not uttering a single word about the renunciation of his anticommunist confrontation policy, an essential requisite to national reunification, points out NODONG SINMUN Tuesday.

This, it adds, revealed his intention to bar reunification and perpetuate division by persistently inciting the consciousness of confrontation within the nation.

In an article titled "National Reunification and Anticommunist Confrontation Are Incompatible," the paper says: The question of our country's reunification is not a question of one side vanquishing the other or being vanquished by the other, but a question of terminating foreign domination and interference and achieving national sovereignty on a nationwide scale and removing distrust and confrontation between the North and the South and realising national unity.

If the North or the South tries to force its ideology and social system on the other, it will only deepen the division and, furthermore, spell the tragedy of armed conflicts, far from bringing reunification. The anticommunist confrontation policy pursued by the Chon Tu-hwan clique today is a criminal policy to destroy communism and force its reactionary ruling system on the whole of Korea. The puppets are frantically raising provocative rackets against us, shouting themselves hoarse for "prevailing over communism" and "destroying communism". As if their outcries of anticommunism are not enough, they are openly preparing for a war, shipping in lethal weapons more massively from the United States under the slogan of "anticommunism," "victory over communism" and "destruction of communism."

Due to the anticommunist manoeuvres of the present military fascist group, the tensions between the North and the South are growing still more acute and a constant danger of a war breaking out any moment is felt in our country. Neither national unity nor national reunification can be expected any time under such situation. It is a foolish dream to have a "unification" after destroying communism when there is a strongly rooted socialist system in the northern half of the republic; it means in fact giving up reunification and driving the country deeper into the danger of a war.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique is the main force obstructing reunification and the shock force for the splittist line in South Korea. If his clique truly want reunification, it should seek national reconciliation and unity and remove the elements obstructive to North-South collaboration, instead of pursuing the anticommunist confrontation policy. The anticommunist laws for North-South confrontation must be repealed, the anti-DPRK organisation dissolved and anticommunist rackets fostering confrontation and discord ended in South Korea.

If Chon Tu-hwan persistently follows the line of reckless anticommunist confrontation, deaf to the will and demand of the people, he will meet the same miserable doom as did his predecessors like Syngman Rhee who ran wild, regarding anticommunism as his "life-long business" and Pak Chong-hui who made desperate efforts declaring it his "policy."

CPRF SCORES SENTENCING OF STUDENTS IN SOUTH

SK020506 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0339 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 2 (KCNA) -- The Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] on February 1 issued Information No. 215 denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan group for passing prison terms through recent murderous trials upon many students of the Theological College, the Seoul and Korea Universities and the Sukmyong Women's University in Seoul on charges of "violation of the law on assembly and demonstration."

The information says: As for these students who were harshly penalized by the South Korean fascist clique, they are patriotic students who took the lead in the anti-"government" demonstrations at colleges and universities in Seoul in October, November and earlier last year.

In the campus demonstrations they unanimously denounced the fascist repressive rule of the Chon Tu-hwan group which has turned the campus into a theatre of intelligence and police surveillance, into a military drill ground and plunged the whole of South Korea into a horrible cauldron of fascism and demanded "campus freedom," the "resignation of Chon Tu-hwan," the "disbandment of the Student Homeland Defence Corps" and the "improvement of living conditions." This righteous struggle of students who love justice and truth and are burning with patriotism is an entirely just one reflecting the unanimous demands and desires of the entire students and people of South Korea.

This notwithstanding, Chon Tu-hwan and Co. persecuted and suppressed barehanded students for a long period and finally inflicted penalties upon them. This clearly shows once again that they are most brutal fascist tyrants. The Chon Tu-hwan group must immediately stop the reckless suppression, unconditionally and promptly release the students penalized this time and all the political prisoners and step down from power without delay, as demanded by the South Korean students and people.

THAI PAPER REPORTS INTERVIEW WITH KIM YONG-NAM

BK020145 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 2 Feb 82 p 5

[Report on interview with Kim Yong-nam, secretary of the KWP Central Committee, by NATION REVIEW staffer Somphong Kitthinarathon in Bangkok, 28 January]

[Excerpt] Asked whether North Korea viewed the United States or the Soviet Union the major threats of world peace, he suggested that the military presence of the U.S. in South Korea without "justifications" reflected the aggressive nature of the country.

Beijing has all along pursued the "three world" theory initiated by Mao Zedong and made it known that the major threat to world's peace would likely come from the Soviet Union rather than from the United States.

Kim Yong-nam said: "The Americans first occupied South Korea after the World War II to disarm Japanese soldiers, but they continued to stay on the Korean Peninsula although the war ended over 30 years ago." He added that the United States initially used the excuse of guarding democracy in South Korea and repel any threat from China to justify their military presence there. "But now that the United States has diplomatic relations with China and their relations are very good, there is no reason for their continued presence on the Korean Peninsula," he added.

For whatever reasons, the leading North Korean Communist member named the Soviet Union only once during the 2-hour interview. He referred to the Soviet Union when he talked about the role of the Non-Aligned Movement. "... The relations between the Soviet Union and the United States should be conducted to ensure the security and the peace of the world and the mankind," he said. Yet his statement reflected indirectly that the Soviet Union was also a superpower which should be blamed for the turmoil in the international arena.

Kim Yong-nam also said that the Vietnamese troops, supported by the Soviet Union, should be first withdrawn from Kampuchea to pave way for a final settlement of the Kampuchean conflict. The secretary of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers Party said his country supported the move by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to allow the Khmer people to settle their differences through dialogues, without foreign pressure. "We have and would always oppose the occupation of one country by another," he said.

He said the Kampuchean problem should be resolved in line with the interest of the Khmer people who are "masters" of their own country. "I hope that a dialogue would be held between Kampuchean factions without any pressure in any form from any foreign country," he said.

Asked whether he preferred political or military solutions to the Kampuchean issue, Kim Yong-nam said: "We will not be deeply involved in the question as we respect the sovereignty and independence of Kampuchea."

While China has maintained that the only way to force the Vietnamese out of Kampuchea was to "bleed" them through military struggle, ASEAN appeared to favour political means for the final settlement of the issue. However, Kim Yong-nam said that in his "own opinion," the Vietnamese troops should be first withdrawn from Kampuchea before talks could be held between Kampuchean rival factions.

Referring to the relations between North Korea and China, Kim Yong-nam said: "The relations between the two countries will continue to thrive. Our relationship is everlasting and as green as grass." He added that the friendly relations between Beijing and Pyongyang was based on the common experience they shared driving out the "Japanese imperialism" from their countries. "Our friendship with China is also due to China's firm stand to support the cause of the Korean people to reunify the North and South," he said. Beijing on Saturday attacked the proposal for a reunification of the North and South Korea made by South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan, saying that the reunification proposal would never materialize with the ongoing military presence of the United States. The statement against the proposal came days after Pyongyang rejected the proposal on the same grounds.

Kim Yong-nam dismissed as groundless reports that the relations between Beijing and Pyongyang deteriorated as result of the turmoil during the so-called "Cultural Revolution" initiated by late Chairman Mao Zedong with the backing of the "gang of four" in China. Asked how he interpreted the turmoil period, the North Korean leading personality said: "When the Chinese said this was good we would say the same thing and when the Chinese said it was bad, we would also say that it is bad. You see, this is an internal affair of China."

VRPR: SUCCESSION ISSUE SOLVED BY KIM CHONG-IL

SK030249 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 2 Feb 82

[From "Today's Feature": round table discussion by Kim Chol-min and (Sin Chae-in), both of whom are identified as "masters of ceremony" for the feature program, and by "Ms Yun of our station" -- date and place not given]

[Excerpts] [Sin]: Dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il, the sole successor to the great leader, inherits and is developing the revolutionary cause of chuche advanced by General Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation.

[Kim]: This means that the question of inheriting the cause of the leader, an important question vital to the future of the revolution, has been solved in our country. Why is it a fundamental question of the revolution to inherit the cause of the leader generation after generation?

[Yun]: Because it is a demand arising from the development of the communist movement. The course of constructing a communist society, an ideal one for mankind, is a course of realizing the independence of the working people: a historic cause of long duration. This historic cause of constructing a communist society is a project which demands a serious change in society: so vast a project that it cannot be accomplished in one generation. This cause demands a steady struggle lasting a long time. Accordingly, a change in generation in the course of implementing this cause is inevitable in the development of the revolution.

[Sin]: In order to solve correctly the question of inheriting the cause of the revolution, I think the revolutionary cause of the leader should be inherited by an outstanding leader.

[Yun]: Of course. The working people are those in charge of the revolution and construction.

However, this does not mean that they spontaneously take part in the revolutionary struggle to effect the development of society and achieve the victory of the revolutionary cause. Only when they are under the guidance of the leader can the working people be ideologically awakened and organized, become the main force of history and accomplish the construction of socialism and communism. This means that if the party of the working class should inherit and accomplish, generation after generation, the revolutionary cause advanced by the leader, it should correctly have a successor to the leader. This is an important question vital to the future of the revolution.

[Kim]: Our nation takes great pride in the question of inheriting our revolution. I think this is because that important question has been perfectly solved by having dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il as the sole leader [yuilhan chidoja] who will inherit and develop the revolutionary cause of chuche advanced by the great leader.

[Yun]: Yes. The question of inheriting the revolutionary cause of the leader has been clearly solved by having dear Comrade leader Kim Chong-il as the sole successor to the great leader and as the nation's star of guidance.

GFTUK HOLDS SECOND PLENARY SESSION 31 JAN-1 FEB

SK031053 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1038 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 3 (KCNA) -- The second plenary meeting of the Central Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea [GFTUK] was held in Pyongyang on January 31-February 1. The meeting was attended by Comrade Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, and members and alternate members of the Central Committee of the GFTUK and trade union functionaries of provinces, cities, counties and factories and enterprises.

The meeting discussed the question of thoroughly carrying out the tasks put forward in "The Working Class Should Become the Pivotal Force in the Struggle for Modelling the Whole of Society on the Chuche Idea," a programmatic speech delivered by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth Congress of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea. Kim Pong-chu, chairman of the Central Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions of Korea, made a report; and many attendants took the floor at the meeting. The meeting pointed out that the trade union organisations should put up the ideological, technical and cultural revolutions as their basic tasks and vigorously carry forward the three revolutions among the working class and trade union members.

The meeting stressed that the working class and trade union members should make a breakthrough in the struggle for fulfilling the Second Seven-Year Plan ahead of schedule and adorn 1982 as a most brilliant year in the history of our country by effecting a great revolutionary upsurge in the socialist economic construction this year, a year greeting the 70th birthday of the great leader. The meeting also summed up the work for implementing the teachings on vigorously conducting grand nature-remaking projects with the general mobilisation of the whole party, the whole country and the entire people, given by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the fourth plenary meeting of the Sixth Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea.

POLISH TRADE DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR TALKS 2 FEB

SK022314 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2211 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 3 (KCNA) -- A government trade delegation of the Polish People's Republic headed by Wladyslaw Gwiazda, vice-minister of foreign trade, arrived in Pyongyang on February 2 by air. It was met at the airport by Pang Tae-yul and other personages concerned and Polish Ambassador to Korea Leon Tomaszewski.

MAJOR PARTIES URGE NORTH TO ACCEPT NEW PROPOSALS

SK020205 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 2 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Three major political parties yesterday urged North Korea to accept Seoul's overture for 20 pilot projects without delay, saying there is no reason for Pyongyang's rejection.

In a statement, Pong Tu-hwan, spokesman of the majority Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said the 20-point proposal is a followup measure to President Chon Tu-hwan's new unification formula which is designed to promote national unification. There is no reason whatsoever for North Korea to boycott the "mutually beneficial and most practicable" proposal, and the communist regime will face international criticism and isolation by turning down the proposal, he said.

Kim Chin-pae, spokesman of the first minority Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said the DKP appeals to North Korea to respond to even a few of the 20 pilot projects immediately. "Only by doing so can North Korea satisfy 60 million Korean people's yearning for unification and win international recognition," Kim said.

Yi Song-il, spokesman of the second minority Korea National Party (KNP), said the proposal for 20 pilot projects is a realistic approach to the inter-Korea problems. North Korea should waste no time in accepting the overture which he said provides a systematic approach for national unification.

KOREA TIMES VIEWS UNIFICATION MINISTER'S PLAN

SK020040 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 2 Feb 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Pilot Projects for Unity"]

[Text] The resolution of any sociopolitical issue requires a realistic and practical approach based on thorough analysis and comprehension of all factors involved. This requirement is all the more essential or rather imperative for the national question of Korean territorial unification, which is enormously complex and delicate with a host of internal and external factors intertwined. Also needed in dealing with the unification issue is a firm posture together with far-reaching insightful vision as well as fortitude and patience.

Under these guidelines a comprehensive and moreover reasonable formula was announced by President Chon Tu-hwan some ten days ago, presenting progressive and feasible steps to achieve unification on the basis of national reconciliation and the principle of national self-determination through democratic and peaceful means.

Regrettably however, North Korea has since turned down this bona fide overture on a time-worn pretext, reiterating its calls for a confederation of the two divided parts and an outright change in South Korea's internal system.

Despite the Pyongyang rejection which was hardly surprising as an initial reaciton in view of its past practices and internal vulnerability, Seoul has maintained a positive and resilient stance in the hope that the North Korean communist leadership will one day realize the futility of its sheer intransigency and come to the conference table for sensible talks with the South.

Made with this background was a follow-up proposal by Unification Minister Son Chae-sik, listing 20 "pilot projects" which can be implemented for the promotion of mutual accommodation and gradual cooperation between South and North Korea -- even before the main highlights of President Chon's formula are materialized. The projects may be divided into three categories, designed to facilitate the mutual opening of the respective societies, mutual exchanges and cooperation, and lessening of tension on the peninsula.

Falling in the first category are such ventures as the opening of a highway between Seoul and Pyongyang and also the ports of Inchon and Chinnampo for mutual trade, designating a joint tourist zone between Mts. Sorak and Kumgang, allowing free listening to each other's regular radio programs, and postal exchanges and reunion of separated family members.

Highlighting the second part are the creating of joint fishery zones for fishermen from the two parts, exchange of visits by personages ranging from politicians and businessmen to journalists and artists, and joint research on national history and culture as well as the development of natural resources.

Steps to lessen tension include the removal of all military facilities from and the opening up of the Demilitarized Zone for such productive activities as an ecological survey, and the installation of a hot line between the high commands of the two sides.

What is noteworthy about the proposal is that the projects cited are all feasible -- many not necessitating complicated preparations. And the materialization of any one of them, should full-range implementation be difficult at this stage, would be a meaningful breakthrough and contribute enormously to the much-needed national reconciliation and the alleviation of tension, dispelling mutual distrust and animosity.

If the Pyongyang leadership is not prepared at present to comply with President Chon's far-reaching proposal as a whole, it now has an option to start with small but vital tasks to pave the way for the ultimate territorial unification. To be done away with are ill-conceived denunciations and propaganda campaigns aimed at marshalling sham peace offensives as the time has indeed come to make sincere and constructive efforts for the national task of peaceful reunification, which after all requires an evolutionary, not revolutionary, process.

AUSTRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER GIVES PRESS CONFERENCE

SK300052 Seoul YONHAP in English 0046 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 30 (YONHAP) -- Willibald Pahr, Austrian secretary of state for foreign affairs, Friday expressed his support for President Chon Tu-hwan's Jan. 22 unification formula for the divided Korean Peninsula, saying that "negotiations without precondition are most essential to pave the way for reunification." Winding up his three-day Korea visit with a news conference in Seoul, the Austrian foreign minister also said that he would welcome "the entry of both South and North Korea into the United Nations."

Answering a question on Vienna's possible role in Seoul's establishment of relations with East European countries, Pahr said that he "is prepared to contribute" to that, but that he regarded South Korea's trade with those countries via Austria as "premature."

Touching on bilateral economic cooperation, which appeared to be his major concern during his visit, Pahr said that he hoped the current technical cooperation in the steel and iron-processing industry would be expanded to other sectors, including power transmission and chemistry, in which he said Austria could offer its modern technology to Korea. Pahr also suggested that the two countries make joint-venture investments in third countries where Korean companies have already established themselves.

Pahr also said that he wished his visit would open "another epoch in bilateral relations," and evaluated his meetings with Korean leaders, including those with President Chon and Foreign Minister No Sin-yong, as "candid and fruitful." The Austrian minister, who arrived in Seoul Wednesday as a guest of No, said that he had invited his Korean counterpart to visit Austria to discuss the enhancement of mutual cooperation. Pahr and his party, which included an economic delegation, left Seoul Friday evening.

PRIME MINISTER ADDRESSES NATIONAL ISSUES ON TV

SK030530 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 3 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun, expressing a hope that the inflation will be reduced to a single-digit figure this year, said yesterday the government will implement "follow-up economic measures" gradually and scrupulously lest they damage the economic stability being sought. Yu did not elaborate, but he said the measures will supplement the economic promotion package announced Jan. 14.

Speaking on overall state affairs on a KBS-TV program last night, Yu said that efforts will be redoubled in blotting out systems and structures generating negative psychological elements. He also commented that it is not desirable to overhaul the current college entrance system and that the prospects for Korea-Japan economic cooperation involving the "$6 billion issue" are optimistic. The premier made these and other remarks when questioned by Chong Chu-yong, chairman of the Federation of Korean Industries, Prof. Ko Yong-pok of Seoul National University and Mrs. Chong Hui-kyong, principal of Ewha Girl's High School.

On the economic front, Yu said the economy is being stabilized thanks to the government's economic stabilization policy. "The government is confident that the nation will be able to achieve a steady economic progress this year by maintaining a balance between growth and stability," he said. He emphasized the need for purification of the social climate through "spiritual renovation." "The government will rectify the climate in which those with negative minds earn profits while honest and sincere persons suffer," he said.

Noting that President Chon Tu-hwan called for national efforts to expel "three negative psychological elements" in his new year policy statement Jan. 22, Yu emphasized that those in the leading echelon should take the lead in this drive.

Asked on the Korea-Japan economic cooperation, he said that the two countries have agreed to hold a foreign ministers' conference as soon as possible. He made it clear that the government is doing its level best to tackle the economic cooperation issue.

Commenting on the controversial college entrance system, he observed that the educational policy should be implemented with continuity and should not be changed frequently. Yu said that he does not think that the present system is totally bad, in that it had eliminated extracurricular tutoring and lessons and improved the problems of repeaters, among others. However, the premier said, the government intends to modify the system if necessary.

On the national defense, Yu said, "we are going to exert our best efforts to reinforce the national power to help implement peaceful unification. To this end, war deterrent should be secured first of all, which is necssary to prevent war and ease tension on the peninsula." "Our endeavor to maintain war deterrent will make northern communists give up their scheme to conquer this republic through violence," he observed.

DEFICIT WITH 10 MAJOR TRADE PARTNERS WORSENING

SK020222 Seoul YONHAP in English 0207 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb 2 (YONHAP) -- The trade imbalance between South Korea and its 10 major trading partners, including the United States and Japan, continues to grow, the Korean Traders Association said Tuesday.

A report compiled by the association showed that the country imported 21,096 million U.S. dollars' worth of commodities from the 10 countries last year, while exporting only 13,096 million dollars' worth, thus registering a trade imbalance of 8 billion dollars.

The KTA said that the figure represents a 10.8-percent increase over that of 7,222 million dollars in 1980.

Last year, the country suffered a trade deficit of 2.93 billion dollars with Japan, which accounted for 36.6 percent of the total imbalance figure for the year. The trade deficit with amounted to 2,487 million dollars [as received], with Kuwait, 1,364 million dollars, and with the United States, 49 million dollars.

The KTA report indicated that the combined deficits involving the 10 countries far exceeded the country's over-all trade deficit of 5,139 million dollars last year, and added that the country should give top priority to the reducing of this trade imbalance with major trading partners.

Meanwhile, the amount of [the] country's imports from the 10 countries accounted for 80.7 percent of its total imports last year, down 3.1 percent from that of the previous year, and the amount of exports to the 10 countries accounted for 62.4 percent of total exports, 3.1 percent decrease from that of 1980.

SEOUL REPORTS KIM CHONG-IL, KIM SONG-AE DISCORD

SK030018 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo -- Report by correspondent Chong Yong-sok -- According to today's edition of TONGIL ILBO published in Tokyo, Chongnyon recently issued a directive to reduce greatly the scale of ceremonial functions on the 41st birthday of Kim Chong-il. It had been busy mobilizing its organizations to celebrate Kim's birthday on a large scale. The newspaper reported that the reason for this sudden change is discord in Kim Il-song's (?family).

According to a Chongnyon source, the 28th meeting of the Chongnyon Standing Committee last November issued a directive to its organizations to prepare to celebrate the birthday of leader Comrade Kim Chong-il on a large scale. The meeting adopted a decision to hold various study and lecture meetings and banquets and to make Chongnyon-affiliated Koreans in Japan send a gift worth over 500,000 yen to Pyongyang as a token of loyalty. The meeting also decided to encourage Japanese to send congratulatory messages and gifts to Pyongyang.

According to the newspaper, however, Pyongyang authorities on 19 January suddenly instructed Chongnyon to curtail greatly ceremonial functions and to reduce the number of people to be mobilized for a ceremonial meeting in Osaka from 3,000 to 300. The newspaper said that, enraged by the outbreak of discord between Kim Chong-il and his stepmother, Kim Song-ae, Kim Il-song personally issued this directive.

According to a news source, Kim Song-ae, who has been involved in a fierce struggle with Kim Chong-il, told Kim Il-song at the beginning of this year that Kim Chong-il had abused her sons and that he had been called a madman in Japan. Enraged by this, Kim Il-song has issued a directive to curtail ceremonial functions on Kim Chong-il's birthday.

Because of this, Kim Il-song's high blood pressure has worsened, preventing his public appearance and causing rumors about his serious illness in Pyongyang, the news source said.

HUN SEN ARRIVES IN PARIS FOR PCF CONGRESS

BK030703 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0408 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 3 Feb (SPK) -- At the invitation of the French Communist Party [PCF], a delegation of the KPRP led by Hun Sen, Central Committee Political Bureau member, arrived in Paris on Monday, 1 February, to attend the 24th PCF Congress.

The KPRP delegation was welcomed upon its arrival by Maxime Gremetz, Political Bureau member and PCF Central Committee Foreign Relations Commission chairman; Robert Boulot, Central Committee member; Dr Kim Vien, Association for the Understanding and Development of Kampuchea (Ascodeka) chairman; Prof Keng Vansak, Aid to Kampuchea Committee chairman; and many Kampucheans residing in France.

HUN SEN PROTESTS POL POT GROUP'S PRESENCE AT UN

BK030730 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0417 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 3 Feb (SPK) -- On Monday, 1 February, Hun Sen, Council of Ministers vice chairman and minister of foreign affairs, addressed a message to UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar strongly protesting against the illegal and immoral presence of the genocidal criminals of genocide and the usurpation of its [sentence as received]. We reproduce below the text of Vice Chairman Hun Sen's message:

At a time when the UN General Assembly is holding a special session to examine Israel annexation of the Golan Heights, I have the honor to refer to my telegram of 19 September 1981 and to remind you once more that the so-called Democratic Kampuchea no longer exists, since the Kampuchean people overthrew it on 7 January. Its representatives stand only for the genocidal criminals such as Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan -- hated and condemned by the entire Kampuchean people. Actually, they can continue their criminal acts along the Kampuchean-Thai border only with the support in arms, ammunition and supplies of the Beijing powerholders and the complicity of the Bangkok authorities. On the other hand, their presence in this assembly seriously affects the honor and dignity of this august organization.

The PRK Government energetically protests against this illegal and immoral presence of the genocidal criminals and the usurpation of its seat at the UN. Born from democratic general elections with universal suffrage, it is the sole government entitled to legally represent the Kampuchean people in all international bodies and able to ensure obligations derived from them. Enjoying the people's support, it effectively runs the entire territory for the people's well-being.

CHAN SI, NUON SARETH ADDRESS INDUSTRY CONFERENCE

BK311131 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 29 January the Ministry of Industry organized the opening of the second industrial conference at the former royal palace to sum up the 1981 achievements and develop plans for 1982 under the chairmanship of Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense. In his opening speech, Comrade Chan Si, chairman of the presidium, gave a detailed report on the victories scored by the Kampuchean people in 1981. He noted that successes in the industrial field had actively contributed to the restoration of our national economy. The comrade added that, due to the determined struggle of the Kampuchean working class, these numerous achievements in the industrial field are important to the Kampuchean revolutionary cause and its development. He exhorted our Kampuchean working class to exert every effort to strengthen and develop its primary responsibility -- leading the revolution and building a new society in Kampuchea.

He stressed that parallel with the duty of increasing production, we should all heighten our patriotic spirit by closely linking it with national union and international solidarity -- particularly with our Vietnamese and Lao friends -- in order to defeat all of the enemies' maneuvers aimed at destroying our Kampuchea revolutionary gains.

Later, Comrade Nuon Sareth, vice minister of industry, read a report on the achievements scored by the ministry in 1981 and the directives to be implemented in 1982 in order to restore the national economy and increase industrial and handicraft production. The comrade stressed that due to its uncorrupted conscience and its confidence in the KPRP leadership, the Kampuchean working class has managed to distinguish friend from foe by heightening its patriotism and proletarian internationalist solidarity. Patriotism and international solidarity have been demonstrated in the spirit of mastery by factories and enterprises, and in the spirit of saving, and improving and increasing production. Our fraternal workers always follow the slogan: Increasing production is loving the nation; saving is loving the people.

KEO CHANDA ADDRESSES PHNOM PENH TRADE MEETING

BK01123 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] A meeting was held at the former royal palace at 0700 on 29 January to sum up the year's achievements of Phnom Penh's trade office. Comrade (Ek Sun Chau), acting director of the municipal trade office, took the floor to read a report on the successes scored by the office in controlling and improving the supply of goods to cadres, employees and workers of all ministries and offices in Phnom Penh.

Keo Chanda, Phnom Penh Municipal Party Committee secretary and people's revolutionary committee chairman, then took the floor to inform the meeting participants about the difficulties encountered as well as progress recorded by the trade office. In conclusion, he said that in the future, the flow and exchange of goods among the three countries in Indochina will be further expanded to cope with the development of their proletarian internationalist solidarity.

Remarks at Closing

BK030235 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 30 January 1982 the meeting of the Phnom Penh trade office successfuly ended after detailed discussions and clarifications of 1981 achievements. On that occasion, Comrade (Ek Sun Chau), acting director of the Phnom Penh trade office, indicated and highly praised cadres, employees and workers of the Phnom Penh trade office for their tough struggle, their efforts and achievements in serving our people. He added that these noble successes are due to the assistance of various ministries and close cooperation with Vietnamese friends, and particularly to directives on all movements given by the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Affairs Control Committee secretary.

Later, Comrade Keo Chanda, Phnom Penh Municipal Party Affairs Control Committee secretary and Phnom Penh Municipal People's Revolutionary Committee chairman, took the floor and deeply thanked the Phnom Penh trade office for its successes during the past year. He indicated that these successes are evidence of confidence in our party's clear-sighted and correct leadership and in our own power. On the other hand, these good results are achieved by good work in developing the framework of our revolutionary society at present. Parallel with this, all of us should raise higher the banners of internal and proletarian internationalist solidarity, in particular with Vietnamese friends.

KEO CHANDA ADDRESSES PHNOM PENH POLICE MEETING

BK311230 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] A meeting was held at the Phnom Penh municipal police office on the morning of 28 January to sum up achievements in 1981 and set targets to be fulfilled in 1982. Attending the meeting were Comrade Yit Kim Seng, minister of health; Comrade Keo Chanda, secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Committee and chairman of the municipal people's revolutionary committee; and several representatives of various offices, departments and factories under the central organization.

On this occasion, Comrade Khim Pon, chief of the Phnom Penh municipal police and member of the municipal people's revolutionary committee, read a report summing up the achievements scored by the municipal police department in 1981 and defining the security targets to be carried out in all ministries, offices, factories, enterprises, hospitals and schools in 1982. He went on to say that under the correct leadership of the KPRP, close cooperation has been fostered among all ministries, offices and factories throughout the capital to smash all the subversive activities and psychological tricks of the enemy.

Following this, Comrade Keo Chanda, secretary of the municipal party committee and chairman of the municipal people's revolutionary committee, took the floor to express high appreciation for the protection provided by the municipal police to various ministries, offices and factories during the past 3 years. He stressed the role and duty that all ministries, offices and factories should continue to play and fulfill in vigorously and faithfully implementing and contributing to the protection of state property, maintaining law and order, ensuring social safety and promoting political security to the best of their ability.

YOS POR RECEIVES ISLAMIC DEVELOPMENT BANK GROUP

BK281021 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Comrade Yos Por, secretary general of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council and chairman of the Committee To Receive Aid From the Islamic League, received in audience at the front council's office on the afternoon of 25 January a delegation of the Islamic Development Bank [IDB] led by ('Abd al-'Aziz), an assistant of the IDB.

Speaking on that occasion, ('Abd al-'Aziz) praised our party and front for their feats and successes in restoring and rebuilding the country from the heaps of ashes and ruins left behind by the Pol Pot clique. The head of the delegation also spoke on the aid of $1 million and 14 tons of educational material that the IDB has given the Cham nationals for rebuilding school buildings, infirmaries and mosques. In reply, the comrade secretary general of the KUFNCD National Council thanked the Islamic League for giving this generous aid to the Cham people and children, as well as the Kampuchean people in general, for use in rehabilitating their education, culture, health, religion and customs ruined almost completely by the Pol Pot clique.

The conversation proceeded in a joyous and cordial atmosphere permeated with warm friendship.

YOS POR ATTENDS PEACE IN EUROPE MEETING

BK241003 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1430 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Jan (SPK) -- On 21 January the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association and the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association organized a solemn meeting in Phnom Penh to honor the day of peace, security and cooperation in Europe.

Present on that occasion were Yos Por, general secretary of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] and chairman of the Kampuchea-USSR Friendship Association; Phlek Piroun, general secretary of the National Assembly and chairman of the Kampuchean Red Cross; and Sieng Saran, general secretary of the Kampuchean Committee for the Defense of Peace. The presence of (Goreatchenkov), counselor of the Soviet Embassy, was also noted.

On that occasion, Sieng Saran spoke on international tension provoked by the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing expansionists, and severely condemned the U.S. imperialists' hostile policy toward the USSR and Poland. (Goreatchenkov) said that the USSR works for relaxation in the world situation and also for international detente. He indicated that the U.S. imperialists seek to destroy the world revolutionary movement and socialist countries' efforts to bring peace and security.

Those attending expressed their support for the USSR's peace initiatives put forward during the 26th CPSU Congress and the 35th and 36th UN Sessions.

USSR LEADERS THANKED FOR ANNIVERSARY GREETINGS

BK311145 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Recently Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the PRK Council of State; and Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and acting chairman of the PRK Council of Ministers, sent a message to Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and chairman of the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium; and Comrade Nikolay Tikhonov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, thanking them for their greetings on the occasion of the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day. The message reads:

On behalf of the KPRP Central Committee, the PRK Council of State and Council of Ministers and the entire Kampuchean people, and in our own names, we would like to sincerely thank you, the CPSU Central Committee, the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium, the Council of Ministers and the Soviet people for their warm greetings on the occasion of the third anniversary of our 7 January National Independence Day. We would like to asure you once more that the KPRP, the Kampuchean Government and the entire Kampuchean people highly praise the generous, timely and effective aid and support of the fraternal Soviet people in changing our economic and social fields and in defending our nation during the past 3 years. The Kampuchean party and people would like to deeply thank the Soviet party, government and people.

We are confident that friendly relations, militant solidarity and fraternal cooperation in all fields between our two countries and peoples -- based on the principle of proletarian internationalism -- will be strengthened and developed with every passing day for the prosperity of our two peoples, peace and socialism.

Please accept our best wishes. May you enjoy the best of health, and score more and greater successes in your noble duties and in fulfilling the program adopted by the 26th CPSU Congress.

SRV LEADERS THANKED FOR ANNIVERSARY GREETINGS

Leaders' Messages

BK291325 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Recently Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the PRK Council of State; Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the PRK National Assembly; and Comrade Chan Si, acting chairman of the PRK Council of Ministers, sent a message to Comrade Le Duan, general secretary of the VCP Central Committee; Comrade Truong Chinh, chairman of the SRV Council of State; and Comrade Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the SRV National Assembly, thanking them for their congratulations on the occasion of the third anniversary of the PRK's 7 January National Independence Day. The message reads:

On behalf of the Kampuchean people, the KPRP Central Committee, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers of the PRK, and in our own names, we sincerely thank you comrades, the Vietnamese people, the VCP, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers of the SRV for the congratulations full of fraternal sentiments sent us on the occasion of the third anniversary of the 7 January 1979 victory won by our Kampuchean people over the reactionary Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique.

Based on the spirit of proletarian internationalist struggle, since the liberation day on 7 January 1979, the Vietnamese people have continued to give their unreserved support to the Kampuchean revolution in the reconstruction of our country and the defense of our independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

Vietnam is a barrier for and plays a significant role in the defense of peace, stability and national independence of the three Indochinese countries in opposition to the expansionist policy of the Chinese hegemonists, who have colluded with the U.S. imperialists to interfere in and wage aggression against the three countries in an attempt to topple the revolutionary forces of the three peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

We are elated to see that the militant solidarity, special friendship and close fraternal cooperation between our two countries are developing, flourishing and scoring great victories over the maneuvers of interference of the hegemonists, imperialists and reactionary forces aiming at creating tension in Southeast Asia and in the world. We pledge to preserve and broaden our militant solidarity and special friendship and to always abide by the treaty of cooperation between our two countries.

Hun Sen Message

BK291047 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] On 11 January Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of foreign affairs of the PRK, sent a message of thanks and congratulations to Comrade Nguyen Co Thach, SRV minister of foreign affairs. The message says:

I would like to extend profound thanks to you for your congratulations on the occasion of the third anniversary of the 7 January National Independence Day of the PRK. I am elated at all the great victories scored by the fraternal Vietnamese people in their national construction and defense. Over the past few years, the bonds of militant solidarity, historic friendship and all-round cooperation between our two countries have reached a most splendid stage in the strengthening and broadening of relations. I am convinced that this year the ties between our two countries have reached a most splendid stage in the strengthening and broadening of relations. I am convinced that this year the ties between our two peoples and with the fraternal Lao people will further consolidate and flourish.

May you, comrade, enjoy good health and successes in all your noble tasks.

AGRICULTURAL REPORTAGE FOR 25-31 JAN PERIOD

BK010429 [Editorial Report] Kampuchean media have reported the following agricultural developments in the reporting period 25-31 January:

Svay Rieng: Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian at 1230 GMT on 24 January reported that in Kompong Rou District over 5,000 hectares of rainy season rice has been harvested and 359 hectares of dry season rice planted.

Kompong Chhnang: At 0400 GMT on 24 January the radio reported that by mid-January 1,000 hectares of dry season rice had been transplanted and more than 400 hectares of cassava, corn and sweet potato planted. Of the rainy season rice crop, 88 percent has been harvested and more than 3,000 tons of seed have been selected for planting next season. Some 2,000 tons of rice have been sold to the state.

Pursat: At 0400 GMT on 25 January the radio reported that by mid-January 51,000 hectares of rice had been harvested and over 400 hectares of dry season rice transplanted, along with 650 hectares of corn, 230 hectares of cassava, 150 hectares of potato, 260 hectares of mung beans, 50 hectares of peanuts, over 400 hectares of vegetables and 130 hectares of other food crops. The report said that the rice yield was 46,000 tons, despite the fact that 5,500 hectares of rice was destroyed by floods and droughts. Plans call for 2,000 hectares of flood receding rice to be planted along the Tonle Sap Lake. In the past year 6,500 tons of fish have been caught, and plans call for 8,000 tons to be caught this year.

Kompong Speu: According to the radio at 0400 GMT on 26 January there are 100,000 sugar palm trees in the province. Since the beginning of the season 275 tons of sugar have been produced, and the provincial trade office plans to buy 3,500 tons during the entire season.

Takeo: At 1230 GMT on 29 January the radio reported that in Prey Kabbas District 80 percent of the rice has been harvested. The target for dry season rice production is 7,800 hectares. The district has over 15,000 head of oxen and 62 buffalo.

Kandal: The radio reported at 1230 GMT on 30 January that in Kaoh Thom District over 3,000 hectares of rainy season rice has been transplanted. Of the planned 8,000 hectares of dry season rice, 1,000 hectares has already been planted. Phnom Penh SPK in French at 0356 GMT on 28 January reported that by mid-January peasants in the province's production solidarity groups had planted 9,620 hectares of rice. Peasants in Kien Svay had planted 1,770 hectares and those in Kaoh Thom 1,150 hectares. Peasants have also planted 620 hectares of corn, more than 3,530 hectares of potato and cassava, 870 hectares of beans and hundreds of hectares of other crops. The province plans to grow 40,000 hectares of dry season rice. By 20 January the province had harvested 10,640 hectares of rice from a total area of 51,930 hectares planted in the rainy season. An "important part" of the crop was damaged by floods. At 0355 GMT on 28 January SPK reported that in the month of January fishermen caught 4,400 tons of fish.

Phnom Penh: At 1445 GMT on 30 January SPK reported that during the rainy season Phnom Penh grew about 1,800 hectares of rice and 300 hectares of subsidiary crops. The city's fishermen caught 1,000 tons of fish and produced 440,000 liters of fish sauce. Sixty percent of the draft animals and 80 percent of the pigs have been vaccinated against animal diseases.

VODK NOTES CUTTING OF RAIL TRACK IN KAOS KRALOR

BK230550 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Last December our comrades in arms on the Kaos Kralor battlefield killed 16 Vietnamese enemy aggressors and wounded 21 others for a total of 37 casualties. They destroyed 2 military barracks and seized a boat, 3 AK's, 500 rounds of AK ammunition, 15 M-79 grenades, 3 bags of goods and a quantity of materiel. In that month, our comrades in arms cut 35 sections of railway track for a total of 650 meters. Concerning the production of primitive weapons, our comrades in arms made and planted 70,000 new spikes, dug 150 new punji pitfalls and set up 100 new automatic bows.

Long live our valiant army, guerrillas and people on the Kaos Kralor battlefield!

PRC FOREIGN POLICY, 'INTERFERENCE' CONDEMNED

BK020806 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0400 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Unattributed article: "What Is Beijing Aiming At?"]

[Excerpts] Events in 1981 clearly show that Beijing's statements and deeds in the international arena were completely inconsistent. China has spent large sums of money to conceal the true intentions hidden in its foreign policy. This is to avoid condemnation of China's statements that its actions are intended for peace. Nevertheless, all its efforts have failed. Last year's events involving China's foreign policy were exposed at the congress of the Soviet Communists in February 1981. It was pointed out in the 26th CPSU Congress that China's foreign policy was intended to aggravate the world situation.

The Chinese expansionists' threats are always aimed at the various Indochinese countries. Instead of negotiating with Vietnam, Beijing has shelled Vietnamese territory, slaughtered unarmed people and children, burned down houses and destroyed the people's crops in the border areas. The counterrevolutionaries operating in Laos have also received Chinese support in terms of war equipment shipped from Yunnan Province. A special Chinese company has been sending weapons and ammunition to these counterrevolutionaries.

It is now clear that China wants to gradually swallow up the LPDR. To achieve this aim, China maintains relations with the present anti-government elements and with the old feudalist warlords, in an attempt to set up a united front opposing the Lao revolution. China also hopes to build a Meo kingdom in the north of Laos. Bandit gangs and spies are carrying out activities to sabotage the sovereignty of Laos. Meanwhile, provocations have taken place along the border.

It is the direct interference in the internal affairs of independent and sovereign Kampuchea by the imperialists and the expansionists that has caused tension along the Kampuchean-Thai border. In late 1981 China and the United States engaged in a large-scale operation to set up a coalition government of Pol Pot and the exiled reactionaries so that they could compel this government to implement a political system dictated by them. Beijing continues to supply arms and other military equipment to the Pol Pot bandit bands and is encouraging them to oppose the PRK.

The United Nations once studied and reviewed the Kampuchea question and the confusion caused by Beijing and Washington. Eventually, the Beijing-Washington plan on the establishment of the coalition government failed. It was not accidental that representatives of various countries humiliated those causing confusion to the Kampuchean people at the recent UN General Assembly session. The scope of interference by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists does not merely cover Indochina. This interference has extended to other regions. India is also a target of the expansionists and hegemonists.

SIANG PASASON NOTES SUPPORT FOR PEACE POLICY

BK311254 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 30 Jan 82

[SIANG PASASON 30 January editorial: "Our Correct and Just Foreign Policy Has Been Wholeheartedly Supported by the World's Peoples"]

[Text] Each of our victories is closely related to the wholehearted support and assistance from the fraternal socialist countries and friendly countries throughout the world. The implementation of our foreign policy of peace, independence, sovereignty and socialism over the past 5 years has helped to boost the role and position of the LPDR in the international arena, thus creating favorable conditions for defending and building our beloved country.

We are very proud to see that our country has now become a full-fledged member of the socialist family with the great Soviet Union as the mainstay. The militant alliance and special relationship among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea have developed even further in all fields. Our all-round cooperation and relations with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries have been consolidated and strengthened. The glorious success of the meeting of the vice foreign ministers of Laos, Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and some other socialist countries, held in Vientiane in December 1981, clearly shows the unanimous support of the fraternal socialist countries for the just struggle of our people as well as for the three Indochinese countries.

The strengthening of the militant solidarity and special relations of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea as well as the strengthening of solidarity and all-round cooperation between our country and the Soviet Union and other socialist countries constitute a firm cornerstone for the foreign policy of our party and state. Persistently pursuing an unwavering policy of peace, friendship and good-neighbor relations, and closely coordinating with the other two fraternal Indochinese countries, our foreign affairs minister paid visits to some countries in Southeast Asia, including Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines, Burma and Thailand. Those visits served not only to further strengthen the good-neighbor relations and friendship with those countries, but to increase better understanding with them as well, thus paving the way for further negotiations between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries with a view to turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, friendship, stability and cooperation.

As a member of the nonaligned coordinating committee, Laos has positively contributed to the solidarity of the Nonaligned Movement in opposing imperialism, and has persistently supported the struggle to establish a new international economic order on the basis of equality and respect for each other's sovereignty. At the United Nations, we have resolutely exposed the scheme of the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries, opposed the arms race, and demanded reductions of armed forces for peace, international detente and the security of all countries.

Our achievements in international affairs include the victory of the foreign policy of our party, which clearly identifies friends from foes, closely coordinates genuine patriotism with glorious proletarian internationalism, and coordinates the strength of our country with the strength of the militant alliance of the three Indochinese countries. It also aims at developing close solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries and transforming the epochal strength into the overall strength to serve the revolutionary struggle of our people and the international obligations of our party and state.

In the new period, our party, state and people should strive to create more favorable international conditions in order to contribute to the fulfillment of the socialist transformation and construction of our country, to build gradually the technical and material foundations for socialism, to consolidate national defense, and to stand shoulder to shoulder with the fraternal socialist countries and other countries struggling for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism in the struggle against imperialists, the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and all reactionary forces. In this way appropriate contributions will be made to the overall victory of our country and the continual growth and development of the revolutionary forces in the world, and new favorable conditions for our party, state and people will be created to fulfill more effectively their international obligations.

STRENGTHENING OF ALL-PEOPLE'S DEFENSE URGED

BK291646 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 29 Jan 82

[SIANG PASASON 29 January editorial: "Effectively Strengthen the All-People's National Defense and Public Security Work"]

[Text] Respected listeners: The all-people's national defense and public security work is a spearhead for all movements in the cause of national transformation and construction, particularly at a time when tension continues to prevail in Southeast Asia and when the imperialists and the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists are colluding to sabotage the tranquillity and stability of the people in this region, for example, of our country which is an outpost of the socialist camp in the region.

Last year the reactionaries in the Beijing ruling circles went deeper in their collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to oppose the revolution in our country as well as in other Indochinese countries. They have energetically mustered and built political and military forces for the exiled Lao reactionaries and engaged in subversive activities against our revolution in many forms and by many heinous tactics. They have coordinated armed activities with their psychological warfare, economic blockade and with cultural activities and have carried out hostile activities in the diplomatic field.

Particularly, they have penetrated and sabotaged our political bases, caused internal disturbances, divided various tribes, launched propaganda campaigns slandering our party and state line and policies and energetically built underground forces to fulfill their schemes of a peaceful transition and to overthrow our new system through riots.

We have correctly implemented the resolution of the Political Bureau on the task of going to the grassroots establishments while mobilizing the masses to attack the enemy, building political bases, boosting production and improving the people's living conditions. We have successfully propagated the eighth resolution of the LPRP Central Committee and the resolution on opposing the enemy's psychological warfare tactics and have translated into practice the resolution on the national defense and public security work and the regional military work and the resolutions adopted at the conference of various nationalities, thereby contributing to the progress and development of our all-people's national defense and public security work.

Our people of all nationalities have deeply understood the enemy's cunning maneuvers and are contributing more enthusiastically to making the country peaceful and stable by boosting production, building a new life and encouraging an increasing number of their sons and husbands to join the armed forces. This is why our regular, regional and militia-guerrilla forces have grown rapidly in both quality and quantity. Our political, economic and military forces are coordinating more closely with the regular, regional and militia-guerrilla forces. As a consequence, many of the enemy's underground forces have been dismantled in many areas; and various commando and spy units of the enemy and its provocative and sabotage activities carried out from Chinese and Thai territories have been defeated. This is why our country -- from the rural to the suburban areas and on our frontier and in various strategic areas -- has been firmly defended. The situation in the country has also been further normalized and pacified. Political bases in many areas have been effectively consolidated. Nevertheless, the country's enemies have not yet given up their evil intention to disturb, threaten, and sabotage us in the hope of swallowing up our country.

For this reason, the tasks of our armed forces and the entire people remain heavy. We must heighten our vigilance and continue to carry out more effectively the all-people's national defense and public security work. Meanwhile, we must strive to build the country, consolidate political bases and increase production. Only through these means can we fulfill the party's two strategic tasks -- to defend and build the country.

Past experiences show that once we heighten our vigilance, firmly grasp the party and state line of all-people's national defense and public security, mobilize the entire army and people to apply political, economic and military guidelines and vigorously go to the grassroots establishments, we can inevitably smash all enemy maneuvers and bring happiness and tranquillity to our country.

PRK DELEGATION MEETS SALI VONGKHAMSAO, DEPARTS

BK190813 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] On the morning of 18 January, Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary in the Secretariat of the LPRP Central Committee, received at the office of the National Planning Committee a delegation of the Propaganda and Training Board of the KPRP Central Committee led by Comrade Pao Hamphan, deputy chief of the Propaganda and Training Board. The delegation was accompanied by Comrade Son Khamvanvongsa, deputy chief of the LPRP Central Committee Propaganda and Training Board.

During the talks, which were filled with an atmosphere of cordial friendship, Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao expressed joy over the delegation's visit to Laos, which is serving to strengthen the special solidarity and all-round fraternal cooperation between Laos and Kampuchea. Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao touched briefly on the relations and cooperation between the two countries following the establishment of the Indochinese Communist Party, which cannot be sabotaged or destroyed by any enemy. He also said that the success of the fraternal Kampuchean people in their national defense and construction is regarded as a great success for the Lao people. On this occasion, on behalf of the LPRP Central Committee, government and Lao people, Comrade Sali Vongkhamsao extended cordial regards and love to the party and state leaders and the fraternal Kampuchean people. He wished that the special solidarity and all-round cooperation between Laos and Kampuchea, as well as among Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam, will last forever.

On the afternoon of the same day, the delegation led by Comrade Pao Hemphan returned home. It was seen off at Wattai Airport by Comrade Son Khamvanvongsa, Comrade Neou Samon, PRK ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos, and senior cadres concerned.

During its 15-day visit to Laos, in addition to giving lectures on the victories recorded by the Kampuchean people over the past 3 years of national defense and construction at many places, such as the high school of the LPRP Central Committee and other places in Vientiane, Savannakhet and Champassak and at meetings of senior cadres, the delegation paid courtesy calls on many Lao leaders and met and exchanged views on political and ideological issues with the Propaganda and Training Board of the LPRP Central Committee led by Comrade Son Khamvanvongsa. The delegation also met with the Savannakhet and Champassak Provincial Party Committees and visited some economic establishments and ancient ruins in the three provinces.

KAYSONE PHOMVIHAN MEETS AUSTRALIAN ENVOY

BK190735 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 18 January, Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan received Philip Peters, Australian ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos. On this occasion, Prime Minister Kaysone Phomvihan expressed thanks to the Australian people through the ambassador for their assistance, which has contributed to economic transformation and construction in Laos. Regarding regional issues, Kaysone Phomvihan reiterated Laos' unswerving political policy of peace, stability and cooperation and his desire for meetings and talks among countries in the region. The talks between the guest and the host proceeded in an atmosphere of friendship.

OFFICIAL SEES NO CHANGE IN ASEAN POLICY ON DK

BK030050 Bangkok POST in English 3 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Bangkok yesterday said Thailand had not been informed of any impending change in policy by ASEAN countries towards the Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

Chet Sutcharitkun, chief of the ministry's Information Department, said there had been no official move by any ASEAN member to remove the Khmer Rouge from the United Nations.

However, earlier yesterday MP Anan Buranawit said Thailand should withdraw its recognition for Democratic Kampuchea if the three Kampuchean resistance factions could not form a coalition government before the opening of the new UN General Assembly in October. Mr Anan, MP for Sara Buri and a secretary of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said that continued recognition of Democratic Kampuchea will lose Thailand the opportunity to trade with Phnom Penh.

POST REPORTS FIRING AT KAMPUCHEAN BORDER

BK030246 Bangkok POST in English 3 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Thai gunners yesterday pounded suspected Vietnamese troop positions in Kampuchea in retaliation against an unprovoked shooting of Thai troops by Vietnamese-led forces, field military sources reported.

More than 20 rounds of 105-mm artillery and 60-mm mortar shells were fired into Kampuchea when Vietnamese-led forces based in Poipet opened fire first with machineguns on troopers of the 19th Infantry Regiment patrolling in Ban Wang Mon. The Thai troopers were unharmed, and the fire exchange later subsided. Maj Gen Somkhit Chongphayuha, commander of the Ninth Division, said yesterday the shelling and firing across the border by the Vietnamese-led forces were intentional, and therefore he had to order a retaliation.

More than 40 artillery shells fired from inside Kampuchea yesterday landed near Ban Khlong Nam Sai, Ban Tham Kham and Ban Khok Sabaeng. All slammed into ricefields or open land, and no villagers were injured or property damaged. The shells are believed to have been fired by Vietnamese-led forces fighting against the Khmer Rouge. Three houses in Ban Noi Sichomphu were damaged and a buffalo was killed by shrapnel on Monday as fighting raged around the Khmer Rouge stronghold in the Phnum Malai range.

More than 120 mortar, rocket and artillery shells have landed on Thai territory in the past 4 days, killing two villagers, wounding five and damaging 10 houses, including one which was set afire. A cow and a buffalo were also killed.

Assistant Army Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlangek will today visit border zones in Prachin Buri Province to visit troopers and observe the situation. Gen Athit said that as villagers living along the border refused to be evacuated, authorities would advise them how to build proper bunkers that can withstand shelling.

Military sources said fierce fighting was raging opposite Thapphrik and Khlong Kai Thuan, and added that the Khmer Rouge guerrillas were putting up a stiff resistance against the Vietnamese-led forces. Several thousand Kampucheans, dependents of the Khmer Rouge, fled across the border yesterday and have sought shelter. In Ta Phraya District yesterday, a Khmer Serei guerrilla was shot dead and another wounded in a clash with Thai security forces.

Border Crossings Noted

BK030513 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] More than 4,000 Kampucheans fled across the border into Thailand last Sunday [31 January]. Most of them are women and children, and are believed to be dependents of Khmer Rouge guerrillas. The Kampucheans fled into Thailand following a weekend of heavy fighting between Khmer Rouge and Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin troops inside Kampuchea. The Kampucheans are now camping at an area about 20 km south of Aranyaprathet. Last Saturday, two Thai boys were killed and five persons wounded when an artillery shell fired from inside Kampuchea landed on their village.

OFFICIAL ON 'VOLUNTARY RELOCATION' OF REFUGEES

BK280550 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 28 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] A survey by Thai authorities has found about 60,000 Kampuchean displaced persons in Thai holding centres expressing the wish to return to their homeland, according to Col Sanan Khachonklam of the Supreme Command's Joint Operations Centre. Col Sanan, who is in charge of the Supreme Command's refugee and displaced persons operations, told the NATION in an exclusive interview that since voluntary repatriation of the displaced Khmers had posed some obstacles, the Thai Government had adopted a new programme known as "voluntary relocation." Under the programme, displaced Kampucheans wishing to return to their home villages near the border could do so with full assistance from concerned Thai authorities.

"Because of the smaller number of the parties involved, such voluntary relocations could be carried out any time, even for small groups. The Khmers could return to the locations of their own choice," Col Sanan said, adding that the Khmers who had returned under the programme could still return to the border areas to obtain across-the-border food supplies provided by international relief agencies.

Col Sanan would not disclose the number of Kampucheans who have returned to Kampuchea under the "voluntary relocation programme," but other sources said more than 20,000 Kampucheans had benefited from the programme since November 1980. According to official figures, there were still 99,534 Kampuchean displaced persons in Thailand as of Dec 31, 1981, with 33,156 Laotians and 5,761 Vietnamese as well as 56,593 hilltribers. Col Sanan said, however, that the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) would continue to hold talks with the Phnom Penh's Heng Samrin regime (which Thailand does not recognize) to continue with the voluntary repatriation scheme. "But this programme has proved to be ridden with obstacles because it involves too many parties. And besides, under the repatriation programme, the Kampuchean returnees would be automatically placed under the control of the Heng Samrin or Vietnamese military authorities. They are not free to move about," the military officer said.

From a Thai survey, Col Sanan said, about 60,000 Kampucheans in Thailand, mostly farmers and middle-class people, want to return to their homeland. "Most of these people realize their chances of being resettled in third countries are out of the question," the military officer said.

Meanwhile, the World Food Programme (WFP) has taken over the cross-border relief operations from UNICEF as of Jan 1 this year. Col Sanan said that while the new operations will continue to be under the overall authority of the special representative of the UN secretary general, Sir Robert Jackson, they would now be coordinated and monitored by the UN resident coordinator in Bangkok, Mr Winston R. Prattley.

Under the new system, the WFP will be responsible for delivering and monitoring the food aid, with assistance from voluntary agencies. UNICEF has said it will try its best to cooperate in achieving a smooth transition of responsibilities. UNICEF will also loan the staff of its Kampuchean emergency unit to the WFP with the understanding that they will be replaced before June 30 this year.

Col Sanan said that the Kamphut camp will be closed within this year, while the Ban Kaeng (Sa Kaeo 2) camp will also be shut down later, leaving only Khao I-Dang camp for Kampuchean refugees and the processing centre at Phanat Nakhom in Chonburi.

TALKS REGARDING VIETNAMESE 'LAND PEOPLE' CONTINUE

BK280318 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 28 Jan 82 p 4

[By the NATION Regional Desk]

[Text] Talks continue between military officers responsible for refugee policy and officials of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) over how best to handle the 870 Vietnamese "land people" now housed at the so-called NW-82 Camp in Nong Samet, where about 45,000 Kampuchean refugees are also accommodated. "We are thinking of dissolving that camp for the Vietnamese land people as well -- so that it would not serve as a magnet to draw in more of them from Vietnam, mostly from the southern part of that country," according to Col Sanan Khachonklam of the Supreme Command's Joint Operations Centre. Col Sanan has been heading a Thai team holding talks with ICRC officials based in Bangkok over the case of the "Vietnamese land people" since May 1981, when the previous camp for this group of Vietnamese refugees, known then as NW-9, was closed after about 5,000 of them were sent to processing centre for resettlement in third countries.

ICRC officials have cited their role in "protecting" the Vietnamese displaced persons, many of whom had trekked all the say from south Vietnam through Kampuchea to the Thai-Kampuchean border. "Some of them rode bicycles, then trekked and walked across Kampuchea to flee the communist rulers in south Vietnam," said a Thai military officer. In May 1981, the NW-9 camp was closed after the Thai Supreme Command convinced the ICRC to persuade third countries to resettle all the 5,000-odd Vietnamese "land people." But the problem did not end there. The Vietnamese refugees from south Vietnam continued to surface.

"Since the previous camp had been dissolved, these Vietnamese land people were scattered at various camps when they appeared after May 1981 on the Thai-Kampuchean border. During May-December 1981, there were about 500 of them. And the ICRC officials came to us to express their concern over the protection for them. We understand their concern. But we also have to take care of our own security," said Col Sanan in an exclusive interview with the NATION earlier this week. He said that the number of Vietnamese "land people," at the last count, stood at 870. "And the size may grow if the people back in south Vietnam think that a new camp has been set up. So, we now want to dissolve the camp again to dissuade any potential south Vietnamese from thinking that they could come to this camp," the Thai military officer said.

As of Jan 1 this year, Task Force 80, the Supreme Command's special security unit on the Thai-Kampuchean border, moved in to provide protection for the Vietnamese "land people" after complaints were made by ICRC officials that some Vietnamese, having to stay in the same camp as the Kampuchean displaced persons at Nong Samet, had been raped, physically molested and beaten up by the Khmers.

Task Force 80 has moved in and provided security measures for the Vietnamese displaced persons. Thai officials would not confirm or deny the accusations. "But since hostility between Kampucheans and Vietnamese is not unknown, some incidents might have taken place. But we want to keep them there for security reasons," said another Thai official.

ICRC officials, according to Thai military officers, had asked the Thai side to move the Vietnamese land people away from the Kampuchean-dominated camp, or to house them in a separate area within the Thai territory. "We understand the question raised by ICRC officials," Col Sanan said, adding "but at the same time, we must also try to pursue our own policy, with national security being uppermost in our minds." Regular meetings have been held between the two sides since May last year.

"What we would like to do is to close down NW-82 camp (the present one for the Vietnamese boat people) as well and to ask the ICRC to help find them resettlement opportunities in third countries so that the problem could be solved once and for all," Col Sanan said.

While ICRC officials continue to pursue their "protection" policy for these Vietnamese "land people," Thai officials counter that their presence represents a "magnet" which may draw more Vietnamese to take the risk to trek through Kampuchea on land to the Thai-Kampuchean border, adding to Thailand's already heavy burden in the form of about 200,000 being accommodated in various camps and holding centres inside Thailand, plus more than 288,000 residing in encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border.

"We would like the people in south Vietnam trying to cross Kampuchea to Thailand not to come, since they would be taking great risks. They should instead seek to leave the country through the orderly departure process being implemented in Vietnam through the cooperation of international agencies," Col Sanan added.

ICRC officials have said they understand the Thai problems in this regard. "While we have to pursue our tasks as an international relief and protection agency, we fully understand the Thai government's position. The question is to seek a middle path to accommodate both the humanitarian and security considerations," said the senior ICRC official.

POST: SRV 'PIRATES' RELEASE FISHING TRAWLERS

BK020125 Bangkok POST in English 2 Feb 82 p 2

[Text] Pattani -- Vietnamese pirates have released two Thai trawlers and their crews after holding them for two days, the owner of one of the trawlers, Sompong Payonrath, told the POST yesterday. The pirates, however, took away all fishing equipment, radio transmitter-receiver, radar, cooking gas cylinder and food supplies, altogether worth 700,000 baht. They left only 200 to 300 litres of petrol in the boats so the skippers could take them back to Thailand.

Sompong said a report on the two trawlers was radioed to the Pattani fishing association by another Thai trawler, Laemthong 18, which found the two trawlers in the Gulf of Thailand late yesterday morning.

The two trawlers and their 27 crew members were seized by Vietnamese pirates on Saturday [30 January] morning while fishing about 48 nautical miles off the coast of Pattani. During the chase and run, the skipper of the Siriphong 4, which was well equipped with radio and radar, tried to contact the fishing radio centre in Pattani, but failed, as no one was working on that day. Other trawlers which witnessed the incident relayed the message to the fishing radio centre in Songkhla.

Sompong said the two trawlers were later taken to Banyang Island in Vietnamese waters. He said only one person was on the other seized trawler, Sitthichai Nawa, as the boat was being used for guarding the fishing zone only.

HIGH-LEVEL COMMITTEE SET UP TO TACKLE OPIUM

BK010657 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] A high-level committee has been set up to solve problems in connection with Opium growing by hilltribes people. This followed the prime minister's order dated 15 January. The committee is chaired by Deputy Prime Minister Prachuap Suntharangkun. It is empowered to review, improve and correct policies and measures as well as various orders issued in connection with attempts to solve the opium growing problem. The committee is also empowered to set up a subcommittee to help it with its work as found necessary.

The new committee comprises members of the military, the National Security Council, the local administration department and other agencies of the civil service.

SEVEN SAP MEMBERS RESIGN FROM PARLIAMENT

BK010653 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Seven Social Action Party [SAP] MP's on Friday resigned en masse from the party. They told reporters at a press conference held over the weekend at the Public Relations Department that they had done so because they disagreed with the party joining the third cabinet of Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon. They submitted their letters of resignation to SAP leader M.R. Khukrit Pramot through the party's Secretary General Kasem Sirisamphan.

The seven MPs are: Darong Singtothong and Khanin Bunsuwan of Chon Buri; Charat Phuchuai of Phetchabun; Sunthon Thasai of Nakhon Ratchasima; Chira Mongkhalarangsi of Rat Buri; Chamlong Thewarut of Chachoengsao; and Amphon Phanprasit of Chaiyaphum.

In their resignation letters, they said the move to join the third Prem government did not enhance the party's image and is not in the public interest. Meanwhile, SAP leader M.R. Khukrit says that the resignations of seven MP's have little impact on his party. He said that he cannot predict whether the resignations would precipitate a party reorganization, adding that this will be discussed in a seminar to be held in May.

PRESS MARKS 52D ANNIVERSARY OF COMMUNIST PARTY

NHAN DAN Editorial

BK030741 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 2 Feb 82

[NHAN DAN 3 February editorial: "Glorious, Heroic and Creative Party"]

[Text] Today while our entire party is preparing for the fifth national congress, we jubilantly celebrate its 52d anniversary. Over the past half century and more, our party has led our people and army to wage a great struggle and record glorious victories of historic significance -- defeating the cruel and greatest forces of aggression of the century, regaining total independence and unification for the fatherland, advancing the entire country toward socialism and contributing to successfully building the firm alliance of the three Indochinese countries. These glorious exploits of our people and army stem first of all from the correct leadership of the party.

Through its protracted struggle replete with difficulties and hardships, the party has proven its valuable revolutionary qualities, which consist of its absolute loyalty to the interests of the people and the nation, to the interests of world socialism and to the ideals of communism; its close flesh-and-blood relationship with the masses; and its unity and identity of views in the face of all challenges. Symbolic of the nation's will and imbued with the revolutionary spirit of Marxism-Leninism, our party has always been a vanguard column fighting heroically and creatively. The historic mission of our party is correctly to resolve the new problems facing a revolution for national liberation and socialism in a semifeudal colonial country. The party led the national and democratic people's revolution and defeated various forces of aggression, and today it leads our people to carry out a socialist revolution in a backward agricultural country.

Our party is a party greatly experienced in organizing and educating the masses and in organizing uprisings and great revolutionary wars. Today our party has accumulated more and more experience in leading the socialist revolution and in building a new regime, a new economy and a new socialist culture. On the long path of struggle, however, the party cannot avoid temporary and limited failures as well as moments when its experience is insufficient for resolving specific problems facing the new steps of development of the revolution. Nevertheless, the important thing is to be fully aware of deficiencies and shortcomings and enforce effective measures to rectify errors.

The party has always matured in the face of all challenges, and through every trial, its militant ranks have been consolidated invariably as they are reinforced with stalwart combatants, whose loyalty has been proven by their actions, while weak elements are eliminated.

When the entire country embarked on the socialist revolution, our party correctly resolved the basic line for the revolution. Thanks to that correct line, we have been able to score great achievements in numerous fields in our revolutionary struggle. The realities of the revolution, however, have also revealed our errors and shortcomings in solving specific problems which have been encountered in the present stage of development.

We have reviewed our achievements, analyzed our shortcomings and set forth guidelines and measures in an effort to advance our revolutionary cause. Meanwhile, congresses at three levels in the entire party have concluded with fine success. Our party's identity of views has once again been proved eloquently through the discussions of various documents which will be presented at its national congress.

In addition, we have reached identity of views on the evaluation of our achievements, errors and shortcomings as well as on the guidelines and measures to overcome difficulties and vigorously advance our revolutionary cause. This is the important symbol of our strength, our intellect, our fighting will and our revolutionary quality. This is also the hope of our entire people.

All for the socialist fatherland and for the happiness of the people is the sacred aim of our party and the noble responsibility of every communist. To fulfill its new tasks, it is necessary for our party rapidly to improve its leadership ability and change its ideological and organizational work and operational methods.

Although our revolutionary tasks are increasingly heavy, new favorable conditions in our country are very great. The basic situation of our revolution is good and its difficulties are only temporary and will certainly be overcome. Meanwhile, the position of our revolution in the international arena is unprecedentedly good. Our all-round cooperation with the great Soviet Union and with Laos and Kampuchea and the warm support from communists and progressive people in the world are the firm guarantee of our success in the struggle to build and defend our socialist fatherland.

New factors are emerging along with a new impetus in many localities throughout our country. We have confidence in our Communist Party -- a great party founded and trained by Comrade Ho Chi Minh. We believe that our great party will certainly be able to lead our revolution to new victories with those succeeding President Ho's cause and with Comrade Le Duan as its leader.

Let us communists try our best to make the fifth party congress a fine success, and let us encourage our people vigorously to participate in the emulation movement to score achievements in honor of the party congress. Long live the glorious VCP!

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial

BK030725 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 2 Feb 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 3 February editorial: "Our Party's Great Mandate"]

[Text] Today as we celebrate the 52d anniversary of the VCP, all our troops and people look back proudly over the nation's half century of revolutionary struggle under the leadership of the glorious party. In the history of national liberation movements, it is hard to find any colonialized nation that has won such a complete victory as Vietnam. At the dawn of the 20th century, while the majority of the Afro-Asian and Latin American nations still languished in the long night of slavery, there were countless people sacrificing themselves for national salvation. But not all were crowned with final victory. Many people had to swallow the bitterness of defeat or gave up halfway because they strayed onto the wrong path. It was our nation's great fortune that we had venerated and beloved President Ho Chi Minh as our leader. He quickly found a correct path for national salvation in keeping with the revolutionary law of history. This was the path charted out by Lenin -- the path of resolutely resisting imperialism and colonialism, upholding the banner of national independence and socialism and closely linking national interests with the interests of the world revolution.

Following the above path with an absolute loyalty for the interests of the working class and the nation, our party, founded and tempered by President Ho Chi Minh, has achieved glorious success in combining the strength of our people with that of our times, in drawing up a correct strategy and plans and in skillfully mobilizing and organizing the people's forces, thus creating a powerful revolutionary movement that could launch repeated attacks on the enemy and win one victory after another.

Overcoming untold hardships and ordeals, our entire people, under the leading banner of the vanguard party, rose up to smash the colonialists, imperialists and feudalists, casting off the chains of slavery, successively defeating many cruel imperialists and winning complete victory in the national liberation struggle, thus opening up a new era for the country -- an era of independence, freedom and unification on the road to socialism.

We are very proud of our party -- a party which has always promoted unity and unification, which is noted for its absolute loyalty to the interests of the fatherland and the people, and which has firmly held high the banner of national independence and socialism through all the revolutionary stages filled with difficulties and ordeals.

The many historic victories achieved by our country over the past 5 years testify to the party's leading role and to its traditional strength. In addition, through the past 5 ordeal-filled years in the new revolutionary stage, our party has been quick to see many weaknesses and shortcomings in a number of tasks which had not been done well and which were not compatible with the new situation and tasks of the revolution. Therefore, our party has advocated increasing party-building activities, stressing that ensuring steadfastness and purity for the party is now a pressing need if we are to take the revolution forward.

The coming fifth party congress will make a profound and complete review of the revolutionary situation and the party's leadership activities over the past 5 years, which have been full of great ordeals. The congress will note the successes, point out the difficulties, weaknesses and shortcomings, find out the reasons for this and draw experience in order once again to reaffirm its correct line and chart out a direction, new actions and new steps to be taken in the revolution. The congress will reaffirm the party's important and glorious mission in the face of the new revolutionary situation. There must be a vigorous surge forward among the party, the revolution and the people. Each party organization must build itself steadfastly and each cadre or party member must temper himself in order to serve as a member of a vanguard brigade and become a vanguard fighter just as Uncle Ho advised: "worthy of being leaders and faithful servants of the people." They must struggle hard to observe the motto: "all for socialist construction; and all for the people's happiness."

With the beloved party and the approaching fifth party congress in mind, our people's armed forces are proudly and confidently determined to march forward heroically under the party banner and to join with the people in successfully building socialism and firmly defending the socialist fatherland in order to make our country prosperous and powerful and bring about a bountiful, happy and civilized life for our people.

ARMY PAPER WELCOMES SOVIET MARSHAL'S VISIT

OW030743 Hanoi VNA in English 0724 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 3 -- Under the title "Warm Welcome to Soviet Marshal N.V. Ogarkov on a Visit to Vietnam", the army paper QUAN DOI NHAN DAN today editorially extends warm greetings to the chief of the General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces and first deputy minister of national defence of the Soviet Union.

The paper says: "We warmly welcome Marshal N.V. Ogarkov, representative of a heroic and invincible revolutionary army with an extremely glorious history of struggle during the past half-century or so. With their resounding exploits in the patriotic war as well as in peaceful construction, the Soviet Army and Navy have made glorious contributions to the defence of the gains of the Soviet people's revolution and to the successful building of a new society -- the socialist and communist society.

"Today the Soviet Army and Navy are an invincible force fully capable of preserving the Soviet people's revolutionary gains, discharging their noble internationalist obligation, defending the socialist community, safeguarding world peace and deterring imperialism, headed by the U.S. imperialists in collusion with the Beijing expansionsts, from sabotaging the revolutionary movement and causing tension in the world".

The paper continues: "The Vietnamese and Soviet peoples and armies are bound by a very fine tradition of militant solidarity. The Soviet Union wholeheartedly supported the Vietnamese people in their resistance wars against French colonialism and U.S. imperialism. In the present struggle against Beijing expansionism, the Soviet people, army and navy have reserved for Vietnam great all-round and effective support and assistance. The Vietnam-U.S.S.R. treaty of friendship and cooperation signed in November 1978 affirms the determination of the two countries to keep their friendship externally pure and everlasting".

"Marshal N.V. Ogarkov's visit to Vietnam will certainly contribute to further strengthening the great friendship and militant solidarity between our two fraternal peoples and armies", the paper asserts.

VO VAN KIET 28 DEC SPEECH ON ASSAULT YOUTH

BK310720 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 6 Jan 82 p 2

["Excerpts" from speech by Vo Van Kiet, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau, delivered on 28 December at a Ho Chi Minh City conference to review activities of the city assault youth force]

[Text] Building the Districts Is Meant To Enrich Our Own Families, Native Lands and the Country

How to reorganize production at the district level and advance agriculture to large-scale production? For densely populated districts where the pattern of life has existed and developed for a long time, the most important investment, I think, is the collective mind. The greatest requirement is to arrange and employ the existing labor force to the maximum. In the Nam Bo lowlands, each worker averages only 80 man-days a year, hence the severe waste of human labor and a tropical country's natural resources. We must rely on the system of collective mastery to combine labor with land in a harmonious manner. In other words, we must use labor and land in accordance with uniform programs and plans and practice specialized cultivation, intensive cultivation, companion cropping and yield-increasing methods, while paying attention to the characteristics of the soil and the climate and new scientific and technical innovations. Cu Chi was selected by the central government and our city as a pilot site for building the district. Diverse activities designed to reorganize production at the district level are being engaged in at Cu Chi. Based on the general plan and the demands of domestic consumption and export, it is rationally reorganizing production, cultivation and livestock breeding patterns, and small industry and handicrafts to ensure that land will be fully utilized, that each hectare of land will produce the highest possible economic results, that each man-day will produce the highest value.... With this new business approach, which calls for four specialized cultivation zones, six main types of crops and eight species of livestock under the current 5-year plan, anticipations are that Cu Chi District's gross agricultural output in terms of value -- which was 30 million dong in 1981 -- will increase to 143 million dong (computed at 1981 fixed prices) by 1985; that is, a fivefold increase. This target of 143 million dong, in my opinion, can be achieved and even overfulfilled.

More than anyone else, the rural youth must deeply study the advance of agriculture and believe in the renovation of the countryside so that they will develop a greater love for an attachment to their native lands. Advancing agriculture to large-scale socialist production is actually meant to enrich our own families, native lands and the country. To advance to the forefront of the new movement, we must improve our qualifications in all respects; firmly grasp economic, cultural and scientific and technical knowledge; learn from realities to develop creativity; promptly respond to the new work methods and new technical measures; volunteer services in the rising movement for productive labor; take the lead in the campaign to develop the new relations of production; and serve as the nucleus for the development of the new culture in the countryside.

My young brothers and sisters, you should bear in mind that you yourselves are the generation that will be in charge of controlling and developing tomorrow's perfect large-scale socialist agriculture. The city's youth -- including youngsters of the working class and all strata of the socialist intelligentsia and especially the youths belonging to the economic, cultural and scientific and technical forces -- must be fully aware of the common strategic tasks, fully discharge their responsibilities in collective work and, in a voluntary and earnest manner, carry out the creative and highly comprehensive undertaking of advancing agriculture to large-scale socialist production. We must realize that agriculture can by advanced only by taking full and constant advantage of developments in industry and science and technology. It is necessary that everyone fully understand the party's major policy -- one that is derived from the realities of the country and the people -- to combine agriculture with industry into a unified structure right from the outset and to advance from an agroindustrial structure to a rational industrial-agricultural structure. This is the way to change our nation's agriculture and countryside and improve our people's life.

Who Will Exploit the Remaining 3 Million Hectares of Agricultural Land and 15 Million Hectares of Forest Land?

Our country is stretched out along a north-south axis and its population is concentrated in coastal plains. Of the 400 districts, excluding scores of precincts, with their diverse characteristics and economic structures, many are sparsely populated while some areas bear no marks left by the work of human hands and are devoid of life, except for the proliferation of vegetation, birds and wild beasts. History has left us with an uneven distribution of labor. In the past 4,000 years, our nation has had to fight against foreign aggression scores of times and has lived with backward production methods. Up to now only 6,953,000 out of 10,550,000 hectares of arable land have been exploited. This does not include some 15 million hectares of forest lands that we have for the most part overlooked and failed to use in the most profitable manner possible.

The rate of construction and the urgent demands of life require that we lose no time in reviewing our experiences concerning land reclamation and the building of new economic zones. Likewise, we must devise efficient and appropriate measures and steps that will require little in the way of capital investment but will yield maximum returns so that we can take big leaps forward.

We must look directly at reality -- in this case at the more than 3 million hectares of agricultural land yet to be exploited. There exist tracts of wastelands even in some densely populated districts and developed agricultural areas. To carry out land reclamation and eliminate the leopard-skin pattern of the agricultural map, it is best that we mobilize manpower locally or from nearby for the job. We should not organize massive migrations, as this would involve great expense and severely upset the livelihood of the laboring people. Since it would be difficult to stabilize the life of the resettlers immediately and resolve the housing problem facing them, their welfare would not be guaranteed. Where there are large and small tracts of wastelands, we may mobilize the assault labor force from the local or regional youth for intensive reclamation activities within a short period of time. This force will build ricefields and develop crop cultivation and livestock breeding, using short-term measures designed to attain long-term goals, and will create the initial material bases of production and welfare to enable the ordinary people to begin living and engaging in profitable production there immediately. Afterwards, the people will be invited to resettle there on a totally voluntary basis after fully planning their livelihood and production activities.

The remote jungle and mountain areas which are marked so far only by the footprints left by the liberation combatants during the war of resistance are actually areas with the richest potentials. The nation is calling for the youth to go there today.

We must not allow our abundant and easily exploitable natural resources to lie dormant like Sleeping Beauty in the fairy tale while waiting for her prince. The real prince is today's young generation with its heroic labor efforts. Considering our love for the country and our love for life, it is inconceivable that such beautiful lands have not yet been touched by man. A nation that has defied death to gain life and won back its land by shedding blood along every inch of a difficult path cannot complain about hardship and poverty while neglecting to tap its rich natural resources. Making full use of the land is a manifestation of one's spirit of labor and level of civilization. Out of national pride, we must not allow even an inch of land to be wasted.

On whom can we count to exploit the most difficult, immense and fertile part of the more than 3 million hectares of agricultural lands still lying fallow and to tap and preserve 15 million hectares of forest lands satisfactorily? If your generation neglects this task, your children and your children's children will have to do it. Since this is essential work, the responsibility for it cannot be refused by today's society and passed on to tomorrow's. In resolutely carrying out difficult and pressing tasks of a historic nature, any nation has to depend on the offensive spirit and assault labor of the youth.

To carry out this great land reclamation task most effectively we must employ a massive work force that is physically and spiritually strong. Only by mobilizing the assault force of the youth can we reclaim large tracts of wasteland with speed and efficiency in our battle to conquer nature. Only with the assault spirit of youth can we heroically endure all the unforeseeable difficulties and hardships in areas that have never seen the work of man's labor. Only the youth can remain steadfast and create everything, including the spirit of life, through their organized collective life, their creativity, their resourcefulness and their optimism.

In calculating the actual economic results, we find many disadvantages in our former methods for opening new lands and building new economic zones. When whole families are sent to the virgin lands, the main laborers have to stabilize the life of their own families first and they cannot concentrate on exploiting the land with quick results. The family hearth is not warm enough to dispel the mysterious desolation of nature. The spirit of the main laborers can easily be shattered by the complaints of their loved ones, the cries and pitiful conditions of their infant children, the onslaught of diseases and minor mishaps. Furthermore, the use of state grain brought from far away to feed dependents as well as workers constitutes an additional burden on the budget. It drains the capital invested and prevents it from being devoted wholly to developing production. We must calculate anew and drastically change our methods in order to fully restore the people's confidence in the party's major policy for opening new lands and building new economic zones. The sending of people to new lands to build new economic zones is not aimed at reducing the population density and easing the demand for rice, nor is it aimed at persecuting a number of persons out of political discrimination, as falsely claimed by bad elements. Only by concrete actions can we clarify the truth: Opening new lands and building the new economic zones is a great and essential undertaking that fully reflects patriotism, love for the people and respect for labor. And all of this is for life and for a beautiful Vietnam.

The Assault Youth of Ho Chi Minh City Achieve Proficiency in Working With Due Consideration of Economic Results

The experience gained by the assault youth of Ho Chi Minh City may have some benefit for the young people of those large cities which have a labor surplus when the problems of achieving collective mastery over labor, redistributing labor and combining labor with the land have reached their peak and must be settled once and for all.

Developing the heroic tradition of Vietnamese youth in combat, the youth of Ho Chi Minh City started their activities with a ceremony held on the anniversary of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union in 1976. Initially, their most pressing and important task was to help the people with all their hearts. At that time, the assault youth force was only a lower school of labor. They set out with determination, first of all, to devote their lives to serving the party. And their pledge "live for the homeland" has now proven to be not just empty words that were uttered on the spur of the moment.

The people of our city discover new things daily about their endurance and zeal in working. In the first batch of assault youth, there are many high school and college students and religious youths, as well as those of both Vietnamese and Chinese descent who come from affluent families and are used to a luxurious life. Nevertheless, they have quickly triumphed over themselves and renounced their old ideas and lifestyles. I saw with my own eyes many youngsters sleeping at night on the hard earth of the Le Minh Xuan field without the comfort of a mat and mosquito net, or sitting together under the shade of a tent erected in the open field at high noon to escape from the scorching summer sun. The soft feet of Saigon girls rapidly covered the muddy fields and the hands of students moved and packed dirt for irrigation projects as fast as anyone. At the Ong Nhieu dam on the edge of the Sau Xa marsh (Thu Duc), I watched boys and girls diving up and down all day long to strengthen the base of the dam. I had not believed these youngsters could so quickly familiarize and adapt themselves to the western muddy marshes and endure the notorious mosquitoes and leeches of U Minh and the jungle leeches and Anopheles mosquitoes of the eastern and southern parts of the Central Highlands. On the An Binh canal (Kien Giang), many youngsters, although not knowing how to swim, their boats laden with rice seedlings, rowed to the fields without fear. In spite of the chilly climate of Di Linh (Lam Dong), they happily planted manioc to eat with their rice and worked late and woke up early to grow mulberry and raise silkworms. To them, a spartan life has become a matter of course. I am most deeply moved by the fact that because of their hard work, the youngsters are often clad in tattered clothes which they have mended themselves.

The assault youth have left their footprints on all the city's outlying areas, from Cu Chi to Duyen Hai, and throughout much of the fatherland -- from Lam Dong and southern Dac Lac to the U Minh jungle in Minh Hai and Kien Giang, and from the Duong Minh Chau combat zone to the Tra Cu canal that leads to the Dong Thap combat zone. They have lived up to their oath: "The assault youth are present wherever they are needed and wherever there are difficulties." How proud I am of our beloved city's children who have led a vigorous life of tireless labor in different parts of the country! The "omnipotent" labor and "multifarious" knowledge of youth of a big city have quickly been brought into play: Although every task is a new one and must be learned from the beginning, our youngsters, with their fortitude and zeal for work, have mastered everything -- from digging canals to packing earth, making latticework, plowing lands, transplanting rice and preserving forests. In particular, they have become greatly skilled in carpentry and housing construction, and they are gifted with numerous creative ideas for developing production to achieve self-sufficiency in food and improve their diet, like those who conquered the peaks of Truong Son. Obviously, the strong point of the assault youth lies in their work to reclaim wastelands and cover the entire country with green vegetation. This precious source of labor, when correctly combined with lands, will bring about even greater results -- if we are not forced at the start by the urgency of the matter to use it in a scattered manner, and if we can promptly develop our concentrated efforts in line with uniform programs and plans which are economically and technically oriented and which present a specific sequence of steps to be taken in accordance with a general strategy.

We should stress that the assault youth force's step toward maturity during the past few years is primarily due to the fact that it has been engaged in building the economy. Since the party Central Committee's sixth resolution was adopted in mid-1979, the city's assault youth force has experimentally shifted step by step from the administration of subsidization to management with accountability. The city's assault youth force is divided into nine general command committees. Each of the committees bears the revolutionary character of youth and becomes at the same time an economic unit with its own profit-and-loss accounting system and the legal status of a corporate body with independence in finance and planning. As such it is entirely responsible for its economic results. Each young worker has the democratic right to formulate plans at the grass-roots level and to participate in distribution. The youth force has established some advanced labor norms, and since 1979 it has applied some appropriate forms of work contracts and piecework payment. It knows how to positively combine the three interests, with the interest of the entire society ranked first by conscious assault youths. By distributing according to a labor and by eliminating egalitarianism and subsidies to create new productivity in a definitive way, we have made young workers take some real interest in the results of their work. Previously, it was difficult for each man to dig an average of half a cubic meter of dirt daily, but now the average is 3 or 4 and at times 20 cubic meters of dirt a day. Some of the youths have worked very hard and earned good money, some of which they have sent home to help their families. They are proud of their work, which has allowed them to earn their own living and to make some calculable contributions to their units and society. The new managerial method offers the prospect of developing the assault youth force vigorously without having to rely on the major state investments, thus relieving the general budget from this burden. You should struggle even more vigorously in this positive direction to demonstrate more persuasively every day that the project of the assault youth force is the cheapest investment.

The experience in and knowledge of production also constitute an entire process of learning. Bitter setbacks are the mothers of successes. It was planned at the beginning to grow pineapples on Le Minh Xuan farm. Due to the shortage of seeds and saplings, no fruit has been harvested thus far, although several efforts have been made. Meanwhile, sugarcane has been harvested on Pham Van Hai farm because the crop was planted gradually as soon as the soil had been prepared at the very beginning of the crop season. The Nhi Xuan farm -- where our meeting is being held today -- is an example of cultivation in the right direction. It is entering the new orbit of creativity and encouraging development. Computing the economic results achieved by the city's children is not beyond our grasp. Since we sweat and appreciate our work, we are compelled to think of the economic results. From an assault youth unit which had just completed its international obligations, you have come to build this farm -- a type of farm in miniature -- on an experimental basis. During the first year, the farm was allocated 100 hectares to grow sugarcane, which it did successfully with an immediate harvest. The second year, the farm was allocated 600 additional hectares for sugarcane, with even greater success. Farming usually yields profits only after five years of work. To be able to make profits in such a short time is commendable and takes much skill. With part of the profits from sugarcane planting, the youths plan to build a semi-mechanized installation to press sugarcane in order to save labor, create more jobs and make full use of bagasse as a fertilizer for sugarcane plants. We support this intelligent planning, considering it an experiment in the combination of agriculture and industry into a structure in a small installation from the very beginning. The youths here are also to be commended for their knowledge of finding a source of raw material from the forests in order to develop handicrafts.

It is particularly commendable that you have shown profound concern for the material and moral lives of young workers. Within two years, you have on your own built 500 well-policed wooden, semipermanent houses and a water distribution system with a high water tower, making workers' dreams come true on new lands. This conference hall here is a theater of the assault youth force hich you have built by yourselves. It meets the cherished aspirations of young workers. Youths are not merely skilled workers in building life. They are at the age when talents are blooming. Once they know how to move about, they can dance, and once they know how to speak, they can sing. Enjoying and performing arts is an indispensable cause for youthful joy. It is an invisible agent for increasing labor productivity and a spiritual vitamin for restoring the labor strength of youths. People who are attached to one another in work on ricefields are all the more so in entertainment under the roof of this cosy house. This theater is simultaneously a conference hall and a classroom. Without collective and spiritual activities and without either books or songs or muscial tunes, what will happen to youths, and how can we expect youths to continue to voluntarily take the lead forever?

I welcome the departure of one party from your forward station for Dac Nong (Dac Lac Province) to build a new district there, a small pearl of the Central Highlands because of the landscape and climate which is called "Switzerland of Vietnam" because of the landscape and climate. That area, with its red soil and forests of valuable hardwood, lies on large bauxite deposits that can be tapped for industrial use. You have actually done your work in an economical and planned manner. You know how to win the intelligensia of the city's scientific and technical forces, completing an economic-technical dissertation on construction in this area to exploit the 95,000 hectares of forest. This dissertation has been submitted to the local party committee and administration and is awaiting the ratification of the ministries involved and the Council of Ministers. Without requiring state investment, you have gone into that area to build three sawmills to fully exploit all the logs and brances scattered in forests. You have used hollow bamboo to produce pulp, doing away with the demand for imported materials and chemicals, and have created your own source of income to defray all the costs of building the primary bases and to be ready to accept new tasks. Such a way of doing business also reflects a new phase in the intellectual development of assault youths who work intelligently, practically and creatively.

It Will Not Be Economical If Adequate Attention Is Not Paid to Moral Motivation

On the basis of the realistic experiences of Ho Chi Minh City's assault youths, we can consider methods of reclaiming large areas of wasteland, building new districts and achieving the economic results quickly and steadily with just an insignificant additional state investment. The most important point is that the central agencies involved should promptly formulate plans for each new district and each new village, thereby providing for adequate economic and technical bases. Those localities with excess manpower should organize mobile young work forces. The forces should be compact, with the less indirect staff organizations the better. The economic results can be developed at the very beginning of the clearing and exploiting project by making full use of all the firewood, twigs, branches, snags and stumps scattered about the forests, and by exploiting hollow bamboo and all kinds of secondary resources which are being wasted in the forests. By doing so, we can build the initial material bases at the lowest cost. The economic results can also be developed at the outset of the first crop season in order to develop animal husbandry immediately. If we want to do so, we must adequately equip all workers with the most popular tools and must have some semi-mechanized forces. The most important things is to select the right crops and animal breeds, conduct appropriate skills training, rely on the scientific and technical forces, organize work on a trial basis and establish strict technical regulations.

Although the economic results must be given top priority, it would no longer be economical if no attention were paid to the issue of moral motivation, which has on several occasions created changing and destructive forces, as traditional experiences have shown. The Constitution has stipulated that labor is the benefit and duty of all citizens. With regard to the young citizens, we probably should stress their profound desire to engage in the most significant labor cause animated with ideals. It will give great happiness to today's young generation if youths can be organized to swim with the high tide of heroic movement. Youths are always present, even though we are in a period of economic construction. They like to lead a great life uplifted by revolutionary romanticism to assert that they themselves have composed the historical lyric of epochal significance and hallmark.

Whenever anyone reads Comrade L.I. Brezhnev's memoirs "Virgin Lands," he cannot help being profoundly moved and admiring not only the armed exploits but also the hearts of Soviet land reclaimers. Ten years after the end of the national defense war, millions of youths bade goodbye to Moscow and Leningrad and volunteered to go and reclaim virgin land in Kazakhstan in the middle of deserted central Asia to conquer the grassland and within a short period of time thereafter, to give the Soviet fatherland an additional 25 million tons of wheat every year. Since then, the words "wasteland reclaimer" have been added to Soviet dictionaries. The same words should be in Vietnamese dictionaries. Wasteland reclaimers must set out just as they do to fight the enemy. They must demonstrate initiative and pride; must be organized and be on the offensive with a revolutionary spirit; and must thoroughly understand and believe in their work. Our historical records only show the names of officers in charge of farms and not those of the common people who were oppressed and forced to reclaim virgin lands to establish hamlets. Under the French colonialist regime, rubber plantation tappers and peasants suffered the most. They had no choice but to serve as slaves to be hired and beaten.

The system of collective mastery has created its own models of wasteland reclaimers who have directly inherited the traditions of fighting the enemy and have shown the spirit of yesterday's national saviors in developing the country today. The armed struggle is actually a special labor task requiring a fierce assault and a protracted effort. When I was your age, I had a chance to enjoy the first labor song of my life by joining tens of thousands of people and combatants to dig canals and build embankments in western Nam Bo. Later on, during the anti-U.S. resistance struggle, millions of people in western Nam Bo again scored a new saga by digging a great anti-U.S. canal and establishing a defensive belt for U Minh jungle. Ho Chi Minh City witnessed this marvelous and unprecedented labor strength of the ironlike fortress of Cu Chi people who coordinated with one another -- in total secrecy, which was necessary for their survival -- in building a network of underground trenches hundreds of kilometers long. Wherever you go and whatever you see in the country, memories will surface regarding the high tides of mass movements during the war under which the people volunteered to clear roads, build embankments and barriers, dig trenches and organize combat villages. They considered labor their duty benefit, a cause for joy, an honor and a festival of the masses even though they had to work at night to avoid detection.

The name "assault youth" -- which was chosen by Uncle Ho -- is inseparable from Dien Bien Phu. I know this very well because I had lived in the Viet Bac base area a few years before the Dien Bien Phu victory.

I'occasionally participated there in civilian labor missions and in the recruitment of assault youths at the grassroots level. It was out of a desire to achieve the Dien Bien Phu victory that Uncle Ho decided to set up the "assault youth" brigade, the predecessor of various youth-run assault labor organizations which were formed afterward.

Assault youths were employed at that time as a prime force in breaking stones to open hundreds of kilometers of roads throughout the northwest for use in the transportation of heavy artillery pieces and for the traffic of mechanized vehicles. Assault youth laborers, constituting a main element of the rear service force, were posted at all logistical way-stations on the way to the battlefields. Way-stations in the Dien Bien Phu period were the predecessors of the Truong Son way-stations during the anti-U.S. struggle. Wave after wave of civilian laborers rushed from all directions toward Die Bien Phu. These civilian laborers had to walk hundreds of kilometers, carrying basketfulls of goods or leading overloaded bicycles during the half-a-year-long Dien Bien Phu campaign in order to ensure timely and constant logistical support for the frontline. This large-scale labor movement creatively solved all those difficulties originally regarded as insurmountable. This came as a great surprise for the enemy. At the Dien Bien Phu fire line [tuyeens luwar], before the battle took place, civilian laborers had spent untold energy building combat positions and defensive breastworks. How could we forget the song "Singing Heave-Ho While Dragging Artillery Pieces" which has been entered in the annals of history. Each Dien Bien fighter first became a labor hero. This was because he had to dig trenches before he could fight the enemy. Our troops had to work every night within the enemy's firing range, digging a series of overlapping combat trenches -- extending from the Muong Thanh prairie to Hong Cum -- which was designed to tighten the encirclement around the enemy's base complex. You children, while learning history, must keep in mind that every victory of our people was made possible thanks to the enormous efforts of society and of each individual.

Only after achieving the Dien Bien Phu victory could we "trek along the Truong Son Cordillera during the struggle for national salvation."

I had a chance to walk along the Ho Chi Minh trail, cross over the Ba Ren Pass and climb up the But slope during the first resistance struggle. Our liaison agent at that time received a can of popcorn as his daily food ration. During the second resistance struggle, I again had a chance to tread the Truong Son trail at a time after the trail had become more developed. Ever since then, I have maintained an extremely deep impression about the wonderful labor strength that has created victory, a total victory. We have opened tens of thousands of kilometers of roads for use by motorized vehicles across and along the Truong Son Cordillera, created many absolutely secure corridors for ground operations, and even installed an oil pipeline running across the highest peak of the Truong Son cordillera to Dong Xoai. The tanks which ran into the Independence palace on 30 April 1975 had also crossed over this peak. Hundreds of thousands of people were standing by the trail to maintain, defend and develop it, creating the best conditions possible in wartime for themselves and their comrades to operate and ensuring that the colossal apparatus could function smoothly to move reinforcements promptly and continually to various battlefields. I think that with the great and lasting labor strength which created the saga of the Truong Son trail, we have more than ample force to fulfill the historic mission of today's generation, which is to develop agriculture in our country outstandingly.

The great socialist and general offensive campaign to reclaim virgin land is flooding our country with workers trying to achieve the highest economic results within the shortest period of time and to complete the land opening task started since the time of the national founding by the Hung Dynasty. This is our new Dien Bien Phu battle and our new Truong Son mission!

At the 25th CPSU Congress, the Soviet assault youth force held a departure ceremony to be flown directly from the congress hall to the icy zones in the heart of Siberia in order to build various projects bearing its name, to exploit underwater oil and natural gas and to build the Bam railway, creating the saga of great labor. And today, immediately after the 26th CPSU Congress, the USSR signed an economic contract called "centenary contract" with the West European countries to begin selling every year 40 billion tons of natural gas from Siberia to these countries. Such is the spirit of the assault youth force which lies in its alertness to finish its task quickly and completely.

The reclamation of wasteland and forests which had not been exploited for 40 centuries, should be considered the "centenary project" of the young Vietnamese generation in the 1980's.

Owing to the general appeal and guidance issued by the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union Central Committee and to the leading role played by the capital youths, the youths in Ho Chi Minh City, Hue City and Vinh City and in other centers have received the proper concern of the state agencies involved. These agencies have strived to give the youths every favorable condition and have prepared them for the planning task. This very spring, we should have a system of appropriate policies and uniform measures to conduct major and in-depth propaganda among youths and organize the first mobile assault labor units to reclaim wasteland urgently, carrying out the national strategy of developing agriculture outstandingly.

The form of organization does not matter, since it should depend on the local situation and conditions. Nor does it matter as to who should go first. The most important matters are singlemindedness, cooperation and determination to succeed. In this coming Fifth VCP Congress, the youth delegates from all localities who are well aware of their duty, will probably queue up in a ceremony to receive a general order to depart and will vow to the young generation of the 1980's to fulfill all land reclamation targets with the highest results and to build any new economic zone as assigned by the central government on the basis of the general program and national unification plan.

All of these delegates will come to the Ba Dinh Square and stand before the mausoleum of Uncle Ho -- the founder of the "assault youth force" -- to rekindle the eternal flame of the assault force and depart. Once they set out, they will succeed; once they start a project, they will complete it.

This is the most creative way to make Uncle Ho's wish come true, that we can always advance our country one step "further and better," although we do not have big industry. Big industry will emerge from land and labor to advance the country "further" and "better."

Uncle Ho once spoke of planting trees and cultivating men. Our country will have both trees and men. Our generation will struggle resolutely to develop the future of our motherland, demonstrating patriotism by practical action and courageous labor. We shall know how to fight and defeat any aggressor just like or even better than our forefathers.

Uncle Ho said that just as our fingers are not the same, pioneers should accept and welcome their followers. The increasingly self-conscious strength of each individual reinforced by the strength of his organization reflects human love and responsibility. The spirit of fraternal help, though intangible, is very strong and dominant among youths. The sense, form and vitality of this organization is suitable to youths and enhances their spirit, giving them even more self-respect and self-confidence. This is the living experience of the organization and of each assault youth in Ho Chi Minh City.

FRENCH COMMUNIST PARTY CONGRESS GREETED

VCP Greetings Message

OW021609 Hanoi VNA in English 1458 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 2 -- The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam today sent its warmest congratulations to the 24th National Congress of the French Communist Party. The message of greetings reads:

"Over the past 60 years the French Communist Party, the tested vanguard of the French working class, has constantly stood at the spearhead of the struggle for the interests of the working people and of France. That is why it has played a more and more decisive role in the French political life. The fraternal parties in the communist and international workers' movement take pride in companion-in-arms so rich in experience of struggle as your party.

"In recent years, your party, headed by Comrade Georges Marchais has persisted in the line of uniting all the working class and people and democratic and progressive forces of France to struggle against monopoly capitalism, for social welfare, democracy and socialism, and has made important contributions to the communist and international workers' movement, thus actively contributing to the struggle against the bellicose policy of imperialism, against the arms race, for the defence of peace in Europe and the rest of the world.

"Your 24th national congress is held at an extremely important moment both on the national and international scenes. We sincerely wish your congress great success, which would make an important contribution to consolidating and developing the victories of the leftist forces and to giving a new impetus to the struggle of the French working class and people for welfare, democracy and social progress and for peace and detente in Europe and throughout the world.

"Dear comrades, we greatly rejoice to see that for more than half a century of the common struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress, the friendship and militant solidarity between our two parties, based on Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism, and forged by Comrades Ho Chi Minh and Maurice Thorez, has consolidated and developed continuously and the relations between our two parties have become closer as time went by.

"Our party and people will forever engrave in our mind the warm and multiform assistance of the Communist Party, working class and people of France in our two past resistance wars as well as in our socialist construction and national defence at present. We would like to take this opportunity to reaffirm once again the Communist Party and people of Vietnam's consistent solidarity with and support for the revolutionary cause of the French Communists and working people.

"May the militant solidarity between the Communist Party of Vietnam and the French Communist Party blossom and strengthen with every passing day! May the friendship and cooperation between our two peoples further consolidate and develop! Our best wishes of success for the 24th National Congress of the French Communist Party!"

3 Feb NHAN DAN Editorial

OW030735 Hanoi VNA in English 0710 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February -- Welcoming the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party [PCF], NHAN DAN in an editorial today expresses the belief that it will create conditions for the rallying of more democratic and progressive forces in the common actions for changes as required by France. The paper says that over the past 60 years the PCF has constantly been in the frontline of a very complicated class struggle for the genuine interests of the French working people and of the nation.

A major leftist party, the paper notes, the PCF has played an increasingly important role in France's political life. It holds that the left wing's victories in elections last summer and the participation of the PCF in the government for the first time in 34 years have marked significant changes in the political situation of France and the rest of Europe.

The 34th congress, it says, will usher in a period of active struggle for the communists and other people of France and will create more favourable conditions for the PCF to mobilize democratic and progressive forces into common actions for changes as required by France.

The paper welcomes the PCF's positive contributions to the development of the friendship and cooperation between France and Vietnam in keeping with the interests and aspirations of the two peoples and of peace in Southeast Asia and elsewhere. NHAN DAN expresses the sincere thanks of the Communists, the working class and the people of Vietnam to the Communist Party, the working class and the people of France for their solidarity. It also expresses warm support for the noble cause of the Communists and the working people of France.

NGUYEN DUY TRINH ARRIVES IN PARIS 1 FEB

BK021128 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] At the invitation of the French Communist Party Central Committee, a VCP delegation led by Nguyen Duy Trinh, Political Bureau member, arrived in Paris on Monday to attend the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party. The same day a delegation of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party led by Hun Sen, member of the party's Political Bureau, arrived in Paris for the same purpose.

U.S. 'PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN' AGAINST POLAND HIT

OW030745 Hanoi VNA in English 0730 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 3 -- The world is witnessing a noisy and ridiculous propaganda campaign launched by the United States against Poland and the Soviet Union, NHAN DAN notes in a commentary today. The American-sponsored "Let Poland Be Poland" television show and the holding of the so-called "Solidarity Day With the Polish People" are nothing but a gross distortion of the situation in Poland by the Reagan administration in the internal affairs of that country, the paper says.

The paper goes on: "The U.S. moves against Poland are aimed at covering up its crimes against the Polish people and increasing tension throughout the world." The U.S. large-scale psywar campaign is the latest and most striking ware in its anti-communist array. Documents of the reactionary forces captured by the Polish authorities are undeniable evidence of the role taken by the U.S. and other international reactionary forces in masterminding and supporting, both spiritually and materially, the frenzied counterattacks by the anti-socialist forces in Poland.

"The truth about the recent crisis in Poland has emerged more and more clearly. This is absolutely not a struggle for human rights as the United States has noisily proclaimed but a struggle between revolution and counter-revolution, between socialist and anti-socialist forces".

The paper reaffirms Vietnam's strong support for revolution and socialism, against counter-revolution and anti-socialism. "We totally support all the measures taken since December 13, 1981, by the Polish Military Council of National Salvation and the Polish state and consider them as revolutionary and necessary to meet the legitimate interest of the Polish people and the socialist community, as well as of peace and security in Europe and elsewhere", the paper says. "While strongly denouncing the imperialist intervention in Poland", NHAN DAN notes, "the Soviet Union has always expressed its noble internationalism, extending its profound sympathy with and great and selfless assistance to the fraternal Polish people".

The paper continues: "The new American propaganda campaign is directed against not only the Polish People's Republic and other countries in the Socialist community, but also against international peace and security. The attitude toward the Polish situation has become the touchstone for all revolutionaries and progressive people".

"The socialist forces in Poland have gained crucial victories in the struggle against counter-revolutionary elements. No force can reverse the situation. Of course, in the process of bringing the situation back to normal, the Polish people will meet many more difficulties caused by the imperialists. The Vietnamese people once again extend their most vigorous solidarity and support to their Polish brothers, and believe that final victory will belong to the Polish people", NHAN DAN adds.

SINGAPORE FOREIGN MINISTER MEETS WITH SUHARTO

BK030931 Jakarta OANA in English 0915 GMT 3 Feb 82

["Pool Item"]

[Text] Jakarta, 3 Feb (OANA/ANTARA) -- The formation of the loose Kampuchean coalition government entirely depends on the three parties concerned (Prince Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khmer Rouge) which met in Singapore recently. In other words the coalition would never materialize without the participation of the Khmer Rouge of Khieu Samphan.

This was stated by Singapore Foreign Minister S. Dhanabalan after his meeting with President Suharto at Bina Graha here Wednesday. The Singaporean foreign minister flew in here this morning and immediately conferred with Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja before calling on the Indonesian president.

Dhanabalan, who was flanked by Mokhtar, emphasized that ASEAN played a supporting role only. He explained the loose coalition government as proposed by Singapore was intended to let each of the three groups remain "independent and sovereign".

In the latest development, Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk accepted the proposal while the Khmer Rouge rejected it. Indonesia and Singapore, Dhanabalan said after his talks in Jakarta, agreed that it would be up to the three unreconciled groups in Kampuchea to decide about the setting up of the coalition government. ASEAN had asked for advice and ASEAN is willing to help but it [words indistinct] were to take action," Dhanabalan said.

Asked on the Khmer Rouge's rejection to join the loose coalition proposal, Chanabalan said that the coalition desired by the Khmer Rouge should be the same with the original one based on the agreed political principles. The Singaporean foreign minister said he did not very well understand what was meant by the agreed political principles, but he believed they were principles agreed upon during the first meeting of the three groups.

According to Dhanabalan, the Khmer Rouge expressed its willingness to still form the loose coalition. He even said that the Khmer Rouge wanted to convene another meeting with the other two groups (Sihanouk and Son Sann).

Asked about the hint given by Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir that the country might withdraw its support to Khmer Rouge's seat in the United Nations, Dhanabalan declined to comment as he said he had not read the report. To date, most of the ASEAN countries have given recognition to the Democratic Kampuchean Government led by Khieu Samphan.

He said if ASEAN was propping up the possibility of the creation of a new Kampuchean state, it was not in the form of government. ASEAN continues to appeal to all the parties which are to form the coalition not to hold on stubbornly to their own respective positions because the important thing is to liberate Kampuchea from external interference, according to Dhanabalan.

MOKHTAR COMMENTS ON KHMER ROUGE REJECTION

BK271255 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Indonesian Foreign Minister Prof Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja says ASEAN does not regard as final the decision of the Khmer Rouge government to reject the Singapore proposal to tie itself in a loose coalition with two other anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean groups. ASEAN will, however, leave the matter entirely to the three factions to make a decision on the proposal made last December by Singapore. The three had earlier agreed in principle to the proposal but had not been able to agree on details.

The Indonesian foreign minister was speaking to newsmen after calling on Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed at his office in Kuala Lumpur this afternoon. Nevertheless, he said, there was a need for ASEAN to have consultations on the matter.

Referring to his discussions with the prime minister, Professor Mokhtar said they focused on closer relations between ASEAN and Indonesia and Malaysia in particular. He also said Indonesia supported Malaysia fully in its stand against the United States for its release of stockpiled tin on the world market.

PRAWIRO MESSAGE TO REGIONAL GROUP OF 77 MEETING

BK251109 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1025 GMT 25 Jan 81

[Text] Jakarta, 25 Jan (ANTARA) -- Economic cooperation toward the creation of a new international economic order will figure as the topic of discussions at the 5-day regional meeting opening today of the ASEAN Group of 77 in the city. The regional meeting opened by Foreign Trade Director General Suhadi will focus talks on multilateral cooperation between business houses of the member countries of the region.

Trade and Cooperatives Minister [Radius Prawiro] wrote in a message read out for him by Suhadi said cooperation between developing countries constitutes a "basic component" for the establishment of the new economic order. Due to the reason the developing countries should be able to forge economic cooperation among themselves both on the regional as well as the world level.

Radius said there had been a consensus that economic cooperation among the developing countries constitutes a basic policy in encouraging self confidence and would be very effective in speeding up the materialization of the new world economic order. The desire for the renewal of the world economic order would give rise to a framework of friendship between the advanced and the developing countries and also among the developing countries themselves, he said.

The world trade volume between 1975 and 1979 had increased by 32 percent whereas by the year 1980 only recorded an increase of 0.4 percent, the minister said. The slight increase was attributed to the fact that the advanced countries had maintained protectionism against commodity imports from developing countries. The protectionist policy has caused the developing countries to promote cooperation on the fields of economy, technology and trade.

Indonesia as a member feels that it has obtained valuable experience from this subregional economic cooperation. The ASEAN regional economic cooperation has resulted among other things in the preferential trade arrangements covering 8,000 commodities and the undertaking of four joint ASEAN industrial projects. "We are now starting to build motor machinery components manufacturing industries," Radius said.

In this connection the trade minister said the experience from the cooperation could be used as topic of discussions in the coming Asian regional meeting of the Group of 77 member in Jakarta. Radius said state ventures, private undertakings and cooperatives are grouped in Indonesia's trade system, but the private sector is given a greater role to play in trade activities.

In the cooperative sector, the government gives only facilities and incentives on which cooperatives are expected to capitalize for self-propelling advancement. The government sector of the economy is engaged in general trade, production and in other development projects, Radius Prawiro said.

MALAYSIA

MAHATHIR: MALAYSIA MAY CHANGE STAND ON DK

BK030045 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Malaysia says it may have to withdraw its support for the continued seating of Democratic Kampuchea in the United Nations, in view of the uncompromising attitude of certain parties involved in the conflict. This was stated by Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed in Kuala Lumpur today in an apparent reference to the refusal of the Khmer Rouge to enter into a coalition with the other two Kampuchean resistance movements. They are the Kampuchean People's National Liberation Front and the Moulinaka group of former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Addressing the fourth general assembly of the ASEAN Interparliamentary Organization, AIPO, the prime minister said countries in Southeast Asia have entered an era fraught with unprecedented peril. The problem of Kampuchea had plagued the region for the last 2 years, and appeared to be no nearer to an equitable solution.

STRAITS TIMES VIEWS ASEAN KAMPUCHEAN EFFORTS

BK020746 Kuala Lumpur NEW STRAITS TIMES in English 30 Jan 82

[Editorial: "Only Way"]

[Text] Despite a rebuff from the Khmer Rouge, ASEAN is determined to continue its efforts to seek a political settlement in Kampuchea. The challenge of reconciling the divergent views of former foes was never an easy one. But politics is the art of the possible, and ASEAN is not lacking in statesmanship and stamina. The temporary set-back to coalition hopes does not change its perception that if the resistance movement is to find credibility, Sihanouk, Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge must forge a united front against Hanoi.

Who will gain if the hopes for an alliance are belied? Not the Khmer Rouge, though their China-fostered illusions may reflect otherwise. Without the participation of Sihanouk and Son Sann, the erstwhile tormentors of Kampuchea will continue to be dreaded by their own people and reviled by the world for their blood-stained record. Since 1979 ASEAN diplomacy has secured for them UN support. But the world assembly cannot be taken for granted. If a coalition fails to materialise, the representative character of Khieu Samphan's 'government' loses credibility. Time, too, is not on the side of the former rulers of Kampuchea. Their 40,000-strong force is no match for Vietnam's war machine. While it is true that maintaining military pressure against Hanoi has its uses, the ultimate solution to the Indochina quagmire is political, not military. The strategy of prolonged insurgency will hurt Vietnam, but will not restore to the Khmer Rouge their lost republic.

The resistance groups are agreed on the need for cooperation, but are quibbling over allocation of portfolios. That is like counting chickens even before the eggs are laid. One would think that if Hanoi withdraws, the question of future rule could be left to the Cambodian people. It is inconsistent to condemn Vietnam for subjugating the Khmers but at the same time to dread letting the people of Kampuchea choose their future leaders through free elections. All these considerations are, however, premature. The urgent task is to liberate the tortured land from a foreign yoke. The status quo is intolerable to all parties concerned, save Beijing. Vietnam is bleeding away slowly. Heng Samrin is nowhere near acquiring legitimacy. The Khmer Rouge are pawns in Beijing's Indochina game. ASEAN's sincere dream of stable and prosperous neighbours and a zone of peace in this troubled part of the world is not finding fruition.

JOINT COMMUNIQUE SIGNED WITH SAUDI ARABIA

BK011022 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Malaysia and Saudi Arabia have agreed to intensify cooperation in all fields -- including economic, political and cultural -- to reflect the strong Islamic bond between the two countries. A joint communique issued in both Riyadh and Kuala Lumpur at the end of his majesty the yang dipertuan agong's week-long state visit to Saudi Arabia said both sides also agreed to further encourage the commercial and private investments among concerned parties in the private sectors of both countries.

Malaysia and Saudi Arabia also reviewed the technical, scientific and cultural cooperation between them and agreed on the necessity of their continuation and development.

The joint communique said that in the field of international relations both countries reviewed the world political and economic situations and stressed the need to strengthen and promote international peace and security on the basis of the principles of equality, sovereignty, regional security, territorial integrity and noninterference in the internal affairs of other countries.

They also agreed that all differences among countries should be solved through peaceful means. Both Malaysia and Saudi Arabia also reiterated their commitment to the principles and aims of the United Nations and the Organization of Islamic Conference.

The yang dipertuan agong and King Khalid called for close cooperation among member states of the Islamic Conference in all fields and reiterated the importance and significance of the historic Mecca declaration.

The communique said his majesty extended an invitation to King Khalid to visit Malaysia. A similar invitation was also extended to Crown Prince Fahd, who is also Saudi Arabia's deputy prime minister. Both invitations were accepted and the date of the visit would be fixed later.

On the situation in west Asia, both countries expressed concern about the increasingly dangerous situation arising out of the act of aggression of the Zionists and subversive actions of Israel and its repeated violations of UN resolutions, international bodies and world public opinion.

Both heads of state also expressed their disapproval of the annexation of Jerusalem to Israeli entity by Israel. They considered the Israeli action illegitimate and a blatant violation of all international laws and accords. They also condemned the recent annexation of the Syrian Golan Heights by Israel and described the action as a provocative violation of all international laws and agreements.

Malaysia welcomed the establishment of the Gulf Cooperation Council and expressed its wish for the council's continuing success to realize the goals for which it had been established.

On Afghanistan, both countries reiterated their call for the immediate withdrawal of all Soviet forces from that country so that the Afghan people could themselves decide on their future without external interference.

Malaysia and Saudi Arabia also expressed their concern over the continuing conflict between Iran and Iraq and repeated their call for an end to the fighting through positive response to the efforts of the peace committee of the Islamic summit conference to find the peaceful settlement.

On ASEAN, the Saudi Arabian Government expressed its complete support for the endeavors of ASEAN member countries to create a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia. On world Muslim solidarity, both countries agreed that Muslim states themselves were required to consult and cooperate among themselves at bilateral and multilateral levels to strengthen Islamic solidarity for the achievement of progress and stability of the Muslim ummah [community].

The yeng dipertuan agong expressed his gratitude and deep appreciation to King Khalid for the warm reception and generous hospitality accorded to him, the raja permaisuri agong and his royal entourage.

SINGAPORE

IRAQI VICE PRESIDENT LEADS DELEGATION ON VISIT

Meeting With Rajaratnam

BK271153 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] The vice president of Iraq, Mr Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf, has held talks with the deputy prime minister for foreign affairs, Mr Rajaratnam, and the minister for foreign affairs and culture, Mr Dhanabalan. Also present were the Iraqi minister for trade and member of the Revolutionary Command Council, Mr Hasan 'Ali al-Amiri, and other officials. Mr Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf and his 13-member delegation arrived earlier this afternoon for a 3-day official visit. They were met on arrival by Mr Rajaratnam and the health and second defense minister, Mr Goh Chok Tong. This evening they will attend a dinner hosted by Mr Rajaratnam.

Meeting With Nair

JN281347 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1130 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] Singapore, 28 Jan (INA) -- Iraqi Vice President Taha Muhyi ad-Din Ma'ruf held talks here today with Singapore President Devan Nair. The talks dealt with various international issues as well as bilateral relations. Ma'ruf reviewed the developments of the Iraqi-Persian conflict, the Zionist aggression against Iraq and the Persian regime's cooperation with the Zionist entity in an attempt to stop Iraq's development movement. He indicated Iraq's positive response to the international initiatives and efforts to end the war and the Persian enemy's intransigence and rejection of all these initiatives. He also explained Iraq's preparations to host the Nonaligned Movement's summit conference in Baghdad in September and the coordination being carried out with all member states to render this conference successful and to enhance the movement's activities.

Nair expressed his wishes of success for Iraq in holding the summit and stressed that its convocation in Baghdad will be a basic pillar to assert the movement's principles and independence.

Hasan 'Ali, Revolution Command Council member and trade minister, who is accompanying Ma'ruf on his visit, met here today with Tony Tan, Singapore minister of trade and industry. The two sides discussed bilateral trade and economic relations and ways of implementing the trade agreement signed in Baghdad in October last year in a manner which effectively contributes to developing and diversifying trade exchange between Iraq and Singapore. The two ministers agreed to hold a meeting for the joint economic committee in Singapore this year. They also discussed ways of developing bilateral technical cooperation, particularly if the field of training and the contribution by Singapore construction companies to Iraqi development projects. Hasan 'Ali stressed the solidity of the Iraqi economy despite the war Iraq is waging against the Iranian regime. He also stressed the Iraqi leadership's insistence on implementing the scheduled projects according to the plans drawn up for them.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 024 4 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Suzuki Rejects Socialist Leader's Allegations C 1
JSP Chairman Raps Suzuki for Militaristic Stance C 1
Suzuki Discusses Fiscal Reconstruction Policy C 2
Further on Financial Reform C 3
EC's Denman 'Dissatisfied' With Trade Talks C 3
Abe Urges More Imports, Overseas Investments C 4
Trade Group Forms Foreign Complaints Task Force C 4
Bill Proposes 3-Year Tariff Cuts on 1,653 Items C 5
UK Plans To Sell Aircraft, Missiles to Japan C 5
Government Approves SDF Personnel Increase C 6
MSDF To Take Part in Pacific Naval Maneuvers C 6

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Continues To Score Chon Proposal [4 Feb] D 1
KWP Greets Japan Socialist Party Congress D 2
Preparations for SPA Elections Progressing D 2
Premier Yi Chong-ok Leaves for Indonesia 2 Feb D 3
Public Health Group Leaves for PRC 2 Feb D 3
Visiting Polish Trade Delegation Signs Protocol D 3
Briefs: Romanian Envoy Leaves D 3

SOUTH KOREA

Navy Studies Strategy Against North Provocations E 1
[KOREA TIMES 4 Feb]
Government's Rice Import Policy Criticized E 1
[CHOSON ILBO 4 Feb]
Government To Cut Energy Consumption 10 Percent E 2
[KOREA TIMES 4 Feb]

BURMA

DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok Arrives 2 Feb G 1
Leaves for Indonesia G 1
Minister Signs Book of Condolences for Suslov G 1
Cooperatives Minister Returns From Foreign Tour G 1

KAMPUCHEA

Soviet Marshal Ogarkov's Visit Announced H 1
AFP: Hun Sen Interviewed on Various Issues H 1
National Assembly To Hold Second Session 5 Feb H 1
KAMPUCHEA Hails Session H 2
Hor Nam Hong Expresses Support for SRV Proposals H 2
Agreement With USSR on Agricultural Cooperation H 3
Keo Chanda Addresses Military Course Closing H 3
Prey Veng Military Command Organizes Meeting H 3
Yugoslav Editor Pays Visit to DK Areas [VODK] H 4
VODK Reports LNLF Guerrillas' Battle Activities H 4

THAILAND

Sitthi Discusses Khmer Coalition in Interview	J 1
Further on Remarks [POST 4 Feb]	J 1
Thailand Reportedly Not To Host Khmer Meetings	J 2
SIAM RAT Views China's Role in Khmer Coalition [29 Jan]	J 2
Attack by Lao Troops on 2 Feb Reported	J 3
Statement by Officer	J 3
NATION REVIEW on Attack [4 Feb]	J 3
Further Materials on Narcotics Suppression Drive	J 3
Interview With Prayut	J 3
Talks With Army Officers [POST 3 Feb]	J 4
Government Press Conference	J 5
Further on Press Conference [POST 4 Feb]	J 5
Provincial Officials Report Communist Defections	J 6
NATION: CPT Kills 13 Soldiers in Road Ambush [2 Feb]	J 6
Briefs: Lignite Deposits; Deep Sea Port Project	J 7

VIETNAM

Soviet Marshal Ogarkov Begins Official Visit	K 1
Arrival Ceremony	K 1
VPA General Staff Banquet	K 1
Van Tien Dung Reception	K 2
UN Envoy Blames U.S. for Israeli Actions	K 2
Ceremony Held at Soviet-Built Cement Plant	K 3
SRV, Albania Sign Goods Exchange Protocol	K 4
VCP Greets Mozambique Party on Anniversary	K 4
Vo Chi Cong Speaks at Contract Wages Conference [NHAN DAN 10 Jan]	K 5
Addition to Thai Binh Party Congress Report [cross-reference]	K 7
Pham Van Dong Speaks at Conference on Labor	K 8
Linking Raw Material Areas, Processing Urged [NHAN DAN 2 Feb]	K 9
Third Military Region Holds Review Conference	K 10
Norwegian Ambassador Pays Farewell Calls	K 11
With Pham Van Dong	K 11
With Truong Chinh	K 11
Hanoi Ceremony Marks Dong Da Victory Over Qing	K 11
TU Delegation Leaves for Visit to Soviet Union	K 11

INDONESIA

UK Foreign Secretary Carrington Pays Visit	N 1
Talks With Mokhtar	N 1
Meeting With Subroto	N 1
Carrington Dinner Speech	N 1
Support for ASEAN on Kampuchea	N 2
Mokhtar's Comments on Visit	N 3
DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok Pays Official Visit	N 3
Arrival of Delegation	N 3
Banquet for Premier	N 4
Yi Chong-ok Banquet Remarks	N 4
Calls on Suharto	N 5
MP's Score Moscow Radio Report Over PKI Message	N 5

MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE

MALAYSIA

Malaysian Envoy Interviewed on Kampuchea 0 1
[Bangkok NATION REVIEW 4 Feb]
Kuala Lumpur Discusses Khmer Rouge Stance 0 1

SUZUKI REJECTS SOCIALIST LEADER'S ALLEGATIONS

OW280731 Tokyo KYODO in English 0710 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jan 28 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday rejected a socialist charge that the current Japan-U.S. study on planning joint contingency action in the event of an emergency in the Far East is unconstitutional. Suzuki said Japan and the United States have a clear understanding that the joint emergency study does not include "collective security," which is renounced under the Japanese Constitution.

Replying to socialist Noboru Agune at an Upper House plenary session, Suzuki said the joint study is for discussing what facilities and services Japan could offer to the U.S. forces in an emergency in the Far East strictly within the framework of Japan's domestic laws and the Japan-U.S. security treaty.

Socialist Agune charged that Japan's offering of facilities may affect private property. The Japan-U.S. joint study means an expanded interpretation of the bilateral security treaty and infringes on the Japanese Constitution banning "collective security," the socialist said.

The socialist further said "the Far East" in the joint study apparently means the Korean Peninsula, and that the study is aimed at integrating a military alliance of the U.S., Japan and South Korea. He expressed strong suspicion that the government intends to offer security-related economic assistance to South Korea. But Prime Minister Suzuki denied the allegations, saying that Japan's economic aid to Seoul would be for helping South Korea improve its social development and people's life, not for helping Korean military buildup.

Suzuki also turned down the socialist's demand that part of the defense budget for fiscal 1982 be frozen to reduce the nation's defense burden. Agune charged that the yen 2,586 billion defense budget, approved by the government in December, has been compiled at the expense of welfare and educational spendings. The fiscal 1982 budget, showing a 7.75 percent growth as well as huge defense outlays expected to be appropriated in later years, would result in defense spending exceeding the ceiling of 1 percent of the gross national product (GNP) in two or three years, the socialist said.

The premier also rejected the socialist's claim that the export of opitcal communication equipment by Nippon Electric Co (NEC) to the United States in 1980, now being used for military purposes, violated Japan's three principles against arms exports. Suzuki reiterated the government position that the equipment was exported as general-purpose equipment for nonmilitary use.

JSP CHAIRMAN RAPS SUZUKI FOR MILITARISTIC STANCE

OW040525 Tokyo KYODO in English 0502 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 4 (KYODO) -- Japan Socialist Party leader Ichio Asukata condemned Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday for steering Japan toward a military power. Asukata, chairman of the country's No 1 opposition party, spoke at the party's national convention, which opened here Thursday morning for a three-day session. Some 430 delegates from throughout the country attended the meeting.

Asukata accused Suzuki's Cabinet of following U.S. President Ronald Reagan's dangerous strategies, trying to emasculate the nonnuclear policy, expanding military capabilities and also of speeding up preparations for an emergency in the Far East. The way followed by the government, he went on, will not only lead Japan to a nuclear war, but deal a serious blow to the daily livelihood of the Japanese people.

Asukata charged that the government has cut spending on welfare, education and medical services, and that it is trying to ease its arms embargo policy and extend loans to South Korea. Asukata said the people earnestly want a new choice in politics for the sake of Japan's future. However, he admitted that the opposition camp, including his party, is not prepared to take over power from the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party.

Asukata said some opposition parties and labor quarters are inclined to inch themselves close to "realities" created by those in power, thus tacitly criticizing the No 2 opposition Komeito, No 3 Democratic Socialist Party and Japan's second largest organized labor, Domei (the Japanese Confederation of Labor). The Socialist Party leader emphasized the need to strengthen the No 1 opposition party enough to take the initiative for formation of a reformist coalition. Such a coalition is also needed to mount antinuclear and disarmament movements, protect the war-renouncing Constitution, achieve a small government and to realize a yen 1 trillion (about $4.3 billion) tax reduction, Asukata said.

Meanwhile, Asukata told a party doyen Thursday morning that he plans to appoint Noboru Baba, an intraparty centrist group leader, as new secretary general, the major focal post in the makeup of the party leadership, at the party convention.

The convention will discuss chiefly action plans for fiscal 1982 starting in April and a party line for the 1980s proposed by the JSP Central Executive Committee for review of the party's quasi-platform document entitled "Road to Socialism in Japan." The convention will also officially approve Chairman Asukata, who was elected to his third term in an election last year end in which all party members voted for the first time.

Motofumi Makieda, chairman of the General Council of Trade Unions of Japan (Sohyo), in a speech at the convention, urged the party to press the government for a yen 1 trillion tax reduction. Makieda also denounced the government's fiscal 1982 budget for being inclined to military expansion at the sacrifice of welfare, and implicitly called on the JSP to rap the Democratic Socialist Party for its right-wing defense policy.

Thursday afternoon, JSP Secretary General Shinnen Tagaya was to give a general report on party affairs calling for boosting party power to expand a reformist camp and to fight the government's move to revise the peace Constitution.

SUZUKI DISCUSSES FISCAL RECONSTRUCTION POLICY

OW290641 Tokyo KYODO in English 0614 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 29 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Friday reaffirmed the government's policy of working to achieve "fiscal reconstruction " -- dispensing with deficit-covering bond issues -- by fiscal 1984. He made the reaffirmation in response to a question put by Hidehiko Yaoi, a Komeito Party executive, at a House of Councillors plenary session.

Suzuki stressed that there was no change in the target, despite an estimated yen 3.37 trillion ($14.7 billion) revenue shortfall in fiscal 1983. The prime minister said the government has no intention of issuing refunding bonds to redeem deficit-financing bonds.

The government began issuing deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1965. These bonds are all redeemable 10 years later. The cumulative deficit-financing bond issues as of the end of last year totaled yen 32 trillion (about $140 billion). Redemptions of such bonds in fiscal 1990 are estimated to reach an enormous yen 2.48 trillion (about $11 billion).

If the government is to redeem such bonds without issuing refunding bonds, it would have to set aside a considerable amount of money. This would make it practically impossible for the government to achieve the "fiscal reconstruction" target by fiscal 1984, analysts said.

Yaoi asked Suzuki about his view of the fact that some products exported to the United States from Japan are being used for military purposes. The premier replied that weapons exports even to the U.S. would basically be handled in compliance with the so-called three principles of arms exports laid down in 1976 by the government. However, in view of the security treaty between Japan and the United States, the matter is under study by the pertinent government units, he said.

Asked about what he would appeal for at the United Nations special assembly session on disarmament in June, the prime minister said, "I would like to appeal for conclusion of a treaty banning nuclear weapons, the buildup of an (international) system for prevention of nuclear proliferation and the prohibition of chemical weapons."

Further on Financial Reform

OW031115 Tokyo KYODO in English 1104 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 3 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said in the Diet Wednesday that he is staking his premiership on his promise to pull the government out of the current financial difficulty by fiscal 1984.

Answering a socialist questioner of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, Suzuki said his promise was to complete fiscal restructuring by fiscal 1984 to terminate the heavy dependence on issuance of national bonds to cover financial deficits. "This, I assure you, will be done through efforts to be made in 1982, 1983 and 1984 ... I stake my political responsibility on it," the prime minister said. He did not make precisely clear what "political responsibility" meant, but the phrase is commonly understood to mean stepping down from power.

At the Budget Committee session, Takatoshi Fujita of the Japan Socialist Party concentrated his questions on the government issuance of bonds worth yen 375 billion ($1.6 billion) to cover deficits in the supplementary budget for fiscal 1981, which ends next month. Fujita pointed out to the prime minister that the government must suffer a revenue shortfall of more than yen 1 trillion ($4.3 billion) due to reduced tax income in the current fiscal year. Hence Suzuki's fiscal restructuring plan will have been shattered, the socialist questioner said.

EC'S DENMAN 'DISSATISFIED' WITH TRADE TALKS

OW291247 Tokyo KYODO in English 1230 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 29 (KYODO) -- Japan's huge trade surplus with Western Europe has caused protectionist trends to grow, which may lead to a collapse of the free trade system, a senior European Community (EC) official warned Friday. Sir Roy Denman, director general for external relations of the EC Commission, said, however, the community will not threaten Japan because of the trade imbalance. Denman said he came away from semiannual Japan-EC high level talks dissatisfied, although his Japanese counterpart, Deputy Foreign Minister Nobuo Matsunaga, apparently felt otherwise.

Matsunaga told a joint news conference at the end of the talks, "We reaffirmed the need for both sides to maintain and promote our multilateral trade system."

During the talks, the Japanese explained the government's decision to advance implementation of massive tariff reductions on 1,653 items by two years to bring average rate of tariffs down to 6.7 percent from 15.6 percent at present. The deputy foreign minister said the government was taking these steps "unilaterally without asking the European Community for a quid pro quo."

Denman admitted frankly, "one of the steps has been taken in the right direction" for promotion of trade between the two trading blocs. But the EC official said the community's trade deficit with Japan -- $13 to 14 billion in 1981, according to European estimates, against Japan's official announcement of $10.3 billion -- was intolerable.

"This is a political fact," Denman argued, and called on Japan to continue to make an effort to import more manufactured goods from Western Europe by overcoming what he called Japan's "self-sufficiency syndrome." He said Japanese concessions in the field of tariff reductions were negligible, and he pointed to a 2 percent cut for biscuits and a reduction of yen 8 to 10 (3 to 4 U.S. cents) for a bottle of whisky.

"The Japanese Government made maximum and determined efforts," Matsunaga said. He added that Japan, with scanty natural resources, has to import oil and cannot import a large quantity of manufactured goods from other countries. The deputy foreign minister said he expected the European Community to "appreciate the efforts we made" at the bilateral talks.

Foreign ministers of the 10 EC member countries will meet next month to discuss the Japanese trade concessions. Denman said "proof of pudding" is needed before implementation of the Japanese tariff reductions and easing and eliminating of nontariff barriers could be judged.

ABE URGES MORE IMPORTS, OVERSEAS INVESTMENTS

OW270845 Tokyo KYODO in English 0820 GMT 27 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 27, KYODO -- Shintaro Abe, international trade and industry minister, Wednesday urged Japanese businesses to import more manufactured goods and invest more abroad in the form of industrial cooperation. He made the plea to Yoshihiro Inayama and other leaders of the Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren) while briefing them on his recent visit to the United States, a MITI spokesman said.

Abe said Japan should take the initiative in pulling the world economy of the present stagnancy and called on the businessmen to promote industrial cooperation at private levels, the spokesman said. Abe told them the government will soon announce decisions to ease or remove 67 of the 99 testing and inspection regulations which the United States and European Community (EC) have labelled as "nontariff barriers" and will continue such efforts hereafter.

TRADE GROUP FORMS FOREIGN COMPLAINTS TASK FORCE

OW010637 Tokyo KYODO in English 0619 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 1, KYODO -- The Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO) Monday inaugurated a task force to process foreign complaints about the Japanese market. The task force will coordinate its work with the government's headquarters for dealing with similar complaints within the Economic Planning Agency. An office handling complaints has been established in various ministries and agencies, including the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) and the Foreign Ministry.

Officials said JETRO's 77 offices in 59 countries will serve as "reception desks" for grievances against alleged nontariff barriers, including import testing procedures, and refer them to the task force in Tokyo led by Yoshiharu Yamada, executive director of the semiofficial trade promoting agency. Its secretary general is Shinsaku Sogo, director of JETRO's Overseas Public Relations Department.

The task force will present the complaints to the MITI, which will relay them to the ministries and agencies concerned. The officials said JETRO has close contact with economic circles in these nations and so information can be easily obtained. JETRO offices have been told to give top priority to this matter and an expert in this field has been assigned at its New York office, the officials added.

BILL PROPOSES 3-YEAR TARIFF CUTS ON 1,653 ITEMS

OW011303 Tokyo KYODO in English 1214 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 1, KYODO -- The vice ministers [as received] Monday adopted a fiscal 1982 tariff revision bill featuring an average 15.6 percent cut in the tariffs on 1,653 items scheduled for three years -- from fiscal 1982 to 1984 -- from next April 1. After obtaining Cabinet approval Tuesday, the government will submit the bill to the Diet (parliament).

The speedup of the tariff reduction on the 1,653 items, agreed on in 1979 at the end of the seven-year multilateral trade negotiations among 99 countries, is designed to ease trade friction with other countries. The 1,653 items include chocolate, biscuits and computers. The amendment also calls for an average 10.4 percent cut in the specific duty on Scotch whisky (no change in the ad valorem duty on other types of whisky -- bourbon and rye), effective next April 1.

The bill also calls for a reduction in the tariff on semiconductors to the final concession rate agreed on in the multilateral trade negotiations, in accorance with an agreement reached between Japan and the United States. In the bill, it is stipulated that imports of primary aluminum ingots by Japanese aluminum smelters, who face financial difficulties, will be made duty-free for a three-year period starting next April 1. The tariff cutbacks are estimated to result in an estimated yen 40 billion (about dollar 174 million) decline in tariff revenues in fiscal 1982.

UK PLANS TO SELL AIRCRAFT, MISSILES TO JAPAN

OW010909 Tokyo KYODO in English 0841 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 1, KYODO -- Britain will discuss the possibility of selling medium-sized passenger jets, ground-to-air missiles and other defense equipment to Japan this week a top British aerospace industry official said Monday. Austin Hugh Pope, president of the Society of British Aerospace Companies (SBAC), said the topic will be discussed during a meeting with officials of the Japanese Defense Agency.

Pope is here to attend the third British aerospace and related equipment exhibition and seminar opening Tuesday at the British Export Marketing Center under the auspices of SBAC. Twenty British companies affiliated with SBAC are taking part in the five-day exhibition covering both civil and military areas in a bid to get a larger slice of the Japanese market. "The SBAC member companies wish to be considered as serious contenders in the procurement process for the future," he told reporters.

The British aerospace industry is the second largest in theworld after the United States and aerospace equipment exports to Japan have been increasing for the past few years with the volume reaching 30.5 million pound sterling in 1980 from 23.9 million pound sterling in 1979.

GOVERNMENT APPROVES SDF PERSONNEL INCREASE

OW290601 Tokyo KYODO in English 0555 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 29, KYODO -- The government approved bills Friday to increase the number of Self-Defense Force (SDF) personnel by 1,978 to 272,162. At present, 241,130 persons are enlisted in the SDF. The increased force includes 1,302 for the Maritime SDF, 630 for the Air SDF and 46 for the Joint Staff Council. This apparently reflects Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's wish for stronger air and naval strength. The number of SDF reserves will be raised to 43,600 from 41,600 at present.

MSDF TO TAKE PART IN PACIFIC NAVAL MANEUVERS

OW261027 Tokyo KYODO in English 1016 GMT 26 Jan 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jan 26, KYODO -- The Japanese Maritime Self-Defense Force will take part in the 1982 Pacific Rim Naval Maneuvers (RIMPAC '82) to be conducted in the Pacific from mid-March, the MSDF announced Tuesday. Japan will be participating in the biennial naval exercise for the second time. It took part in the previous RIMPAC '80. The MSDF will dispatch three late-model destroyers, eight P-2J antisubmarine patrol planes and about 940 men for the exercise.

RIMPAC '80, conducted in the Central Pacific around the Hawaiian Islands for about three weeks, involved Japan, the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, and 41 naval ships, 200 aircraft and 20,000 men in all. Details of the forthcoming exercise are still to be announced, but it is expected to be on almost the same scale as the previous one, only for a longer period.

Adm. Masaru Maeda, chief of the MSDF staff, told reporters that in the coming exercise, MSDF men will be trained in operations against submarines and surface ships and for air defense as well as in the launching of missiles and torpedoes, as in the previous exercise. He also said the MSDF will only take joint actions with the U.S. in the exercises lest any question should be posed over Japan's right of collective self-defense, banned by the Constitution.

The three surface ships dispatched will be the 5,200-ton helicopter-equipped destroyer "Shirane" and the 3,850-ton missile-equipped destroyers "Tachikaze" and "Asakaze." The MSDF ship and aircraft units will leave for the exercises in late February and mid-March, respectively.

NODONG SINMUN CONTINUES TO SCORE CHON PROPOSAL

SK041054 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1030 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today carries a signed article titled "Proposal for General Elections Is Splittist One Veiled With Reunification" in denunciation of the "unification proposal" brought forward by traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

In this "unification proposal", the article says, traitor Chon Tu-hwan argued for achieving reunification by instituting a National Assembly and a unified government through "general elections" in accordance with the "principle of national self-determination" and "democratic procedures". But what he sought is to freeze division by misleading public opinion with the veil of "unification."

The article further says: The situation prevailing in South Korea today is unfit for a discussion of "elections" and admits no room for it.

The U.S. imperialist aggression forces are present in South Korea and, for this, the national sovereignty is totally violated. The U.S. imperialists' occupation and colonial rule of South Korea and their nation-splitting policy are the main obstacle of national reunification and the root cause of all the misfortunes and sufferings of our nation.

It is preposterous, indeed, to cry for general elections, making free with phraseology about "principle of national self-determination" and "democratic procedures" when national sovereignty is violated under the military presence of foreign forces and the last shred of democracy is trampled underfoot under the truculent military fascist rule. This is anti-democratic, anti-national manoeuvres to make a mockery of democracy and insult the nation's sacred cause of reunification under the veil of elections.

They even talked about forming a "Consultative Council for National Unification" with representatives "speaking for the will of the people."

The "proposal for general elections" brought forward by the puppets is nothing but a political formality ignoring the realities of our country. It is, in essence, a crafty splittist artifice denying reunification in actuality under the showy slogans of "unification," "elections," and the like.

Such splittist scheme of their's stood out in bolder relief in their outcry for the conclusion of "an agreement on basic relations between North and South." To talk about an "agreement" itself is to create an impression of relationship like between different countries.

Facts indicate that, whereas the "proposal for general elections" is an empty slogan under the disguise of reunification, the proposal to conclude an "agreement" is an open proposal of "two Koreas" for legalising "two states" and "two nations" behind its screen.

The fuss of the Chon Tu-hwan group over the utterly infeasible "proposal" is intended to mislead public opinion and get rid of isolation at home and abroad by creating the impression that they are concerned for reunification, and keep off the internal and external influence of our proposal for founding a confederal state by opposing the "proposal for general elections" to it and, furthermore, gratify their desire for long-term office by freezing national split.

If the South Korean rulers are truly interested in reunification, they should not come out with the splittist proposal under its veil, but should call for the withdrawal of the U.S. troops from South Korea, establish democracy and renounce their anti-communist confrontation policy. At the same time, they should apologize to the nation for the brutal massacre they committed in Kwangju, release all the illegally arrested democrats and patriotic people including Kim Tae-chung and guarantee them the freedom of political activities.

KWP GREETS JAPAN SOCIALIST PARTY CONGRESS

SK032325 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2213 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 4 (KCNA) -- The Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea sent a message of greetings on February 3 to the 46th Congress of the Japan Socialist Party.

The message says: The Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea warmly congratulates the 46th Congress of the Japan Socialist Party and extends friendly greetings, through the congress, to the entire members of your party.

The Japan Socialist Party is conducting energetic activities to defend the vital rights of the working people, oppose the imperialist policies of aggression and war and the militarisation of the country and establish a nuclear-free, peace zone in the Asian and Pacific region.

All these activities of the Japan Socialist Party are a just struggle which accords with the fundamental interests of the Japanese people striving for peace and democracy, neutrality and independence and contributes to peace and security in Asia and, furthermore, in the world.

The Workers Party of Korea expresses full support and solidarity for the righteous struggle and activities of the Japan Socialist Party.

Putting it up as its major action policy to wage the movement of solidarity with our people's struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, the Japan Socialist Party is carrying on brisk activities within and outside Japan demanding the withdrawal of the U.S. forces from South Korea and supporting the South Korean people's struggle against the suppressive rule of the military fascist clique and for the democratization of society. We express deep thanks for this.

Convinced that the excellent relations of friendship and cooperation forged between our two parties will continue to develop and strengthen, we sincerely wish your party congress great success in its work.

PREPARATIONS FOR SPA ELECTIONS PROGRESSING

SK041004 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0959 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 4 (KCNA) -- Preparations for the election of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] are now successfully progressing in all parts of the country.

According to the rules on the election of deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, constituency and sub-constituency election committees for the election of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly were organised and started their work.

PREMIER YI CHONG-OK LEAVES FOR INDONESIA 2 FEB

SK030424 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0330 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 3 (KCNA) -- Comrade Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Administration Council of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, and his party left Pyongyang on February 2 by plane for an offical goodwill visit to the Republic of Indonesia at the invitation of the government of the Republic of Indonesia.

The premier and his party were seen off at the airport by Vice-President Pak Song-chol, Vice-Premiers Chong-Chun-ki and Kong Chin-tae, Chairman of the People's Service Commission Yim Hyong-ku, Chairman of the Education Commission Choe Tae-pok and personages concerned Yi Song-hui, Yi Yong-kun and Om Tok-hwan.

They were also seen off by Sudargo Mangunwijoyo, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Indonesian Embassy, and He Zhangming, councillor of the Chinese Embassy, in Pyongyang.

PUBLIC HEALTH GROUP LEAVES FOR PRC 2 FEB

SK022319 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2209 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 3 (KCNA) -- A public health delegation of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea headed by Choe Won-sok left Pyongyang on February 2 by plane for a visit to China.

The delegation was seen off at the airport by Kim Yong-ik and other personages concerned and an official of the Chinese Embassy in Pyongyang.

VISITING POLISH TRADE DELEGATION SIGNS PROTOCOL

SK032359 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2219 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 4 (KCNA) -- A protocol on mutual commodity delivery and payments for 1982 between the governments of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Polish People's Republic was signed in Pyongyang on February 3.

Present at the signing ceremony on our side were Pang Tae-yul and other personages concerned and on the opposite side were the members of the government trade delegation of the Polish People's Republic headed by Wladyslaw Gwiazda, vice-minister of foreign trade, and Polish Ambassador to Korea Leon Tomaszewski.

The protocol was signed by Pang Tae-yul and Wladyslaw Gwiazda.

BRIEFS

ROMANIAN ENVOY LEAVES -- Pyongyang, January 31 -- Paul Marinescu, Romanian ambassador to Korea, left here for home on January 30 by train at the recall of his home government. [Text] [Pyongyang KCNA in English 0846 GMT 31 Jan 82 SK]

NAVY STUDIES STRATEGY AGAINST NORTH PROVOCATIONS

SK040238 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 4 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Key navy commanders studied strategic measures aimed at defeating provocative activities by the North Korean communists on the three seas of the Korean Peninsula yesterday. The meeting was presided over by Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Yi Un-su at the training center of the Navy 9550th Unit.

Expressing wholehearted support for the unification proposal made by President Chon Tu-hwan on Jan. 22 to North Korea, the top navy commanders decided to do their utmost to achieve peaceful reunification based on that policy, the navy spokesman revealed. The strategic meeting is to close today. Yesterday's conference was devoted to reviewing last year's achievements and studying major programs for this year. The commanders are to discuss in detail strategic steps disigned to cope effectively with possible aggressive maneuvers by the North Korean communists.

Adm. Yi said in his opening speech that North Korea had failed to land a single espionage agent in the South last year thanks to the tight defensive positions of the naval forces. Adm. Yi, however, said the communists in the North were expected to be more provocative this year than ever before and try to send armed agents into the South. He told the commanders that naval forces should always be vigilant. Meanwhile, Adm. Yi presented citations to nine naval servicemen and several units for their contributions to promoting modernization of naval forces and to strengthening the defensive structure.

GOVERNMENT'S RICE IMPORT POLICY CRITICIZED

SK040920 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 4 Feb 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Foreign Rice Imports Must Be Controlled -- Time To Review Grain Administration Policy"]

[Excerpts] The report that imported rice will be used to produce alcohol will certainly cause people to complain, whatever the reason may be. Considering the alarming state of the international balance of payments and long- and short-term food supplies, and considering difficult problems arising from domestic agricultural production, we can hardly understand it.

It may be a good idea to decide to use imported foreign rice to produce alcohol, rather than throwing it away because it was of too poor a quality to be used as food. However, the question is why was such poor quality rice, which can be used only for the production of alcohol, imported in such an enormous quantity at a price several times higher than that of the raw materials used for a alcohol production?

After causing such a great loss in foreign currency when the nation's foreign currency situation is alarming, the government shows no regrets. This is a mystery to us. And this is not all there is to the problems caused by the import of poor quality foreign rice. Out of 15.6 million som [1 som equals 5.12 U.S. bushels] of rice imported during 1981, 9.4 million som have been issued so far to consumers and 6.2 million som of foreign rice are reserved for government stocks. Out of the government's stocks of foreign rice, at least 1.6 million som must be consumed before the end of May; otherwise, according to what is said, it will completely spoil. It is totally beyond comprehension why such an enormous quantity of rice, including rice that can be used only for making alcohol, was hurriedly imported, causing a headache in grain administration.

We consider that the drop in the rice price level that has continued so far and the improper policy for purchases of rice from farmers that the government worked out all had something to do with the government's rice import policy. Presumably, at a time when preserving imported foreign rice presents a headache and when a contract was signed for importing 500 thousand additional tons of foreign rice, the government must have had no desire to seek the proper purchase of domestic rice. Unfortunately, the government policy for purchase of domestic rice and the condition of the government reserves of rice forced farmers to market their rice to their disadvantage.

As a result, poor farmers now have no rice to sell even if rice price goes up again. There is no way to compensate them for their loss. It may be too late, but the government must make very effort to work out compensatory measures not only for farmers but also for the prevention of further aggravation of the international balance of payments through an increase of grain production. Only when supported by an increase of grain production can the policy of economic galvanization work, without further aggravating inflation and the international balance of payments. To this end, there must be a firm decision to oppose the import of foreign rice, something which has gone on out of habit; otherwise, nothing will be accomplished. And, in this regard, deep regret must be shown for the fact that the foreign rice, for which a high price was paid, has now been reduced to material for alcohol production. Without eliminating thinking which ignores the waste of foreign currency, defense of the international balance of payments and achievements of economic self-reliance are hopeless.

GOVERNMENT TO CUT ENERGY CONSUMPTION 10 PERCENT

SK040301 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 4 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] The government will cut the nation's energy consumption by 10 percent -- double the originally set goal -- by the end of 1986. To drastically reduce the heavy dependence on oil, the government will also cut the oil share in electricity generating from 74 percent last year to 26 percent in 1986. The originally planned oil share was 35 percent. The government will leave the prices of domestic oil products to the market mechansim, doing away with its heavy pricing control.

These government policies were disclosed yesterday when Energy and Resources Minister Yi Son-ki and his key aides reported major programs of his ministry to President Chon Tu-hwan at Chongwadae. According to the report, the government will thrust ahead with an energy conservation drive to save some 85 million barrels of oil worth some $3 billion during the Fifth Five-Year Socio-Economic Development Plan period ending in 1986.

In the industrial sector, some 140 billion won will be put into installation of energy-efficient boilers and other heating systems during the five-year period to attain annual savings worth 85,600 million won. Energy-guzzling establishments will be encouraged to adopt combined heat and power (CHP) systems to raise their average heat efficiency ratio to 87 percent from 36 percent. The industrial establishments will get 35 billion won in soft loans to establish CHP systems, which will have the effect of saving 6,800 million won a year during the five-year period.

Cement producers are scheduled to switch their fuel to coal from oil by the end of this year under the government policy of lessening oil independence. These and other energy conservation programs will be pushed ahead to achieve this year's energy-saving target of $320 million: $224 million in energy consumption and $96 million from shifting fuel to coal from oil.

In line with the nation's top energy policy of easing the hefty reliance on imported oil, the government will establish power plants fueled chiefly by nuclear power and coal. The 200,000-kilowatt Sohae anthracite-fueled plant will be set up by the end of this year, and a total of 15 power stations including eight nuclear plants with a combined total capacity of 10,350,000 kilowatts are under construction. Four oil-fired power plants will be replaced with bituminous coal-fired plants with LNG-fueled ones by 1987. With the drastic cut in oil, the nation's power plants will reduce oil consumption to 18.3 million barrels in 1986 from 48.2 million barrels last year. Accordingly, the per-kilowatt hour electricity cost will fall by 69 percent to 34 won in 1986 from 49.5 won last year, enabling the nation to lower the presently high electricity charges from 1985.

To maximize gas distribution, the ministry will help the nation build an LNG receiving terminal and storage tanks by the end of 1984, and LPG terminals will be set up in Inchon and Yochon by the end of this year.

DPRK PREMIER YI CHONG-OK ARRIVES 2 FEB

BK021422 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, flew into Rangoon Airport by a special aircraft at 1620 [0950 GMT] today to stop overnight in the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma en route to Indonesia. The DPRK premier was welcomed at the airport by Prime Minister U Maung Maung Kha, Minister of Foreign Affairs U Chit Hlaing, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs U Tin Ohn, DPRK Ambassador to Burma Yi Song-hui, responsible officials of the Foreign Ministry and staff members and families of the DPRK Embassy in Burma.

DPRK Premier Yi Chong-ok was accompanied by a 21-member delegation which includes Foreign Trade Minister Choe Chong-kun, External Economic Affairs Minister Chong Song-nam and Vice Foreign Minister Cho Kyu-il.

Leaves for Indonesia

BK031402 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Yi Chong-ok, premier of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, who stopped overnight in Rangoon, left for Indonesia from Rangoon Airport by a special aircraft at 1230 [0600 GMT] today.

The DPRK premier was seen off at the Rangoon Airport by Prime Minister U Maung Maung Kha, Foreign Minister U Chit Hlaing, Deputy Foreign Minister U Tin Ohn, DPRK Ambassador to Burma Yi Song-hui, Indonesian Ambassador to Burma Asnawi Mangkualam, Thai Charge d'Affaires ad Interim Niphon Sathaphon, responsible officials of the Foreign Ministry, and staff members and families of the DPRK Embassy.

MINISTER SIGNS BOOK OF CONDOLENCES FOR SUSLOV

BK291427 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] U Chit Hlaing, minister of foreign affairs of the Socialist Republic of the Union of Burma, today went to the Soviet Embassy in Burma on Prome Road in Rangoon at 0900 to sign the book of condolences for Mikhail Suslov, member of the CPSU Central Committee Politburo, Central Committee secretary and chairman of the Supreme Soviet Foreign Affairs Commission [title as heard].

COOPERATIVES MINISTER RETURNS FROM FOREIGN TOUR

BK201658 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 20 Jan 82

[Text] A three-member cooperative delegation headed by Minister of Cooperatives U Sein Tun, which was studying cooperatives work in Indonesia and Malaysia at the invitation of the two governments, returned to Burma by air at 1430 [0800 GMT] today.

The cooperatives minister and delegation members were welcomed at the airport by Minister of Industry I U Tint Swe, Trade Minister U Khin Maung Gyi, Minister of Information and Culture U Aung Kyaw Myint, Minister of Labor and Social Welfare U Ohn Kyaw, Lanzin Youth Central Organizing Committee Secretary U Hla Shwe, responsible officials of the Indonesian and Malaysian Embassies, directors general and responsible officials of the cooperatives and cottage industries departments, and personnel of the Rangoon division syndicate of township cooperative societies.

The cooperatives minister and his delegation toured Indonesia and Malaysia for about a week and on their way to those countries they stopped over in Singapore to study the distribution of goods.

SOVIET MARSHAL OGARKOV'S VISIT ANNOUNCED

BK041310 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 4 Feb 82

[PRK Defense Ministry communique]

[Text] At the invitation of the PRK Defense Ministry, a high-ranking Soviet military delegation, led by Comrade Marshal of the Soviet Union Ogarkov, first deputy defense minister of the USSR and chief of the General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces, will pay an official friendship visit to the PRK in the near future.

AFP: HUN SEN INTERVIEWED ON VARIOUS ISSUES

NC031345 Paris AFP in English 1317 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Paris, 3 Feb (AFP) -- The ousted Khmer Rouge and "reactionary" Kampuchean groups can only be annihilated if Kampuchean and Vietnamese forces enter Thailand, Kampuchean Foreign Minister Hun Sen said here today.

Hun Sen, who arrived here on Monday to attend the 24th French Communist Party Congress, said supporters of the former Khmer Rouge regime and those of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk were based in Thailand, from where they "launch sabotage operations against our country." In an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, he said: "This is why the Vietnamese military presence remains necessary in Kampuchea, notably on the Khmer-Thai border." But neither Vietnam nor his country were considering a military operation in Thailand, he said. This would precipitate a serious international crisis "which we have no desire to bring about," he added.

At least a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea would be possible if Thailand changed its policy and "relinquishes the militant alliance it has with Chinese expansionists and American imperialists," Hun Sen said. A Vietnamese withdrawal could begin once the Thai Government had rounded up and disarmed Khmer Rouge and other Kampuchean opposition forces which have found asylum on its territory, he said.

Mr Hun Sen said he intended to take advantage of his visit here to hold talks with French External Affairs Minister Claude Cheysson.

While the current situation in Kampuchea was not perfect, he said, there were more than 3.7 million acres under cultivation, and security was ensured nearly everywhere. In Phnom Penh "no president or prime minister is killed by an assassin's bullets, contrary to what happens in other capitals," he added. "Our wish for security and economic development does not preclude our wanting a Vietnamese withdrawal from our country," he said, adding that the Vietnamese also wanted to leave, "but their presence remains necessary because of the Chinese threat and the collusion of Thailand, China and the United States."

Massacres and atrocities perpetrated by the Khmer Rouge were due not only to "the so-called Maoist ideology" of leader Pol Pot, but also to decisions taken by some Chinese leaders, notably the "gang of four," the minister charged. The Chinese leadership turned Cambodia into a "testing ground" which cost the country a third of its population, he added.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY TO HOLD SECOND SESSION 5 FEB

BK040440 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0424 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 4 Jan (SPK) -- The Second Session of the PRK National Assembly, first legislature, will be held in Phnom Penh on 5 February, said a National Assembly communique made public today.

The National Assembly will study the developments of the Kampuchean revolution in 1981 and set forth primary tasks to be carried out in 1982, particularly tasks involving the development of the economy and culture. The National Assembly will discuss its organization and that of the Council of State and the Council of Ministers. It will also discuss draft laws on the organization of the tribunal and other important problems. The Second Session of the National Assembly will deal with measures aimed at implementing the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress.

KAMPUCHEA Hails Session

BK040632 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0326 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 4 Feb (SPK) -- The paper KAMPUCHEA, central organ of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], affirmed that the holding of the Second Sesssion of the PRK National Assembly, first legislature, confirms the legality of the new regime in Kampuchea and the irreversibility of the situation in the country.

In an editorial devoted to this important event of the political life in Kampuchea, the paper KAMPUCHEA said: The military victories in 1979, the successes in agricultural production in 1980 and the great political achievements in 1981 are undeniable realities of the PRK. The communal elections in March and the truly democratic general elections in May, for which 97.83 percent of the voters registered, have confirmed the people's confidence in and support for the new regime. The National Assembly held its first session on 24 June [1981], at which it voted on the first truly democratic Constitution and nominated the Council of State and the Council of Ministers.

The Second Session of the National Assembly will discuss the organization of the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers and draft laws on the organization of the tribunal. These draft laws will define the functions and the organization of state organs at the central level and of juridical organs throughout the country. The Kampuchean people as a whole heartily greet the Second Session of the First National Assembly.

The vote on certain fundamental documents will contribute to perfecting the law of the Kampuchean state, which is entering a new era. The draft laws to be discussed will facilitate the study of the state organs' activities, thereby consolidating our revolutionary gains. The adoption of the draft laws will prove our preoccupation with the progress of the Kampuchean revolutionary cause. All Kampucheans heartily greet the Second Session of the National Assembly, hold high the revolutionary banner and pledge to abide strictly by the laws to be promulgated by the National Assembly.

HOR NAM HONG EXPRESSES SUPPORT FOR SRV PROPOSALS

BK041011 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0418 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 4 Feb (SPK) -- Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Hor Nam Hong had a meeting on 1 February in Phnom Penh with Vietnamese Ambassador to Kampuchea Ngo Dien, who informed him of the Vietnamese Ministry of Foreign Affairs' 30 January note to the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs and of Vietnamese Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong's message to the UN secretary general, Mr Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Ngo Dien stressed Vietnam's good-will proposal to China for the cessation of border hostilities during the Lunar New Year celebrated by both the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples, and for the resumption of the third round of the Vietnamese-Chinese talks.

He said that Vietnamese Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong welcomed, in his message, the initiatives and efforts which UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar has undertaken to promote peace in Southeast Asia.

Vice Minister Hor Nam Hong stated that the PRK Government firmly supports the Socialist Republic of Vietnam's good will peace initiatives and demands that the Chinese Government put an end to its provocations and its bellicose policy vis-a-vis the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

AGREEMENT WITH USSR ON AGRICULTURAL COOPERATION

BK310803 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0400 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 31 Jan (SPK) -- Agriculture Minister Kong Samol on Friday, 29 January, held talks in Phnom Penh with a delegation of the Soviet State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations led by its vice chairman, Minayev, which arrived in Phnom Penh on 25 January. Kong Samol laid emphasis on the agricultural development projects such as the construction of the Institute of Agronomy in Phnom Penh, several irrigation works in various areas, the expansion of fisheries and the rubber and cotton plantations.

The two sides agreed on the bilateral cooperation plan in the agricultural sector and to expand it in the interest of Kampuchea's economic restoration.

During its stay, the delegation had talks with Yit Kim Seng, minister of health, and Hang Chuon, assistant to the minister of education, to study the results of health and educational cooperation in 1981 and to take measures for the 1982-83 period.

KEO CHANDA ADDRESSES MILITARY COURSE CLOSING

BK311055 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] On 27 January 1982 a special warfare course was closed at the Phnom Penh political school under the chairmanship of Comrade Keo Chanda, secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Affairs Control Committee and chairman of the Phnom Penh People's Revolutionary Committee.

On this occasion, Comrade Khim Pon, chairman of the special warfare command, read a report summing up their achievements -- with particular reference to the great 7 January 1979 victory -- under the correct leadership of the KPRP. He pointed out that Phnom Penh -- the soul of the PRK -- has received a noble honor in the defense and the construction of the country. He added that these achievements have defeated all of the enemies' maneuvers. Peace, discipline and order have been guaranteed for the people. Speaking on this occasion also, Comrade Keo Chanda highly praised the brilliant achievements scored by the Phnom Penh authorities in the past. In his speech, he emphasized the need for national and international solidarity, in particular solidarity, friendly ties and cooperation among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

This ceremony ended after the presidium handed congratulatory certificates to representatives of regions and wards who obtained brilliant achievements in cooperating in this special warfare.

PREY VENG MILITARY COMMAND ORGANIZES MEETING

BK300730 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] The Prey Veng provincial military command organized a meeting to sum up past achievements in 1981 and to make plans for the provincial and district units, militia units and operations groups to implement.

Comrade (Mey Sari), deputy provincial military commander, opened the meeting with a summary of 1981 achievements by noting the victories achieved in fighting the enemies and maintaining security for the people. The provincial forces have been strengthened and developed from the localities to the province. The comrade praised cadres and combatants from units throughout the province for their tough struggle against all kinds of enemies and for scoring victories by adopting revolutionary duty as the core to transforming this movement into a competitive activity in order to reach the goals of the party and the people.

Later, representatives of all units and individuals who have scored good achievements briefed the meeting on the accomplishments of their work. They expressed their determination to strengthen and develop their units in all fields, and to tighten internal and international solidarity in order to defeat all maneuvers of the imperialists and the Chinese expansionists. After that, Comrade (Ngean Phoeun) of the Prey Veng Party Affairs Control Committee exhorted all cadres and combatants to help each other in their work, to abide by the army regulations, to practice criticism and self-criticism and to encourage anyone who has done good deeds and to study harder in order to fulfill tasks for the party and the people in 1982.

To end the meeting, Comrade (Thong Sattra), Prey Veng provincial military commander, presented 145 citation certificates and letters to units and individuals who have scored good achievements. This meeting successfully ended in a joyful and sincere atmosphere. The participants were determined to fulfill the 1982 duty for the party and the people.

YUGOSLAV EDITOR PAYS VISIT TO DK AREAS

BK260804 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 25 Jan 82

[Text] Mr (Garil Kasoli), editor in chief of the Yugoslav weekly NIN, arrived for a visit to Democratic Kampuchea on the afternoon of 16 January.

A number of cadres from our Foreign Ministry greeted the guest upon his arrival. Our Democratic Kampuchean leaders received and had a cordial conversation with the guest at an office of the Democratic Kampuchean Government on the same day. They also informed the guest of the vigorous struggle waged against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, expansionists, annexationists and race exterminators by the Kampuchean people, which is progressing in all fields -- military, political, diplomatic and economic. During his stay in Democratic Kampuchea, the guest visited various villages, hospitals and schools.

The friendly guest left Democratic Kampuchea for home on the morning of 19 January. Before leaving, the guest said: Democratic Kampuchea fights vigorously and valiantly for national independence and the liberation of its fatherland. Upon my return home, I will inform the Yugoslav people, who are friends of the Kampuchean people, about this struggle so that they will learn more about the actual situation in Kampuchea.

VODK REPORTS LNLF GUERRILLAS' BATTLE ACTIVITIES

BK310945 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Here is a report on the Lao National Liberation Front [LNLF] guerrillas' battle activities:

On 18 January the Vietnamese enemy troops stepped on LNLF guerrillas' landmines on the road to (Khlem) village and three of them were killed. On 21 January the LNLF guerrillas cut telephone wire between (Khlem) and (Priel) villages. The next day, the Vietnamese enemy forces who came to repair the telephone line stepped on landmines, and one of them was killed. On 22 January the guerrillas attacked the Vietnamese enemy troops at (Prapeang Toek) position near (Khlem) village, killing three of them and wounding seven others. The enemy soldiers stepped on landmines and three more were killed. The guerrillas cut 300 meters of telephone wire.

In sum, during these 3 days the LNLF guerrillas inflicted 17 casualties on the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and cut 300 meters of telephone wire.

SITTHI DISCUSSES KHMER COALITION IN INTERVIEW

BK040137 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Press interview with Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, given on 3 February -- recorded]

[Text] [Sitthi] The Democratic Kampuchean side should have heard about the Malaysian prime minister's comments by now. I would like the three Kampuchean factions to show more eagerness. One of the three factions said that a meeting of the leaders of the three factions should be held -- Sihanouk, Son Sann and [interrupted by a newsman's question]

[Question indistinct]

[Answer] Such a meeting has not taken place yet, although Sihanouk is waiting in Beijing.

[Question] What can ASEAN do to create more eagerness among the three Kampuchean factions?

[Answer] We will not do anything; we must consult about this first. You must view this matter in the proper perspective, which you are not doing now. We must identify where Thailand's security interest lies. To be frank, Thailand's security interest lies in achieving a political resolution that will result in Vietnamese withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea. On the other hand, the issue of a coalition government or a united front is a matter for the Kampucheans to decide. We must not confuse ourselves on this matter. We must regard ourselves as a group of countries that harbor no devious designs against any country. We merely advanced a proposal. If we change from one goal to another, the timing may not be right. Therefore, we must consult first before we make any decision on this matter. Time is also needed, because the Kampucheans have said they should meet, with which I agree. I have already asked China to help materialize this meeting of the Kampuchean leaders.

[Question] Do you mean you asked China to prod them to meet?

[Answer] Yes, because Sihanouk is there now. Sihanouk has said that he will not travel to a meeting elsewhere -- only in Beijing -- because he is now short of money.

[Question] The Khmer Rouge's letter stresses security matters. What is your comment?

[Answer] The Khmer Rouge's letter is a reply to the Singapore proposal which ASEAN endorsed. You must know that our proposal is aimed at political results -- there will be great political benefit if the Kampucheans can join forces. The Khmer Rouge reply said that it cannot implement the proposal because its infrastructure would lose morale and become divided. It said the loose coalition lacks principles, and expressed the desire for another meeting of the Kampuchean leaders. It did not reject the proposal. We presented a proposal and received a reply. Now we will leave it to the Kampucheans.

Further on Remarks

BK040148 Bangkok POST in English 4 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Thailand would like China to host a meeting in Beijing of the three Khmer resistance factions in a new attempt to form a coalition government, Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila said yesterday. He said Thai officials had urged China to speed up such a meeting of leaders of the three factions. Beijing is regarded as an appropriate place, since Prince Norodom Sihanouk of the Moulinaka is already there and Son Sann, leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front is due in Beijing soon for talks.

Only Democratic Kampuchea's President Khieu Samphan is yet to accept Prince Sihanouk's invitation for talks in the Chinese capital, ACM Sitthi added.

Regarding Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed's warning that his government may derecognise Democratic Kampuchea, ACM Sitthi said Mahathir's statement reflects the opinion of Malaysia, not necessarily the stance of ASEAN. However, he noted that Kuala Lumpur has not completely "shut its door" toward the DK. Likewise, he added, the DK has not completely rejected talks with the other two factions. The foreign minister said he had the feeling that Mr Mahathir made the warning because he would like to see the three anti-Vietnamese factions show more effort in forming a coalition government. He said that he hoped Democratic Kampuchea learned a lesson from the Kuala Lumpur message. "There is still room for negotiations," he said optimistically.

THAILAND REPORTEDLY NOT TO HOST KHMER MEETINGS

BK031408 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] According to MP Anan Buranawanit of Sara Buri Province, in his capacity as secretary of the House Committee for Foreign Affairs, Director General of the Foreign Ministry Political Department, Asa Sarasin had confirmed that Thailand will not host another meeting of the tripartite Kampuchean factions following the 12 previous meetings held here without any result toward the formation of a coalition government. Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie last Friday offered to provide the three Kampuchean factions a venue to hold their meeting in Kuala Lumpur for continued efforts towards forming a coalition government. Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila has backed Malaysia's proposal.

In the opinion expressed by MP Anan Buranawanit of Sara Buri, if the three Kampuchean factions cannot form a coalition government before the holding of the UN session this year, it shows that they regard their personal interests as more important than the common interest of the Kampuchean people. The ASEAN countries, in that connection, should withdraw their support for the Democratic Kampuchean Government's representation at the United Nations and give recognition to others instead. He noted that Thailand has suffered considerable loss in trade from its recognition of the Khmer Rouge.

SIAM RAT VIEWS CHINA'S ROLE IN KHMER COALITION

BK010940 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 29 Jan 82 p 3

[Editorial: "A Little Help From China Is Needed"]

[Text] Although Democratic Kampuchea has already rejected the proposal made by Singapore 2 months ago that it join with the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) led by Son Sann and the Moulinaka movement led by Prince Sihanouk to set up a loose coalition government with the aim of driving the 200,000 Vietnamese troops out of Kampuchea, Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie recently announced that the three Khmer resistance factions are scheduled to meet in an ASEAN capital in the near future to thrash out the differences that are obstructing the establishment of a government in exile. The Malaysian foreign minister's statement came in the wake of former Kampuchean head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk's statement in Beijing indicating that he also would like to meet with Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and KPNLF leader Son Sann.

Since there is no better option in view, the three Khmer resistance factions should agree to hold another summit on the matter. Despite their differences on the conditions for forming a united Kampuchean front, it is evident that the three factions want to pool their efforts to expel Vietnam. The Khmer Rouge are reluctant to join the coalition because they do not want to be subjected to certain conditions that conflict with their policy line.

The main obstacle to the formation of a tripartite coalition among the Khmer factions thus rests with the Khmer Rouge.

Since the effort has been delayed for so long and the coalition seems illusory, one should ask if it is really necessary, in order to expand the anti-Vietnamese front, that a Kampuchean coalition government and a joint patriotic front be set up.

Since all political, diplomatic and military approaches have failed, ASEAN must now think about the next steps it should take in order to achieve a Vietnamese withdrawal from Kampuchea. Will ASEAN have to look for China's help once again in order to force the Khmer Rouge to be a little more flexible and accept the concept of a coalition despite the fact that China always backs the Khmer Rouge? The problem is to determine what arguments ASEAN can give to China to convince it that China's interests in the region are at stake if it fails to get the Khmer Rouge to cooperate in the formation of a coalition.

ATTACK BY LAO TROOPS ON 2 FEB REPORTED

Statement by Officer

BK040646 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Statement by Sutcharit Patchimnan, Pak Chom District officer of Loei Province, given on 4 February -- recorded]

[Excerpt] At 1500 on 2 February Lao aircraft were flying a patrol mission in Lao territory opposite Ban Hat Tia of Pak Chom District. Some Lao troops also moved into Ban Don Huang. Learning of these activities, I led policemen and civilian volunteers to patrol the area and block the routes nearby. At about 1950 M-16 and RPG rounds were fired into Thai territory near the Pak Chom-Chiang Khan Highway. Three RPG rounds landed near the highway, while about five other rounds detonated in midair. There were no casualites to Thai people, as the shells landed quite far from the village.

NATION REVIEW on Attack

BK040313 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 4 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] Loei -- A batch of about 30 Laotian troops fired several rounds of RPG rockets into the Thai territory here on Tuesday night, Governor Thongdam Banchun said yesterday.

The rockets landed in Hat Tia area of Pak Chom District here, but would inflict no damage on the Thai side, he said. The governor said he was still puzzled about the motive of the Laotian troops, who apparently provoked the Thais in the wake of significant improvement in the relations between the two countries. He quoted eyewitnesses as saying that about 30 armed Laotian troopers arrived at the Laotian islet of Don Huang in the Mekong River at about 3:00 pm on Tuesday before firing the rockets around 7:30 pm.

The provincial governor said it was not known whether the Laotian soldiers had left the islet, which could not be viewed clearly from the Thai Bank. He added that the Thai security forces in the district were reinforced, but the Thai troops had not retaliated the apparent provocation.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON NARCOTICS SUPPRESSION DRIVE

Interview With Prayut

BK030745 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Interview with Army Commander Gen Prayut Charumani on the current situation at Ban Hin Taek, Chiang Rai Province — date not given; recorded]

[Text] [Prayut] There are now two companies of soldiers, border patrol policemen, defense volunteers and Rangers at Ban Hin Taek. We will jointly carry on the operation to prevent foreign troops and heroin traders from entering the area. We will clear the area so that the people can live there in safety -- we can ensure their safety. We will station military and police forces in the high mountains around the village for a period of time until the Interior Ministry -- provincial police and defense volunteers -- can control the situation by themselves. This is our plan.

There have been no clashes in the area. Therefore, we are confident we can make the area safe. More people are returning to Ban Hin Taek. If there are no clashes within a week or two, we can say that the situation is fairly normal and hand over the responsibility to the Interior Ministry.

[Question] Is it difficult to distinguish Khun Sa's men from the villagers?

[Answer] Not the women and children. However, we keep our eyes on the men. If they are not carrying weapons, we regard them as good citizens. We have found many arms caches at Ban Hin Taek. Barracks were discovered on the hills in the area.

Talks With Army Officers

BK030248 Bangkok POST in English 3 Feb 82 pp 1, 3

[Text] Chiang Rai -- A small group of Thai Army officers yesterday met with representatives of the Shan United Army [SUA] Ban Hin Taek in response to an offer of peace talks made by fugitive opium warlord Khun Sa.

Col Choe Phosinak, commander of Chiang Rai military circle, said last night that four army officers, led by Col Itthiphon Sirimonthon, who is in charge of the forces in Ban Hin Taek, held about 5 hours of talks with four SUA colonels at the border patrol police [BPP] 308th Company's base camp. The four Shan colonels were led to the BPP base by Kamdang Khemawong, a village headman of Ban Hin Taek who on Monday handed Khun Sa's truce letter to the Thai Army forces.

Col Choe said the Thai Army officers told the SUA representatives of a policy earlier stated by Army Commander in Chief Gen Prayut Charumani demanding that all the armed rebels withdraw from Thai soil or face a forced evacuation by the government forces. However, he added the Shans were also told that together with their families they would be allowed to live in Thai territory as refugees or displaced persons if they agreed to follow certain conditions. The conditions were that they must: be disarmed, abide by Thai laws, be put under the control of Thai authorities and stop trafficking in narcotics.

Chol Choe said the four rebel representatives expressed reservations at the conditions, and asked to refer the matter to Khun Sa. However, he added the Thai side had the impression that the rebels had shown little objection to the conditions. He said he hoped another meeting would be held soon between the two sides.

Before the meeting took place yesterday, the provincial police superintendent, Pol Col Bin Prasopchok, ordered police in sensitive areas throughout the province to be on the alert as a precaution against sabotage attempts by "third hands" to undermine the truce talks. Col Choe said officials had detected an unusual movement of communist insurgents in Thoeng District and feared that the insurgents might carry out terrorist acts and put the blame on the Shan rebels.

Meanwhile, it was reported that about 100 Shan rebels raided an Akha hilltribe village about 4 kilometers from Ban Hin Taek on Monday night, plundering food supplies and setting fire to four of the settlement's 20 huts. The Akha reportedly fled in panic to seek the protection of a police and volunteer force guarding a road junction to Mae Salong.

Pol Col Suphan Phongthong, deputy commander of Seventh Zone provincial police, said a raid on Mae Sai's Thai Farmers Bank branch during last week's Shan attack on the district town may have been motivated by revenge. He said he had learned that some Shan rebels had sold 700,000 baht worth of heroin to a man in Mae Sai District late last year and had been paid by a cheque drawn on an account at the branch. But the cheque "bounced" when the Shan tried to cash it, Pol Col Suphan said.

Government Press Conference

BK030648 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] The government held a special press conference this morning to explain its policy and operations against the narcotics trafficking group of Khun Sa. The government launched a drastic suppression campaign against the Khun Sa group recently and has now successfully pushed the Khun Sa group out of Thai territory.

The press conference was chaired by Deputy Prime Minister Gen Prachuap Suntharangkun, and high-level officials from other government officers concerned participated. At the conference, Prachuap said the government confirms the policy, stated by the prime minister on 1 February, that there will definitely be no negotiations with the Khun Sa force and that the Khun Sa group will continue to be treated as criminals in accordance with the present evidence against them.

Prachuap reiterated the government's policy and determination to drastically and timely suppress narcotics production and distribution sources, a policy and determination that have been evident for some time. The latest suppression of the Khun Sa force serves as another confirmation of the government's narcotics prevention and suppression policy. It also demonstrates that the government will continue to implement measures to ensure that no foreign armed groups exist on Thai soil or use Thai territory as a base for operations against the Burmese Government. Such groups not only violate Thai sovereignty and territorial integrity, but affect good relations between Thailand and Burma.

Prachuap reported that the situation in the areas under the suppression campaign has now returned to normal. Although there are sporadic incidents of harassment, the Khun Sa force has been pushed out of Thai territory. The official estimation is that all traces of the Khun Sa force's influence will be eliminated soon.

Further on Press Conference

BK040156 Bangkok POST in English 4 Feb 82 pp 1, 3

[Text] The government will not negotiate with Khun Sa, the opium warlord of the Golden Triangle, and he will be treated as a criminal even if he agrees to surrender, it was announced in a top-level press conference at Government House yesterday. "The government and Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon have confirmed and made it clear many times that there is no policy to negotiate with Khun Sa." This was the message to reporters in a prepared joint statement by Deputy Prime Minister Gen Prachuap Suntharangkun and Secretary General of the National Security Council Sqd Ldr Prasong Sunsiri.

Gen Prachuap added, "A criminal like Khun Sa, who deals with narcotics trafficking, faces only execution. The government will continue the suppression drive against him until his outlawed forces are completely destroyed." Assistant Director General of the Police Department, Lt Gen Pranet Rithluechai, said Khun Sa was officially charged with drugs trafficking, mobilising illegal forces with an aim to overthrow the government, illegal possession of war weapons and setting up a criminal association. He admitted that talks had been carried out between Thai officials and Khun Sa's men, but stressed that these talks were not negotiations. The officials only told those men of the government's definite policy against them.

The conference, also attended by Secretary General of the Office of the Narcotics Control Board Pol Maj Gen Phao Sarasin, was aimed at clarifying the government's decision to launch the suppression drive against Khun Sa and his outlawed Shan United Army [SUA] forces, who had made Ban Hin Taek in Chiang Rai their stronghold for years.

Describing Khun Sa as "leading world criminal" who violated Thailand's sovereignty by forming his illegal armed forces and spreading his influence on Thai soil, Gen Prachuap said Khun Sa was also responsible for 70 percent of the total production of heroin in the Golden Triangle area. Gen Prachuap further explained that before the January 21 attack on Ban Hin Taek, the Thai Government had issued a warning and air-dropped leaflets in the area asking him to leave Thai territory. However, Khun Sa did not respond, and continued his illegal activities.

Therefore, tough action was taken against him and his forces last October 6-8, when a Ranger force from Pak Thongchai was sent to intercept Khun Sa's opium caravan, Gen Prachuap said. As a result of the operation, three of his heroin refineries were destroyed, while the opium warlord lost 130 men. In the recent suppression campaign, Gen Prachuap said, Khun Sa sustained heavy casualties. Two hundred of his men were killed, while his headquarters, his communications centre and trading facilities in Ban Hin Taek, Ban Mae Moh and Ban Pa Chang were destroyed and a large number of his weapons and ammunition seized. The seized arms cache, which included more than 700 submachine guns, rifles and carbines, 52,200 rounds of ammunition and over 300 grenades, was exhibited at Government House during the conference.

Gen Phao said no illegal drugs were found during the operation, but he added that Khun Sa's four major heroin refineries were located inside Burma. He also said a large number of unused plastic bags bearing infamous heroin brands were seized in Thai territory during the suppression operation. He said there were indications that Khun Sa may now seek cooperation with the Burmese Communist Party to maintain the drugs traffic in the Golden Triangle area. This issue is to be brought up in talks with Burmese authorities during Gen Prachuap's visit to Burma next month, Gen Phao added.

PROVINCIAL OFFICIALS REPORT COMMUNIST DEFECTIONS

BK010917 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 31 Jan 82

[Excerpts] Phatthaulung Province Deputy Governor Thawat Phothisunthon and chief of the Internal Security Operations Command [ISOC] reform center in Phatthalung Maj Charon Sutthisoem held a press conference on 31 January. According to them, a total of 34 communist terrorists surrendered to authorities in Phatthalung, Trang, Nakhon Si Thammarat and Satun Provinces during January.

From 1973 to 1981 a total of 813 communist terrorists surrendered to the authorities in Phatthalung Province. Of this number, 571 were men and 242 were women. Another 89 terrorists were captured by authorities. The ISOC office in Phatthalung will organize a ceremony on 15 February, during which the 17th group of terrorist defectors who completed vocational training will be released from the reform center.

NATION: CPT KILLS 13 SOLDIERS IN ROAD AMBUSH

BK020202 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 2 Feb 82 pp 1, 10

[Text] Trang -- At least 13 soldiers were killed and about 10 others wounded when a band of heavily-armed communist insurgents ambushed two army trucks in Huai Yot District here yesterday, officials reported. The communist guerrillas attacked the two trucks with high-powered weapons while they were climbing a hillock on Phetkasem Highway leading to Huai Yot District town, chief intelligence officer of the Fourth Army Region Col Thammarat Itsarangkun Na Ayutthaya said yesterday.

He said that 12 of the 27 military troopers aboard the trucks were killed on the spot and 11 others wounded in the hail of bullets during the ambush, which was met with weak resistance. Six of the injured soldiers were in serious condition, and one of them later died at the provincial hospital, he added.

A senior police official at Huai Yot police station said the first truck overturned after it was hit with an M-79 grenade while the tyres of the other were punctured with bullets. "It was a pathetic scene. Bodies of the dead and wounded soldiers were scattered around the two trucks," he said.

Colonel Thammarat said the communist insurgents retreated after they had seized about 20 HK rifles from the troopers, most of whom are not combat soldiers. The troopers, who belong to the Fifth Division based in Kapang garrison in Thungsong District of Nakhon Si Thammarat Province were on their way to Phangnga Province to replace some units there, he said.

Colonel Thammarat blamed negligence on the party of the army for the heavy casualties. "The casualties would not have been so heavy if we had taken precautionary measures," he said. He added that even the headquarters of the Fourth Army Region had not been informed in advance of the rotation of forces in Phangnga. The two trucks, which set out yesterday morning, were ambushed at about 0800.

Colonel Thammarat said that the communist insurgents who sprang the ambush might be based in Krabi or in this province. The communist guerrillas in this southern province have been under military suppression, according to the army officer.

Deputy Commander of the Fourth Army Region Maj Gen Sathon Vaikhakun yesterday visited the wounded soldiers at the provincial hospital.

Meanwhile, Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Prayut Charumani yesterday morning said that the strength of communist insurgents nationwide has declined considerably following the seizure of many communist strongholds. "Without the strongholds to support the guerrillas with weapons and logistic supply, the insurgents are now facing difficulties. Furthermore, they have been increasingly denied support and aid from the people," he added.

BRIEFS

LIGNITE DEPOSITS -- The Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand has recently struck a huge lignite deposit of 1,400 million tons at the Mae Mo mining area in the north. The organization started its lignite exploration at Mae Mo District in 1971. About 120 million tons of lignite were found during the first phase of exploration and 54 million tons could be mined and utilized for power generation of about 300,000 kilowatt hours per year in a span of 30 years. About 450 million tons of the newly discovered deposit will be utilized as substition of oil during the first phase of discovery and another 200 million tons later. [Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 22 Jan 82 BK]

DEEP SEA PORT PROJECT -- A new Laem Chabang deep sea port will be completed within the next 5 years instead of the orginally set 13 years. This was decided by the economic ministers on 25 January in an attempt to speed up the eastern seaboard development projects. Deputy Prime Minister Maj Gen Praman Adireksan said that construction of the Laem Chabang deep sea port will begin this year. [Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 27 Jan 82 BK]

SOVIET MARSHAL OGARKOV BEGINS OFFICIAL VISIT

Arrival Ceremony

OW031522 Hanoi VNA in English 1510 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 3 -- Marshal Nikolay Vasilyevich Ogarkov, member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, general chief of staff of the Soviet Armed Forces and first vice-minister of defence, arrived here today on an official friendship visit to Vietnam at the invitation of the Vietnamese Defence Ministry.

He was greeted at the Hanoi International Airport by Senior Lieutenant General Le Trong Tan, Central Committee member of the Communist Party of Vietnam, vice-minister of defence and general chief of staff of the Vietnam People's Army; Lieutenant General Phung The Tai, deputy general chief of staff; Navy Captain Doan Ba Khanh, commander of the navy; Colonel Vu Xuan Vinh, head of the Department for External Relations of the Defence Ministry. A grand welcome ceremony was later held at the guest-house of the Defence Ministry.

Marshal N.V. Ogarkov and Senior Lt Gen Le Trong Tan reviewed a guard of honour to the strains of a martial tune. Present at the event were General Hoang Van Thai, member of the party Central Committee and vice-minister of defence; Lt Gen Tran Van Quang, vice minister of defence; other senior officers representing different arms and services of the Vietnam People's Army; Hoang Anh Tuan, vice-minister for foreign affairs; Nguyen Khant Toan, vice-president of the Vietnam-U.S.S.R. Friendship Association; and Dang Duc Loc, vice-chairman of the Hanoi People's Committee. Soviet Ambassador B.N. Chaplin, the military attache of the Soviet Embassy, Colonel V.A. Davydov; and a large number of Soviet experts in Hanoi were also present on the occasion.

VPA General Staff Banquet

OW031637 Hanoi VNA in English 1608 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 3 -- The General Staff of the Vietnam People's Army gave a banquet here tonight in honour of Marshal of the Soviet Union N.V. Ogarkov and his party now on a visit to Vietnam. Present were General Van Tien Dung, other senior officers of the arms and services of the Vietnam People's Army; and representatives of public offices and mass organizations. Soviet Ambassador B.N. Chaplin; the military attache to the Soviet Embassy, Colonel V.A. Davydov, were present.

Senior Lieutenant General Le Trong Tan, member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee, vice minister of national defence and general chief of staff of the Vietnam People's Army, warmly welcomed Marshal N.V. Ogarkov and his party -- outstanding officers of the Soviet Armed Forces -- who, he said, had made valuable contributions to building a new-type army of the working class, a pride of the Soviet people and progressive mankind.

He praised the militant solidarity and wholehearted assistance of the Soviet people and armed forces to the Vietnamese people and armed forces in national defence and construction. He noted that the Vietnamese revolution's historic victories over the past half-century have been closely associated with the great, timely and effective support and assistance of the great Soviet Union. Le Trong Tan said the Vietnamese people and armed forces are proud of having the people and heroic Armed Forces of the Soviet Union as their loyal comrades-in-arms. General Le Trong Tan thanked the party, the people and the Defence Ministry of the Soviet Union for their great, valuable assistance to increase the fighting strength of the Vietnam people's armed forces. He wished Marshal Ogarkov and his party fine succes in their friendship visit.

In reply Marshal N.V. Ogarkov thanked the hosts for their warm welcome. He said that this visit will contribute to consolidating and developing the time-honoured friendship between the peoples and armed forces of the Soviet Union and Vietnam. He said: "In our country the people and the officers and men of the armed forces have closely followed the developments in the Vietnamese people's political life and their progress in socialist construction and national defence. The Soviet people and armed forces admire the heroic Vietnamese people's struggle against the imperialist, occupationist and aggressive forces, for national liberation, defence and construction."

The Soviet marshal expressed the belief that the forthcoming Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of Vietnam will open a new chapter in the Vietnamese people's history of revolution and that the Vietnamese people will satisfactorily discharge the tasks set by this congress. He warmly praised the Soviet-Vietnamese friendship built on the firm foundation of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism on the basis of the two countries having the same great ideal, namely, to build socialism and communism and reiterated the determination of the officers and men of the Soviet Armed Forces to make this great friendship evergreen and everlasting.

Van Tien Dung Reception

OW031629 Hanoi VNA in English 1603 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 3 -- General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and minister of national defence, received here this afternoon Marshal of the Soviet Union N.V. Ogarkov, member of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Central Committee, general chief of staff of the Soviet Armed Forces and first vice minister of defense, and his party.

Present on this occasion were General Hoang Van Thai, member of the C.P.V. Central Committee and vice minister of national defence; Senior Lieutenant-General Le Trong Tan, member of the C.P.V. Central Committee, vice minister of national defence and chief of the General Staff of the Vietnam People's Army; and other senior officers representing different arms and services of Vietnam People's Army. Soviet Ambassador B.N. Chaplin and the military attache to the Soviet Embassy, Colonel V.A. Davydov, were also present.

Welcoming the current visit of the Soviet marshal and his party General Van Tien Dung said that this visit is a fine expression of the great friendship and unshakeable militant solidarity between the peoples and armed forces of Vietnam and the Soviet Union. Marshal Ogarkov expressed his joy at visiting beautiful Vietnam. He said that this visit would promote the friendship and comprehensive cooperation between the parties, the peoples and the armed forces of the Soviet Union and Vietnam. The reception took place in an atmosphere of cordiality, friendship, and fraternal militant solidarity.

UN ENVOY BLAMES U.S. FOR ISRAELI ACTIONS

OW041107 Hanoi VNA in English 0717 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Feb. 4 -- Ambassador Ha Van Lau, head of the Vietnamese permanent representation at the U.N. has held the U.S. responsible for Israel's adventurous policy in the Middle East. Speaking at the 9th Special Emergency Session of the U.N. General Assembly on Feb. 2, Ha Van Lau pointed out that the direct cause of the present serious situation in the Middle East is the policy of expansion and aggression pursued by Israel with the support of the imperialists, first of all the U.S.

He added that the "strategic cooperation" between the U.S. and Israel had made the latter an efficient tool to protect the imperialists' interests and a regional gendarme to suppress the Palestinian people's resistance and to carry out a terrorist policy against Arab countries.

He also criticized the U.S. for using the right to veto at the Security Council to defend Israel from world condemnation, and said: At present the U.S. is revealing itself to the world as the only protector of the Zionist aggressors. It has paralyzed the body of maintaining world peace and security. It decidedly must bear the prime responsibility for all consequences arising from the dangerous developments caused by the Israeli authorities to the present situation in the Middle East.

Ha Van Lau continued to say that the only way to solve totally, equitably and permanently the situation in the Middle East is "to put an immediate end to Israel's illegal occupation and annexation of Arab territories, ensure for the Palestinian people the full exercise of their inalienable national rights, including the right to establish a sovereign and independent Palestinian state, and guarantee the preservation of security and sovereignty of all countries in the region.

Ha Van Lau affirmed the Vietnamese people's and government's support for the U.N. resolutions on the Middle East and Palestine and demanded that "the Security Council refer to Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter if Israel fails to carry out the U.N. Resolution 36/226." The Vietnamese Ambassador held that the special session should condemn not only Israel but also the U.S. abettor of the Zionist aggressors and that the General Assembly should take punitive measures against Israel in conformity with Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter.

CEREMONY HELD AT SOVIET-BUILT CEMENT PLANT

BK040730 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Summary] On the morning of 3 February the Ministry of Building held a solemn ceremony to commission Production Line No 1 of the Bim Son Cement Plant, a symbol of Soviet-Vietnamese friendship. Tran Quynh, VCP Central Committee member and Council of Ministers vice chairman, inaugurated the ceremony. Sharing the joy of the Bim Son Cement Plant workers and the construction forces were on the Soviet side Anpilov, vice minister of the Construction Materials Industry; Shpilev, chairman of the Union for Technical Construction Abroad of the State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations; (Nagidin), Soviet economic counselor in Vietnam; and large numbers of Soviet experts participating in the construction and assembly of the cement plant.

After the cement plant Director (Tran Van Huynh's) opening speech, (Nguyen Tri Thuc), director of Construction Company No 5, delivered a speech reviewing the courageous and creative labor achievements of the workers and Soviet experts in the past 46 months under the emulation movement which led to commissioning Production Line No 1 today to mark the 52d VCP anniversary and to greet the Fifth VCP Congress.

Also at this ceremony Anpilov made a statement. "He stressed that this was an eloquent evidence of the great Soviet-Vietnamese friendship. It asserts the unswerving friendship of the Soviet party, state and people, which is vividly manifested by Comrade Brezhnev's famous statement that solidarity with Vietnam is an order coming from the Soviet people's heart and mind."

Shpilev read a letter from the Soviet State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations welcoming the commissioning of Production Chain No 1 of the Bim Son Cement Plant. "The letter wished that the workers and cadres of the Bim Son Cement Plant would operate the industrial Production Line No 1 well and that the Building Ministry's forces and the Soviet experts would struggle hard to complete Production Line No 2 on schedule in order to fulfill ever better the country's requirement for cement."

On behalf of the Vietnamese party, government and people, Tran Quynh, Council of Ministers vice chairman, sincerely thanked the Soviet party, government and people for their great, valuable assistance to the revolutionary cause of our people.

On behalf of the Council of Ministers, he urged the construction sector to accelerate the construction of Production Line No 2, striving to commission it on 7 November 1982 in order to celebrate the 65th anniversary of the Great October Revolution.

[Begin recording] "To develop the results achieved and complete the entire project, with a yearly output of 1.2 million tons of cement, on behalf of the Council of Ministers I request first that the Ministry of Building set forth a specific plan to provide close guidance, coordinate well with the Soviet experts and cadres involved and concentrate on accelerating construction and assembly of Production Line No 2 in order to commission the entire plant on schedule. The construction should be completed adequately and uniformly.

"Second, since this is a major factory with modern equipment to produce cement -- the rice of capital construction and an important commodity for barter with peasants to collect and purchase food products and for export -- the Ministry of Building should closely guide plant production at the very outset, coordinate well with various ministries and sectors involved in order to ensure continuous production by providing raw materials, fuel, energy, electricity, coal, transport and technical materials for the plan, gradually increasing the volume of production and quickly reaching the projected output. The director and all cadres and workers of the cement plant should enhance their sense of responsibility, mastery, organization and discipline and their standard of professional and specialized knowledge. They should scrupulously learn from the Soviet experts' guidance, managerial techniques and work behavior in order to administer and operate the plant systematically from the very beginning." [end recording]

On behalf of the minister of building, Vice Minister Chu Do promised to scrupulously carry out the instructions of the Council of Ministers vice chairman.

SRV, ALBANIA SIGN GOODS EXCHANGE PROTOCOL

OW030355 Hanoi VNA in English 0317 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 3 -- A protocol on goods exchange and payment for 1982 between Vietnam and Albania was signed in Tirana last Saturday. Signing the document on behalf of their respective governments were Vietnamese Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade Dinh Van Tram and Albanian Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade M. Sinoimeri. Also on Saturday the Vietnamese Government trade delegation was cordially received by Nedin Hoxha, member of the Central Committee of the Party of Labour of Albania and minister of foreign trade.

VCP GREETS MOZAMBIQUE PARTY ON ANNIVERSARY

OW021526 Hanoi VNA in English 1449 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 2 -- The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam today sent a message of greetings to the Central Committee of the Frelimo party on its fifth anniversary. The message says:

"Over the past five years, implementing the resolutions of its first congress, the Frelimo Party, headed by esteemed Comrade Samora Moises Machel, has been bringing into play the nation's revolutionary traditions. It has led the Mozambique people to brilliant success in defending their revolutionary achievements, in developing the economy and culture, and in building a new life, taking the country forwards along the road of socialism. So doing it has actively contributed to the revolutionary cause in Africa and the rest of the world for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

"The Communist Party, the government and the people of Vietnam greatly rejoice at the Mozambique people's successes and sincerely wish you still greater ones in your revolutionary cause. May the fraternal friendship and solidarity between the parties and peoples of Vietnam and Mozambique be constantly developed".

VO CHI CONG SPEAKS AT CONTRACT WAGES CONFERENCE

BK291111 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 10 Jan 82, pp 1, 4

[VNA report]

[Summary] "The Council of Ministers recently held a conference in Hanoi to review the practice of various contract wage and piecework and incentive pay systems now applied by many state-run production units involved in agriculture, forestry, fishery, water conservancy and rubber industry. The conference helped various sectors, localities and production units exchange and learn from each other's experience; solved various management problems; created a vigorous change in business system practices based on profit-and-loss accounting and launched a boisterous emulation movement among various state-run establishments in order to score more achievements to greet the fifth party congress."

Attending the conference were the ministers of agriculture, water conservancy and marine products and representatives of the general rubber affairs department and of various provinces, cities and production units. "The conference was chaired by Comrade Vo Chi Cong, VCP Central Committee Political Bureau member and Council of Ministers vice chairman.

"Since 1981, along with directing the expansion of the product-contract system with individual laborers in agricultural cooperatives and production collectives, the Council of Ministers has decided to expand various forms of contracts and bonuses in state-run production and trade units (Decision No 26-CP, dated 21 January 1981). The use of the product-contract system in agricultural cooperatives and production collectives has become a boisterous and vigorous mass movement and an important factor for ensuring all-round success for agricultural production in 1981."

In agricultural production, about 50 percent of the state-run establishments are using the contract wage and incentive pay systems. A number of units have achieved initial results in contracting the planting of short-term food crops. Thanks to the application of contract wages, the work time of cadres and workers has increased about 30 percent. "According to initial figures provided by the Ministry of Agriculture, the interests of the state have increased by about 30 percent and the income of cadres and workers has increased by 60 percent with certain localities reportedly doubling this kind of income."

At various rubber plantations, thanks to the use of the contract wage and incentive pay systems, the planting of rubber trees and the tapping of rubber latex have increased markedly.

In the forestry sector, some 40 percent of the total forestry sites practiced the contract system to varying extents. Many forestry sites have increased labor output from 100 to 250 percent.

In the marine products sector, all production establishments practiced the product-contract system and achieved good results. It is noted that the Con Dao fishing enterprise increased its fish catch from 14 tons in 1977 to 32.7 tons in 1981.

In the water conservancy sector, some 40 percent of the water conservancy units applied the contract system. Water Conservancy Construction Corporation No 6 overfulfilled its 1981 plan. Its members' average monthly wage increased from 80 dong in 1980 to 295 dong in 1981.

After 4 days of work, the conference unanimously observed that apart from its effects in stimulating production and promoting increased labor output, product quality and the volume of production, the product-contract system has helped consolidate socialist production relations and protect socialist property. However, the movement to apply the product-contract system has not developed evenly and vigorously. Many localities have not properly respected the interests between the state and enterprises and have not properly observed economic and technical norms.

"In his closing speech, after pointing out those localities with satisfactory work performance and those with shortcomings to be overcome if the contract and rewards movement is to be developed further among various state-run production units, Comrade Vo Chi Cong said: The primary tasks to be carried out by our entire party and people in the years ahead will consist of tackling the most urgent problems encountered in order to stabilize and improve the people's livelihood further. In order to carry out the basic tasks and strategic objectives, especially those concerning the 1982 economic and social tasks, as outlined in the resolutions of the VCP Central Committee's 10th Plenum and especially the VCP Central Committee's 11th Plenum, we must concentrate the greatest efforts of the state and of various sectors and echelons on creating extraordinary agricultural development in order to solve the most essential problems at present, namely, grain and foodstuffs. Comrade Vo Chi Cong emphasized: All state-run production units involved in agriculture, forestry, fishery, including water conservancy and rubber production units, are duty-bound to surge forward vigorously and to contribute duly to achieving those objectives for grain, foodstuffs, clothing, and consumer and export goods. To achieve this aim, these units must actively carry out production and labor reorganization, improve management, vigorously develop production and the business system based on profit-and-loss accounting and do away with the through-subsidy administrative system. From now on, state-run production units must carry out production in usch a way as to obtain some profits and achieve high economic results.

"As for the contract wage and incentive pay system, Comrade Vo Chi Cong said: The contract system has contributed to developing the latent potential in land and in resources from jungles and seas; developing the existing material and technical bases; developing the capabilities of each person, each service, each trade and each production unit based on their existing assets in labor and materials and developing the scientific and technical potential. The product-contract system has stimulated the masses' revolutionary movement, has prompted the masses to engage voluntarily in labor and has made them the true masters of their units in economic management -- as they are allowed to participate in discussing activity plans and economic and technical norms -- and in the scientific, technical and distribution fields. In 1982, all state-run production units of those sectors mentioned above must expand and basically complete the application of the contract system in various trades and wtih all types of laborers directly engaged in production and production support and with managerial cadres. Along with efforts to study and select the most suitable contractual and reward systems to be put into practice, all responsible sectors, localities, production establishments and related services must overcome the shortcomings mentioned above and must create favorable conditions for the vigorous and steady development of the movement.

"We must eliminate those irrational activities which impede the practice of various contractual and reward systems and which run counter to the objectives and principles laid down in Resolution No 26-CP of the Council of Ministers. Responsible production establishments must suggest remedial measures, must boldly struggle and must join with one another in solving difficult problems in order to create conditions for increased production.

"As our economic management has begun to follow a customary pattern, many people continue to be bound by the old rules and regulations and dare not go beyond the old system which is regarded as very limited. The through-subsidy administrative system is absolutely unacceptable for economic management because it will lead to bureaucratism and will cause economic stagnation. The practice of the contractual system is a very important and comprehensive measure designed to eliminate many of the limitations in the old system, to frustrate the subsidy method and to replace it with a business method based on economic accounting in order to eliminate conservatism, sluggishness, bureaucratism and negativism gradually. Comrade Vo Chi Cong went on: The contractual system can be applied everywhere and to any job. Based on each type of work, however, we must give out contracts in a most suitable way. The best way to apply the contractual system is with individual laborers or with small teams -- the smaller the better.

"With regard to a number of problems facing the managerial system, Comrade Vo Chi Cong said: It is the duty of enterprise directors to ensure the satisfactory organization of production and profitable business services, and to deliver their total volume of production (or the total production value) and profits to the state in accordance with prescribed quotas. Additionally, enterprise directors must have the right to make decisions on products made in excess of the prescribed quota without constituting a breach of the state policy. In order to fulfill these tasks satisfactorily, enterprise directors must have the authority over production, business, labor and finance, and must improve planning activities. Those sectors such as finance, planning, banking, labor, internal trade and supply must be determined to create favorable conditions and provide concrete guidance, and must quickly meet all demands in production in order to enable responsible cadres in various localities and establishments to implement smoothly all the contractual and reward systems for increased production.

"On behalf of the Council of Ministers, Comrade Vo Chi Cong launched an emulation drive to overfulfill the 1982 State Plan and to improve the economic management of various agricultural, forestry, water conservancy, marine products and rubber sectors.

"The congress submitted a letter of determination to the VCP Central Committee, the National Assembly and the government, expressing its complete agreement with the policy to expand the application of various contractual and reward forms in state-run production units. They also expressed their consideration that this policy is one of the most important policies aimed at eliminating the existing through-subsidy administrative system and the sluggishness in management and production and at making a vigorous shift to the business system based on profit-and-loss accounting in order to achieve high economic results from more profitable production."

ADDITION TO THAI BINH PARTY CONGRESS REPORT

The following addition to the item entitled "Thai Binh Holds Party Congress 8-15 Jan," published in the 1 February Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT on page K 6, should be inserted on page K 7 immediately following the fourth paragraph, which ends "...large-scale socialist production?" This addition plus the excerpts constitute the text of the report.

Comrade Le Thanh Binh of the Tien Hai delegation said: The application of the end-product contract system is a new, developmental step in management. It further improves the process of reorganizing production and improving the management mechanism in agriculture.

The comrade head of the Hung Ha delegation affirmed: The application of the end-product contract system is a correct, pressing requirement. He then dealt with another issue, that of ensuring the necessary material and technical conditions following the application of the product contract system in order to satisfactorily manage the various links of production.

Comrade Do Van Dan, head of the Quynh An cooperative, from the Quynh Phu delegation, said: The application of the product contract system does not hamper the advance of agriculture to large-scale socialist production, but there are two factors that hamper production -- the industry sector's unsatisfactory support of agriculture, due to continued authoritarianism and complexities, and the conservatism and private ownership spirit among cadres and party members.

The following is the recorded statement by Comrade Nguyen Van Hang, chief of the provincial party committee's agriculture section, on this issue: [Begin Nguyen Van Hang recording] As you know, comrades, production relations must be considered in terms of the following three aspects: 1) ownership of the means of production; 2) human relationship in productive labor; 3) ownership and distribution of products.

When we speak of production relations within a cooperative, we should speak about whether or not that cooperative reflects the socialist nature. For further clarification, let us examine the production realities in our province's cooperatives:

As for ownership of the means of production, the fact is that each Thai Binh cooperative, the advanced as well as the weak ones, manages its land area and determines the nature of the soil and the level of investment for each crop as well as the cultivation patterns for the spring, 10th month and winter crops and the productivity and volume of production of each field. The issue is discussed at a cooperative members' congress or a congress of cooperative members' representatives. This is collective ownership of the means of production.

As for production relations, the fact is that all Thai Binh cooperatives are in control of their work forces, which they assign to various trades and occupations according to the cooperatives' plans. I think that in the five links of production in the charge of the collective, the work force represents both the production force and production relations. It is a production force because it consists of material and technical bases; it represents production relations because it is a jointly owned force which the cooperative management board controls in the discharge of the five links of production under its management. [end recording]

"It is noteworthy..."

PHAM VAN DONG SPEAKS AT CONFERENCE ON LABOR

BK040700 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] The Council of Ministers recently held a conference in Hanoi to discuss tasks on distribution of labor and the population and the building of new economic zones and settled farming and settled life areas in 1982 and the subsequent years. The conference was chaired by Vo Chi Cong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and attended by comrades responsible for various central branches, sectors and mass organizations, vice chairmen of people's committees from provinces and cities and representatives of a number of districts, new economic zones and settled farming and settled life areas.

Pham Van Dong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, addressed the conference.

The conferees heard and evaluated reports presented by representatives of the Ministries of Agriculture and Forestry, the Guidance Committee for Distribution of Labor and the Population and representatives of various localities and establishments. Although we experienced numerous difficulties during the 5 years 1976-80, we have scored initial and significant achievements in carrying out the party and state major policies on distribution of labor and the population, the building of new economic zones and the establishment of settled farming and settled life areas. This has created favorable conditions for the implementation of state policies in the coming years.

Talking to the conferees, Pham Van Dong stressed the strategic importance of the labor distribution aimed at satisfactorily exploiting the land potential, especially arable land to contribute to comprehensively developing our country's agriculture. This will help solve various important problems including economic, military and international relations problems and so forth.

The Council of Ministers chairman urged sectors and localities to formulate plans to satisfactorily carry out this task and to scrupulously make periodical checks. He praised a number of localities for their initial efforts and commended Ha Nam Ninh Province in the Red River Delta and Minh Hai Province in the Mekong River Delta for making their joint agreement to carry out this party and state major task satisfactorily. He expressed the hope that the provinces in the Mekong River Delta, the Central Highlands eastern zone and the Red River Delta and other provinces will make their joint agreements similar to that of Ha Nam Ninh and Minh Hai in order to fulfill their tasks.

The Council of Ministers chairman also urged the forestry sector to take advantage of the party and state intention in redistributing the labor force satisfactorily to carry out the tasks concerning afforestation, protection, conservation and exploitation of forests. It is necessary to combine tasks concerning agriculture and forestry with tasks of building settled farming and settled life areas in order to turn our country into a forest-rich nation. At the same time, a plan to protect forests must be formulated during the process of building the new economic zones.

LINKING RAW MATERIAL AREAS, PROCESSING URGED

BK020453 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 1 Feb 82

[NHAN DAN 2 February editorial: "Achieve a Combination Between Enterprises and Raw-Material-Producing Areas"]

[Text] Activities of various industrial services always represent a repetition of various processes of creating the sources of raw materials and processing these raw materials. For those production establishments that are vigorously shifting toward the exploitation of local resources in order to produce foodstuffs and consumer goods, the close combination of enterprises and raw-material-producing areas is a decisive factor for the development of production.

Over the past few years, in the process of reorganizing production in society and advancing from small production to large-scale socialist production, we have begun paying attention to a new form of production organization, that is, the achievement of a close combination between processing enterprises and raw-material-producing areas in order to associate industry with agriculture on a step-by-step basis.

Thanks to its efforts to link its raw-material-producing area with its processing industry, the Tran Phu tea joint enterprise in Hoang Lien Son has over the past 2 years been able to quickly increase the tea bud productivity of various state farms and cooperatives while ensuring the fulfillment of the tea-processing quota by its tea plant, thus always fulfilling or overfulfilling the state plans.

Many food- and consumer-goods-producing establishments, including various handicraft cooperatives, have also been able to overcome difficulties arising from the shortage of raw materials by associating their business with various agricultural products and industrial crops areas or by expanding their contract-related relations in the purchase and planting of sugarcane, tobacco, coconut trees, rush, jute and bamboo trees.

Many production establishments have failed to establish good relations with various raw-material-producing areas. Therefore, disagreement has been commonplace between the two sectors, processing and production. Ample existing potentials in manpower, materials and technology have been (?underexploited). On several occasions production has been interrupted and there has been a decline in economic results.

Initiative in production can be created only under conditions where there is a balance between cultivation and processing. The growth of one party depends not merely on subjective factors but also on the positive effects of the activities of the other party. Only through good processing activities can we create favorable conditions for expanding production in raw-material-producing areas and for consolidating production relations in the rural areas. Only through the creation of a steady source of raw materials with uniform quality can we have the conditions that ensure quality standards and stabilize the production volume of processed goods.

The combination of processing enterprises with raw material production establishments is consistent with both links of the production chain. Therefore, whether it may concern a combined organization or the establishment of relations of combination, it is imperative that we adopt a wholesome viewpoint with attention given to the requirements and capabilities of both parties.

The stable relationship between enterprises and raw-material-producing areas must be based on the reorganization of production designed to meet the conditions of geography, material bases and managerial efficiency. All sectors and localities should rapidly set up raw material areas, make investments in depth and expand production, select good seeds, practice intensive cultivation to increase crop yields and improve the quality of agricultural products to be used as raw materials. On the other hand, it is necessary to define the orientations for processing, reorganize industrial and handicraft production establishments, improve equipment and tools to handle the new sources of raw materials properly, increase the value of raw materials by supplying the various localities with technical equipment for preliminary processing work, and transform, arrange and guide private establishments in the production of sugarcane, sugar, cooking oil and soap so as to avoid spontaneous development which may cause losses to the state and peasants.

Another important task is to combine production with transportation as untimely or irregular delivery of agricultural raw materials to processing plants will result in losses in many respects. Whether the relationship between industry and agriculture in the processing of foodstuffs and the production of consumer goods is (?close and satisfactory) or not also depends on our efforts to study, introduce and apply specific policies on investments, the supply of production materials, the sale of grain to raw material areas and the correct setting of prices of the various types of industrial crops and agriculture food. It is necessary to organize a (? control) network to prevent speculators and hoarders from disrupting the market. The interests of producers who fulfill or overfulfill the plan norms as assigned by the state and entered in contracts must be guaranteed and encouraged.

Closely combining processing enterprises with raw material areas is an important measure aimed at enhancing the final result of production and business activities and also at constributing to the establishment of an agroindustrial structure at the grassroots level and in each locality.

THIRD MILITARY REGION HOLDS REVIEW CONFERENCE

BK301230 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Following a conference in early 1981 in Tien Lang District, Haiphong Municipality, the Third Military Region recently held its second periodic conference to discuss the task of building a defensive line of coastal villages in Thai Thuong, Thai Thuy and Thai Binh. These villages carried out two strategic tasks satisfactorily last year.

The conference noted that although the people experienced difficulties in economic production and in their daily lives and suffered from sabotage activities by the Chinese reactionaries throughout 1981, troops and militiamen of the Third Military Region, under the leadership of the party, successfully repulsed the enemies and foiled their sinister schemes.

With regard to recruitment, the military region has fulfilled its plan norms according to schedule. The quality of the militia and self-defense forces has been improved gradually. The command, office and combat alert duties have been maintained satisfactorily.

The conference contributed many concrete ideas to improving the guidelines and measures designed to build the defensive line of coastal villages in 1982 more effectively. The conferences pledged that they will strive to carry out the tasks and policies set forth by the conference satisfactorily and accelerate the emulation movement in the early days of the new year to score more achievements to greet the Fifth VCP Congress.

NORWEGIAN AMBASSADOR PAYS FAREWELL CALLS

With Pham Van Dong

OW291920 Hanoi VNA in English 1458 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 29 -- Tancred Ibsen, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Kingdom of Norway to Vietnam, took leave of Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong today. The premier had a cordial talk with him.

With Truong Chinh

OW011610 Hanoi VNA in English 1507 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 1 -- Tancred Ibsen, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Kingdom of Norway to Vietnam, paid a farewell visit to President of the Council of State Truong Chinh today before returning home for a new assignment. The president had a cordial talk with him.

HANOI CEREMONY MARKS DONG DA VICTORY OVER QING

OW300325 Hanoi VNA in English 1313 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, January 30 -- A ceremony was held around the Dong Da hillock in Hanoi yesterday to celebrate the 193rd anniversary of the Dong Da victory over the Chinese feudalist aggressors. Speaking on this occasion, Do Van Con, chairman of the People's Committee of Dong Da Precinct, recalled the Vietnam people's lightning attack in 1789 under the command of the national hero Nguyen Hue completely liberating the country [words indistinct] the 200,000 strong occupation army of the Qing. The ceremony wound up with art performances and sport games.

TU DELEGATION LEAVES FOR VISIT TO SOVIET UNION

OW011607 Hanoi VNA in English 1505 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 1 -- A delgation of the Vietnam Federation of Trade Unions led by its president, Nguyen Duc Thuan, left here on Saturday on a friendship visit to the Soviet Union. The delegation is to attend the 10th Congrss of the World Federation of Trade Unions to be held in Havana, Cuba. Seeing the delegation off were representatives of the Soviet and Cuban Embassies in Vietnam.

UK FOREIGN SECRETARY CARRINGTON PAYS VISIT

Talks With Mokhtar

BK290841 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0817 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Jakarta, 29 Jan (ANTARA) -- Foreign Minister Prof Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja described his 1 and 1/2 hour talk with British Foreign Minister Lord Carrington here Friday as "very good" and "much in depth."

Emerging from the talk at the Foreign Ministry Mokhtar said their discussion touched on regional as well as international matters, such as the problem of Kampuchea and the situation in Poland. Economic topics were also discussed, besides politics. On the political ones, he declined to say anything as yet. He asked reporters to wait for his press conference on Saturday. On economics, he said his discussion with Lord Carrington was very significant, especially in relation with Indonesia's desire to boost its commodity exports. British exports to Indonesia at present surpassed Indonesian exports to Great Britain.

Prof Mokhtar declined to explain further, saying Lord Carrington would still have talks on economic matters with Mines and Energy Minister Prof Subroto.

Lord Carrington arrived here Thursday on the first leg of a tour of ASEAN countries (Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines, Thailand and Indonesia). He said on his arrival that relations between Great Britain and Indonesia were very good, especially after the problem of textile quotas had been resolved 2 years ago. After talks with several more ministers and paying courtesy calls on the president and vice president and a visit to the state palace in Bogor, Lord Carrington will leave Indonesia Sunday to proceed to Kuala Lumpur. A meeting with Narciso Reyes, secretary general of ASEAN in Jakarta, is also in his program.

Meeting With Subroto

BK291459 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] Britain has offered to assist in the development of Indonesian natural resources, such as in the exploration and exploitation of oil, natural gas, coal and hydro-energy. This was stated by Mining and Energy Minister Subroto following a 1-hour talk with British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Lord Carrington in Jakarta today.

At the meeting, Lord Carrington had offered to undertake satellite air surveys to facilitate the location of oil fields, but the technology merited further study, Subroto said.

Carrington Dinner Speech

BK300813 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0759 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Jakarta, 30 Jan (ANTARA) -- British Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary Lord Carrington declared at a dinner given him by Indonesian Foreign Minister Prof Mokhtar Kusumaatmja Friday [29 January] that Britain would explore possibilities of helping Indonesia in industrial development. Lord Carrington arrived here Thursday for a 5-day visit to have talks with Indonesian authorities. Addressing his host at the dinner, Lord Carrington recalled the long relations between Britain and Indonesia dating back to the past.

To help reinforce our amity and friendship (as described by Queen Elizabeth I in 1601 in a letter to the king of Sumatra) I have brought with me seven experts in the interchange of commodities -- leaders of some of our largest companies, who you have kindly invited this evening, Lord Carrington said. According to him, these experts already had wide experience in Indonesia, being keenly aware of the striking development of both industry and agriculture now under way in Indonesia, and the Indonesian policy to pursue it further.

Pointing to [words indistinct] program of development assistance in Indonesia, he said: So far our help has mainly been directed to the rural areas, to which President Suharto so rightly attaches fundamental importance. We are now also exploring how to diversify it into other fields, such as industrial development.

Lord Carrington cited other examples of the British part in Indonesian development programs, like the presence of British young volunteers under Britain's voluntary services overseas scheme, funds raised by British young people for purified water system in another. [sentence as received] I would say that our countries now stand closer together than ever. This, paradoxically, is in part the happy outcome of the problems of trade which we encountered in 1980 and solved exactly a year ago, he said.

The British foreign secretary and his party are also scheduled to visit the botanical gardens at Bogor, where he said he hoped to see the memorial of Lady Raffles and the Rafflesia, a flower named after Sir Stamford Raffles.

Support for ASEAN on Kampuchea

BK300707 Hong Kong AFP in English 0636 GMT 30 Jan 82

[Text] Jakarta, 30 Jan (AFP) -- British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington today reaffirmed his government's support for the efforts of the Association of SoutheastAsian Nations (ASEAN) to solve the Cambodian problem.

"Britain regards ASEAN as a success story, and we support ASEAN's efforts to solve the (Cambodian) problem," he told a news conference after talks with President Suharto and Vice President Adam Malik. He said he had been briefed by his Indonesian counterpart, Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, and was told that the "difference of emphasis" among the five ASEAN member countries -- Indonesia, the Philippines, Thailand, Singapore and Malaysia -- on the Cambodian problem was fast disappearing. There was no difference in objective, he said, adding: "We seek to help ASEAN in in promoting peace in Cambodia."

Asked which faction he thought would rule Cambodia should there be a compromise with Vietnam, he said: "We stick to the old fashion that it is up to the Cambodian people to choose their own government."

On economic matters, he said he hoped that Indonesia's new foreign trade policy, obliging foreign suppliers to buy Indonesian non-oil products, would not affect the growing economic and trade realtions between Indonesia and Britain. "We can understand Indonesia's new economic regulations, but we do not know how they will work in practice," he said. Britain attaches great importance to expanding trade relations with Indonesia and, therefore, representatives of seven leading British firms have come here for trade talks with Indonesian officials, he added.

He gave no direct answer when asked if Britain wanted to replace the four Skyhawk aircraft which crashed here, but Sir Frederic Page, who is in charge of the Skyhawk sales, was reported to plan a second visit here on February 23. The Indonesian Air Force has bought a squadron of Skyhawk planes from Britain for the training of its cadets.

Mokhtar's Comments on Visit

BK010904 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0719 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Jakarta, 31 Jan (ANTARA) -- British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington left here Sunday for Manila after paying an official three-day visit to Indonesia. Indonesia was the first country he visited on his tour of ASEAN. After Manila the British foreign secretary will go to Thailand, Malaysia and Singapore.

Lord Carrington during his sojourn here held talks with President Suharto, Vice President Adam Malik, Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja and Indonesia's economic minister. Besides bilateral relations, Lord Carrington discussed regional and international issues during his meeting with Indonesian leaders.

Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, who saw his counterpart off at the Halim Perdanakusumah Airport, told reporters that talks with Lord Carrington was fruitful and smooth. He said bilateral relations were taken as the main topic of discussion. He described the relations between Indonesia and Great Britain as being in very good shape now. It was true, he added, that the bilateral relations in one-and-a-half years ago were in somewhat disharmony for an export quota imposed by Britain upon Indonesian textiles. But according to Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, the problem has been solved and the relations have returned to normal.

In addition to official talks British businessmen accompanying Lord Carrington held separate meetings with their Indonesian counterparts.

The Indonesian foreign minister said that exchange of information on various problems dominated the talks held between Lord Carrington and the Indonesian side. He quoted the British foreign secretary as saying he was very happy with the talks during his stay in Indonesia and hoped to re-visit the country in the future. Well, I could say that both sides are satisfied with the talks and agreed to meet again, Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said, but he did not mention the date for the next meeting.

Questioned on the British position regarding ASEAN stance on the Kampuchean issue, the Indonesian foreign minister said Britain is consistent with the ASEAN proposal for a peaceful settlement of the issue. But the Kampuchea problem was not taken specifially during the talks with Lord Carrington, he said, adding that both sides discussed the problem of ASEAN in a general perspective.

He said Lord Carrington seemed to be very cautious of giving a statement on problems outside ASEAN. But in general, he is in support of ASEAN position to the Kampuchea issue, Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said.

The Indonesian foreign minister said "no" when questioned whether the EEC initiative to solve the problem of Soviet occupation of Afghanistan was also brought up to the talks with Lord Carrington. He only said the Middle East issue was dominating the talks. He did not elaborate on this.

DPRK PREMIER YI CHONG-OK PAYS OFFICIAL VISIT

Arrival of Delegation

BK031545 Hong Kong AFP in English 1102 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 3 Feb (AFP) -- North Korean Prime Minister Yi Chong-ok arrived here today for a 5-day official visit to Indonesia on the first leg of a tour to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). Mr Yi, accompanied by a 20-member party, was greeted at Halim Airport by Vice President Adam Malik and several Indonesian cabinet ministers. Mr Malik will hold a state dinner in honour of Mr Yi this evening. The prime minister will hold talks with President Suharto tomorrow that are expected to deal with bilateral and regional matters.

After the talks Mr Yi will confer with Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja at the Foreign Ministry.

On the third day of his visit, Mr Yi will visit the Cilegon steel plant, some 110 km (about 70 miles) west of here, and tour a housing project in central Jakarta. He will also visit a cement plant at Gresik in East Java and attend a dinner in his honour held by east government Sunandar Prijosudarmo. [as received] On Sunday Mr Yi will tour a fishery and handicraft project at Sidoardjo, East Java, and return to Jakarta in the afternoon.

Mr Yi will leave on Monday for Bangkok on the second leg of his ASEAN tour -- the first by a North Korean head of government.

Banquet for Premier

BK031551 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1500 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Indonesia, as one of the founders of the Nonaligned Movement, adheres consistently to the nonaligned policy and continues to respect the nonaligned principles, such as noninterference in the internal affairs of other countries, respect for the sovereignty of other countries and peaceful settlement of any conflicts. This was stated by Vice President Adam Malik at a state banquet he hosted at the state palace tonight in honor of state guest North Korean Premier Yi Chong-ok.

Vice President Adam Malik was happy that the Indonesian attitude toward nonalignment is also the view of North Korea. On the visit of Premier Yi Chong-ok to Indonesia, the vice president is confident that it will further deepen mutual understanding between Indonesia and North Korea. He pointed out that both Indonesia and North Korea are nonaligned countries belonging to the group of developing countries striving for peace, independence and social justice for all nations. Vice President Adam Malik also expressed his happiness that the visit of the North Korean premier to Indonesia will be followed by similar visits to the other ASEAN member countries. Speaking on ASEAN, the vice president said Indonesia and the four other ASEAN members have established a new form of cooperation based on a mutually beneficial sense of equality to strengthen national defense and regional resilience.

Prior to the banquet, Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik and Premier and Mrs Yi Chong-ok exchanged souvenirs. The vice president presented one of his books on the Indonesian revolution to the North Korean premier, while he received ginseng medicinal plant from the North Korean premier. Mrs Nelly Malik presented her book on Indonesian women to Mrs Yi Chong-ok, while Mrs Yi Chong-ok presented a specially woven North Korean shawl to her.

Yi Chong-ok Banquet Remarks

BK040939 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 2300 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Vice President Adam Malik said that Indonesia, as one of the founders of the Nonaligned Movement, consistently adheres to the nonaligned policies and continues to respect the nonaligned principles, such as noninterference in the internal affairs of other countries. During a state banquet held at the state palace last night in honor of the visiting North Korean premier, Yi Chong-ok, the vice president expressed his happiness that the North Korean Government and people share the same view on the need to preserve the nonaligned principles.

In reply, Premier Yi Chong-ok stressed the importance of efforts to foster cooperation and strengthen solidarity between the two countries through meetings.

In his speech, delivered in Korean, Yi Chong-ok expressed his admiration over President Suharto's leadership in implementing the national development. He also expressed his admiration over Indonesia's success in securing self-reliance in food. Touching on world peace, the North Korean premier said that his country is constantly doing its best to prevent war and always takes part in maintaining peace and stability.

Calls on Suharto

BK040953 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Summary] Visiting North Korean Premier Yi Chong-ok this morning paid a courtesy call on President Suharto at the Merdeka Palace in Jakarta. Earlier, the North Korean premier paid a similar call on Vice President Adam Malik. During his meeting with President Suharto, various problems were discussed. In the meeting, President Suharto was assisted by Minister-State Secretary Sudharmono, Agriculture Minister Sudarsono Hadisaputro and Trade Minister Radius Prawiro. State Secretary Sudharmono later briefed newsmen on the outcome of the meeting.

MP'S SCORE MOSCOW RADIO REPORT OVER PKI MESSAGE

BK021617 Jakarta OANA in English 0950 GMT 2 Feb 82

["Pool item"]

[Text] Jakarta, 2 Feb (OANA/ANTARA) -- Chairman of the Islamic Development Unity (PPP) faction in the House of Representatives (DPR), H. Nuddin Lubis, strongly condemned here Tuesday the January 22 reports of the Moscow radio which had again defended and supported the already uprooted Indonesian Communist Party (PKI) following its coup attempt known as the G.30. XS/PKI in 1965.

The Moscow radio, among other things, criticised Indonesian Government leaders and the KNPI youth organization which had launched protest against the earlier (December 17) publication of the Russian radio which reported that the PKI organization had sent a congratulatory message to Russian President Leonid Brezhnev in connection with his 75th birthday celebration.

Nuddin Lubis said it was a peculiar thing that the Moscow radio through its recent broadcasting again had supported the PKI organization instead of apologizing for its earlier step which had hurt feelings of the Indonesian Government and people. Lubis quoted the Moscow radio as saying that the status of the PKI organization is the internal affairs of Indonesia. The problem can only be solved by the Indonesian people themselves. The congratulatory message of the Central Committee of the PKI organization which was recently reported by the Moscow radio has no relations with abovementioned issues.

Nuddin Lubis pointed out that the statement of the Moscow radio constitutes proof of the Russian interference in the internal affairs of Indonesia. Lubis said that so far Indonesia had maintained a friendly attitude and relations toward the Soviet Union. The PPP faction chairman however noted with surprise that such a goodwill attitude of Indonesia had just been belittled by the Soviet Union which did not deserve the existing norms, ethics, and honesty. The Muslim leader appealed to the Soviet Union to halt such unfriendly actions for the sake of the proper bilateral relations between the two countries.

Meanwhile, chairman of House Commission I (dealing with security, foreign affairs and information), Chalid Mawardi, also made a strong reaction to the blatant statement of the Moscow radio. He said the Soviet Union had been informed of the protests made by the Indonesian authorities toward such an unfriendly step but the reactions were unheeded. Mawardi described the Russian step as arrogant. The MP reminded the people of the latent danger of communism, adding integration among all elements of the new order -- including cooperation between the people and the armed forces (ABRI) -- was a must.

MALAYSIA

MALAYSIAN ENVOY INTERVIEWED ON KAMPUCHEA

BK040236 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 4 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] Malaysian Ambassador to Thailand Datuk Shahuddin Mohamed Taib said yesterday that his prime minister had made a strong statement on the Kampuchean stalemate in Kuala Lumpur on Tuesday as a "reminder to the Khmer Rouge that they cannot take ASEAN for granted."

The Malaysian envoy, in an interview with the NATION, said that Malaysian Prime Minister Datuk Sri Mahathir Mohamad, in raising the possibility that Kuala Lumpur might drop its recognition of the Khmer Rouge in the UN, was simply trying to relay a "message" to the ousted Khmer Rouge leaders to take a more cooperative stand vis-a-vis ASEAN.

"ASEAN has been doing a lot for Democratic Kampuchea and that's a fact they should not forget," Ambassador Shahuddin Mohamed Taib said. The ambassador said he did not believe his prime minister's statement represented a change in the policy. "It's just a little bit of a reminder to the Khmer Rouge," he said.

The Malaysian envoy said the strong statement from Mahathir might also be a way to pressure the Khmer Rouge into a softer position towards ASEAN's proposed "loose coalition" with each of the three parties maintaining its stand.

The ambassadors said he could not officially confirm a published report earlier this week that Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie had said Kuala Lumpur would be ready to host a new "summit" of the three parties in the coalition: Khmer Rouge's Khieu Samphan, Son Sann, leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) and Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Ambassador Shahuddin Mohamed Taib said that his prime minister had obviously been "disappointed, to put it mildly" by Khmer Rouge's rejection of the latest ASEAN's loose coalition proposal.

The Malaysian prime minister, in his opening speech to the Fourth General Assembly of the ASEAN Inter-Parliamentary Organization (AIPO) in Kuala Lumpur on Tuesday said in part: "We in Southeast Asia have entered an era fraught with unprecedented perils. It's distressing to note that the problem of Kampuchea which has plagued us for the last few years appears to be no nearer to an equitable solution. The intransigent attitude of certain parties is very much regretted. It may no longer be worthwhile for us to support their position in the United Nations."

Thai undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, M.R. Kasem S. Kasemsi, was also in the audience of the gathering, as a senator and a member of the Thai delegation to the conference. M.R. Kasem had earlier flown to Indonesia and Singapore for discussions with his counterparts on the latest developments in Kampuchea -- particularly in reference to Khmer Rouge's rejection of ASEAN's latest formula for a political solution to the problem.

KUALA LUMPUR DISCUSSES KHMER ROUGE STANCE

BK031445 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The Malaysian prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed, yesterday hinted in a statement made at the Fourth ASEAN Interparliamentary Organization assembly in Kuala Lumpur that Malaysia might withdraw its support for the Khmer Rouge seat in the United Nations if it refused to accept the coalition proposal by ASEAN. Dr Mahathir's statement said that Malaysia regretted the intransigent attitude of certain parties and it may no longer be worthwhile for us to support their position in the United Nations.

The time may not be ripe yet for Malaysia together with the other ASEAN nations to take this drastic step, but the Khmer Rouge must realise that if the ASEAN Standing Committee, which is currently chaired by Singapore, decides to withdraw support for Democratic Kampuchea seat in the United Nations, it will not hesitate to do so. On its own, the Khmer Rouge cannot master the vote to retain its seat. They must realise that they are retaining their membership of the United Nations because of the efforts of ASEAN. Otherwise, the image of the Khmer Rouge as being one of the most genocidal regimes in the history of mankind would have guaranteed their expulsion.

The support of the ASEAN members was not unconditional. It was predicated on the assumption and principles contained initially in the General Assembly resolution passed on the 30th November 1979. The ASEAN nations will not want to be a party to the restoration of a cruel and murderous regime that very (?nearly) brought about the extinction of the Kampuchean economy, culture and people.

The leaders of the Khmer Rouge must realise that they will not be accepted by the Kampuchean people, who have every reason to fear them. A reshuffling of the Khmer Rouge top leadership, an open disavowal of communist principles and other such changes are not sufficient to make the Khmer Rouge acceptable to Kampuchean and international opinion.

Surely, the fact that they have not been able to attract substantial new support and the reported defections from their rank should be sufficient to convince the Khmer Rouge leadership that what is needed is a drastic change in the image and that change can only come about if they join the coalition as proposed by ASEAN.

The Khmer Rouge may find it distasteful to acknowledge Prince Sihanouk and Son Sann as their leaders, but that is precisely what they will have to do to gain acceptance. The complete transformation of the image and character of the Khmer Rouge is the precondition demanded by the Kampuchean people and ASEAN, without whose support the Khmer Rouge will not survive.

The aid and support of all the ASEAN members is vital to the very survival of the resistance movement if it is not deteriorated into what Vietnam constantly called groups of brigands.

If the Khmer Rouge has the interest of the people of Kampuchea, if indeed it is interested in ensuring the survival of a Kampuchea that is independent and not part of an Indochina federation, they must make themselves acceptable to those who are trying to bring this about. There really is little choice except to join a coalition that would represent the true nationalist yearning of the Kampuchean people.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Asia & Pacific

Vol IV No 025 5 February 1982

CONTENTS

JAPAN

Miyazawa Comments on Trade Bills in U.S. Congress C 1
Suzuki Reacts Favorably to U.S. Technical Trade C 1
JSP Official Questions C-1 Technology Transfer C 2
Talks Ended on Japan-U.S. Foreign Aid Policies C 3

NORTH KOREA

NODONG SINMUN Hits South's Anticommunist Policy [5 Feb] D 1
VRPR Scores 'Team Spirit 1982' Military Exercise D 1
VRPR: Kim Chong-il Acts as 'Aide' to Kim Il-song D 2
Yi Chong-ok Speaks at Banquet in Indonesia D 4
NODONG SINMUN Stresses Role of Light Industry [4 Feb] D 5

SOUTH KOREA

Plans for North-South Communication Reported E 1
[CHUNGANG ILBO 5 Feb]
Daily Views Importance of 'Team Spirit 1982' E 1
[KOREA HERALD 5 Feb]
More Problems Foreseen in Loan Talks With Japan E 2
TONG-A ILBO Advocates Revision of Criminal Code E 2
[TONG-A ILBO 4 Feb]

KAMPUCHEA

National Assembly Second Session Opens 5 Feb H 1
Pot Pot 'Clique's' Refusal of Coalition Viewed H 1
Recent Thai Military Provocations Reported H 2
Heng Samrin Hails VCP on Founding Anniversary H 2
Lao Delegation Arrives for Bank Summit Meeting H 3
Heng Samrin Sends Greeting to PCF Congress H 3
Leaders Attend Function Honoring Fallen Combatants H 4
My Samedi Addresses 30 Jan KAMPUCHEA Meeting H 4
Khun Chhy Opens Bridge, Worksite in Prey Veng H 4
French Medical Group Gives Aid During Visit [VODK] H 5
Swedish Doctor Presents Aid While Visiting DK [VODK] H 5

LAOS

52d Founding Anniversary of VCP Marked I 1
LPRP Greetings Message I 1
SIANG PASASON Editorial [3 Feb] I 1
State Bank Delegation Leaves for Kampuchea I 2
Laos, USSR, SRV Sign Economic, Trade Document I 3
Sisavat Keobounphan Receives Komsomol Delegation I 3
Soviet Construction Delegation Leaves Vientiane I 3
Deputy Minister Receives Military Attaches I 3
Phoumi Vongvichit Leads Group to PCF Congress I 4
Greetings Message to Congress I 4

THAILAND

Border Shelling in Prachin Buri Reported J 1
Further Report J 1
SRV Seen as Seeking 'Pretext' for Violations J 1
SRV Scored for Border Violations, 'Slandering' J 2
SRV Policy Regarding Kampuchea Condemned J 3
Thanat Discusses ASEAN Policy on SRV, Kampuchea J 4
[NATION REVIEW 27 Jan]

VIETNAM

USSR's Ogarkov Continues Official Visit K 1
Pham Van Dong Reception K 1
Speeches at Hanoi Meeting K 1
Wreath Laying Ceremony 4 Feb K 2
SRV, USSR Trade Unions Sign Cooperation Pact K 2
SRV Envoy Informs PRK Official of Note to PRC K 3
Do Muoi Urges Provinces To Meet Plan Norms K 3

MIYAZAWA COMMENTS ON TRADE BILLS IN U.S. CONGRESS

OW051033 Tokyo KYODO in English 1027 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 5 (KYODO) -- Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa Friday denounced a series of bills introduced in the U.S. Congress and apparently designed to influence Japan into opening its market wider to American products on the basis of "reciprocity."

Claiming that the bills represented a serious setback for the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), Miyazawa told a press conference that multilateral trade negotiations were possible under GATT and it was therefore a step beyond the principle of reciprocity. He said the world "reciprocity" sounded wonderful but the thinking behind it was a serious retrogression.

Miyazawa expressed the opinion that only a handful of experts in Congress really understood what GATT stood for and the history of developments which surmounted the reciprocity principle.

The chief Cabinet secretary's remarks were in reaction to a bill introduced in the Senate Thursday by Republican Senator John Heinz that would give the President authority to restrict imports from any country that does not open its market to American products to the same extent as the U.S. market.

Miyazawa also disclosed at the press conference that full-scale preparations would be made from next week to send Masumi Esaki, chairman of the special research council on international economic affairs of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, to the U.S. to try and patch up trade relations between the two countries.

SUZUKI REACTS FAVORABLY TO U.S. TECHNICAL TRADE

OW051131 Tokyo KYODO in English 1121 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 5 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Friday cooperation between Japan and the United States in exchanging and sharing military technology was important as part of the "smooth and effective execution" of the bilateral security treaty.

"We must respond to the U.S. request" for transfer of Japan's military-related technology, Suzuki said at a House of Representatives Budget Committee meeting. He quickly added, however, that there were government and Diet restrictions banning the export of arms and this included military technology. "Therefore," Suzuki said, "we are now studying if we can adjust" policies related to such restrictions.

Suzuki's remarks were interpreted as his first positive statement in favor of such military cooperation with the United States.

The United States is reportedly interested in Japan's advanced electronics technology for radar and other surveillance equipment.

The committee session is discussing the government-proposed yen 49.7 trillion (dollar 226 billion) fiscal 1982 budget, which allocates yen 2.6 trillion (dollar 11.7 billion) for defense, a 7.75 percent increase over defense spending in fiscal 1981.

The committee meeting followed heated debate Thursday on alleged joint research and development of antisubmarine patrol aircraft and transport airplanes in apparent violation of government restrictions. But, Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito and Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said joint research and development in the field of military equipment could be carried out only after the two countries reached a new agreement on the basis of the Japan-U.S. mutual defense aid pact.

Ito defined "joint development" as determination of weapons to be produced, provision and sharing of technology, and division of responsibility and manufacturing cost.

Sakurauchi told the meeting Japan was "not obliged" to provide military technology to the United States under existing agreements between the two countries.

But Senior Foreign Ministry officials said, "Rejection of a U.S. request under any circumstances will mean contravention of the Japan-U.S. security threat."

Suzuki then stood up and said: "The treaty is a major pillar ensuring Japan's national security. We are placing emphasis on Japan-U.S. military cooperation as part of the smooth and effective execution of the treaty."

JSP OFFICIAL QUESTIONS C-1 TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER

OW041315 Tokyo KYODO in English 1302 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 4 (KYODO) -- Japan may have helped the United States produce military planes though the Tokyo government denies such technical assistance, a Japan Socialist Party (JSP) Diet member said Thursday.

The JSP member of parliament, Shun Oide, said it is suspected that knowhow for the C-1 amphibious jet transport, jointly developed in 1971 by Kawasaki Heavy Industries and the Defense Agency's Technical Research and Development Institute, was provided to the United States in violation of the 1976 government policy banning export of arms and military technology. The suspicion stems from the fact that performance and design of the C-1 and the U.S.-produced YC-14 and YC-15 transport planes are quite similar, Oide said in a House of Representatives Budget Committee meeting. The C-1 plane is known for its excellent short takeoff and landing (STOL).

Oide said U.S. officials wanted the C-1 transport plane itself, but Japan's Defense Agency rejected the request because of the 1976 ban. The Americans then called for and received C-1 technical knowhow from Kawasaki Heavy Industries and the agency's institute, Oide said.

He said Kawasaki officials acknowledged that they handed over technical information concerning the transport planes.

Government officials had earlier said Japan and the United States have not conducted joint research or development in the field of military technology although they are now holding talks on the transfer of sophisticated Japanese electronics technology to the United States for use in radar and other surveillance equipment.

Government officials present at the committee session did not say whether Oide's speculation was true or not. The JSP dietman then called on the government to present diplomatic documents concerning joint development of weapons and exchanges of military information between the two countries. The request was turned down, however, because such documents are classified and are not to be made public.

Subsequent wrangling between lawmakers of the JSP and the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) forced adjournment of the committee session for several hours.

The major opposition party later agreed to resume the lower house meeting Friday morning after the government said it would try to find out what the alleged technology transfer was all about.

Japan-U.S. military cooperation has emerged as a sensitive issue in the current Diet session which is discussing a government-proposed fiscal 1982 budget featuring defense spending c yen 2.6 trillion (dollar 11.8 billion). Defense expenditures are up 7.75 percent over the current fiscal year, compared with a less than 3 percent budgetary hike in education and social welfare outlays.

TALKS ENDED ON JAPAN-U.S. FOREIGN AID POLICIES

OW031003 Tokyo KYODO in English 0929 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 3 (KYODO) -- Japan and the United States Wednesday ended three days of talks in Tokyo on aid policies with an agreement to place emphasis on "aid to the poor majority in developing countries." The meeting was the third of its kind between the two countries aimed at coordinating their foreign aid policies, and the first since the inauguration of the Reagan administration in January last year. The consultation covered general and concrete policies on economic and technological aid to developing countries.

Kenichi Yanagi, leader of the Japanese delegation, said after the meeting that he found no basic difference between the Japanese and U.S. aid policies. It had been reported that the Reagan administration had switched U.S. emphasis in foreign aid to strategically important areas, and it was feared that the American aid policy might assume a stronger military coloring. However, Yanagi said after the consultation that the U.S. intends to stress "aid to the poor majority in such countries."

Peter McPherson, leader of the U.S. delegation, told reporters that Japan and the U.S. can work closely together to aid poor people in developing countries. McPherson, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID), said that during the three-day meeting, both sides reviewed each other's foreign aid programs.

The two previous consultations, in 1978 and 1979, made both countries aware of the increasing need for cooperation in extending aid to poor countries, but did not result in a "joint aid program per se," he said.

Yanagi, also director general of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Cooperation Bureau, said the two delegations discussed basic and regional policies, focal areas and joint projects. He said both sides agreed to push actively for joint aid projects, including family planning in Indonesia and the construction of a primary school in Tonga.

Yanagi said aid policy makers of the two countries would meet after four months to review the progress in their commitments. He said the two delegations had agreed to hold the next full-scale meetings in Washington a year from now.

Yanagi said further aid policy consultations would be held whenever necessary through diplomatic channels in Washington, Tokyo and the capitals of aid-receiving countries, to maximize the effects of aid.

NODONG SINMUN HITS SOUTH'S ANTICOMMUNIST POLICY

SK050441 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0348 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 5 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Friday comes out with a commentary captioned "Splittist's Colour Will Not Change" which says that the unceasing anti-DPRK row of the South Korean puppets is a vicious act intended to bar reunification and freeze division by creating distrust and inciting confrontation within the nation.

The Chon Tu-hwan group on February 3 called a "meeting of naval commanders" and made quite a noise, arguing that someone's "provocation is foreseen" and "a combat posture for retaliating at the initial stage of a war" must be established, with shrill cry over "communization by force of arms." Earlier, traitor Chon Tu-hwan went spouting about "southward invasion," "strengthened posture against it," and so on.

The commentary says: Only recently the Chon Tu-hwan group was loud-mouthed about "unification" and "conclusion of an agreement" in its "January 22 proposal." Now, abruptly, it called a meeting of puppet naval commanders to incite North-South confrontation and spin out powder-reeking trash from the same mouths. This reveals the fraud of its "proposal."

The "proposal" brought forward by traitor Chon Tu-hwan is, by nature, not one for reunification, but a showy veil for concealing his splittist colour in face of the rising tide of the times towards the reunification of the country. National reunification is incompatible with anti-communist confrontation. If he wanted to solve the reunification question, he should have chosen the road of ending distrust and confrontation and promoting national unity and collaboration.

However loudly the Chon Tu-hwan group may cry for "unification" and so forth, inciting antagonism and confrontation with an anti-communist row, no one would believe it. Such act only proves clearly once again that its splittist nature has not changed nor will it change.

It is more nonsensical than a jargon to talk about "general elections" while fanning anti-communist war fever with outcries for "retaliation" and establishment of a "combat posture." If the Chon Tu-hwan group is truly interested in reunification, it should not try to fool public opinion by harping on the empty "January 22 proposal," but stop first of all the row of anti-communist confrontation and war racket which deepen confrontation and lead the situation to a higher pitch of strain.

VRPR SCORES 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982' MILITARY EXERCISE

SK050007 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] On 3 February the ROK-U.S. Combined Forces Command announced that the Korea-U.S. joint mobile exercise Team Spirit 1982 will be conducted in South Korea 13 February-26 April. In an interview, Richard Hyde, spokesman for the ROK-U.S. Combined Forces Command, said the exercise will mobilize armed forces and sophisticated military hardware. It will involve 157,500 South Korean and U.S. ground, naval and air force personnel stationed in South Korea and other locations in the continental United States, Okinawa and the Pacific region, including F-16 fighters and the Midway. The Team Spirit 1982 mobile exercise is an outrageous crime to lead the situation on the Korean Peninsula to the brink of war by aggravating tension in this land and to lay an artificial obstacle on the road of peace and peaceful reunification.

As people at home and abroad are urging the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea and aspiring for peace and peaceful reunification, the scheme of the U.S. aggressors and their stooges, the Chon Tu-hwan ring to stage a war exercise simulating a war of northward invasion concerns our people and the world's peace-loving peoples.

While the traitor Chon Tu-hwan babbled about dialogue and reunification in his 22 January proposal and U.S. President Reagan discussed peace and the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula in a letter he sent to Chon Tu-hwan, they attempt to stage Team Spirit 1982, a joint mobile exercise and an aggression against North Korea. This exposes the fraudulence of the proposal for unification and the deception of their raving about peace on the Korean Peninsula. It is well known that the U.S. aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan ring have not tried to seek peace and peaceful reunification on the Korean Peninsula; rather, they have attempted to realize their wild desire by perpetuating division and waging a new aggressive war on the Korean Peninsula. Through the Korea-U.S. joint mobile exercise Team Spirit 1982, the United States is scheming to complete preparations for war, to keep this land as a permanent colonial military base and to occupy all of the Korean Peninsula. To this end, the United States has bolstered the combat strength of the U.S. troops and accelerated preparations for a war of northward invasion. Moreover, it has instigated Chon Tu-hwan -- the cutthroat, military hooligan and war maniac -- to follow the road of fascism, war and division since putting him in power. The 22 January proposal for division adapted from a U.S. script was devised to quash the growing aspirations for reunification and mislead public opinion at home and abroad. By making the Chon Tu-hwan ring make such a proposal for reunification and encouraging it with military support, the United States is maneuvering to intimidate our people who desire reunification and to guarantee the long-term power of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist regime. This shows that the U.S. aggressors are obstacles to reunification, the source of war and the ring-leaders who instigate the Chon Tu-hwan ring to follow the road of division.

Positively joining in the joint mobile exercise Team Spirit 1982, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is trying to leave this land to the United States as its colonial military and supply base; in return, they get to live in splendor and achieve a wild desire for long-term power. For this purpose, the U.S. aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan ring have run amok to prepare for a war of northward invasion by annually staging the Korea-U.S. military exercise simulating North Korea as their enemy. Such maneuvers committed by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring are a grave challenge to our people's aspiration for reunification and peace on the Korean Peninsula and in Asia and a dangerous act to worsen tension on the Korean Peninsula and to wage a new war of invasion. The U.S. aggressors and the Chon Tu-hwan ring cannot justify their maneuvers for war and division under the pretext of peace and peaceful reunification.

Our people will never tolerate the maneuvers for reckless aggression and war committed by the United States and the Chon Tu-hwan ring. The U.S. aggressors should immediately withdraw their troops and nuclear weapons from South Korea, taking along all lethal weapons and military equipment in accordance with the unanimous demand of people at home and abroad. The Chon Tu-hwan ring should abandon the foolish fantasy of seeking long-term power, engaging in treacherous acts and being dependent on the United States. It should immediately step down from power. Our people will oppose the maneuvers to prepare for a new war of invasion and divide the nation and strenuously stage an anti-Chon Tu-hwan and anti-U.S. struggle to force the U.S. troops to withdraw from South Korea and to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan ring.

VRPR: KIM CHONG-IL ACTS AS 'AIDE' TO KIM IL-SONG

SK041309 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Feature program "Ray of Guidance:" "The Noblest Duty"]

[Text] The long history of the revolutionary struggle of the working class contains many stories about successors who have been loyal to the leader.

However, we have never known such a genuine successor as dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, who has brilliantly inherited the revolutionary cause of chuche, is brilliantly bringing it to full bloom and has the highest loyalty to the fatherly leader.

Dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il has the highest loyalty to the respected and beloved leader. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il's burning loyalty, aimed at easing the travails of the respected and beloved President Kim Il-song, lies at the bottom of his inexhaustible revolutionary zeal and energetic activities. It is said that dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il once made the following meaningful remarks: I am a warrior who is performing the glorious duty assigned by the leader.

Because the dear comrade leader is faithfully loyal to the fatherly leader and considers the work of easing the leader's concerns as the noblest duty, he regards the leader's concerns as his own. The more difficult and complicated the problems of concern to the respected and beloved leader, the more he regards the work of resolving them as the most greatly rewarding and as the most supremely happy.

Hotter than a fire, the dear comrade leader's loyalty to the fatherly leader is not a recent phenomenon. Ever since he was young, he has kept deep in his heart the fact that the great leader has been only concerned about the prosperity and development of the fatherland and the happiness of the masses. The following are a few heartwarming examples which show us how much the dear comrade leader has done, ever since he was young, to alleviate the fatherly leader's burdens.

It was right after the cease-fire, when the Korean war had just concluded. The dear comrade leader learned that the fatherly leader was concerned about the wretched life of the masses after the war. It is said that in order to alleviate, at least a little, the fatherly leader's concern, the dear comrade leader made a detailed survey of the kinds and prices of goods at markets and also surveyed which kinds of goods were selling best. It is said that, with such detailed information about the market situation, the dear comrade leader used to provide the fatherly leader with the necessary information whenever the fatherly leader raised the topic of commodity prices and their relationship to the people's living conditions.

The dear comrade leader, who has regarded the great leader's burden as his own since his youth, is said to have examined people's living conditions in rural areas, to have sometimes observed progress in prefabricated construction -- a matter on which the leader wanted to be informed -- at construction sites and to have participated in construction work wearing fatigues.

The above contain examples of his loyalty aimed at easing the fatherly leader's burden. In this way, so as to alleviate the great leader's burden, the dear comrade leader has done his utmost since he was young. Thus, as an aide to the fatherly leader, he has been brilliantly, without the least carelessness, resolving all problems of concern to the leader.

As an aide to the great leader, the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il is leading the entire revolution and construction. He is creating practical examples, saying at the same time that loyalty to the fatherly leader should be exhibited not by words but by practical deeds in upholding the leader's intentions and plans and accomplishing them to the end.

The dear comrade leader regards the work of realizing the great leader's intentions as his own noble duty. We can deeply feel this in the story about the Chongsan cooperative farm. As is well known to the world, that farm is the place where the great leader created the famous Chongsan-ri spirit and Chongsan-ri method.

With a plan to free the peasants, who had been liberated from exploitation and poverty, from hard labor and all kinds of ideological backwardness at the earliest possible date, the great leader made several scores of on-the-spot guidance visits to this place, with a view toward making this area a model for rural areas, one in which all farm work was mechanized, peasants toiled 8 hours a day like workers, and cultural facilities were provided just as they were in urban areas.

Chongsan-ri is precisely the place in which the great leader's noble intention to completely resolve problems concerning peasants and rural areas dwells and in which the leader has continuously placed his trust.

It is said that, paying keen attention to Chongsan-ri, where the fatherly leader's noble intention and history's footprints appear, the dear comrade leader is giving careful guidance to this place in order to make it a communist utopia in line with the leader's intentions. It is said that the peasants in the Chongsan cooperative farm merrily do all farm work with machines and are living amid plenty.

The dear comrade leader's loyalty, rendered to alleviate the travails and concern of the great leader, is shining as the flower of the people's joy and is reverberating as their song of happiness. The fatherly leader seeks his joy in the people's happiness; the dear comrade leader is devoting himself to dedicate to the leader a song of joy. Thus, regarding the holding of the great leader and dear comrade leader in high esteem as the highest happiness, the people are rendering loyalty with all their hearts.

YI CHONG-OK SPEAKS AT BANQUET IN INDONESIA

SK050333 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Speech by Yi Chong-ok, DPRK Political Bureau member and premier of the DPRK Administration Council, at banquet arranged by Indonesian Vice President Adam Malik in Jakarta on 3 February -- read by announcer]

[Text] We are very pleased today that we have arrived in the land of Indonesia, a beautiful island nation of Southeast Asia, to share warm friendship with you. First of all, I express my sincere gratitude to you for kindly inviting us to visit this friendly nation of yours, for according us warm hospitality by arranging a splendid banquet brimming over with friendliness and for respected His Excellency Adam Malik, the vice president, having touched us with his wonderful words.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I convey to you friendly greetings from our people to your people. We have come to know the friendliness of your people in the warm hospitality and welcome accorded us. At the same time, the peoples of both countries sincerely hope to expand and develop the relations between the two countries.

The peoples of Korea and Indonesia, both nonaligned nations located in Asia, are striving to develop and consolidate the Nonaligned Movement and to achieve peace, security and prosperity in Asia. To share useful views and experiences with each other while maintaining frequent mutual visits between us and develop friendly and cooperative relations not only corresponds to the interests of the peoples of both countries but also with the aspiration of the Asian people to build a new, independent and prosperous Asia.

Our people highly value the relations with the fraternal Indonesian people established on the single road of independence and nonalignment. We are the first ones to visit your country in the new year of 1982. This stems from a true aspiration to consolidate the friendship and unity between the peoples of our two countries in the course of continuous contacts and to enhance the friendly and cooperative relations to a new high degree by seeking a way to expand exchanges and cooperation in various fields.

I believe our delegation's visit to your country will contribute to expanding exchanges and cooperative and consolidating friendly ties between the peoples of the two countries. The Korean people truly rejoice over the fraternal Indonesian people who, under the leadership of the respected His Excellency President Suharto, are achieving great successes in the course of implementing the Third 5-Year Plan which focuses on achieving food self-sufficiency and improving the living standards of the people, providing the basis of economic construction and developing the raw material processing industry. We wish them greater success in the future.

We know that your government is developing the national economy and national culture on the basis of the pancasilla doctrine and believe that the policies you are enforcing correspond to the interests of your people and the reality of your country.

We highly value the efforts of your government, as one of the original countries of the Nonaligned Movement, to defend the principles and purity of this movement and to turn the Southeast Asian region into an independent, peaceful and neutral zone in accordance with the ASEAN doctrine. Today the Korean people under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center are struggling to infuse society with the chuche idea and to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland in line with the program put forth at the Sixth KWP Congress. It is a supreme national aspiration of all Korean people to reunify the fatherland, divided by outside forces. This is an urgent task which should not be postponed.

Even though our people's struggle for national reunification is arduous, the Korean people, supported by the peace-loving people of the world, will surely achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country. The government and the people of the DPRK will, in unity with the peoples of the nonaligned nations and all progressive people in the world including the Indonesian people, struggle to prevent the danger of a new war and to defend peace and security in the world under the ideology of independence, friendship and peace.

In conclusion, convinced that the friendly and cooperative relations between our two countries established in the joint struggle for independence and the Nonaligned Movement will further develop and expand in various fields, I propose a toast to the fraternal and friendly unity and cohesion between the peoples of Korea and Indonesia, to the long life of the respected leader of the Indonesian people, His Excellency President Suharto, to the long and healthy life of our people's great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and to the health of respected His Excellency Vice President Adam Malik.

NODONG SINMUN STRESSES ROLE OF LIGHT INDUSTRY

SK041027 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2234 GMT 3 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 4 February special article [nonsol]: "Further Developing Light Industry Is an Important Means for Improving the People's Living Standards"]

[Text] In his New Year's address, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song clearly elucidated the militant task of further improving our people's living standards and the ways for implementing this. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: We should decisively increase the production of people's consumer goods by rapidly developing light industry and build more dwelling houses and cultural and welfare facilities in urban and rural areas through a mass movement. Thus we should more smoothly resolve problems in the people's lives.

Systematically improving people's welfare is a supreme principle in our party's activities, and it is one of the basic tasks set forth by the sixth party congress for socialist economic construction in the 1980's. Only when the people's living standards are constantly improved can the superiority of the socialist system be highly enhanced and the revolution and construction be vigorously advanced.

The constant upgrading of the people's living standards in conformity with the demands of the development of socialist construction and of the strengthening of the country's economic might is an important duty of the party of the working people. As socialist society develops to a higher stage, the people require a happier and more abundant life and the possibilities for them to enjoy such a life increase.

The constant improvement of the welfare of the working people in conformity with the demands of their living standards is an important political question for demonstrating the superiority of the socialist system and its invincible might and to safeguard the dignity of socialism.

The purpose of socialist economic construction by the party of the working class is precisely to allow the people to live better. Proceeding from this, our party has concentrated great concern on improving the material and cultural welfare of the people and has vigorously led this task since the first day of its construction of a new society.

Thanks to the wise leadership of our party and its correct policy, the living standards of our people have reached a very high level. Our people, who suffered from extreme poverty and hunger in the past, are now enjoying an independent and creative life without worry about food, clothing and housing. Our party has constantly made all possible efforts to provide our people with a more abundant life than they enjoy today.

Light industry occupies a very important place in brilliantly embodying the party's plan to improve our people's living standards. Only when the role of the light industry is enhanced can the demands of the people's life be smoothly solved by increasing the production of people's consumer goods. Properly solving various problems to promote the people's living standards by increasing the production of cloth, daily necessities and foodstuffs depends on how rapidly we develop the light industry.

Our party's policy to rapidly develop light industry on a large scale proceeds from a scientific view that the potential and might of the firm economic foundation established in our country can be sufficiently utilized. In our country today, a firm economic foundation which can effect a new turn in the production of people's consumer goods has been established. Our party, which has adopted the promotion of people's living standards as a supreme principle in its activities, has presented a correct policy for achieving this in every period and stage of socialist construction and has concentrated greater efforts on building a material and technological foundation for its realization.

With the brilliant implementation of our party's unique basic line for socialist economic construction -- simultaneous development of light industry and agriculture, while giving priority to the development of heavy industry -- our heavy industry has been firmly built as one which thoroughly serves the development of light industry and rural economy, not as heavy industry for the sake of heavy industry. As a result, the heavy industry sectors, including machine industry and chemical industry, have been able to sufficiently produce and supply various production facilities, raw materials and materials required for the development of light industry.

In particular, with the thorough implementation of our party's unique policy to develop small and medium local industry in parallel with large central light industry, many local industry plants have been built in all of the cities and counties in our country. These local industry plants have become reliable bases greatly contributing to the production of people's consumer goods.

Effective utilization of the huge production potential already provided in the solidly built people's consumer goods production bases constitutes a firm guarantee for producing more consumer goods. The light industry sector should concentrate great efforts on making the economic assets already provided in accord with party policy prove their worth to the maximum.

Operating light industry plants at full capacity and keeping production at a high level is an important way to effect new upsurges in the production of people's consumer goods. The problem of effectively utilizing the existing economic foundation generally arises from the demand of the development of a socialist economy that there be an increase in the economic effectiveness of capital investment. When we properly carry out economic organization work to effectively utilize the existing production foundation of light industry without building new light industry plants, we can produce more people's consumer goods with existing production facilities.

In our country today, modern central light industry plants and local industry plants have been solidly built. Their technical level and equipment have reached a very high level. Therefore, when the production capability of these light industry plants is fully utilized, the production of various kinds of daily necessities and foodstuffs can be greatly increased.

In order for light industry plants to increase production by operating at full capacity, they should build their own raw material production bases. Our light industry, which has rapidly developed in recent years, requires more raw materials and materials of various kinds. In local industry alone, there have been many changes in production conditions and circumstances as compared with the early days. When local industry began operating, consumer goods were produced mainly with idle materials and agricultural by-products. But, today, when the production sector of the local industry has been diversified and its technical level and equipment have been enhanced, the supply of raw materials and materials required for the production of consumer goods cannot be guaranteed only with these idle materials and agricultural by-products.

In order to constantly increase production by operating all light industry plants at full capacity so as to meet the demands for the development of light industry, the existing raw material production bases should be strengthened and, at the same time, new chemical raw material production bases should be built to increase the production of chemical products, including chemical fibers and synthetic resins.

Building more chemical raw material production plants by concentrating greater efforts on the chemical industry is an important requirement for further increasing the production of consumer goods through the operation of our light industry at full capacity. In particular, when all provinces build many small and medium chemical and paint plants in their areas in conformity with their specific situations, not only natural and cultivated raw materials but also basic chemical products can be independently produced and supplied. Thus, the local industry plants can be operated at full capacity.

Along with this, the production capacity of the existing cornstarch plants and corn-rice plants should be enhanced to the maximum and they should be operated at full capacity so that the production of processed foodstuffs, including edible oils and candies, can be epochally increased with the abundantly available raw materials in our country.

Local industry in our country today is developing with each county as a basic unit. When all cities and counties in our country operate their local industry plants at full capacity and smoothly meet the demands of consumer goods and processed foodstuffs for their respective cities and counties with their own production, great progress can be made in improving the people's living standards.

Modernization of the production processes of light industrial plants through technical innovation and introduction of high-speed equipment and facilities are important for increasing people's consumer goods and upgrading the quality of goods. Upgrading the quality of consumer goods and expanding their varieties are fundamental in meeting the demand of the people's life. This depends on modernization and improvement of equipment and facilities and production and technical processes of light industrial plants.

In modern production, even for similar equipment and facilities, technical processes can vary and their improvement can alter the capacity of the equipment and facilities. Accordingly, if existing equipment and facilities are modernized and turned into high-speed ones and production and technical processes are improved, production of good-quality consumer goods can increase. In particular, in the textile industrial sector, to expand the varieties of textiles, upgrade their qualities and increase production, it is important to wage a technical innovation movement for increasing the rotation of reels of spinning machines and improving the spinning capacity.

The technical level of light industrial plants is very high, and their equipment is very good. Therefore, the light industrial sector must fully utilize favorable conditions and potentials. By so doing, it must actively seek to improve and modernize equipment and facilities.

To bring about a new turn in the production of people's consumer goods through the rapid development of light industry, the enhancement of responsibility and role of functionaries and working people of the sector is more important than anything else.

The full operation of light industrial plants and the increase of production of good-quality consumer goods depend on the leading functionaries' guidance and planning. Party spirit, working-class nature and popular nature of functionaries are displayed through the struggle to upgrade the living standards of the people.

Party organizations and economic guidance functionaries at all echelons must be aware that they are responsible to the party and the state for the people's standard of living. They must work out detailed plans for consumer goods production and implement them efficiently.

At the same time, political work must be vigorously enacted to mobilize revolutionary zeal and the creative wisdom of the masses who are engaged in production.

Displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance is a firm guarantee for enacting a new turn in the production of people's consumer goods. The spirit of self-reliance is a revolutionary spirit with which people can achieve something by their own efforts. With this spirit, our people struggled and built light industrial plants throughout in the nation. The material and technical foundation of the light industrial sector has been fortified. However, the spirit of self-reliance must be displayed to solve the problems that arise in the production of people's consumer goods.

The light industrial sector must possess a firm revolutionary spirit with which it solves by itself the problem of materials needed for the production of consumer goods. It must advance the production of people's consumer goods in a revolutionary manner. By so doing, it must brilliantly implement our party's far-reaching plan to make our people's life more affluent and modern.

PLANS FOR NORTH-SOUTH COMMUNICATION REPORTED

SK050958 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 5 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpts] In reporting this year's major projects to President Chon Tu-hwan on 5 February, ROK Communications Minister Choe Kwang-su revealed that the ministry has, with the North-South unification issue in mind, completed plans for an exchange of mail, relay of broadcasts, and installation of telegraphic and telephone facilities. He noted that the ministry is actively pushing ahead with the plans.

Among communication plans connected with the unification issue, the ministry has completed preparations for concluding an agreement on a postal exchange between North and South. In the initial stage, the exchange will cover first-class and second-class mail and will be gradually expanded. Regulations on the exchange of mail will be enacted. All post offices throughout the country will receive and deliver this mail while the Seoul central post office will handle collective management and transport.

A facsimile facility for conveying documents between Seoul and Panmunjom will be installed and four mobile television relay vehicles will be secured to use for the North-South talks. The ministry will install underground optical-fiber cables between Seoul and Panmunjom to relay television programs to North Korea.

In addition, the ministry will expand international communications, Telex, data communications and facsimile facilities as well as the television relay net by 1984 for the 1988 Seoul Olympiad. For this, the ministry will install four communications satellite circuits and one additional cable circuit between Korea and Japan.

DAILY VIEWS IMPORTANCE OF 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

SK050205 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 5 Feb 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Team Spirit 1982"]

[Text] Korea and the United States are going to evaluate their military strategy as well as combat capabilities again this year through a joint war game scheduled to begin late next week. This annual exercise of the two allies, dubbed Team Spirit 1982, the fourth such to be conducted since the inauguration of the ROK-U.S. Combined Forces Command, has now become an integral part of their military cooperation to prevent the renewal of war on this peninsula.

It is regrettable, to begin with, that military and political developments in Korea and particularly north of its Demilitarized Zone in recent years have increased, rather than decreased, the importance of the annual combined exercise. North Korea's continuous military buildup of an offensive nature and its maintenance of the largest blitz-oriented special forces in the world pose a rising threat of danger to the South. What is more, Pyongyang gives substance to this threat by turning down one peace overture after another extended by both the Korean Government and the U.N. components of the Military Armistice Commission.

Viewed against this backdrop, an increase in the size of the joint maneuvers is an unavoidable outcome. We are reassured, therefore, that this year's exercise is going to be the largest ever held not only in Korea but also in the free world. The joint exercise's growth in size stands on good grounds from a broader viewpoint of geostrategic consideration, too. As we recall, the annual war game came into being to make up, more or less, for the phaseout of U.S. ground forces from this republic which was to be completed by the early 80's, probably this year. But the misconceived policy of withdrawing American land troops from Korea had to be suspended by its initiator in the face of the adversary's moves to abuse it. President Reagan, soon after taking office, complete scrapped it.

Team Spirit 1982, the first to be held under the Reagan administration, is going to involve six Korean and U.S. divisions during its two-month exercise.

What should be noted, however, is its clear objectives to train and test the participating commanders, staffs and other personnel for the defense of this republic. As clarified by a spokesman of the ROK-U.S. Combined Forces Command, the exercise is aimed at evaluating their strategy in the event of an emergency on the Korean Peninsula.

These objectives and character of Team Spirit 1982 were made further explicit by the recent invitation extended by the U.N. Command to the North Korean and Chinese members of the Military Armistice Commission to observe the joint exercise. North Korea should not only accept but also reciprocate the invitation if it means even part of its noisy propaganda. The absence of Pyongyang's response up to this date only confirms, once again, its unchanging force-oriented policy toward the South.

In the face of such North Korean intrasigence, each exercise should prove to be a stronger deterrent than the preceding one. This joint exercise, indeed, is one of the most effective means to keep North Korea from miscalculating our readiness and daring a second military adventure against this republic. The significance of the annual event will extend far beyond Korean borders as it demonstrates the firm U.S. adherence to its commitments to allies. Such a demonstration is badly in need today, especially in Asia where the potential enemy of the United States and its allies has considerably increased its military presence.

MORE PROBLEMS FORESEEN IN LOAN TALKS WITH JAPAN

SK050759 Seoul YONHAP in English 0748 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Seoul, Feb 5 (YONHAP) -- Negotiations between Korea and Japan on Seoul's standing request for Japanese Government loans seem to be in for rough sailing because of the different approaches to a solution of the issue, sources at the Foreign Ministry here said Friday. According to the sources, Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-Yong last week voiced the hope that the issue would be solved through a "political compromise," when he received a call from Japanese Ambassador to Korea Toshikazu Maeda.

During the meeting with the Japanese envoy on Jan. 27, No expressed his reluctance to hold another round of preparatory working-level talks, saying that "the issue now hinges on a Japanese political decision since the Korean side had already presented its stand on the matter during the first round of working-level talks."

Meanwhile, the Japanese Government clings to the position that an expanded preparatory working-level meeting be held to review each of the presented projects, the sources said. The Japanese side claims that the data regarding the projects are not sufficient for solution of the matter, the sources added.

TONG-A ILBO ADVOCATES REVISION OF CRIMINAL CODE

SK050204 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 4 Feb 82 p 2

[Editorial: "The Criminal Code -- A Need for Consolidation of Special Laws"]

[Excerpts] Frequent violations of human rights in dealing with criminal cases have generated the need for a revision and better implementation of the criminal code. After promising to establish a system to prevent the violation of human rights, the Democratic Justice Party [DJP] has begun to review a plan to revise the criminal code.

An ineffective code is not the only factor in the frequent violation of human rights. If we correctly enact the criminal code, we can prevent the violation of human rights. We think it is necessary to review the criminal code not only in considering human rights issues but also to reform our legal system. We demand that elements obstructing democracy be eliminated from the current criminal code. It is wrong to ignore human rights by placing too much emphasis on the public interest.

We urge the DJP to abide by the democratic principle of the criminal code by carefully reviewing the criminal code and gathering opinions from experts and satisfy popular demand by consolidating various special laws and simplifying difficult legal terminology.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY SECOND SESSION OPENS 5 FEB

BK050541 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0438 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Feb (SPK) -- The Second Session of the National Assembly, first legislature, began its work in Phnom Penh this morning.

On the honorary tribune were, among others, Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the National Assembly; Say Phuthang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Organization Commission; Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Propaganda and Education Commission; and Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning. All 117 deputies elected in the May 1981 legislative elections were present. Also present were members of the diplomatic corps in Phnom Penh.

In his opening speech, National Assembly Chairman Chea Sim said: The National Assembly is holding this present session following the success of the work of the Third Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Congress. On behalf of the Kampuchean people throughout the country, the National Assembly congratulates the congress on its splendid successes and unanimously approves the front's objective of action -- defending and building the country in independence, peace and freedom and for the happiness of the Kampuchean people who are constantly determined to struggle against the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, other international reactionaries, their lackey Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and reactionary traitors to the nation. The National Assembly is confident that the people of all walks of life will achieve the set objectives satisfactorily and contribute to building and firmly defending the country in the common revolutionary cause and to achieving the comprehensive development of the country.

We hope that with the clear-sighted resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress and on the basis of the PRK's Constitution, all National Assembly members will participate in discussing draft laws on the restoration, consolidation and development of the economy and culture and on the stabilization of the people's life; continue their struggle to maintain political security; build and develop the revolutionary army down to communes; and ensure the satisfactory implementation of the 1982 economic and cultural plan.

The second session, which will last for 6 days, will adopt draft laws on the organization of the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers and set forth the objectives of the 1982 economic development plan.

In the morning, the deputies heard the 1981 economic report and the project for economic development in 1982 presented by Council of Ministers Vice Chairman and Planning Minister Chea Soth.

POL POT 'CLIQUE'S' REFUSAL OF COALITION VIEWED

BK050956 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0413 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Feb (SPK) -- According to AFP, the Thai Ministry of Foreign Affairs revealed on 25 January that the Pol Pot clique has refused to participate in the formation of a so-called coalition government reuniting the three reactionary Khmer groups not of their own accord.

Under pressure from Beijing and Washington and with the assistance of the ASEAN states, the three reactionary Khmer groups of Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan have, over the past 3 years, met either in Singapore, Bangkok or Beijing to set up a united front or a government. They have obtained no results thus far.

How can they achieve their set objectives when the partners, in a power struggle, argue over positions, and when they work for their own account? How can Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan shake hands together when they are engaged in a struggle for influence that sets one against the other? All of them are lackeys of the Chinese expansionists and the U.S. imperialists. Under their masters' wings, they, at least for once, sat at the negotiating table, but each nurtured his own thinking, which is, however, common to the three: Return to Kampuchea to kill their compatriots and indulge again in the genocide that was stopped by the people's uprisings, in collaboration with the Vientamese combatants.

Does Sihanouk, who is now living a princely life, recall his nightmare during the period of nearly 4 years ago under Pol Pot's rule in Phnom Penh? The Chinese expansionists are giving arms and ammunition to Pol Pot's men so they can sabotage the Kampuchean people's peaceful life.

The efforts of China, the United States and the ASEAN states to reassemble the three reactionary Khmer bands under the same roof will be useless because each of these bands works for its own interests and not in conformity with the Kampuchean people's aspirations.

The Kampuchean people, who led a very miserable life under the Pol Pot regime for more than 3 years, are capable of distinguishing friends from enemies. Under the clear-sighted leadership fo the KPRP and the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD], the Kampuchean people have recovered their right to decide their own destiny. The consequences caused by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime have been eliminated. The economic, cultural and social sectors have been restored. Revolutionary power at all levels is consolidated. All this proves that the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible and that the traitors to the nation will suffer new, lamentable defeat.

RECENT THAI MILITARY PROVOCATIONS REPORTED

BK050100 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0425 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Feb (SPK) -- It has been learned from military sources that during the week ending 31 January, Thai aircraft penetrated Kampuchean airspace 6 times, while 105-mm guns, 120-mm and 82-mm mortars and H-12 rockets from Thailand bombarded Kampuchean territory 134 times; many bombardments were intended to support infiltrations by Pol Pot's men. It was reported that artillery from Thailand bombarded the Siem Reap-Preah Vihear region 33 times; Battambang 50 times; and the Koh Kong-Pursat region 51 times. Hills 336 and 332 and Smat Deng were pounded 40 times by artillery based in Thailand. Between 23 and 26 January more than 530 Thai 120-mm and 82-mm mortar shells hit in the vicinity of Hills 336 and 332.

Some 52 armed Thai vessels and boats entered the PRK's territorial waters in the vicinity of Koh Kong and Koh Tang Islands.

HENG SAMRIN HAILS VCP ON FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY

BK050922 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0432 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Feb (SPK) -- The Vietnamese Communist Party [VCP], whose predecessor was the Indochinese Communist Party, has long entertained close relations of solidarity with the communist parties of the Indochinese countries in the struggle against the French colonialists, the Japanese fascists, the U.S. imperialists and, recently, the great-nation Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, said KPRP Central Committee General Secretary Heng Samrin in his greetings message to the VCP Central Committee on the occasion of the VCP's 52d founding anniversary.

The message continues: These great victories are the result of the relentless efforts of the Vietnamese people in their struggle under the leadership of the VCP with President Ho Chi Minh at its head.

In spite of difficult circumstances and dangers, the VCP always remains by the side of the KPRP in the struggle and is exposed to great difficulties. Recently, the VCP sent its sons and daughters to help the Kampuchean people overthrow the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime and to liberate and build their country. The Kampuchean people and communists deeply thank the VCP for its support for the revolution of our people in advancing toward the prosperity of a socialist country.

The KPRP stands by the side of the brother VCP and the LPRP in the struggle against their common enemies -- the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries -- to build socialism in Indochina and to contribute to peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

May the VCP and the Vietnamese people achieve great successes in socialist construction. May the special and historic bonds of solidarity between the KPRP and the VCP be further developed with every passing day.

LAO DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR BANK SUMMIT MEETING

BK030732 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] At the invitation of the PRK National Bank, a delegation of the LPDR National Band, led by its director, Sot Phetlasi, arrived in Phnom Penh today for a friendship visit to Kampuchea and to attend the first national bank summit conference of the three Indochinese countries.

The delegation was greeted at Pochentong Airport by Cha Rieng, director general of the National Bank, and other personalities. Khampasong Duangsitthi, second secretary of the Lao Embassy in Kampuchea, was present.

HENG SAMRIN SENDS GREETING TO PCF CONGRESS

BK050345 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1501 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 4 Feb (SPK) -- Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP and chairman of the Council of State, on behalf of the party, working class and workers of Kampuchea, today sent his warmest greetings to the 24th French Communist Party [PCF] Congress. The message said:

Your current congress is being held after you and the various leftist forces achieved historic successes in the recent elections. After 34 years, the French communists are once again present in the French Government. In collaborating closely with the leftist forces, they are assuming difficult but fruitful duties for the French workers. I wish you further splendid successes in the struggle of the French workers for the improvement of the people's living standards and for democracy, peace and social progress.

Bonds of friendship and militant solidarity have long existed between the Kampuchean and French peoples as well as between the Kampuchean and French communists. Since the overthrow of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime 3 years ago, the Kampuchean people have always enjoyed precious aid and support from the PCF and the French people in the common struggle of the three fraternal Indochinese countries to foil the maneuvers of sabotage and interference of the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists.

I avail myself of this occasion to express the gratitude of the Kampuchean people for your precious aid and assistance.

May the bonds of militant solidarity that unite the two parties, two working classes and two countries be further strengthened with every passing day.

LEADERS ATTEND FUNCTION HONORING FALLEN COMBATANTS

BK050750 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0428 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Feb (SPK) -- This morning deputies of the National Assembly laid wreaths at the monument in Phnom Penh dedicated to the memory of those combatants who died in the struggle for the Kampuchean revolutionary cause.

Also present on that occasion were Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Chea Sim, member of the Political Bureau and chairman of the National Assembly; Say Phuthang, member of the Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Organization Commission; Bou Thang, chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission; Chan Si, acting chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense; Superior Bonze Tep Vong, vice chairman of the National Assembly; Chea Soth, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; Mat Ly, vice chairman of the National Assembly and vice chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense national council.

MY SAMEDI ADDRESSES 30 JAN KAMPUCHEA MEETING

BK011132 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 30 January a meeting was held at the KAMPUCHEA office to sum up the results of the 1981 work by cadres, employees and workers of the newspaper. Comrade Khlouk Sambo, deputy office chief of KAMPUCHEA, read a report summing up the 1981 results, presenting the brilliant achievements of the newspaper during the past 3 years under the beacon of the KPRP's policy. He said that the KAMPUCHEA cadres and employees actively participated in making propaganda, exhorting and encouraging all strata of the people to pursue the policy of the party and state. He went on to say that in view of these tasks, not only does the newspaper have the duty to spread news, but it plays an important role in educating the masses and inculcating revolutionary culture and views in them.

Speaking on the same occasion, Comrade Khieu Kanharith, editor of KAMPUCHEA newspaper; and Comrade My Samedi, member of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense honorary presidium and dean of the School of Medicine and Pharmacy, took turns commending the cadres and employees in glowing speeches full of significance. They stressed and highly valued the great, brilliant and very encouraging achievements of KAMPUCHEA in disseminating truth among our people. They emphasized that these achievements were possible due to the good relations among the cadres and employees of the newspaper and the firm cooperation they maintain with central ministries and offices; in particular, they were due to the bonds of solidarity, friendship and close cooperation of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- the determining factor of the three Indochinese revolutions and a factor for the consolidation of peace in Southeast Asia.

The ceremony ended at 1700 after the presidium presented outstanding cadres with certificates.

KHUN CHHY OPENS BRIDGE, WORKSITE IN PREY VENG

BK310909 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Text] A ceremony was held at (?Banam) village on 28 January to inaugurate a bridge and open the worksite on national Route 15/01 between Prey Veng and Neak Luong under the sponsorship of Prey Veng Province's communications, transport and postal service. Presiding over this ceremony were Comrade Khun Chhy, minister of communications, transport and posts; Comrade Kim Seng, vice minister of communications, transport and posts; and Comrade Cheam Yiep, chairman of the Prey Veng Provincial People's Revolutionary Committee.

Attending this grand ceremony were many cadres, employees and workers. Comrade Cheam Yiep read a report on activities of the cadres, employees and workers of Prey Veng Province and the bridge and road repair department of the Ministry of Communications, Transport and Posts, who closely cooperated with each other in repairing the bridge being opened. He also noted the usefulness of the decision to open the Prey Veng-Neak Luong Route 15/01.

Comrade Khun Chhy praised and highly appreciated with great pride the tireless efforts made by cadres, employees, workers and peasants and the central and provincial bridge and road repair departments. He stressed that during the past 3 years, under the leadership of the KPRP and the National Council of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense, our people started building from scratch and scored successes in all fields, particularly in communications, transport and posts. The comrade minister went on to say that all these successes were attributable to the efforts of our cadres, employees, workers and people in general who maintained a close solidarity within their ranks and with foreign countries, particularly with Vietnam and the Soviet Union. This solidarity is a factor enabling our people's revolution to develop steadily and raising the prestige of the PRK to new heights both at home and abroad.

This ceremony ended at 1150 in a most joyous and cordial atmosphere.

FRENCH MEDICAL GROUP GIVES AID DURING VISIT

BK020704 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Dr (Philippe Jardiniere) and Miss (Joanne Iparas), members of International Medical Aid, arrived on 22 January for a visit to Democratic Kampuchea.

Upon their arrival, the friendly guests were received by Chhorn Hay, secretary of state of the Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications; Mey Mann, vice chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross; and cadres from the Democratic Kampuchean Foreign Ministry. On that occasion, the French guests handed over a quantity of medicine to the Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross. During their stay in Democratic Kampuchea, the friendly guests visited Phum Thmei, hospitals, a disabled combatants' settlement and Phum Sangke. The guests were greatly impressed by the patriotism and perserverance of our people in building villages and growing crops in these areas, which were formerly uninhabited forests.

The guests left Democratic Kampuchea on 28 January. They pledged to give more humanitarian medical aid to our Kampuchean people who are suffering from the Vietnamese enemy's acts of aggression, expansion, annexation and race extermination.

SWEDISH DOCTOR PRESENTS AID WHILE VISITNG DK

BK030252 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] On 29 January 1982, Dr (Dizolt), a Swedish medical doctor, and his wife presented medicines worth $50,000, which are gifts from a religious organization called [name indistinct] and a quantity of material valued at $50,000 from the Sweden-Democratic Kampuchea Friendship Association to the Democratic Kampuchean Government for distribution to our people. Dr (Dizolt), with his wife's assistance, performed blood tests on 100 children in the village and gave antituberculosis vaccine injections to a number of babies. This noble aid of the peace and justice-loving Swedish people encourages our Kampuchean people in their struggle against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators.

During their stay in Democratic Kampuchea, they were well received by Secretary of State Chhorn Hay and Mey Mann, Democratic Kampuchean Red Cross vice chairman, with deep feelings of friendship.

52D FOUNDING ANNIVERSARY OF VCP MARKED

LPRP Greetings Message

BK030310 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Greetings Message from LPRP Central Committee to Vietnamese Communist Party Central Committee on its 52d founding anniversary -- dated 2 February]

[Text] To the Vietnamese Communist Party [VCP] Central Committee, Hanoi:

Dear comrades: On the occasion of the 52d founding anniversary of the VCP, the LPRP Central Committee would like to convey fraternal and comradely salutations, best wishes and special solidarity to you, comrades, and through you, to all heroic, fraternal party members, the working class and people of Vietnam.

Over the past 50 years or so, enhancing the traditions of heroic, indomitable struggle by the nation, the VCP -- a genuine Marxist-Leninist party -- has led the Vietnamese people to carry out the hard, protracted revolutionary struggle, and has achieved a historic victory of international significance in defeating the French colonialists and the the U.S. imperialists. It has also painfully defeated the dark schemes of aggression and annexation of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists. Simultaneously, the Vietnamese people have achieved great successes in implementing the Second 5-Year Plan adopted by the Fourth VCP Congress as well as in fulfilling their noble international obligations. At present, the Vietnamese people are enthusiastically competing in scoring new achievements to welcome the fifth party congress which is scheduled to be held soon.

The said glorious successes and victories of the Vietnamese people are a significant contribution to the enhancement of the socialist community's strength. It also serves as a vigorous encouragement for the movements of struggle against imperialism, Beijing big-nation expansionism and hegemonism and other reactionaries for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress in Southeast Asia and the world.

As close comrades in arms who have shared weal and woe and common ideals and who have fought against the common enemies and together won victories systematically, our Lao people are elated and proud of and would like to hail wholeheartedly the various victories of the Vietnamese people, and consider those victories as our own.

We are very pleased to note that our two parties, continuing to pursue the cause of the past Indochinese Communist Party with Comrade Ho Chi Minh as founder, have joined in promoting and expanding daily all-round relations and militant solidarity. The LPRP and the Lao people take this occasion to express profound thanks and gratitude to the VCP and the fraternal Vietnamese people for the great, all-round, consistent and effective assistance to the Lao revolution.

On this glorious occasion, we would like to once again wish the Vietnamese people, under the clear-sighted, indomitable leadership of the VCP with Comrade Le Duan as general secretary, new, still greater successes in building socialism and defending their beloved country.

Long live the great friendship, special solidarity and all-round cooperation between the LPRP and the VCP!

[Signed] The LPRP Central Committee; Vientiane, 2 February 1982

SIANG PASASON Editorial

BK030452 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 3 Feb 82

[SIANG PASASON 3 February editorial; "Heartily Greet the Founding Anniversary of the Vietnamese Communist Party"]

[Text] The Vietnamese Communist Party [VCP] is 52 years old on 3 February 1982. Under the glorious banner of the party, the entire working class and people of Vietnam have surmounted various difficulties and trials, and have defeated the barbarous aggressors on three occasions, fulfilling obligations to the Lao and the Kampuchean revolutions, and contributing to the cause of liberation of various oppressed nations and progressive mankind in the world.

The VCP has always enhanced its precious tradition, while maintaining pure loyalty to the nation and the entire people of Vietnam and invincible Marxism-Leninism. Solidarity and unanimity in the party ranks also have been strengthened. The VCP has always associated closely with the mass movements in striving its utmost to maintain the interest of the nation and people and to lead the revolutionary cause to march forward along the correct path.

Each historical victory won by the Vietnamese people under the VCP's leadership has served as a firm guarantee for leading the nation to advance to socialism and for securing the defense of the socialist country. It has enabled the present Vietnamese nation to maintain complete independence and cohesion as well as the strength of the new system. The Vietnamese people now have the collective right to be the owners of their country and society. They also have strong national defense forces. At the same time, the VCP has always upheld and nourished the special alliance among the three Indochinese countries while maintaining solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and the socialist camp, thus enhancing further the strength of the Vietnamese nation.

The resolutions adopted by the Fourth VCP Congress have opened a bright path for developing and building the country in all respects.

All the communists and people of Vietnam have clearly acknowledged their obligations, honor, prestige and interests, and have striven tirelessly to realize those resolutions successfully. At present, the fraternal Vietnamese Communists and people are enjoying their achievements scored in implementing the various resolutions of the fourth party congress and are joyously preparing to welcome the Fifth VCP Congress to be held soon.

The LPRP and the VCP are fraternal parties which have been closely related to each other from their founding to the present. This relationship has become a basic rule and factor which guarantees the victories of each country. Comrade Ho Chi Minh who founded the Indochinese Communist Party -- source of the two parties -- had always nourished close relations between the two parties and described these relations in an immortal verse saying: Fraternal Vietnamese and Lao engrave their mutual love deep in their hearts; it is deeper than the waters of the Red and Mekong Rivers.

We pledge to do everything possible in order to make this precious verse last forever. We wish the Fifth VCP Congress brilliant success.

STATE BANK DELEGATION LEAVES FOR KAMPUCHEA

BK030756 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] A delegation of the Lao State Bank headed by State Bank Director Sot Phetlasi left Vientiane for the PRK on the morning of 2 February to pay a friendship visit to that country at an invitation of the PRK Finance Ministry and national bank. During the visit, the Lao State Bank delegation will attend a summit conference of the three Indochinese banks which is scheduled to be held in Phnom Penh on 12 and 13 February 1982. After the conclusion of the summit conference, Sot Phetlasi will lead the delegation to proceed to attending an annual meeting to be held in Hanoi between the state banks of the LPDR and the SRV to review the implementation of agreement on banking in the past year and to lay out plans on cooperation for 1982.

The delegation was seen off at Wattai Airport by Neou Samon, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the PRK to Laos, in addition to high-ranking cadres attached to the state bank.

LAOS, USSR, SRV SIGN ECONOMIC, TRADE DOCUMENT

BK041323 Vientiane KPL in English 0918 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Vientiane, 4 Feb (OANA/KPL) -- A document on talks concerning economic and trade co-operation between Laos, Soviet Union and Vietnam was signed here yesterday.

Signing the document which spells out principles in the field were Oudon Phonsena, vice president of the Lao State Bank, secretary of the Laos-Soviet Committee for Economic, Scientific and Technical Co-operation; K.A. Stepanov, representing the international relations of the Economic Committee of the Soviet Government; and Tran Chinh, representing the international relations of the Economic Committee of the Vietnamese Government.

SISAVAT KEOBOUNPHAN RECEIVES KOMSOMOL DELEGATION

BK231045 Vientiane KPL in English 0912 GMT 23 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 23 Jan (KPL) -- General Sisavat Keobounphan, secretariat member of the party CC, on January 22 received in Vientiane a visiting delegation of the All-Union Leninist Young Communist League (Komsomol) led by its secretary, Dergausov. The discussion was centered on the enhancement of friendship and solidarity relations and mutual cooperation between the youth organizations of the two countries. General Sisavat Keobounphan, on this occasion, expressed his thanks to the Soviet Leninist Komsomol for its supports and assistances to the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth Union [LPRYU] during the past as well as at present.

Apart from this pledge [for] further supports and assistance, Dergausov also hailed the active contribution of the Lao youths to the tasks of national socialist construction and defense. Earlier, Dergausov and his delegation paid a courtesy visit to the head of the Mobilizing Committee of the LPRYU, Thonglai Kommasit. The said Soviet delegation arrived here on January 20, 1982.

SOVIET CONSTRUCTION DELEGATION LEAVES VIENTIANE

BK041325 Vientiane KPL in English 0908 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Vientiane, 4 Feb (OANA/KPL) -- The Soviet delegation of construction led by its deputy minister, L.A. Bibin, yesterday left here after ending its 2-week official visit to Laos. During his visit L.A. Bibin and Khamluat Sitlakhon, Lao deputy minister of communication, public works and transport, signed a memomendum on improvement and creation of engineering drafting work. Witnessing the signing ceremony were Acting Minister of Communication, Public Works and Transport Khampoui Keoboualapha and Yevgeniy Shizhu, economic counselor of the Soviet Embassy.

The visiting delegation paid a courtesy visit to Nouhak Phoumsavan, vice-premier and minister of finance. L.A. Bibin also visited some production bases and historical sites here.

DEPUTY MINISTER RECEIVES MILITARY ATTACHES

BK221215 Vientiane KPL in English 0916 GMT 22 Jan 82

[Text] Vientiane, 22 Jan (KPL) -- Colonel General Saman Vivaket, member of the party CC, deputy minister of national defence and head of the General Political Department of the armed forces, on January 20 received military attaches of socialist countries to Laos who presented their best wishes on the occasion of the 33d anniversary of the Lao People's Liberation Army.

Among the well-wishers were Le Minh Tuan of Vietnam, Colonel Stanislav Anisimov of the USSR, and Dr. Karli Arnold of the German Democratic Republic. The military attaches on this occasion hailed the successes of the Lao People's Liberation Army in national safeguarding and construction. They also reaffirmed their combative solidarity to the Lao army and people in their national defence. Saman Viyaket, in return, thanked the diplomats and considered the successes gained as common victories of the armies and peoples of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea who received support and assistance from fraternal socialist countries.

The Lao official also wished that the militant and friendship relations between socialist countries be continual and consolidated for the immediate and long-term interests of each country.

PHOUMI VONGVICHIT LEADS GROUP TO PCF CONGRESS

BK280557 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 28 Jan 82

[Text] In response to an invitation of the French Communist Party [PCF] Central Committee, a delegation of the LPRP led by Comrade Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister and minister of education, sports and religious affairs, left for France on the afternoon of 27 January to attend the 24th PCF Congress to be held from 3 to 7 February 1982.

Comrade Phoumi Vongvichit and his party were seen off at the airport by Comrade General Khamtai Siphandon, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister, minister of national defense and commander in chief of the LPLA; Comrade Sisana Sisan, alternate member of the party Central Committee and minister of propaganda, information, culture and tourism; deputy ministers; and a number of high-ranking cadres concerned. Comrade Vladimir Sobchenko, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Soviet Union to Laos, together with a number of high-ranking cadres of the embassy, were also on hand to see the Lao party delegation off at the airport.

Greetings Message to Congress

BK031300 Vientiane KPL in English 0912 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Vientiane, 3 Feb (KPL) -- The Lao People's Revolutionary Party, on February 2, sent a message to greet the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party. The message notes that the congress is being held at the time when there imperialists are making efforts to favour their position and actively engaging in arms race, which in effect, gravely threatens world peace. The message praises the French Communist Party for its continual devotion for the interests of the French workers, for democratic rights and social progress, against the exploitation of the capitalists and monopolists.

The Lao party highly commends the French party for its work in mobilizing the mass to actively engage themselves in the struggle for peace and in the struggle against the effort to draw France into the adventurous military schemes of NATO. The Lao party message also praised the French Communist Party's active contribution in the last general election in which it has raised its political prestige.

The Lao party finally expresses its conviction that this current congress will be crowned with success and it will create favorable conditions for the party to closely associate with the mass; and thereby it will be able to meet the overall aspirations of the French people, the majority of whom welcome a new political, economic and social change in the French society. And the message wishes that the relation of friendship and solidarity between the two parties and peoples be continually enhanced.

BORDER SHELLING IN PRACHIN BURI REPORTED

BK041428 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] The Thai-Kampuchean border in Prachin Buri Province is still tense, as Vietnamese troops have been continuing to lob mortar shells into Thai territory since Tuesday. Many houses have been damaged by the shelling, while some villagers have been killed. The Vietnamese mortar shells have been landing in Ban Khok Sabaeng, where earlier this month two boys were killed and six wounded. Many of the villagers have abandoned their homes and have found safety in Aranyaprathet District town.

The Vietnamese refused to accept the fact that the fighting in Kampuchea was the result of their invasion of that country. Their army of occupation, which provides support to the Heng Samrin regime, was the cause of Kampuchea breaking up into warring factions, which was not only bringing strife to that country, but was affecting the security and peace of its neighbors as well. Thailand was especially affected. However, the Thai military were well prepared for any threat of invasion posed by the other side.

Further Report

BK050714 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] The Public Relations Department correspondent at the Aranyaprathet Information Center reported that fighting was continuing in Kampuchea. More Vietnamese-Heng Samrin soldiers have been deployed along the whole length of the border opposite Aranyaprathet and Ta Phraya Districts of Prachin Buri Province to suppress the Khieu Samphan and the Khmer Serei forces. Heavy fighting occurred occasionally across the border, and two 107-mm rockets landed in Ban Sangae, Ta Phraya District. Thai troops are on the alert in order to protect the lives and property of the people in the area.

SRV SEEN AS SEEKING 'PRETEXT' FOR VIOLATIONS

BK050743 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Press briefing by Chet Sutcharitkun, director general of the Foreign Ministry Information Department, given on 5 February -- recorded]

[Excerpt] Vietnam has been stepping up its slanderous propaganda against Thailand recently. In fact, however, Vietnam itself has frequently violated Thai territory and territorial waters. This Vietnamese behavior leads us to believe that Vietnam is trying to find a pretext for violating Thailand's sovereignty. Vietnam's propaganda against Thailand is currently at a high pitch.

Regarding the Vietnamese proposal for a truce on the Vietnamese-Chinese border, it is an observation of the Foreign Ministry and of myself that Vietnam has repeatedly made such proposals to China and publicized them. We all know that the Vietnamese proposals have no bearing on the success of negotiations. The proposals are a propaganda tactic. Vietnam often makes proposals and reports them to the United Nations. Vietnam even informed the new UN secretary general right after his assumption of office that it had proposed a truce along the Chinese border during the Tet holiday, but China had rejected the proposal. This is a Vietnamese tactic. In reality, Vietnam would like the tension along the Chinese border to ease so it can concentrate its troops in Kampuchea for operations along the Thai border.

Another point is that while Vietnam asks the UN secretary general to help settle tension along the Vietnamese-Chinese border, it will not obey the UN resolution on Kampuchea. On the one hand, Vietnam is asking for something from a body, while on the other hand, it refuses to comply with that body's decision.

Our observation of this Vietnamese action is that Vietnam is exploiting the United Nations for its own benefit and that it possesses no sincere desire to search for peace, as it clamors so frequently.

SRV SCORED FOR BORDER VIOLATIONS, 'SLANDERING'

BK041030 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] It has happened again. On 28 July [date as heard] the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY [VNA], quoting a report by the Kampuchean news agency, SPK, charged Thailand with air and sea violations of Kampuchean territory. There is no real need for us to point out the lies and irresponsible charges made by Vietnam, but we have to mention the following incidents in order to inform the world of the true facts and to let everyone know what really happened.

In fact, Thailand has never violated Kampuchean sovereignty, either by air or by sea. Yet innocent Thai people have repeatedly suffered casualties as a result of Vietnamese activities. For example, on 31 January from 0245 to 0800, a fierce battle erupted inside Kampuchea near the border in Aranyaprathet District, Prachin Buri Province. Twelve artillery shells fired by Vietnamese forces landed in Ban Khok Sabaeng and Ban Wang Mon. Two Thai were killed and six wounded. The dead were two 8-year-old boys, still at the age of innocence, who had nothing to do with the fighting. Yet they became the vicitms of Vietnam's brutal and inhuman act.

During this same battle, a thousand innocent and patriotic Thai people in Ban Khok Sabaeng and Ban Wang Mon were forced to evacuate their border villages and move to safer places. It also appears that Vietnam has dispatched 16 battalions to reinforce its forces in Ban Nimit, 12 km from Poipet, while 4 other battalions were moved toward Phnum Mak Hoeun, where the Khmer Rouge have their bases. The units included four tanks, 130-mm mortars and 105-mm artillery pieces.

On 1 February at 1455 Vietnamese forces fired into Thailand again. Six shells as well as three 120-mm mortar rounds landed in Khao Noi Si Chomphu, Tambon Khlong Nam Sai, Aranyaprathet District. On 2 February at 0700, four rounds fired by Vietnamese forces landed in Ban Saen Suk, Tampon Khlong Nam Sai, Aranyaprathet District.

Vietnam's actions clearly reflect its ill intentions toward world peace. With support from the Soviet Union, a world power, Vietnam has launched military aggression against Kampuchea. This prompted the ASEAN group, which cherishes peace, to submit, on 22 October 1980, a motion to the United Nations proposing a peacful political settlement of the Kampuchean problem through the holding of international conferences seeking the withdrawal of foreign troops from Kampuchea and the holding of free elections under UN supervision. This resolution, No 35/6, received overwhelming support from the members of the United Nations, with 97 votes in favor. However, Vietnam issued a statement rejecting the UN resolution and has remained indifferent to the decision adopted by the international conference of free, peace-loving countries. Moreover, Vietnam shifted responsibility and tried to push the blame onto Thailand. It has been lying about and slandering Thailand. The latest incident was Vietnam's charge that Thailand violated Kampuchean territory.

The Vietnamese leadership should feel ashamed of such dirty and brazen acts. It should stop being so selfish. Not only have its lies failed to deceive all peace-loving poeple, but the dark schemes and actions it has perpetrated against neighboring Kampuchea have been laid bare. From the many diplomatic defeats it has already suffered, Vietnam should realize by now that it if continues to reject the resolutions of the peace-loving countries, it will only become more and more isolated from the international community. Vietnam, in this connection, stands only to suffer economic, military and political losses, something that will deprive Vietnam of an opportunity to extricate itself from its present state of poverty.

SRV POLICY REGARDING KAMPUCHEA CONDEMNED

BK291636 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 29 Jan 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The Kampuchea problem is one of the many international problems which remain to be solved. For over 3 years now, the situation in Southeast Asia has been one of no peace. It has been plagued by anxiety following the aggression launched by some 200,000 Vietnamese troops in occupation of Kampuchea. This has led to a protracted war between the people of that country and their aggressors. There is the problem of interference by world powers and the burden of the refugees falling on the international community. Vietnam itself has had to face serious economic problems because a huge portion of its national resources have been spent on its aggression. The Vietnamese Government's decision is to have its soldiers and people suffer as a sacrifice for its foreign policy, which is already in a quagmire of condemnation and protests by all peace-loving countries.

The Kampuchean problem has still not been solved because Vietnam, which is directly involved in the problem, refuses to work with the ad hoc committee of the international conference on Kampuchea which received the support of an endorsement by the UN General Assembly. Despite the fact that ASEAN, which is affected by the current problem, has reiterated its sincerity and willingness to listen to Vietnam's views on the question and to take into consideration Vietnam's interests while efforts are being made to solve the problem, Vietnam's response has always been harsh. This attitude demonstrates that Vietnam still entertains illusions regarding its mistaken policy.

Another factor responsible for the dragging out of the problem of Kampuchea this long is the Soviet policy of expansion. It would be impossible for Vietnam alone to maintain some 200,000 troops in Kampuchea. Vietnam has been able to sustain its troops of aggression in Kampuchea this long because of Soviet support -- in weapons and food supplies -- estimated at about $6 million daily. Without this support, it is certain that Vietnam's aggression against its neighbor would end soon.

There is nothing wrong with a sovereign state entering into an agreement for cooperation with another sovereign state as friendly allies. This is not wrong from the viewpoint of international relations. Yet military cooperation aimed at aggression cannot be accepted by the international community. Such an unlawful cooperation would only cause the smaller country to fall in the trap of the world power's sphere of influence and interests. Besides, it would cause numerous problems for other countries in the same region. Such a policy would eventually lead to a great danger threatening the entire region.

Vietnam's history is one of a struggle for national independence and sovereignty. The Vietnamese people have sacrificed their lives and suffered untold miseries in this struggle. Why, then, is the Vietnamese leadership behaving like one who has freed himself from the yoke of an arch colonialist only to jump into the yoke of another colonialist chieftain? Why has the Vietnamese leadership not learned anything from the history of Vietnam and realized that those who have sowed the seeds always wait to reap a big yield? Has the Vietnamese leadership forgotten that the closer small countries get to the big powers, the more easily they become puppets of the big powers? Small countries, therefore, stand to suffer from any wrong course they may choose.

Vietnam is beset by serious economic disasters as well as numerous domestic problems. Yet its leadership does not think of pooling its natural and human resources for use in national reconstruction. When will Vietnam, under these circumstances, be able to repay its massive foreign debts? Is it that the Vietnamese leadership has already sold out national independence and sovereignty for the sake of its ambition to expand its power in Indochina? Vietnam needs to work for national reconstruction. The Vietnamese people want a peaceful and economically happy life. The countries in Southeast Asia, meanwhile, want stability and peace in the region.

The Vietnamese leadership should review its policy and acts and see if they are correct and proper. It should also use good judgment and ask itself what the right course should be for a sovereign state that genuinely cherishes independence.

THANAT DISCUSSES ASEAN POLICY ON SRV, KAMPUCHEA

BK270329 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 27 Jan 82 p 5

[Article by Thanat Khoman, Thai deputy prime minister: "Sticks and Carrots: It Depends on How You View Them"]

[Text] Several points have been raised in discussions within some circles over ASEAN's position on the Kampuchean issue and its policy towards Vietnam. I would like to address them point by point from a Thai point of view. Some of the remarks which have been raised are:

1. ASEAN's viewpoint on the Kampuchean question was unclear.
2. ASEAN does not seem to have an alternative policy except to create a non-Vietnamese front to oppose the Heng Samrin regime.
3. ASEAN's stance is unimaginative and not flexible enough because it does not combine the use of "carrots" with "sticks."
4. ASEAN's pressure on Vietnam will push the latter into the Soviet's arms with nefarious results for ASEAN, as in Indonesia's view, Vietnam will not play the role of Cuba to serve USSR's interests. [sentence as published]
5. Because Thailand is too close to the scene of conflict, it may see only the trees but not the forest, while in fact, in the view of Indonesian discussants, the PRC and USSR represent far greater threats than Vietnam.
6. Why should ASEAN not try to find a solution to the Kampuchean or Indochina problem by a dialogue with Vietnam, leaving out the PRC?
7. It has also been asserted by the Indonesian side that there is no divergence of objectives between Thailand and Indonesia. Only methods may differ. That may stem from geographical proximity, which leads Thailand and Indonesia to set "different priority among the sources of threats." Indonesia, nevertheless, shares Thailand's view that both Vietnam and China constitute a threat to our region. However, 8 years from now we may find that the USSR and China are greater threats.

Taking up the first point, and as far as I am concerned, I do not think the ASEAN viewpoint is in any way nebulous. We do not recognize the right for Vietnam to intervene militarily into Kampuchea to overthrow a constituted government, however cruel it may have proved to be. Vietnam itself earlier helped install that government in Phnom Penh. Later on, when that government did not bow to Hanoi's wishes, it was forcibly replaced by another group of men who rode on Vietnamese tanks to assume nominal power at the behest of Vietnam. This stance is strictly in conformity with international law and the UN Charter. What ASEAN did was simply to recognize the result of a military intervention and to condone Vietnamese expansionist actions. [sentence as published] If Vietnam, as a UN member, were to withdraw its forces and allow truly free elections to be conducted, I have no doubt that ASEAN will accept the choice of the Kampuchean people, whatever it may be.

The second point deals with the alternative or alternatives to the formation of a non-Vietnamese coalition. That can only be either to recognize a govenment freely chosen by the Kampuchean people or recognize Heng Samrin. The latter choice would completely satisfy Vietnam and bring its task of setting up a federation of Indochina, under its aegis, to fruition. From then on, it may possibly attempt to detach the sixteen north-eastern provinces of Thailand to join up with that federation.

The third point puzzles me a great deal. I really do not understand what kind of stick we have been trying to use. If anything, I think the stick is rather with the other side, not on ours. As to the "carrots," I am not sure that Vietnamese are fond of them except the one which, I am sure, is to their taste, and that is recognition of Heng Samrin by ASEAN.

My reply to the fourth and seventh points is that our perception of threat is based on common sense and realism. I have tried to illustrate my thinking by using a comparison of tigers in and out of the woods. Vietnam is the tiger camping at our door steps, occasionally trying to force open the door. It is trailed by an even bigger tiger, the USSR, which is sustaining the other tiger for its own ends and purposes. The PRC is possibly a tiger, but it is still in the woods and sometime growling to detract the other tigers from stalking us. Which threat is then real and immediate -- the one closer to us or the one further away? We cannot afford the luxury of closing our eyes to the immediate present and meditate about what may happen 8 years from now. By that time, there may be neither trees nor forests. As to the fear of pushing Vietnam into the arms of the USSR, it seems to be somewhat belated, as the former, by joining the COMECON and by signing a 25-year treaty of friendship with the latter, has already taken a deep plunge into the Soviet orbit.

It does not mean that Vietnam enjoyed this choice, and particularly the selling of part of its freedom and independence to the Soviets, not only by those commitments, but also by allowing the latter to use its military and naval installations at Danang and Cam Ranh Bay. However, when danger to its vital interest appears, it occasionally knows how to shake off outside impingement. The sacking of Pen Sovan, known for his pro-Soviet tendency, from his post of prime minister of Kampuchea is a pertinent illustration. But to try to wean Vietnam entirely from dependence on the Soviets would be mere wishful thinking. There is no indication that Vietnam would wish to do so, nor does it seem possible for it to get any deeper into the Soviet hold.

The sixth point, direct negotiations between ASEAN and Indochina leaving out the PRC, has the greatest potential danger without perhaps a countervailing chance of solving the problem. The danger lies in the fact that this is what the Vietnam side has been demanding all along in order to deprive ASEAN of strong worldwide support, as may be seen by the voting in the UN General Assembly. If we were to discard it for something that may be utterly illusory, we would be doing a great disservice to ASEAN -- to Southeast Asian regional peace and tranquillity, not to speak of the gratitude we owe to all those who have stood with us through thick and thin.

In my opinion, ASEAN can enter into direct negotiation with Vietnam and its acolytes only [word published in boldface] under one circumstance -- namely, after acceptance by Vietnam of free and impartial elections in Kampuchea and completion of withdrawal of Vietnamese troops. Even under such a favourable circumstance, it is by no means certain that the PRC and the USSR will agree to keep their hands off and refrain from pulling strings connected with their respective clients and proteges.

In this respect, Indonesia's experience in the past must have left a bitter taste, and it undoubtedly entertains a sense of caution in dealing with that power. Personally, I have had some inkling of what went on in those days, as Subandrio, the foreign minister, would stop off in Bangkok while on his trips to and fro between Jakarta and Beijing, and would meet me to have friendly exchanges of views and ideas. What I can say is that I have learnt much from the intricacies of international and regional politics.

Today, things have become even more complicated, with the lack of understanding between ASEAN and Vietnam and by the involvement, direct or indirect, of at least two major powers -- the PRC and the USSR -- in the affairs of this region. ASEAN, in my opinion, does not have the power to solve, still less to settle, the Indochina question as a whole or the Kampuchean problem in particular. In all appearance, neither can Vietnam.

What we in ASEAN can do is to keep this powder keg from being ignited, and to do that effectively, we need a clear understanding among ourselves, if not entirely on the tactics to be adopted, at least on the fundamental objectives of our respective nations. If we fail, and we cannot afford to fail, it is not Thailand alone that will be affected, but the entire region of Southeast Asia.

USSR'S OGARKOV CONTINUES OFFICIAL VISIT

Pham Van Dong Reception

OW041513 Hanoi VNA in English 1458 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 4 -- Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, today received N.V. Ogarkov, member of the C.P.S.U. Central Committee, marshal of the Soviet Union, chief of the general staff of the Soviet Armed Forces, and first vice-minister of defence, and his party.

Present at the audience were General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the CPV central Committee and minister of national defence, Senior Lieutenant-General Le Trong Tan, chief of the General Staff of the Vietnam People's Armed Forces and vice-minister of national defence, and Lieutenant-General Tran Van Quang, vice-minister of national defence.

Also present were Soviet Ambassador B.N. Chaplin and Soviet Military Attache Colonel V.A. Davydov.

Chairman Pham Van Dong said that Marshal N.V. Ogarkov's visit was a major development in the time-honoured friendship and comprehensive cooperation between the parties, the governments, the peoples and the armed forces of Vietnam and the Soviet Union.

He expressed his satisfaction at and attached a high value to the results of the meeting between the leading officers of the two armed forces. The identity of view and the complete trust between combatants of the same ideal, he said, were a great strength to defeat all dark schemes of imperialism, expansionism and other reactionary forces.

The chairman expressed profound gratitude to the Communist Party, the government, the people and the armed forces of the Soviet Union for their great, effective and all-sided assistance to the Vietnamese revolution. He wished the Soviet people and their armed forces further success in strengthening the Soviet Union in all fields, thus making important contributions to peace and security throughout the world.

Marshal N.V. Ogarkov conveyed the best greetings from Leonid Brezhnev and other Soviet party and state leaders to Chairman Pham Van Dong and other Vietnamese leaders. He reaffirmed that the Soviet people and their armed forces would always side with Vietnam and would give the Vietnamese people every possible aid to increase their material and moral strength to build and defend Socialist Vietnam.

Speeches at Hanoi Meeting

OW041600 Hanoi VNA in English 1545 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 4 -- A big meeting was held here this afternoon by the Ministry of National Defence and the Hanoi Garrison in honour of Soviet Marshal N.V. Ogarkov, now on a visit to Vietnam.

Present at the meeting were General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and minister of national defence; Senior-Lieutenant-General Le Trong Tan, vice-minister of national defence and chief of the General Staff of the Vietnam People's Armed Forces; Lieutenant-General Tran Van Quang, vice-minister of national defence; and other high-ranking officers.

Soviet Ambassador B.N. Chaplin, Soviet Military Attache Colonel V.A. Davydov, and many Soviet experts were also present.

Opening the meeting, General Van Tien Dung expressed his pleasure to meet the Soviet marshal and the other Soviet officers whom he described as "brothers and close comrades from the country of the great Lenin and outstanding representatives of the Soviet Armed Forces." He said he believed that Marshal Ogarkov's visit would mark a new development in the comradely relations and the comprehensive cooperation between the peoples and the armed forces of the two countries.

The floor was next taken by Senior Lieutenant-General Le Trong Tan, who recalled great events in the history of the relations between Vietnam and the Soviet Union, especially Ho Chi Minh's discovery of the right course to save his country through proletarian revolution as taught by Lenin, and the victory of the Soviet Armed Forces over fascism in the Second World War, which made it possible for the Vietnamese people to successfully conduct the August revolution in 1945. Le Trong Tan dwelt on the "great, valuable, effective" assistance given by the Soviet Union to Vietnam during the wars against French colonialism and U.S. imperialism. The party, government, people and Armed Forces of the Soviet Union, Le Trong Tan went on, also provided Vietnam with timely assistance to defeat the aggression by 600,000 Chinese troops in February 1979. Le Trong Tan said that Soviet assistance to Vietnam's socialist construction was also "very great." He said that with the treaty of friendship and cooperation signed in November 1978 relations between the two countries had developed still more vigorously in all fields.

In reply Marshal N.V. Ogarkov said that the fraternal friendship and comprehensive cooperation between the Soviet Union and Vietnam had been "very fruitful." The basis of this, he said, was the unshakable friendship between the parties, peoples and armed forces of the two fraternal countries, a friendship which is guided by the "immortal thinking of the great Lenin and the ideals of the October Revolution," which was built by Ho Chi Minh, "a great friend" of the Soviet people. N.V. Ogarkov quoted Soviet party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev's famous statement that "To the Soviet communists solidarity with Vietnam is the dictate of their hearts and minds." He wished the Vietnam People's Armed Forces new success in socialist construction and in strengthening the defence of Socialist Vietnam.

General Van Tien Dung presented the Soviet Armed Forces with a lacquer painting showing President Ho Chi Minh during the border campaign in 1951. In return, Marshal N.V. Ogarkov presented the Vietnam People's Armed Forces with a lacquer portrait of V.I. Lenin.

Following the meeting Marshal N.V. Ogarkov and his party were entertained by the army art troupe.

Wreath Laying Ceremony 4 Feb

OW041615 Hanoi VNA in English 1555 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Feb 4 -- N.V. Ogarkov, marshal of the Soviet Union, member of the C.P.S.U. Central Committee, chief of the General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces, and first vice-minister of defence, and his party, today paid a floral tribute at the Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum. Their wreath bears the inscription: "To the revered memory of President Ho Chi Minh, a great son of the Vietnamese people." Later, the Soviet marshal visited the home and office of the late president.

He wrote in the visitors' book at the Ho Chi Minh Museum: "The Soviet combatants and the Soviet people as a whole, with boundless love, hold in great respect vestiges of President Ho Chi Minh, the great leader of the Vietnamese people, an outstanding activist of the international communist and working class movement, and a close friend of the Soviet people. May the unshakable friendship and close militant solidarity between the peoples and armed forces of the Soviet Union and Vietnam constantly consolidate and develop."

SRV, USSR TRADE UNIONS SIGN COOPERATION PACT

OW041509 Hanoi VNA in English 1450 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 4 -- A cooperation agreement between Vietnamese and Soviet trade unions has been signed in Moscow. Signatories were A. Shibayev, president of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the Soviet Union, and Nguyen Duc Thuan, president of the Vietnam Federation of Trade Unions, who arrived in the Soviet capital last Sunday at the head of a V.F.T.U. delegation on an official visit to the Soviet Union.

SRV ENVOY INFORMS PRK OFFICIAL OF NOTE TO PRC

